Mr. CLARK of Missouri. No; I did not modify my motion. If the ruling of the Chair is that the same Senator cannot make a motion to reconsider and himself move to lay that on the table, which I can show is at variance with a ruling previously made by the present occupant of the chair. I withdraw the motion to lay on the table.

Mr. WHEELER. I move to lay the motion on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state the parliamentary situation. The Senator from Missouri moved to reconsider the vote, and the Senator from Montana moved to lay that motion on the table. Undoubtedly that has been done in the Senate a number of times within the last 2 or 3 months, at the present session of Congress. The Presiding Officer does not know just what the Senate wants to do. The pending motion undoubtedly cuts off debate.

Mr. KING. Regular order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote! Vote!

Mr. BARKLEY. I merely want to propound an inquiry, whether a Senator can present a motion without first being recognized by the Chair. I do not wish to be technical about the matter, but the Senator from Georgia was on his feet asking recognition, and without being recognized the Senator from Montana made his motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is very difficult for the Chair to decide whom he shall recognize when two or three Senators are on their feet. It is the privilege of the Chair to recognize any Senator he desires to recognize when a number of Senators are on their feet. The Senator from Missouri made a motion to reconsider the vote. The Senator from Montana was on his feet, and the Chair recognized him.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Chair recognized the Senator from Montana, I have no complaint. I did not understand that that happened.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] that the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Montana was agreed to be reconsidered.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I understand that the Chair had ruled definitely on the point of order which I made, which was that no Senator could make a motion which was debatable and then cut off debate by making a motion which was not debatable.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair did not have to rule on that question, because the Senator from Missouri made a motion to reconsider, and the Senator from Montana moved to lay it on the table.

Mr. BYRNES. On that I ask for the yeas and nays. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. A parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I understand the Senate is about to vote on the motion to lay on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate is about to vote on that motion. The motion is to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Missouri to reconsider. The Senator from South Carolina has asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRNES (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], and as the present vote is a part of the action on the Wheeler amendment, I withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. FRAZIER (when Mr. Nye's name was called). My colleague [Mr. NyE] is absent because of illness. He has a pair on this vote with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN]. If present and at liberty to vote, my colleague would vote "yea"; and I understand the Senator from Rhode Island, if at liberty to vote, would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ANDREWS. I have a pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt], who is not present. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay." If present, I assume the Senator from West Virginia would vote "yea."

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I did not hear the explanation of the Senator from Florida. How is the Senator from Florida recorded?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida has withdrawn his vote. He is paired with the Senator from West

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have heretofore announced my pair and withheld my vote. I transfer my pair to the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach], and will vote.

The result was announced—yeas 44, nays 44, as follows:

YEAS-44

Adams	Clark, Idaho	Holman	Shipstead
Austin	Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Calif.	Smith
Bailey	Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Taft
Barbour	Davis	King	Tobey
Bone	Donahey	Lodge	Townsend
Bridges	Frazier	Lundeen	Tydings
Bulow	George	McCarran	Vandenberg
Burke	Gerry	McNary	Van Nuys
Byrd	Gibson	Maloney	Wheeler
Capper	Glass	Miller	White
Chavez	Gurney	Reed	Wiley
	N	AYS-44
Ashurst	Guffey	Lucas	Radcliffe
Bankhead	Harrison	McKellar	Reynolds
Barkley	Hatch	Mead	Russell
Bilbo	Hayden	Minton	Schwartz
Brown	Herring	Murray	Sheppard
Byrnes	Hill	Neely	Smathers
Caraway	Hughes	Norris	Stewart
Connally	La Follette	O'Mahoney	Thomas, Okla.
Downey	Lee	Overton	Thomas, Utah
Ellender	Lewis	Pepper	Wagner
Gillette	Logan	Pittman	Walsh
	NOT	VOTING-8
Andrews	Green	Holt	Schwellenbach
-	TTolo	Mirro	Twamon

So the motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider was rejected.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, when the roll call was started awhile ago-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state the question. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

Mr. BYRNES. On that motion I desire to be heard.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. A parliamentary inquiry.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.
Mr. CLARK of Missouri. As a proponent of the motion to reconsider, am I not entitled to recognition for the purpose of withdrawing the motion?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair recognized the Senator who was first on his feet.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I was on my feet as soon as the announcement of the vote was completed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not think there is any rule of the Senate which gives any Senator a prior right to the floor.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the Chair wishes to make that ruling very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair wishes to say that there is no rule of the Senate giving any Senator a prior right to the floor. Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield for a point of order?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. Not only is the Chair correct, but the Chair has the sole and exclusive right and power to recognize whoever rises first, and he is the sole judge of the question as to who first sought recognition and from the Chair's ruling on this point there is no appeal.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I raise the point of order that that is not a point of order.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina has the floor. Does the Senator yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia. Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, in order that the statement of the distinguished Senator from Arizona may be absolutely

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I make the point of order that the Chair recognized the Senator from South

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understood that the Senator from South Carolina yielded to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRNES. The Chair is correct.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If he did, the Senator from West Virginia has the right to hold the floor until midnight, the Chair assumes, if he can stand it that long.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the rule which every Senator ought to know is as follows-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a point of order. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Under the rule, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] has no right to yield except for a question; and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] is not asking a question.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] if it is not a fact that the rules explicitly provide that a Senator, in order to obtain recognition, shall rise and address the Chair, and that the Presiding Officer shall recognize the Senator who first addresses him?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that to be the rule of the Senate; but when six Senators are standing the Chair will not try to say who first rose.

The Chair will make a statement with reference to the point of order of the Senator from Missouri, which is very pertinent. Sometimes the Senate itself must pass on the question. It frequently happens that one Senator will yield to another, and the second Senator will make a long statement of fact. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] makes the point of order that the Senator rising and asking another Senator to yield may not make a statement but may only ask a question. That question has been debated in the Senate a number of times. It occurs to the Chair that the Rules Committee ought to recommend a definite rule on the subject. The Chair makes that statement gratuitously but, nevertheless, in the interest of order in the Senate, it seems to the Chair that the rule ought to make possible a definite decision on the matter. The rule does say—and it is invoked especially in connection with a filibuster—that a Senator may yield only for a question, or else he yields the floor.

The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] had stated that he would offer an amendment with reference to the bill which I feel satisfied would possibly have removed some of the objections Members of | the Senate have had to the bill due to a misunderstanding of its purpose.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask the Senator to yield in order that I may formally make the motion to which I referred.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming for a question.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina stated that he yielded to the Senator from Wyoming for a question.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I now desire to ask the Senator from South Carolina, as chairman of the committee in charge of the bill, if he will accept, on behalf of the committee, an amendment which I shall propose when I am recognized for that purpose. I shall propose an amendment, on page 4, to strike out all of lines 20 and 21 and to substitute in lieu thereof the following:

(b) The abolition of the whole or any part of any agency whenever the functions thereof have been transferred to the jurisdiction and control of another agency or agencies.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. If the able Senator in charge of the bill should accept the proposed amendment, speaking for himself only, I presume, would that acceptance bind the Senate, and would we be denied the opportunity of debating the amendment when it should be formally offered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Replying to the parliamentary inquiry, the Chair will state that nothing can bind the Senate except a majority vote.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, of course it is generally recognized by the Senate that nothing can bind the Senate but a majority vote. The Senator from Utah is unduly alarmed.

Mr. KING. I am not alarmed.

Mr. BYRNES. The fact is that in discussing this matter on the day I reported the bill to the Senate, I stated that the purpose was that if the President, under the provisions of the bill, should transfer the power to make maps-I used that illustration-from 10 departments to 1, he should abolish the power to make maps in the other 9 departments. Otherwise they would come before the Congress asking for appropriations. That is the purpose of the language in the bill giving the President the power to abolish functions.

Specifically, in reply to the question of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], whenever that amendment is offered I certainly shall agree to it and ask the Senate to agree to it, because I believe it will accomplish all the purposes of the bill. From time to time Congress has had investigations made. We know that if in the departments there were 14 agencies lending money, and under the power contained in the bill the President should transfer from 13 departments to 1 the power to lend money, it would be necessary to abolish the exercise of that power in the departments from which it was removed. That is the object. The amendment suggested by the Senator from Wyoming would accomplish everything that those who are in favor of reorganization seek to accomplish; and I hope the amendment will be agreed to when it is reached.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. In order that we may understand the present procedure, is it not a fact that the question now before the Senate is the reconsideration of the vote on the Wheeler amendment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] has not yet withdrawn his motion, and the Chair could not recognize him for that purpose, even if he wished to do so, because the Senator from South Carolina has the floor.

The Senator from Missouri was asking for recognition and claiming the right to recognition because he was the author of the motion. However, in the meantime, the Chair had recognized the Senator from South Carolina because he was on his feet and because he is in charge of the bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ADAMS. May the maker of a motion to reconsider withdraw his motion?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that he may, but he will have to have the consent of the Senate. The Chair, not having looked up the matter himself, is advised by the Parliamentarian that a motion by a Senator may not be withdrawn except by permission of the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, a point of order. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McCARRAN. The question now before the Senate is the question of reconsideration, is it not?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I make the preferential motion that the Senate adjourn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the Senator's purpose? Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I make the preferential motion that the Senate adjourn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have no objection to the motion to adjourn. The only difference is that probably we shall spend a few moments tomorrow in the morning hour. However, as I understand the status of the motion now pending in the Senate would not be changed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It would not.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a parliamentary

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] yields to the Senator from Kentucky for the purpose of making a motion to take a recess, does he not lose the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He does.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Then, Mr. President, I withdraw my motion to adjourn. I give notice that as soon as I can obtain recognition from the Chair tomorrow I shall withdraw the motion to reconsider.

Mr. BYRNES. I give notice that when the Senator withdraws the motion I shall renew it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, March 22, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received in the Senate March 21 (legislative day of March 16), 1939

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Wiley Blount Rutledge, Jr., of Iowa, to be an associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, to fill a position created by the act of Congress of May 31, 1938.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

Charles E. Kemper, of Columbus, Ind., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 40, with head-quarters at Indianapolis, Ind., in place of Wray Fleming, whose term of office has expired.

CUSTOMS APPRAISER

Florence Clarke Lynch, of New York, to be appraiser of merchandise in customs collection district No. 10, with headquarters at New York, N. Y., to fill an existing vacancy.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

The following-named majors to be lieutenant colonels in the Marine Corps from the 29th day of June 1938:

Martin J. Kelleher William E. Riley

David R. Nimmer Merwin H. Silverthorn

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MARCH 21, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, Spirit of Truth, come and guide us into all truth. Thou who knowest our thoughts and readest our lives, be the master of our hearts; dominate them until they lose their weakness. We pray Thee to restore all things to their noble use; purify them from the taint of lust and selfishness; make them sweet again as in the golden age, when our dear Lord walked in the garden in the cool of the morning. Father of mercies, there are wounds and afflictions which pierce the heart and open at the touch. Do Thou be most graciously near the couches of our sick and afflicted Members. Thou who dost heed the sparrow's fall, hear the sighs of the aching breast and put Thy tender hand on the breaking heart; bless and comfort them with the sweetness of calm and rest. However frail the flesh, worn the form, or weak the hand, may the heart be strong. Of Thy fullness may we all receive. In the name of our Saviour.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CORCORAN COURTS

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I offer a privileged resolution, and ask for its present consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be requested to submit to the House all reports prepared by engineers under his direction having to do with the safety of the building, from a standpoint of life and property, together with a comparison of the estimated weighted load of equipment to be moved into the building with the estimated maximum weighted load per square foot of the floor structure, of the recently acquired Government building commonly referred to as the Corcoran Courts Apartments, and to be used by the Finance Section and Surgeon General of the War

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, this is a resolution of inquiry introduced by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD], and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Hearings on this resolution were conducted by the committee on yesterday when representatives of the Department of the Interior appeared before the committee. After the testimony was heard, there was no objection from any source to the favorable reporting of this resolution; consequently, the committee comes at this time with the recommendation that the resolution do pass.

In brief explanation let me say that a few years ago legislation was enacted authorizing the Government to acquire certain squares in that area of the city of Washington desired and designed for governmental construction. On one of these squares so acquired is situated the Corcoran Courts Apartments building with which this resolution has to deal. It was constructed for residential and not for office purposes. It is proposed to move into this building the Finance Section and the Surgeon General of the War Department, and that the building be used as an office building for the conduct of their activities. A question arose as to the safety of the building for such office purposes. In view of the fact that considerable heavy equipment is likely to be placed in it, and inasmuch as it was constructed originally for residential purposes, there was doubt as to whether or not the personnel would be safe.

A special committee under the direction of the Interior Department is now making an investigation with reference to this feature of the matter and has given assurance that employees will not be placed in this building until there has been a thorough examination of it from the standpoint of safety, and until such modifications as may be necessary in this regard have been made.

This building is on a part of the site designed for the construction of the War Department building, but inasmuch as it will not be used for some time for that purpose it has been thought advisable by those in charge of the space in our various Government-owned buildings to use this building temporarily for these office purposes, thereby avoiding the payment of rent in privately owned buildings. It is estimated that the cost of the necessary remodeling of this building will be equivalent to what the Government would have to pay for similar space for 1 year, and the statement was made before the committee by representatives of the Interior Department that this building would likely be used for the purposes mentioned for a period of 5 years. Consequently, if the item of safety is looked after properly there will be governmental economy in the use of the building for the purposes specified.

Does the gentleman from Michigan, who introduced the resolution, desire any time to discuss it?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to take up the time of the House. I think the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has very clearly presented the issue. As he has stated, this is simply a resolution of inquiry. The Interior Department has indicated that they are perfectly willing to proceed with the investigation as to the safety of the building and to submit in proper time a full report with reference to their findings not only by their own engineers but by a special committee of engineers which has been appointed by the Interior Department to give a double check on the safety features. I think the chairman has fully covered the situation, and I do not care to take more time unless some Member has a question to ask with reference to the details.

Mr. LANHAM. I may say, in addition, Mr. Speaker, that it is thought a week or 10 days will be sufficient time in which to make the necessary investigation and report.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for one question.

Mr. LANHAM. I gladly yield to the gentleman from

Mr. CRAWFORD. Was it not brought out in the hearings that in this Government program wherein the administration is forced to transfer employees into buildings originally constructed for residential purposes the thought was expressed that Congress should give serious consideration to the problem this condition imposes upon the Department of the Interior? That is one of the facts that was brought out during the hearing.

Mr. LANHAM. That suggestion was made.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include therein the remarks of the Honorable James A. Farley given at the dedication of the new post office and courthouse on March 11, 1939, at Los Angeles, Calif.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. KRAMER]?

There was no objection.

LXXXIV-193

The address referred to follows:

The address referred to follows:

I am glad to have this opportunity of joining with the citizens of Los Angeles in these ceremonies incident to the dedication of your new seven and a half million dollar Federal building.

In supervising the erection of this structure, it was the aim of the Government to construct something that would be ornamental, as well as useful, and I think those gathered here will agree that this dual purpose has been achieved.

Viewed from a practical standpoint, the completion of this building gives assurance that the Federal needs of your community will be adequately served for many years to come. I think, also, that it has another and perhaps more significant meaning. Because this beautiful building, in effect, symbolizes the vital and dynamic spirit of progress and accomplishment that has made Los Angeles one of the fastest growing communities in the world. Fifty years is a comparatively short time in the life span of a nation. Yet half a century ago, a very small portion of this building would have been sufficient to provide the necessary postal facilities for the people living in this vicinity. In fact, there were literally dozens of cities throughout the United States that outranked Los Angeles in population and industrial activity. You have traveled far in the intervening years, not alone because nature has been lavish in its favors to this region, but because your people have had the initiative and the pluck to translate opportunity into fact and realization.

A visit to California is always pleasant and this time it has been made doubly so by the character of the occasion which brings me here. It is my happy task to bring you the greetings of the Roosevelt administration and the sincere wish of those in authority at Washington for your continued prosperity and well-being.

California has a high place in the affections of those of us who authority at Washington for your continued property being.

California has a high place in the affections of those of us who live elsewhere. While still one of the younger commonwealths that make up the Nation, you have attained eminence in population, in wealth, in culture, and you have retained in splendid fashion the courage and the enterprise of the pioneers who came here in search of gold nearly a century ago. They found the gold they were seeking, but like other discoverers, they did not know that the fortunes they washed out of the mountains and river beds were but a fraction of the great natural wealth that lay dormant in this great State. In seeking happiness and financial security for themselves they founded an empire for the enjoyment of future generations.

security for themselves they founded an empire for the enjoyment of future generations.

One could hardly come into California to participate in a program of this nature without reverting for a moment to an earlier period in the history of the United States Post Office Department. I have reference, of course, to the days of the old overland mails, for every historian who has recounted the birth and growth of the Southwest has placed due emphasis on the importance of the Postal Service to the early growth and later expansion of the old California territory.

Postal Service to the early growth and later expansion of the old California territory.

This year marks the eighty-second anniversary of the first transcontinental mail service, a service which provided the only means of transportation and communication with the rapidly growing Nation in the East. It was just 82 years ago that the "great southern overland" mail service was established, 3 years before the Wells Fargo Express was placed in operation. This pioneer transcontinental mail line has often been compared in historical importance with victories of the Army in the War with Mexico a decade before, and it rightfully has been credited with aiding in the preservation of the West for the United States.

The history of the overland mail is replete with the records of

The history of the overland mail is replete with the records of sturdy men who looked upon peril and hardships as a part of their daily lot to be borne without flinching and for meager rewards. They are truly unsung heroes who played a magnificent role in the development of this great land.

the development of this great land.

I imagine the Los Angeles of today would have been an unbelievable fairyland to those first rural letter carriers. Statistics are often dull, and yet I feel that the surest way of picturing the amazing growth of this city is to recite a few outstanding facts relating to the Postal Service. The Los Angeles post office today is the fifth largest in the United States. You have a right to feel proud of that fact, especially so when you recall that 50 years ago the receipts here amounted only to $113,000—a striking contrast to the twelve and a half millions of dollars received during the fiscal year 1938, the highest single year on record. Much of this expansion has occurred in recent years, because as late as 1925 the receipts were only $8,000,000. In fact, in the last 2 years postal receipts in this city have increased 17 percent.

Today Los Angeles ranks third in the number of square miles served, with an estimated population of 1,500,000 people receiving mail service over an area of 150 square miles. To carry out the complex operation of the postal service in this city it has been necessary to increase the personnel more than threefold in the past 25 years. The force now includes, in addition to the postmaster, 1,426 clerks and supervisors, 1,324 carriers, 75 laborers, and 111 motor-vehicle employees.

motor-vehicle employees.

motor-vehicle employees.

This army of trained employees, providing fast and efficient service with clocklike precision in one city alone, takes on new meaning when considered against the background of the tiny force which distributed the mails in the days of Benjamin Franklin, the first Postmaster General. There were 75 post offices in the entire country then, and a few hundred people, many of them part-time employees, were able to perform all the labors of the infant service. The transmission of a letter from New York to Washington in background. weather often took a couple of weeks, while in this modern era a letter may be posted in Washington one day and carried clear across the continent to Los Angeles and delivered on the next.

a letter may be posted in Washington one day and carried clear across the continent to Los Angeles and delivered on the next.

It may interest you to know that mail service here had its inception on April 9, 1850, when the Los Angeles post office was established with J. Pugh as the city's first postmaster. Late in the same year contracts were awarded for carrying the mail between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara and Los Angeles and San Diego. The contractor was John Caldwell, of Monterey, who provided the service on both routes, operating on a bimonthly basis with postroute riders on horseback. It was really excellent service for that period, yet I fancy if a citizen today had to wait 2 weeks for a letter from San Diego he would very rightfully condemn the outrageous inefficiency of the Post Office Department.

While mail service here in California was very limited during the middle of the nineteenth century, it must be remembered that it was only along the eastern seaboard that regular post routes and schedules were in operation on a large-scale basis.

From colonial days until now the Post Office Department has played a vital part in building the mighty Nation that spans the continent from ocean to ocean. It was the aid rendered by the Post Office Department and other agencies of the Government which kept the early stage lines running and made possible the construction and the successful operation of the first railroads. It is not too much to say that in the pioneering period the United States mail was always the principal factor in opening the way to the frontiers and in leading the early settlers from the centers of population along the seaboard into the western country.

Today there are some 2,000,000 miles of post roads in the United States over which the mails travel daily. They move by every conceivable means of transportation, all calculated to provide the most expeditious service possible according to the peculiar conditions which pertain in each locality. They move by airplane, by truck, and by railroad and Alaska. Experimental flights have been made over the Atlantic, and I am sure we shall soon see the day when there will be 24-hour service between New York and London and New York and Paris, just as today we have 16-hour service between California and New York.

The United States Post Office Department is essentially a business organization. There are more than 45,000 post offices scattered throughout the land, the operations of which are carried on by an army of more than 400,000 workers. The Postal Service is the largest employer of labor in the country—larger than any single industrial entruprises.

est employer of labor in the country—larger than any single industrial enterprise.

The Postal Service today comprises our largest savings bank, our largest express business, our largest system for the transfer of money, and our largest agency available to the people for the investment of their savings in Government bonds. It has in its custody $1,250,000,000 in postal savings, owned by thrifty American depositors. We like to mention these glgantic operations with becoming modesty, but, at the same time, we do wish you to know about them. about them.

coming modesty, but, at the same time, we do wish you to know about them.

The Post Office Department has kept in step with progress, and it is likewise carrying on its far-flung activities with a balanced budget, although the salaries paid to employees are higher than they ever were before. If we eliminate from annual appropriations the nonpostal items, which are not properly chargeable to postal costs, we find that the Postal Service has been operating at a profit during the last 5 years, with the exception of the fiscal year 1936. There would have been a surplus that year, except that the added cost of the 40-hour week was absorbed all at once. Stated in another way, the money which people spend for postage is slightly in excess of the amount expended for postal facilities.

While speaking of postal finances, it is interesting to note that revenues for the last fiscal year amounted to more than $728,000,000, the highest single year in the history of the Department.

Before leaving Washington I had reports before me which revealed that postal receipts for the first 7 months of the current fiscal year were greater than for any previous similar period in the history of the Services and I was pleased to note that there had been a marked were greater than for any previous similar period in the history of the Service, and I was pleased to note that there had been a marked upward trend in business, particularly in the larger cities. The whole State of California has been doing especially well. In fact, during the 4-year period from the fiscal year 1934 until the end of the fiscal year 1938 the increase in receipts was approximately 36 percent.

recent.

It would be needless for me to describe in detail the beauty and utility of this splendid edifice which the Federal Government has erected here to care for the postal needs of Los Angeles. In keeping with the Department's policy, a type of architecture was selected that fits in well with the surrounding landscape, and one lected that fits in well with the prevailing form of architecture.

lected that fits in well with the surrounding landscape, and one that blends harmoniously with the prevailing form of architecture in this section of the country.

Before closing these remarks, however, I do wish to say a word in praise of the wise Federal policy which made possible the construction of this building and others like it in hundreds of communities from the Atlantic to the Pacific. I refer to the policy of prudent spending for investment which the Roosevelt administration embarked upon, shortly after taking over control of the Government, to meet one of the most acute emergencies in the history of the United States. of the United States.

The bleak days of early 1933, when industry was helpless and confidence shattered, are too fresh in your memory to need repetition here. The need of the hour was for quick and decisive action, and the new Chief Executive met the crisis with a masterly display of leadership that brought forth a Nation-wide chorus of approval from his fellow countrymen. He determined to use the Federal credit for the immediate relief of industry and the unemployed, and it is significant to note that hardly a voice was raised in criticism of this courageous action. Only when business had been revived and profits were displacing losses on the ledgers of private enterprise did the critics find voice to raise the cry of fear and alarm against the course which the President was pursuing.

Those who disagree with the administration policy insist that industry would have jumped ahead to full capacity if President

Those who disagree with the administration policy insist that industry would have jumped ahead to full capacity if President Roosevelt had only sat back, done nothing, and let nature take its course. There is not a shred of tangible evidence to support their view. On the contrary, it is plain to fair-minded people that industry, by its own efforts, never could have escaped from the wreckage of debts and bankruptcy left by the depression. For the President to refuse the use of the Federal credit to relieve the sufferings of the people would have been short-sighted and inhuman. inhuman.

Inhuman.

The charge is frequently made that the Roosevelt administration has departed from sound and traditional policy using Federal credit to stimulate industry and to promote the economic well-being of the country. Those of you who live in the far West know better. You know from experience that without the generous aid of Uncle Sam's pocketbook this land of thriving industry and diversified agriculture would not be in the advanced stage of development that it is today. It was the Government's financial aid that made possible the construction of the transcontinental railroads and the air lines; it was the Government's far-seeing policy of helping homesteaders to acquire land without burdensome debts that brought settlers out here in ever-increasing numbers. The Roosevelt administration has continued this policy of developing the West through the medium of sound investment, and the wisdom of this course is just as apparent now as it ever was.

During the last 6 years the United States has traveled steadily forward along the path that leads to prosperity and contentment at home and peace with our foreign neighbors. At every single step of the journey President Roosevelt has been criticized and his policies attacked. The echoes of one barrage hardly fade away before a new one has commenced. Yet despite the vigor of the attack it becomes evident that President Roosevelt has charted the course and performed the supreme task with a degree of wisdom and understanding that confounds his critics.

The advisability of appropriating funds for public works is one of the phases of the President's program that has often been questing the part of the phases of the President's program that has often been questing the part of the phases of the President's program that has often been questing the part of the phases of the President's program that has often been questing the part of the phases of the President's program that has often been questing the part of the phase of the president's program that has often been questing t The charge is frequently made that the Roosevelt administration

The advisability of appropriating funds for public works is one of the phases of the President's program that has often been questioned. Yet I feel confident that there is no one present today who can possibly doubt the advantage to be gained by the citizens of Los Angeles in the erection of this impressive edifice for the use of the public. It stands not only as a beautiful symbol of a great Government and a great Nation, but it will also provide the latest facilities and healthful working conditions for the officials and employees who will occupy it.

In this connection, may I avail myself of the opportunity to pay tribute to your distinguished postmaster, Mrs. Mary D. Briggs, who, after his death, succeeded her husband, Henry Briggs, a lovable and outstanding citizen who had established himself as one of the foremost postmasters of the Nation. Her administration of the office has not only met with the entire approval of the people of this section of the country but her record in the Department is the office has not only met with the entire approval of the people of this section of the country, but her record in the Department is a source of pride and gratification to all of us. Since I became Postmaster General I have received the utmost cooperation and support from the personnel of the entire service, for which I am now and shall ever be grateful, and our employees here, like our postal employees everywhere, are loyal, efficient, and industricus men and women of whom we may well be proud.

I am also delighted to see on this platform Congressman CHARLES Kramer, who appeared before the Committee on Appropriations on various occasions, and through his continued and untiring efforts procured the original appropriation and the subsequent appropriations which were necessary in order to erect this magnificent edifice which we are dedicating today.

May I also take this occasion to express my sincere appreciation for the courtesy which has been extended to me today on all sides. Your hospitality is truly representative of California. I trust that your new building will not only be a continuous source of civic pride and patriotism, but that you will also find happiness and prosperity in the use of its facilities.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Robertson]?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to take this occasion to express my genuine admiration for the intellectual honesty and moral courage of my friend and distinguished colleague the gentleman from California [Mr. CARTER]. In the face of an organized partisan move to strike an appropriation item from the appropriation bill under consideration yesterday for the Blue Ridge Parkway, he stood on this floor and courageously told us that he thought it was a worthy undertaking and that the appropriation was proper and should not be eliminated.

Mr. Carter's ability has won the admiration and respect of the Members of this House and reflects credit upon his district and his State. I want to give this testimonial here today of my high regard for him. He is an outstanding conservationist and has rendered a great service to this Nation, not only as a member of the Committee on Appropriations but as a member of the Select Committee on Wildlife Conservation.

Mr. Speaker, may I also say at this time it was a source of regret to me that on this issue only two of his Republican colleagues, as I observed, stood with him in opposition to the amendment to strike the appropriation for the Blue Ridge Parkway. This should be of some interest to the Republicans of my district who are deeply and vitally interested in the construction of the Blue Ridge Parkway, destined to be the greatest scenic highway in the world.

[Here the gavel fell.]

CORRECTING A MISREPRESENTATION

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, on the 8th of this month I received a wire notifying me of the death of my niece. It so happened that during that day while I was at the Capitol pickets had been placed at the entrances to the Mayflower Hotel, where I stay while in Washington.

I had immediately, upon receipt of the telegram, made arrangements to attend the funeral of my niece to be held in Chicago on the 9th, but I was detained at the House because of the pending vote on the reorganization bill, which, as you will recall, did not take place until quite late on the evening of the 8th. However, immediately upon adjournment on that day, I rushed to the hotel with my secretary, obtained my grip, and hurried to the Union Station, where I boarded a train for Chicago, arriving there on the afternoon of the next day.

Imagine my surprise then to read in the Chicago Tribune of March 10, under a Washington date line, the following:

Representative Adolph Sabath, dean of the House, perfected a dodge of his own. The Chicago Democrat, who lives in the Mayflower Hotel, was seen sucking a soda in the hotel drug store and eyeing the picket line parading in front of the hotel.

When the line made an about face, Saeath darted through a door connecting with the hotel lobby and scurried into his rooms. In the morning he entered the drug store through the lobby door, purchased a cigar, and sallied forth unconcernedly.

The only truth about this dispatch is that I have a room at the Mayflower Hotel. The entire balance of the article is pure fiction, for it is obvious that I could not have been "sucking sodas," "purchasing cigars," or "darting through doors" in the drug store hotel in Washington on March 9, as stated, for on the morning of that day I was still on the

All this demonstrates to what extent some of the newspapers will go to unjustly and unfairly place a man in an embarrassing position, and do it without the slightest justification therefor.

I do not now and never have objected to fair criticism. But naturally I do object to the willfully misleading reports which the Republican newspapers have a habit of so generously indulging in.

[Here the gavel fell.]

COMMITTEE ON THE POST OFFICE AND POST ROADS

Mr. WHELCHEL. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, I ask unanimous consent that subcommittee No. 1 of that committee, now considering legislation with reference to certain employees may be permitted to sit during the session of the House today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Whelchel]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this agreeable to the minority members of the committee? What subject is being considered by that committee?

Mr. WHELCHEL. It has to do with substitute clerks, their working conditions and pay. I may say to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] that the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Mason, is a minority member of that committee. There are several others on that side who are members of this committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This is agreable to him?

Mr. WHELCHEL. Oh, yes. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. WHELCHEL]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, March 28, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and at the conclusion of special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Dickstein]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Dickstein asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that today, following any special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 15

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a resolution from the Los Angeles Building Trades Council with reference to the time clauses being inserted in Government contracts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by the Honorable Harry Flaherty, of Lincoln, Nebr., on the life and work of William Jennings

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Robertson] intimated in his defense of his support of the Sky Line Drive that it had probably elected him, and that it was looking toward his reelection that he had stood for the Sky Line Drive. I should like to call attention to the fact that two distinguished Members living on this Sky Line Drive, one in North Carolina and one in Virginia, and who had sponsored it strongly in other years; one, in fact, having had his name connected with it for awhile, had the closest races for reelection last fall of their lives. I suggest the gentleman heed this warning lest this Republican opponent he speaks of causes him future trouble.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Griswold] is recognized for 25 minutes.

THE CANADIAN TRADE TREATIES AND THE DAIRY FARMER

Mr. GRISWOLD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to discuss the trade-agreement acts with Canada that became effective January 1, 1936, and January 1, 1939, and their relationship to the general tariff act in effect previous to that time. I also want to discuss different commodities under the present trade agreement with Canada and particularly their effect upon the dairy industry of my district, the State of Wisconsin, and the United States. Before going into that discussion further, I want to say a word about the dairy industry in general.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY

One family out of 15 in the United States is now supported by the production and distribution of the products of the dairy industry. Milk and its products represent a value of about $1,530,000,000, or much more than any other agricultural product. The dairy industry not only provides a tremendous medium of employment which is entirely yearround employment, but it furnishes one of the essential and most important foods of the Nation. The progress and well-being of any nation is determined largely by the amount of dairy products consumed by its people. In this connection, let me call your attention to England, who, in her drive for preparedness, insists upon larger consumption of dairy products. England has promoted and encouraged the opening of 1,060 milk bars as convenient places for the purchase and consumption of milk and its products at very low prices. The general health of the Nation depends to a great extent upon the per capita consumption of dairy products.

THE DAIRY FARMER

The dairy farmer represents the highest type of agriculture. He makes of a farm his home and spends the earnings of his life upon the home and industry for which he stands. He builds substantial buildings, installs in them modern equipment and, as his means allow, is a constant purchaser of every kind of farm machinery as well as expensive and highly developed equipment needed for the handling of his dairy products. His continuance and his welfare is of the highest importance in the building up of this Nation. I happen to represent in this Congress a great dairy district in the greatest dairy State in the Union. consin has 2,157,000 head of dairy cows of which 367,000 are in my district. The 180,194 dairy farms in the State have on them dairy cattle valued at $155,304,000. Wisconsin produces annually 175,659,000 pounds of butter, of which my district alone produces 42,681,000 pounds.

A PERMANENT INDUSTRY

The dairy farmer and the dairy industry represent a permanent industry in that it requires permanent and expensive improvements. The dairy farmer cannot shift from one crop to another because of the tremendous investment in buildings and equipment other than his land. He must remain a dairy farmer. For this reason he is vitally interested in the policies of the Government as they affect the great industry in which he is engaged.

DAIRY CATTLE IN WISCONSIN

Previous to 1934 the general tariff had always been discussed in Congress and passed upon by the chosen representatives of the people. Their duty, in part at least, was to protect and promote the interest of the people they represented. When Congress surrendered its tariff-making power and allowed a department of the Government to secretly enact a tariff measure as a trade treaty, the results of that treaty became of great concern to the dairy farmer. Wisconsin is the only State that has more dairy cattle than people. She has used every effort, through education and legislation, to improve the dairy cattle of her State. Wisconsin has spent $8.851,000 to completely eradicate tuberculosis from the herds of the State and to make every county, and the State itself, accredited territory free from bovine tuberculosis. Wisconsin has spent $73,250 toward the eradication of Bang's disease, and whole counties in the State are now free from this disease. Wisconsin has surplus dairy cattle to sell and during the past years has shipped as high as 80,000 head of cattle to replenish the herds of other States. The State could annually furnish 100,000 head of dairy cows to replenish the depleted herds in other sections. The Tariff Act of 1930 placed a tariff of 3 cents a pound on dairy cattle imported from Canada. Under the trade treaty of January 1, 1936, the tariff was reduced to 11/2 cents a pound, but fortunately at this rate a limit was placed at 20,000 head. Under the present act, effective January 1, 1939, the duty remains at 11/2 cents, but the limit has been removed and an unlimited number of dairy cattle can now enter the United States. The weight of the cattle is taken at the railroad station at point of destination and under this very lenient rule the import duty will probably not exceed $10 per head. Under the excessive health requirements now in effect in many States for embargo purposes, and in spite of the fact that Wisconsin probably has the cleanest cattle of any State in the Union, it will be much easier to buy cattle in Canada under the very liberal health certificate permitted by the United States Department of Agriculture than it will be to buy cattle in Wisconsin under the embargo health certificate as now required. This means a loss to the State of Wisconsin of a great part of the dairy-cattle market, and a resulting decrease in the market value of every dairy cow in Wisconsin.

BEEF CATTLE ALLOWED TO ENTER

The tariff on beef cattle or heavy cattle from Canada under the 1930 tariff was 3 cents a pound. This was reduced under the 1936 trade agreement to 1½ cents and 2 cents a pound, and a limit was placed at 227,732 head. The 1939 agreement further reduces this tariff to 1½ cents per pound and increases the limit to 325,000 head. If beef cattle are to be allowed to enter to this extent under this low rate and no limit on dairy cattle, it must decrease the value of all the cattle in Wisconsin and the United States. All dairy cattle must eventually be sold on the beef basis; and if this price is depressed, it is an added loss to the dairy farmer.

THE CHEESE MARKET

I now wish to discuss the Canadian treaty as it pertains to cheese, one of the great dairy products and foods of Wisconsin produces about 324,336,000 pounds of cheese annually-half of all the cheese made in the United The Third Congressional District of Wisconsin, which I represent, produces 46,548,000 pounds of cheese or more than any State in the Union with the exception of New York. In order to make Wisconsin cheese the finest in the world, the State of Wisconsin spends annually about $80,000 to inspect and grade this great quantity of cheese for quality. In order that the people of the United States may know about the superior value and food quality, the State is spending $100,000 yearly to advertise the superior dairy products it produces. Under the 1930 Tariff Act a duty of 7 cents a pound was imposed on imported cheese. Under the 1936 Canadian trade treaty the duty was reduced to 5 cents per pound, and under that tariff 60,641,000 pounds of cheese were imported into this country in 1 year. The present agreement which went into effect January 1, 1939, has further reduced this duty to 4 cents per pound and placed no limit on the amount that might be imported. In order to further nullify the tariff on cheese, Canada is producing a very dry cheese or a cheese excessively high in butterfat content. This, in effect, further reduces the tariff and allows Canadian cheese to enter the United States in an unlimited amount at a tariff of about 31/2 cents per pound. There is no decrease in the tariff on butter; but if the price of cheese is lower, milk immediately goes into the production of butter and the price of butter, therefore, must come down. Cheese and butter always maintain the same relationship in price. There cannot be cheap cheese without cheap butter. The tariff on cheese is now so low that foreign countries can actually control the cheese prices in the United States. It is not always important as to the amount of cheese imported. but the fact that the fence is down means a low ceiling on the price of cheese at all times.

WHOLE MILK

Under the 1939 agreement with Canada, the duty on whole milk has been reduced from $6\frac{1}{2}$ cents per gallon to $3\frac{1}{4}$ cents per gallon, for at least 3,000,000 gallons. While importation of milk to this amount is small in comparison with the total milk production in the United States, but 3,000,000 gallons of milk may be a very disturbing factor if dumped onto some of our eastern markets.

REAM

The duty on cream has been further reduced from 56.6 cents per gallon to 28.3 cents per gallon and the bars let down for the importation of 1,500,000 gallons annually. This is equivalent to allowing the importation of 6,000,000 pounds of butter at a 7-cent tariff.

EMBARGOES ON DAIRY PRODUCTS

In the importation of cattle and dairy production, the health requirements are set by Federal statutes and regulations. While the health requirements established by this Government are adequate, they do not approach the red-tape "embargo disguised" health rules now imposed by many cities and States. While I protest the entry of Canadian milk and cream, if our present Government insists on letting it in, I suggest to the people of the District of Columbia and other cities where excessively high prices are maintained, if they wish to have milk and cream on their table at a price where the children and entire family can use it, that they divert some of the Canadian milk and cream coming into this country to their cities. No State, by any health requirements, can prohibit the products allowed to enter under this trade treaty. If the apparent combination between boards of health and milk distributors cannot be broken, I suggest this as a solution to the problem of 14-cent and 16-cent milk in some cities.

DRIED BUTTERMILK

Wisconsin produces annually 8,801,000 pounds of dried buttermilk and ranks second among all States in the Union in dried buttermilk production. Under the 1930 tariff the duty on dried buttermilk was 3 cents a pound. It has been reduced under the 1939 trade agreement to $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents a pound and no limit placed on the amount that might be imported.

EFFECT OF TRADE TREATIES

When the effect of the 1936 trade treaty became apparent and threatened the demoralization of the dairy industry, Hon. Francis D. Culkin, a Member of this House, on April 15, 1938, joined with 70 other Members of the House in a protest to the President of the United States. On June 8, 1938, a reply to this protest was received from the State Department and placed in the Congressional Record. I wish to quote from that reply:

The amount of competition which the domestic dairyman is likely to suffer from increased imports of dairy products attributable to moderate concessions granted in trade agreements will surely be overshadowed by the increased competition he will suffer from domestic sources if market outlets for our great export staples remain inadequate to absorb the surplus production of such crops and low returns to the growers force them to go into dairying.

This remarkable statement says, in other words, that we must keep the price of dairy products low in order to discourage additional dairy competition in our own country. With as many as 400 dairy farms in one county in my State being foreclosed by Federal agencies, it would hardly seem necessary to further depress dairy prices to stave off a threat of home competition. Regardless of what the Bureau in Washington may think, the dairy industry cannot stand world competition and survive. Further in the report the State Department says:

The general prosperity of the country is much more vital to the dairyman than any question of a few additional millions of pounds of imported cheese.

If the importation of a few million pounds of cheese meant prosperity for this country, I would agree with this statement; but if it is the thought that a general demoralization of the whole dairy industry is going to benefit this country, then I am in absolute disagreement. In my opinion the whole dairy industry has been sold down the river and there have been no compensating benefits.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. HAWKS. I should like to ask the gentleman if there is not a direct relationship between that and the dangling before the farmers by the Agriculture Department of a $33,000,000 farm subsidy? Is it not true that all the Wisconsin dairy farmer wants is protection against that sort of thing? He does not want a hand-out from the Department of Agriculture; he wants protection for his own market and for his own products.

Mr. GRISWOLD. I will answer the gentleman in this way: That under the triple A, the first Agricultural Adjustment Act we had, the dairy farmer received no benefits. The only benefits the dairy farmer has received have been from the Surplus Commodities Corporation, if they can be called benefits, where the Corporation has purchased butter and some other dairy products, and under the Soil Conservation Act the farmers have received a very small benefit. The dairy industry does not ask for any hand-out from the Federal Government, but the farmers do ask to have the American market, to which they believe they are entitled.

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. GEHRMANN. Of course, the gentleman knows that just recently the Surplus Commodities Corporation has stopped buying surplus butter, and we know what has happened to the price. A number of us have taken the matter up with the Corporation and have found the Corporation is not going back in the market, or at least not for some time to come, to buy butter. I believe that is the only benefit the dairy industry has had, as the gentleman stated. The Corporation is refusing to give us that little benefit.

Mr. HAWKS. If the gentleman will yield further, I should just like to bring in the fact that I called up the Department and they informed me that they already had a great deal of butter on hand, and they wanted to know if I had any answer as to what they were going to do with it. I asked them and wanted to know if they thought their whole program was a success in view of the surpluses and the depressed markets we have in this country today.

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield. Mr. GEHRMANN. The fact is that the Dairy Marketing Association, an independent dairy purchasing association, has practically all the storage stocks, and that is only about 70,000,000 pounds, which is much less than the 5-year average, so that excuse does not hold water. Their only excuse is that they anticipate a large production this year.

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. THILL. Does the gentleman know whether the Surplus Commodities Corporation has purchased any cheese from the Wisconsin farmers?

Mr. GRISWOLD. Yes, they have; but I might say in regard to the purchasing of dairy products by any Government agency and holding them for an indefinite period of time and gradually putting them back on the market that such purchase is only a temporary benefit and does not permanently benefit the dairy industry. Eventually the farmers have to suffer for whatever price benefits they received when the original purchases were made.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not a fact that a part of the commodities purchased are distributed to people who could not buy them otherwise, thereby creating a new market and taking that much of the commodities out of the surplus? To that extent it is helpful.

Mr. GRISWOLD. To that extent it would be helpful; the gentleman is correct.

POULTRY AND EGGS

I wish now, for the time being at least, to leave the strictly dairy products and speak of the poultry industry, which is very closely allied and in many cases goes hand in hand with the dairy industry. Under the 1930 tariff law, live poultry could be imported at 8 cents per pound. This has now been reduced under the 1939 agreement to 4 cents a pound. Eggs in the shell, under the 1930 tariff, could be imported at 10 cents a dozen. This has now been reduced under 1939 agreement to 5 cents a dozen. Wisconsin has on hand about 14,903,000 chickens and there are in my district alone over 2,517,000 head. Wisconsin annually sells 12,536,000 chickens and produces 1,758,000,000 eggs and is one of the leading States in production of both poultry and eggs. The opening of the door by the low tariff rates to our neighbors on the north cannot help but depress and keep down the price of poultry and eggs in Wisconsin.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman is talking about something now in which I am very much interested, dairy products and poultry. Has the gentleman made an investigation to determine the effect and influence that our mass buyers have on the market for the products the gentleman has just discussed, and to what extent they have depressed the market and ruined the price to the farmers?

Mr. GRISWOLD. In the time I have today I am simply discussing the Canadian trade agreement and the possible effect that has had or is having on the dairy industry.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield. Mr. KITCHENS. You have a great Governor and a new Governor in the State of Wisconsin.

Mr. GRISWOLD. We have; yes.

Mr. KITCHENS. Did you note that a few days ago, at your State capitol in Madison, he stated:

We cannot afford to live in a shell; we cannot afford to erect barriers against our neighbors.

I wonder if the gentlemen agrees with the statement of his Governor?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I might state that this Nation lived for a good many years, and got along pretty well, without foreign trade. We lived 90 percent inside of ourselves during all that time. I am wondering if we want to sacrifice our own wellbeing for the benefit of somebody's good-neighbor policy or for the benefit of some other country.

Mr. KITCHENS. I think he had reference to the fact that your State, along with a few other States, imposed a tax of 15 cents a pound upon margarine which contains a pure vegetable oil from the South. I gathered the impression that he had decided that these barriers that one State erects against another are wrong, unjust, and really an avoidance of the letter and spirit of the Constitution of this country. This is the idea I gathered from his speech, and I believe he has shown a statesmanship and a vision which few people in this country are able to have. In Arkansas today we are going into the dairy business, and for the first time in the history of my county the dairy cans are along the highways. The poor Negroes are even entering into it. Why? Their cottonseed has been reduced in value $15 a ton and that is the product on which they mostly lived. The result is that my State, although we do not want to do it, is being forced to enter into things in which your people are vitally interested, and so long as you erect these barriers against our States and our products we will be compelled to retaliate and to erect barriers against the products of other States, and I am saying this in a most friendly spirit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ASHBROOK). The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time may be extended 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is that request satisfactory to the gentleman from California [Mr. Voornis]?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. It is, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRISWOLD. I may say, in regard to the trade agreements that the gentleman spoke about, Wisconsin is also suffering, not only from trade agreements but embargoes that have been imposed by States in the guise of health regulations and in other ways. That, however, is another subject that I did not want to discuss today. I wanted to confine myself, if I could, to the Canadian treaties, although I agree with much that the gentleman has said.

Mr. KITCHENS. If the gentleman will permit me, the gentleman is aware of the fact that in Europe there were 45 countries until recently, and the great trouble in Europe for centuries has been these trade restrictions and barriers erected by one country against another, which caused continuous irritation and friction between the people. They cannot get along, and unless we help our neighbors and induce them to help us there can be no continuous friendship, especially if we continue to impose these barriers and prevent them from trading to the best advantage.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield.

Mr. HAWKS. I would like to remind the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Kitchens] that during the past 4 or 5 years the trouble in Wisconsin has not been so much from the effect of interstate barriers or entirely from the effect of these reciprocal-trade agreements, but rather it has been the program of the A. A., including their subsidy program, which is chasing Wisconsin's agriculture down into Arkansas.

Mr. KITCHENS. I do not want Wisconsin to have her industries chased down into my State. You have a little city in Wisconsin by the name of Kenosha, I think, and about 4 months ago a little glass factory from Kenosha, Wis., moved to my congressional district. I say I do not want that. I do not want them moving from Wisconsin to Arkansas; but I am telling the gentleman and everyone that if you raise these barriers against us, then, in self-preservation and for the protection of our people, we are going to offer every inducement in the world to obtain a little industry down there through relieving those industries from taxation for a number of years, or forever, or by subsidizing them, or by having our cities and towns and municipalities erect some of them.

Mr. HAWKS. But that is why the gentleman is getting them. It is because the Federal Government is subsidizing the farmers down there.

Mr. KITCHENS. It is not subsidizing the farmer in my country any more than it is subsidizing the farmer in the gentleman's country.

Mr. HAWKS. But we are not getting any of that subsidy

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GRISWOLD. Yes.

Mr. GEHRMANN. And I say to the gentleman from Arkansas that the Wisconsin dairy farmer is buying his product, cottonseed oil, to an extent 10 times more than the people down there buy from us, and we are going to continue to do so.

Mr. KITCHENS. Yes; and I say that one man bought 20 Jersey cows last fall, something that never happened before in our State, and took them to the State of Wisconsin.

Mr. GEHRMANN. I do not believe that we should create those artificial barriers. I think our State should get along, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRISWOLD] is talking about foreign-trade agreements. I agree with him in what he says, but there is one more thing about attacks made on the Canadian agreements. I wonder if it is not somewhat selfish on the part of some of the newspapers in their attack upon this agreement when they always refrain from mentioning the fact that pulpwood is brought in from Canada free of duty, and that they have large holdings of pulpwood in Canada and are bringing it across Lake Superior. It is a great industry in my town. Hundreds of thousands of cords are loaded on the cars and shipped all over Wisconsin, but you never hear these metropolitan newspapers say one thing about their paying a duty on that pulpwood that comes from Canada. We have millions of cords of pulpwood in Wisconsin growing there in the north, and the bringing in of the pulpwood from Canada deprives hundreds of lumberjacks from getting a job.

Mr. KITCHENS. And in answer to the gentleman I might say that the South is becoming somewhat interested in the paper mills industry and tariffs also. We have three new pulp mills costing $5,000,000 apiece in and near my district. We are also interested in pulpwood and tariff.

BARLEY

Mr. GRISWOLD. Mr. Speaker, one of the few cash crops of the Wisconsin farmer has been the production and sale of barley used in the brewing industry. Wisconsin's production of barley is over 22,000,000 bushels annually and is third or fourth among the States of the Union in barley production. One-third of all the barley Wisconsin produces is used in the brewing industry. Wisconsin ranks third among the States of the Union in the manufacture of beer, and the production and sale of barley to this industry is an important source of revenue to the Wisconsin farmer. Under the 1930 tariff, barley could be imported for 20 cents per bushel. Under the 1939 agreement this tariff has been reduced to 15 cents per bushel, and forces the Wisconsin farmer to share his barley market with Canadian farmers. Buckwheat and rye, both of which have been considered good cash crops in certain sections of Wisconsin, are now allowed to enter under greatly reduced rates.

HORSES

Under the 1930 Tariff Act, horses were allowed to enter at $30 per head. The 1936 treaty reduced this to $20 per head, and under the 1939 trade agreement horses will be allowed to enter this year at $15 per head. Wisconsin has 532,000 head of horses and mules and the farmers are now raising 25,000 colts for sale and replacement. This low tariff on horses is a severe discouragement to the thousands of farmers who are raising colts with the expectation of selling them at a reasonable price.

HOGS

The tariff on hogs has been cut in half. Under the 1930 tariff, it was 2 cents per pound and this has now been reduced to 1 cent a pound. Wisconsin is not one of the greatest hog-producing States, but she is among the 10 leading hog-producing States in the Nation and produces around 1,298,000 head of hogs annually. It seems under the present treaty, no matter which way the Wisconsin farmer turns, the door is open to Canada, and under these conditions there can be no prospect for better prices.

OTHER PRODUCTS

Mr. Speaker, I cannot discuss all of the items produced in my district which are affected by this drastic reduction in the tariff rates so I shall speak of but two more. Hundreds of people in my district are fishermen and have been able to make a living for their families at this trade, but with the greatly reduced tariff they can hardly continue. The zinc and lead industry, one of the oldest occupations in my district, and which, under a reasonable tariff, could employ thousands of men, will be placed in a state of idleness under the decreased tariff.

CANADIAN CONCESSIONS

The trade agreements have been considered as reciprocaltrade treaties-in other words, concessions or benefits by and to both sides. I wish now to call attention to the products of the United States which Canada has allowed to enter at reduced rates. I find that the principal items on which Canada has allowed lower tariff rates consist of Diesel engines. typewriters, electrical equipment, airplanes, agricultural machinery, automobiles, and a great assortment of machinery of all kinds and many metal products. In going over the concession list of products under which Canada has granted lower tariff, I find that almost none of them are products of my district and very few of them are products of the State of Wisconsin. It becomes very apparent from a study of the agreement that the great dairy industry in the State of Wisconsin was traded off for the benefit of the industrial cities in other sections of the United States. The Canadian trade treaty is destroying the market of the dairy farmer.

Mr. Speaker, as a Representative of a great dairy district and State, I want to enter as vigorous a protest as I can against our present trade agreements with Canada. I appeal to the President and to this Congress to restore the dairy farmer the market to which he has always been entitled.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Ashbrook). The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has again expired.

DEMOCRACY IN THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Ashbrook). Under previous order, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. Voorhis] for 20 minutes.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, on March 23, 1938, I addressed the House very briefly and said:

Without the organization of private extralegal military organizations the setting up of dictatorships in European countries might very well have been avoided. I have no immediate concern or werry about the situation in the United States. I believe that the patience and fundamental patriotism of our people and their devotion to democracy can absolutely be relied upon even in these difficult times; however, in times when we are able to use cool, calm judgment it is proper to guard against the future.

Therefore, as a matter that seems to me to be a right thing to do, and not in a spirit of fear or anything like it, I am today introducing a bill to require that any private military organization which is not now authorized by State or National law must have a license from the President of the United States in order to exist, and further, that the Congress may revoke such license at and further, that the Congress may revoke such license at

That was my short speech of 1 year ago.

I want to finish that speech today and to appeal for the passage of that bill or a measure like it.

It is time for us to define our terms and speak plainly. On all sides we hear that "democracy must be saved"; that we must be true to the "American way"; that "our form of government must be preserved"; and that "un-American activities" must be brought to light and, so far as possible,

What do all these things mean to those who say them and to those who hear them?

AMERICA NO LONGER IN HER YOUTH

The thoughtful people of this country are beginning now, for almost the first time, to realize what democracy means to them and what they will have to do to keep it. Heretofore we have taken much for granted. America has been a child of a very bounteous and kind Mother Nature. And like a child, she has assumed that always there would be freedom, always a better country or a new opportunity beyond the horizon to the west, and that always there would be for every problem a solution presenting itself out of fortuitous circumstance and without conscious effort being spent to bring it forth.

The period of our childhood is gone, and only the determined, conscious, and most earnest effort of devoted leaders and citizens stands between our country and the loss of her liberty, the shutting of the door of opportunity in the faces of her humbler citizens, and the failure of her democracy itself. When I say that I do not mean to sound a note of hopelessness. For although there are those who tell us that all we need do is cease our efforts to change, improve, and reform and all will be well, nevertheless I am confident that they will not be listened to for long. Their philosophy may, indeed, have its day, and for the people it may be a hard one. But it will be short and it may teach us lessons that we badly need to learn-particularly the lesson that no worth-while thing in either individual or national life is ever won just by leaving things alone and that improvement comes to us only as we wrestle and grapple with the problems life gives us.

FOUR FOUNDATION PILLARS OF DEMOCRACY

As I see it there are four foundation pillars that support American democracy. The first is civil and religious liberty. American democracy is a way of life for the people of the Nation—for all the people. It is a way of life in which no man questions the right of another to speak his mind or to go where he wants to go or-and this is most important-to have any religion he may choose. In American democracy there can be no place for the stirring up of religious prejudice or hatred, and certainly there is no place for a cowardly attempt on the part of any group or person to advance to political power over the prostrate form of the constitutional liberties of others. America affords to every man as much of liberty as he can exercise without depriving his fellow citizens of similar liberties. America always has, and, I trust, always will find her inspiration in the religion that sent the first settlers to these shores. That religion is one of brotherhood.

Second, American democracy means the right of the common citizen as well as the uncommon one to own property. It means that the task of government must consist in part in the protection of the small farm and the small business from destruction, the encouragement of home ownership, and the prevention of monopoly encroachment on the rights of the little man. But American democracy also means that property, which by its very nature is of vital public concern, shall be subject to proper control in the interest of all the people. And American democracy must mean that the right to private property in a home, a store, or a farm shall not be confused with the very different question as to whether or not a waterfall, a forest, or the power to create money or credit can properly be claimed as the private property of anybody except the Nation itself.

Third, American democracy means government of the people, by the people, and for the people. It means a government of men chosen at frequent intervals by the people and subject to involuntary retirement without notice at the will of those same people. It means a government wherein the absolute control of the purse remains in the legislature and where the Executive is responsible to the people not only for honest but also for efficient and effective administration of the trust the people have for a brief few years reposed in him. Finally, it means government within the framework of a constitution which sets forth basic law and basic procedure for making law and which grows both by interpretation and by amendment with the need of the people whose forefathers created it, and to assure whose good government it fundamentally exists.

In the fourth place, American democracy means equality of social and economic opportunity. Like the ideals of the Declaration of Independence, so this ideal is one that has never been achieved.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes. I gladly yield to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. KITCHENS. The gentleman says that democracy means social and economic opportunity. Does the gentleman mean that to apply just simply within one State or within one certain section or several States, or does the gentleman mean it to apply all over the United States for all of the people?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I mean it to apply all over the United States for all of the people; and in further answer to the gentleman's question I say that if there is any measure that we can vote for which is good essentially for the section of the country from which the gentleman comes, which will put more purchasing power into the hands of the people of that section, then I want to vote for that measure, because I believe it is just and it is important not only for his section but for mine.

Mr. KITCHENS. The gentleman means that that law should apply all over the United States?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes; and to all groups of people.

Mr. KITCHENS. The gentleman does not mean to vote to give my section an advantage under the law in any way. Mr. VOORHIS of California. No, sir; but I meant, for a specific example, that I believe in a program of pensions for our older people which would be uniform—the same in all States.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOORHIS of California. I have a rather long speech and only 20 minutes, but I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. The gentleman has touched on a very important subject at the beginning of his speech.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. And I am coming to it

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Dealing with parades of men in foreign uniforms. Is there any bill that has been pending before my committee or any other committee?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. My bill on that particular subject was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. If I can get to the end of my speech, I am going to give a brief description of that bill and explain what its terms are.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. The gentleman knows that has been the common practice in this country, for half a dozen groups to parade in foreign uniforms, with foreign thought and Mr. VOORHIS of California. I feel that democracy is not called upon to permit that sort of thing to continue.

THE FOURTH PILLAR: EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY

I was speaking about the fourth foundation pillar of democracy, which I said was social and economic opportunity. I said it had not been realized in this Nation.

But let just one generation of Americans stop struggling to attain it and the very genius of our democratic way of life will pass away. Dictatorship exists primarily to freeze and perpetuate distinctions between man and man, not only as to political position but also as to economic status. If democracy would be different, then its central task must be to break down barriers that stand in the way of the opportunity of its humblest citizen and to choose, when it must choose, the basic well-being and the right to work of the many rather than the luxury or privilege of the few. Nowhere have I found this element of American democracy set forth better than in the words of James Truslow Adams when he describes what he calls "the American dream" in his book the Epic of America:

If, as I have said, the things already listed were all we had to contribute, America would have made no distinctive and unique gift to mankind. But there has been also the American dream, that dream of a land in which life should be better and richer and fuller for every man, with opportunity for each according to his ability or achievement. It is a difficult dream for the European upper classes to interpret adequately, and too many of us ourselves have grown weary and mistrustful of it. It is a dream of a social order in which each man and each woman shall be able to attain to the fullest stature of which they are innately capable, and be recognized by others for what they are, regardless of the fortuitous circumstances of birth or position.

These four elements, personal and religious liberty, the right of all to private property, government controlled by the people, and equality of opportunity, its seems to me, Mr. Speaker, are the four foundation pillars of American democracy. Take out any one of them and the great superstructure of American civilization will totter and maybe fall. Leave them strong and firm and we can solve our problems.

DANGERS WE MUST WATCH

And now we come to the question as to what constitutes an un-American or disloyal activity. As I have said many times, both on the floor and elsewhere, I think this a matter in which the very greatest care must be exercised. These are times in which the tide of prejudice and fear and hate are running high, when persecution and defamation of character are in the air.

It will take strong and fearless people to stand against this tide. But stand against it they must, for it is a tide that, risen high enough, will engulf democracy and tear it apart. The truth about men, about organizations, about nations, never was so important and never, perhaps, so hard to cling to as now. In this connection one of the most despicable of political tricks and one in which I think earnest Americans can hardly afford to indulge in these times is that of attempting to identify true Americanism with one's own candidacy or one's party's political fortunes or with the putting into effect of one's own particular economic views. For what always follows such a pharisaical attitude is an assertion that the converse is also true and that one's political opponent or the opposition party or differing economic views are un-American and dangerous to our form of government.

To my mind the most dangerous tendencies of all those against which we are called upon to struggle today are the tendency on the part of unscrupulous conservatives to charge sincere and patriotic progressives with being Communistand the corresponding tendency on the part of unscrupulous liberals to charge sincere and patriotic conservatives with being Fascists. For again, what almost inevitably follows is that such unscrupulous conservatives will begin to take the very dangerous view that "after all the Nazi and Fascist organizations are the best defense we have against the Communists" and that such unscrupulous liberals will begin to take the equally dangerous view that "after all the Communists are the best defense we have against the Nazis and Fascists." Pursued far enough such tendencies lead to positive conflict. And let us put it down in bold and luminous letters that any organization which takes its root, its inspiration, or its financial support from a nation other than America cannot be any defense at all for the things for which America has and must continue to stand. And neither can such an organization be at bottom, anything but treasonable to this Nation.

And so the first un-American activity that I would mention is the formation of organizations which wear uniforms like those of foreign armies, pay homage to foreign flags, obtain subsidies from foreign sources, or take orders or inspiration from foreign governments or dictators. Such organizations are today evidently in existence to destroy and not to advance American democracy. Democracy and freedom are their convenient tools. Such organizations exist to change American democracy into some form of foreign dictatorship and it is to that dictatorship and not America to which they give their final allegiance. Democracy has not only the right but the duty to deal with them. And we must not wait too long.

The second definitely un-American activity that I would mention is the formation of organizations which make no pretense of being able ever to capture the imagination of the American people and to carry through their program by the constitutional method of the ballot but which by profession and direct implication, propose to depend upon the force of a militant minority to gain their ends.

Third, I am convinced that any organization or individual who seeks by appeal to religious or racial prejudice to attract followers and build political strength is engaging in an un-American activity. And my reason is this. Either there will be freedom for all religions and all races in our Nation or ultimately there will be freedom for none. The man who calls on us to hate the outcast is calling on us to unsheath a two-edged sword and one which may well be used against ourselves once we have put it in his hand. From time immemorial prejudice and hatred have been the effective weapons of the demagogue. They still are.

WE FIGHT ON FOUR FRONTS

Democracy in America fights today on four fronts. The first is that of national defense in the ordinarily accepted sense of that word and involves the building up of such military defense as may be necessary to prevent aggression in the Western Hemisphere. The second and third fronts on which our democracy must fight are those against the drive toward dictatorship by forces either of the right or of the left. Democracy cannot be saved by establishing a dictatorship like that in Russia, nor does the recent history of Russia bear out the theory that such a dictatorship will lead to greater freedom in the end. Dictatorship, once established, feeds upon itself, and every year it lasts the possibility of reestablishing democracy fades further and further into the background. Nor is a militant democracy necessarily weak. There are those who will say that only by might and power can humanity be controlled or made to progress. They will sayindeed, they are saying-that America should follow the example of Germany or Italy, place her fate in the hands of a man on horseback, and thus relieve herself of the necessity of thinking, struggling, and striving toward better things. Such people will, I trust, discover to their surprise how wrong they have been in underrating the latent strength, power, and determination of the spirit of the American people.

For my part, I prefer to think, to struggle, to strive, to go through the fire of these difficult times with the colors of democracy flying. And I know of no inducement great enough to impel me to sacrifice the freedom it affords for any false pretense of security under a dictator of any sort whatsoever.

NECESSITY OF PROGRESSIVE ECONOMIC PROGRAM

But for the millions of distressed and hard-pressed people of this country there must be more than freedom and therefore, the fourth front on which we must fight is the most important of all. For depending on how well we fight on that front will democracy be justified or condemned. It is the front of our domestic economic problem, of the welfare of the people of America, of the abolition of poverty from this great Nation. Mankind seeks now, as it has always sought, three things: Bread, security, and freedom of the spirit. The government which affords all three will gain an allegiance more warm, more sincere, more lasting than can possibly be gained by any government which denies to its people any of the three. Other governments may give their people bread. They may give a false and temporary security. Only democracy can give all three. For freedom dies the moment democracy gives way to dictatorship.

And so the future of democracy in the world will depend very largely on what the American Congress does to increase the security and the economic well-being of the people of this country. It is today unfortunately true that the bread and butter of millions of people in this country depend not upon the fertility of our fields or the productivity of our factories but upon the wisdom and effectiveness of measures taken by the Government of the country. I do not wish it this way; the President does not wish it this way; no one wishes it this way. But it is this way. And no amount of oratory is going to change it. These things are not the fault of either the Republican or Democratic Party; they are not the fault of any individual; they are the result of a number of factors that lie deep in the fabric of this modern age. Briefly, these factors are machine production and technological advancement, the growth of monopoly control, an inadequate distribution of buying power to the people, and the break-down of the essential link between production and consumption—namely, the money and credit system. I have said before, and I repeat, that no solution can be found for this great problem unless the central factor in that solution is a program of maintaining in active circulation among the consumers of the Nation a volume of buying power corresponding to the productive capacity of our farms and factories.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Coffee of Washington). The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 7 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is that agreeable to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Alexander]?

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is agreeable to me.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The price we must pay for the continuance of economic and political freedom is the price of constructive legislation in four important fields: First, old-age pensions; second, control over monopoly price and power; third, taxation according to ability to pay; and, fourth and most important, monetary reform and the restoration to the Nation itself of the right to bring money and credit originally into circulation without paying tribute to private financiers for the privilege of doing so. I am not here outlining a complete program for Utopia. I am merely suggesting a minimum program which will enable our people to carry on, not perfectly but hopefully, and which will be enough to save our democracy.

RESPONSIBILITY OF CONGRESS

American democracy can unquestionably defend itself by fighting well on the four fronts I have mentioned. It will not be enough to fight on two or three of these fronts. America requires a rallying of every citizen who loves his country deeply to battle on all four fronts at once. This Congress will be negligent of its duty unless it takes the lead. So far we have done so only on the front of national defense. There is much that remains to be done.

DEMOCRACY IMPLIES LIBERTY

I have said that liberty was its first foundation pillar. But I do not think that democracy is called upon to extend liberty beyond the point where its own existence is threatened. I do not think it is called upon to harbor and nourish organized bodies that seek to destroy it. The one thing which disloyal groups in this country are counting on is that democracy will be unable to find a formula to curb their activities or unwilling to apply such a formula if it is found. Members of groups which seek to destroy our democracy and substitute dictatorship for it will never respect us unless and until we show the wisdom and the determination to stand boldly for the right of the continued existence of the institutions we care about so much. To my mind the work of the Committee on Un-American Activities must consist not only of full, effective, and fearless revelation of all possible facts regarding all such organizations as I have outlined, but also of the development of a formula which will remove the private military organization as a menace to our national life.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield,

Mr. SCHULTE. The gentleman made the statement that he is a member of the Committee on Un-American Activities? Mr. VOORHIS of California. That is right.

Mr. SCHULTE. There is a problem in your own State at the present time that will bear investigation—an avowed Communist placed in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor, one of its locals, seeking to destroy that particular international, I would like to call to your attention Cliff Kivre, as well as Brigham Rhodes, who are causing no end of consternation in the gentleman's own district.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I will be glad to have any information the gentleman has.

Mr. SCHULTE. I will be mighty happy to give the gentleman not only some statements I have received but some affidavits with reference to their membership in this organization for the sole purpose of destroying the American Federation of Labor movement.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I will be very grateful to the gentleman for that, and feel sure the committee will look into it.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I only have about 3 minutes, and I want to finish my speech, if you please.

H. R. 116—A CONSTITUTIONAL WAY TO REMOVE THE DANGER OF PRIVATE MILITARY ORGANIZATIONS

Is there a way to do this without violating the liberties guaranteed by the Constitution? I believe there is. No democracy can safely deny to its people freedom of speech or take away any other constitutional guaranty. Democratic government cannot forbid its critics to speak their minds without ceasing to be in the true sense democratic. Democracy is, in a sense, government by self-criticism. But there is a difference between individual free speech and truly peaceful assemblage on the one hand and organized force on the other. And democracy need not, it seems to me, sit idly by and watch the enemy within its gates organize for its destruction. And so I believe that wherever there now exists or may appear in the future an organization of people in this country-of right or left, it makes no difference-which presumes to carry on military activities of any sort or advocates in its corporate expression the denial by force and violence of constitutional rights to any other group of citizens, then such an organization should be compelled either to disband or to obtain a license to exist in the United States. This is the central provision of my bill-H. R. 116. Such licenses would, under this bill, be issued only after full information regarding the organization in question had been furnished to the Secretary of War and would be issued by the President only after he was convinced that the organization was not dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States.

All licenses would be subject to revocation by the Congress at any time. Provisions of the bill would, of course, not apply to organizations chartered by Congress or the States. H. R. 116 is now before the Military Affairs Committee. I am convinced it is a good bill. I am convinced it is constitutional under the national-defense powers, and I am convinced that passage of such legislation would be a good thing for the Congress to do right at this time. We will be saying in effect: "America offers freedom to her people, but she does not offer to anyone the right to organize within her borders a military or semimilitary band or force for the destruction of that freedom. Anyone who wants to have such an organization has got to get specific permission from the United States Government. And such permission is likely to be mighty hard to get." On March 10, 1939, the new York Times commented editorially on H. R. 116 and I ask unanimous consent to incorporate that editorial in my remarks at this point.

HITTING AT PRIVATE ARMIES

Thanks largely to the activities of the German-American Bund, the question of how to get rid of private armies without impairing anybody's rights or interfering with legitmate organizations has come in for a good deal of attention. Representative Voorhis of California thinks he has found a way. His bill, pending in the House, would require "civilian military organizations" to get a license from the President, acting in his capacity of Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy. The President would be directed to make public his action on each application. The license would not be permanent until confirmed by Congress. It would be revocable at any time by act of Congress. The Secretary of War would be authorized to ascertain "the proposed or existing purposes, activities, membership, medium of propaganda employed or to be employed, present or proposed sources of information," and any other facts that seemed to him pertinent.

Licenses specifically would not be issued to any group "which by its written rules or constitutions or by its oral oaths or teachings advocates the denial to any citizen or group or class of citizens of any protection, privilege, or immunity guaranteed by the Constitution and laws of the United States on account of the race, color, or religious or political faith of such citizen, group, or class of citizens by use of force, violence, threats, intimidation, or economic coercion." Some obvious exceptions to the licensing requirement are made, including "any organization expressly authorized by the law of any State." Maximum penalties of a $5,000 fine and 5 years' imprisonment are provided.

Presumably the license would be a mere formality for "any camp, school, society, fraternity, order, league, lodge, brotherhood,

Presumably the license would be a mere formality for "any camp school, society, fraternity, order, league, lodge, brotherhood, institute, or any group of two or more persons" whose purposes were open and peaceful. The law would clamp down when the purposes were in doubt. Manifestly the rights of the States are amply protected. They can authorize any sort of organization they wish to, so long as such an organization does not break exist-they wish to, so long as the sing Federal laws.

Mr. Voorhis' bill ought to be taken off the shelf and discussed.

Maybe it is the best way of achieving the subject and maybe it is not. It does break ground in a new and unfortunately urgent

In closing, just a word of hope. Our economic problem is clearly not an insoluble one. We have simply to overcome by the application of a little patriotic wisdom the mysterious barrier that now seems to exist between hungry consumers on one side and idle producers capable of producing a great abundance on the other. True, the application of wisdom to the removal of that barrier will require courage and a deeper, clearer sense of duty to our country than Americans have ever known before. But I am by no means hopeless that the very darkness of this hour and the very pressure of disastrous events in other portions of the world will call forth in the hearts and minds of Americans a new and more poignant appreciation of what their country means to them and of how much more she can mean to their children if only this generation will do its duty.

Gentlemen, I call upon you to carry forward a progressive program of legislation, seeking to solve the economic problems of the masses of the people of this country, and to do one thing more: to make practically impossible for the continued existence of private military organizations in this country.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOORHIS of California. I now yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Has the gentleman asked for a hearing before the Military Affairs Committee?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Yes; I have.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. What is holding it up; do you know? Mr. VOORHIS of California. I cannot answer that question. Mr. DICKSTEIN. I have discussed that question for 5 long vears

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California has again expired.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have just 1 more minute to complete an answer to a question that I think is pertinent to his remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER] is to speak next. Is that agreeable to the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. ALEXANDER. It is up to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I have not asked for any further time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Alexander] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for me to propound a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address by Hon. James A. Farley, which he delivered over the National Broadcasting Co. on last Friday before the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Providence, R. I.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Alexander] must be recognized, under the previous order of the House.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Van Zandt].

WAR PROFITS

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, today I introduced a bill to "take the profits out of war," and at this time wish to mention that a companion bill has been introduced in the Senate sponsored by 50 Members of that body.

This measure would put into practice the principles I preached for many years during my activities in veterans'

It is primarily a peace measure, designed to deter war by stripping it of all opportunity for undue profits.

It is particularly pertinent in view of the menacing European situation and the threat of a general war which grows graver every day.

While I do not share the disheartening and fatalistic opinion, held in many high places, that American participation in the next European war is inevitable, I do believe we should take this step as an essential part of our preparedness pro-

God forbid that American boys ever again should be called upon to fight another war in Europe. But if we should become embroiled in such a conflict Congress should act in advance to prevent a repetition of the scandalous profiteering which marked the World War period.

This bill not only would provide the financial sinews of war, but it would distribute the financial burdens of war, as well as prevent profiteering.

The SPEAKER. Under the previous order of the House the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER] is recognized for 19 minutes.

OUR RIVER HIGHWAYS

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, in the following remarks which I desire to make regarding our inland water highways in general, and the upper Mississippi River highway in particular, it seems desirable to stress to the Members of the Congress the great importance of the watershed area of the Mississippi water highway to the welfare of the entire Nation. This approved water highway extends for a distance in excess of 6,000 miles. The soil of 18 States forms it course. Within this watershed lies 41 percent of the land area of the United States—the most versatile and productive area in the world. Thirty-four percent of our national population make this area their home and produce, among other things, the following important commodities: Iron ore, 98 percent of our entire national production; coal, 82 percent; petroleum products, 72 percent; zinc, 70 percent; agricultural products, 70 percent; and lead, 50 percent.

The Mississippi water highway cuts through the very center of this productive area from east to west for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; and it cuts through the center from north to south for an equal distance of nearly 2,000 miles. Nowhere else in the world is there a water highway that can be of equal importance and benefit to the existence of human life. It includes the Ohio River and its improved tributaries serving the great consuming populations of the Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania industrial area and the coal-producing regions of the East; it includes the Missouri River and the upper Mississippi River, serving the bread-basket area of the Nation; the Illinois River, connecting the Great Lakes with the Mississippi River; and the lower Mississippi to New Orleans and the Gulf of Mexico, where water transport facilities are available to all coastal cities and all water ports of the world.

This water highway is within 155 miles' average distance of the commodities produced throughout the watershed. Only a small percentage of the tonnage of the area exceeds a distance of 350 miles. Rail highways and land highways completely network the region and afford efficient and adequate service to every water port.

NEED TO EXTEND BARGE LINE INTO MINNEAPOLIS

Admittedly a lot of public money has been expended to make this water highway an economical artery of commerce for the benefit of the producers and the consumers of the Nation. Upward of $600,000,000 will be the public cost reasonably chargeable against improvement work on this highway for the purpose of providing a dependable low-cost transport service. Most of this improvement work has been completed, and most of the expenditure of public money has been made. Only a comparatively small amount is now needed to bring the improvement work to completion, and the dream of its sponsors to fruition, and this necessary amount should be provided for in the appropriation bill for rivers and harbors work for the fiscal year of 1940. need less than $20,000,000 to fully complete the upper Mississippi authorized projects, and the improvement work to be finished with this money is vital and necessary before Northwest agriculture and industry can obtain benefit from the huge investment that has been made to date. The improvement work thus far does not bring the highway within reach of the extensive facilities engaged in the handling of farm products of the Northwest or of industry in Minneapolis, and because of this it is imperatively necessary that the job be completed without delay, as I will explain later.

The water highway and locks, canals, and harbors of the Great Lakes system and of the coastal region have required the expenditure of 100 percent more public money than the Mississippi system has required. No one hears complaint because of this huge expenditure because it largely supplements the facilities of the railroads serving their great ports.

There is however intense propaganda against the completion of our water highways of the Nation. This propaganda is going so far as to urge and insist upon the scrapping of all the improved water highways and the elimination of the Federal barge line operation. The same group are seeking to obtain Federal legislation designed to choke the operation of water craft upon water highways now improved. They are seeking to have port-to-port commerce regulated on the water highways, knowing that such regulation will so increase the cost over the water route as to make water-craft operation prohibitive. They are seeking legislation that will permit them to maintain rates low enough to destroy all forms of competitive transport regardless of the cost to themselves for rendering the service, while competition is being destroyed, as was done in a similar way after the Civil War.

Water highways must be preserved in the interest of both the producer and the consumer. They afford the only method of transport that can be utilized for long distances between producer and consumer at low cost. Farm commodities necessary to the existence of human life are largely produced in regions far removed from the dinner table of the consumer. Land highways from the farm are the first essential mode of transport, and without which there could be no further transaction nor movement. Supplementing the land highways are the water highways and the rail highways, both of which are invaluable if not indispensable to the best interests of both the producer and the consumer. The rail highway offers rapid transport with capacity for handling large volume. The water highway offers dependable transport with capacity for handling large volume. The important difference between water transport and rail transport is the item of cost which normally is 10 times greater by rail than by water. This tremendous benefit must be preserved in the interest of both consumer and producer, both of whom, in the final analysis, must pay the tax burden of transport whatever the cost may be.

The philosophy of James J. Hill was that railroad management should so operate as to discharge its heavy tonnage at the nearest water port. The Great Northern Railroad was built to perform in that manner. Its western termini is at the Pacific Ocean. Its eastern termini connects with three important water highways-the Great Lakes at Duluth-Superior, the Mississippi at Minneapolis-St. Paul, and with the Missouri at Sioux City, Iowa. If I were to offer a suggestion looking to an improvement in the affairs of rail transport, it would be that they encourage in every way possible the development of tonnage over the water highways of the Nation, that the cost of transport over such water highways be kept down as low as possible, and that they be prepared to handle an increased tonnage from each water port in proportion to the volume of tonnage that is being transported by water. Low water rates at Pittsburgh made that industrial center possible, and it has paid greater dividends to the railroads than to any other form of transport. Even the land highways have developed more tonnage for the railroads than they have taken from them. Then I think I would suggest that rail management devote less of their important energy to the task of demonstrating the different types of regulation to be imposed upon their competing forms of transport. This important energy might be diverted to a study into the field of their own statistics.

SOME COMPARATIVE FREIGHT RATES

It would be interesting to a lot of folks to learn just why there is a rail problem in the face of the wonderful showing the rail managements have made. Their record for 1937 shows an earning equivalent to 31/4 percent on all outstanding securities figured at par value of the stocks and bonds. This is nearly 6 percent on listed value of these same securities. The same record shows that the railroad employees for that year transported 1,000 ton-miles of revenue freight at a cost of $6.41, as compared with a cost of $10.78 back in 1921. The record shows that the income from this freight was $9.33, or a margin of $2.92, and this same record shows that every ton of all the railroads were handled on these average figures. It sure looks like the railroad employees did their job and did it well. This railroad showing was accomplished with less than 1,000,000 employees, and the way it figures out is something like this: 17 trainmen can transport, approximately, 10,000 tons of freight a distance of 150 miles in 8 hours. This looks like exceptional performance, compared with water transport, where it requires 24 employees and 24 hours of time to move the same amount of tonnage the same distance. But now look how it compares with transport by land highway. A 10-ton truck will do well to make 300 miles in 8 hours, and two drivers are necessary. That means that 300 trucks and 600 drivers can start off with a total of 3,000 tons and make a distance of 300 miles in 8 hours, or the equivalent of only 3,000 tons for a distance of 150 miles with 300 drivers. The freight cost by truck is no higher than the freight cost by rail, while the freight cost by water is only one-tenth the cost of rail transport. Anyone who starts to figure this out should remember that the cost of $6.41 per 1,000 ton-miles includes the salary of every rail employee, whether he be section hand or bookkeeper.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman

Mr. ALEXANDER. I yield.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Is it not a fact that Jim Hill's dream has come true of 1,000 tons per man in moving ore from the mines on the Great Lakes? They now haul 5,000 tons of ore with a train crew of five men. This is an actual moving of 1,000 tons per man.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to see all the Members of the Congress use their pencils on the transportation problem and keep themselves out of the whirlpool of confusion that seems to permeate the air. On the basis of comparative performance the railroad employees seem to be far in the lead over other types of transport. The railroad problem is not due to the loss of tonnage to other types of transport, and the issue must be faced on the basis that the public will insist that each type of transport renders an invaluable service that must not be throttled in any manner whatsoever.

I hope to ask the Committee on Appropriations to set up for the United States Army engineers the full amount of money the engineers can efficiently use during their next fiscal year, which they say is $102,975,800. Of this amount we in the Northwest would like enough to complete the upper Mississippi River highway so that it will become of benefit to our Northwest agriculture and industry. There is no economy in huge governmental investments that are largely tied up and nonproductive because of being incomplete. We must complete these authorized and approved projects and I ask and urge that we all join hands to complete the job. Complete a job that is far advanced toward completion and thus promptly discharge our responsibility to the regions of the country where these projects are expected to bring about substantial relief.

Continuing loss and hardship will come from further delay, and delay will not meet nor discharge our responsibility. It is upon this basis that I plead for your cooperation and support for an appropriation that will meet the need of the Army engineers for river and harbor work.

THE MINNEAPOLIS PICTURE

Now, in order to get down to cases and to view this problem intelligently, I wish to give the Congress a brief picture of our situation in Minneapolis. The present 9-foot channel comes up the river through a deep, perpendicular wall, which has been dug out by the water currents in the centuries gone by to a depth in most places of well over 100 feet. About a mile below the center of the business district on the west bank of the river under an old bridge there is room for two small docks. These docks in 1938 handled approximately only 40,000 tons of miscellaneous and package freight. 60,000 tons of oil, and 96,000 tons of coal. This is the maximum handling capacity for coal, although we use upward of 1,600,000 tons in the city annually, and would increase this consumption considerably if we could get it at a price which would encourage, instead of throttle, industry. I say that as a general hint and indication of what might happen to industry in this country in a general way if we were not handicapped in many cases by high, artificial prices on both labor and material, in fact on about everything except agricultural products. Our basic, all-rail freight rate on prepared sizes of coal is nearly $6 per ton from the Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal fields, which means an exorbitant retail price to our consumers. Think of the increased price which it would be possible to pay at the mine to both the operator and the miner if we could connect our waterway with our Minneapolis industry, our Northwest agriculture, and our milling terminals in a real measure of service, such as would be the case by the expenditure by the Federal Government of only about $4,000,000 this year and a total of about $8,000,000 altogether. This expenditure is recommended by the United States Army engineers, I will say for the benefit of new Members, and also by an act of Congress in 1937, when the extension of the water highway through the Falls of St. Anthony was formally approved, subject to your making the necessary appropriation therefor.

Minneapolis and the Northwest needs this extension very badly. Awaiting it we have millions of tons of freight annually. Our industry, our mills, and our harbor facilities all lie at or above this famous and historical Falls. Just above the Falls we have an ideal, level shore line for miles on both sides of the deep water forming the upper harbor. Give us this appropriation to build the necessary locks through the Falls and we will be well on the road to recovery, and the upper river channel expenditures of so many millions will have value and meaning. Deny us this small request and we will soon be worse than problem child No. 1, for our relief demands will be still greater, bad as they are now, with some eighty to ninety thousand on the rolls; our mills and industry will completely stagnate, and with them our railroads, and our farmers will be forever bankrupt. I hope both the Appropriations Committee and this body, knowing our desperate situation, will look favorably upon our plea. [Applause.]

MONETARY CONTROL ACT OF 1939

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LEAVY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, within the last few years the people of this country have become more and more interested in their Government here in Washington, particularly in the machinery of government—the workings of the Congress, the judiciary, and the executive branch—and the exercse of the powers granted the respective branches of government under the provisions of the Constitution.

This interest has been intensified in the past 4 years by the spectacle of the Congress endeavoring with might and main to lift from the shoulders of its constituents the burdens of unemployment, depression, and pauperism in the midst of great wealth. As yet we have not reached the root evil as evidenced by the mere temporary relief that has been given and the failure of all our efforts to secure a permanent cure.

There is one step we have not taken; one measure we have not tried; one definite action to which we are being driven finally by the insistent demands of those good people who are interested in honest government and by our own common

We have failed to return to Congress the constitutional right to coin money and to regulate the value thereof.

In the hope that we may be moved by the repeated and insistent beseechings that have been directed to us that we might take some action along this line; with the inexcusable lack of definite action in this regard by the Congress and because of the interest manifest in the closing days of the last session in this type of legislation, I have reintroduced a bill in this House, H. R. 2387, to be known as the Monetary Control Act of 1939.

In this introductory speech it is my purpose to offer to the Congress a résumé of the provisions in this bill.

H. R. 2387 has one purpose—the return to Congress of the control of money and the issuing of currency. There is nothing radical about it unless one considers the Constitution radical, because the Constitution gives to Congress the sole right to issue money and regulate its value.

Section 1 (a) defines what banks are commercial, all individuals, firms, associations, or corporations which receive demand deposits and fall within the Federal jurisdiction of interstate commerce, and thus become subject to the Federal Reserve Board through their interstate or foreign dealings in checks, cash, or demand deposits.

(b) One year after the passage of this act the said banks must hold in trust for said depositors all demand deposits, either on hand or as credit in Federal Reserve bank in that district, but may keep those which are invested in United States interest-bearing bonds or in notes guaranteed by the United States, and these latter are subject to banking procedure of the individual banks. And further, these banks cannot loan money on demand bank deposits, but may invest them in Government obligations.

(c) Within 1 year after this act is passed, banks holding insufficient cash and bonds to meet total of their demand deposits, may rediscount with Federal Reserve so much of their assets as required to equalize totals of cash and bonds and amount of demand deposits.

(d) These banks may, at their own discretion, increase assets for purposes in (c) of this section and the R. F. C. is authorized to buy stocks of such banks, unless public does so.

Section 2. (a) Board of Governors of Federal Reserve made sole monetary agent of Congress and shall completely control issue of all currency and credit in the United States, the intention of Congress being to give this agency complete control over total volume of all money.

(b) The Board is authorized to expand active currency in circulation in demand bank deposits to an amount equal to $250 per capita to reach 1926 employment levels, and then to continue to increase the circulation in said manner by 4 percent of the total sum in circulation on the last business day of the preceding year, every year, until the procedure is modified by Congress.

(c) Policy of Congress declared to reach and maintain full employment and production at the price levels of 1926.

Board so instructed.

(d) Expansion of circulating medium of exchange through payment of social dividends to Nation's old people and other recipients of the Social Security Act, through that organization, S. S. A., and any additional expansion needed through the financing of farms and homes for lower-income groups, through governmental agencies now or later set up.

Section 3. (a) Secretary of Treasury is authorized to purchase the privately owned stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks paying in money or credit on the books of said banks the amount paid for the stock plus 6-percent interest from the date of the last dividend to time act is passed.

(b) Treasurer of the United States is authorized to take over all stock and claims against the Federal Reserve banks from member banks of the Federal Reserve System, so as to vest complete and absolute ownership in the Federal Reserve Board.

Section 4. One year after this act is passed all officers of the Federal Reserve banks, branches and agencies thereof, shall be removed. The 12 banks are to be operated by managers and necessary assistants appointed by the Board under rules and regulations set up by the Board, except salaries of managers and their assistants are specified—managers, $12,000, assistants, $9,000, department heads, $6,000.

Section 5. The bill will not affect savings deposits, but only demand deposits of commercial banks; that is, those engaging in interstate commerce, thus under the Federal Reserve jurisdiction.

Section 6. Repeals all laws in conflict with this act.

Section 7. Separability clause.

Section 8. Declares act effective at time of passage.

Section 9. Title Monetary Control Act of 1939.

In subsequent talks, it will be my purpose to elaborate upon the particulars contained in the bill with all their why's and wherefor's. I may add that I requested hearings on this measure during this session of the Congress.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in the remarks I made this afternoon a short editorial from the New York Times.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order of the House heretofore agreed to, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] is recognized for 20 minutes.

[Mr. Patman] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein certain excerpts and tables in connection with the statement I expect to make.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

THE NATIONAL DEBT

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I asked for this time for the purpose of discussing the national debt, and especially tax-exempt securities.

The national debt, according to the figures obtained from official source, at the end of 1938 was $36,576,000,000. The interest on that debt was $947,000,000 last year. The average rate of interest for last year was 2.5 percent. In 1933 it was 3.3 percent. The State and local debts aggregate $19,170,000,000, with an annual interest charge of $797,000,000, the average rate of interest being 4.1 percent.

The national debt must be liquidated in some satisfactory way. We should not contract any obligation that we do not expect to pay. There is no danger of this debt being repudiated; there is no reason why it cannot be conveniently paid by the American people. With just a little prosperity and with a velocity of money, with the income taxes that we have today, it would not be long before this debt will be liquidated. No country on earth has ever paid a national debt as large as the debt that is owed by the United States Government at this time. This does not mean that we are going to repudiate it.

THREE WAYS TO LIQUIDATE NATIONAL DEST

There are three ways in which this debt can be liquidated: First, by payment through taxes paid by the people. Second, by its being absorbed by the reserve fund created in the Social Security Act of 1935; and the third way is for the Government to acquire the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and, owning them, cause these banks to purchase the outstanding Federal obligations.

So in these three ways the Federal debt can be liquidated. Now, let us see which way will possibly be agreed upon. We will, naturally, pay a part of this debt. Mr. Morgenthau, February 5, 1935, when he was testifying as Secretary of the Treasury before the Committee on Ways and Means in support of the Social Security Act, stated, when questioned about the enormous reserve fund that was contemplated under the terms of that act, that the device was advisable not for social security but to retire a large part of the public debt.

PAY INTEREST TO AGED AND UNEMPLOYED INSTEAD OF TO INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATE HOLDERS

I am in accord with Mr. Morgenthau's views; I think they are absolutely sound. I think the Social Security Act is a great act. At the same time while we are creating it, it is necessary to have a reserve fund, and there is no reason in the world why this fund cannot be used to retire a part of the national debt. Eventually that reserve fund will be sufficiently large to retire all of the national debt. The result, then, will be that the people will continue to pay interest-that is, the Government will continue to pay interest-on the national debt, the national obligations, and securities, but this interest will not go to private individuals or to banks or to insurance companies who are the private holders of the Government debt; that money will be paid, this $947,000,000 a year will be paid, to the aged, the unemployed, and needy people of this country. There is a considerable difference there. We will liquidate the national debt, but the money that is now paid out in the form of interest to private individuals and corporations will then go to the aged, the unemployed, and to the needy people of our country. Evidently this is in contemplation, retirement of a part of the debt in this way; and, therefore, it will never be necessary to entirely pay off this enormous national debt.

I believe the process is just a little bit slow; I believe it could be worked just a little bit faster. I hope, however, that the Ways and Means Committee will never be persuaded to change that provision of the social-security law relating to the social-security reserve fund which makes possible what I have just been discussing. I know great effort will be made to repeal that provision of the Social Security Act. Possibly the exact reason will never be disclosed, but the main reason is to prevent that moneys going to the aged and needy people and to have it continue to go to the private holders of Government securities, as it does today.

I believe there is another way that some of this debt should be liquidated more quickly. I do not think we should have inflation. I do not think we should have repudiation such as was resorted to by many countries of the world for the purpose of liquidating debts not nearly so large as our own.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD OWN THE 12 FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

I believe that the Congress should pass a law providing for the purchase of the $134,000,000 worth of stock in the 12 Federal Reserve banks-and that is all it amounts to. Then when the Government owns the stock in these 12 Federal Reserve banks, they can continue to operate on the Government's credit as they have been in the past, as they have been since December 23, 1913, when first created. As I stated, they can continue to operate as they have been in the past, and these banks can gradually, not quickly but eventually, acquire the entire national debt and save the people of this country an enormous interest charge.

Does anyone take issue with that proposal? Does anyone say that the Government cannot do it? Does anyone say that it cannot safely be done or it is not sound finance to do it? If so, I would like for that person to give the reasons why it cannot be done.

I believe that Thomas Edison was right when he said that if the Government can issue a dollar bond which draws interest that is good, the same Government can issue a dollar bill that does not draw interest, that is just as good. In fact, the latter can be paid more easily because there is no interest charge. Thomas Edison was right.

Mr. Speaker, this is one of our greatest problems and when that problem is solved I believe that many of our other problems now greatly concerning us will fall to the rank of insignificance compared to it. It is our major problem.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS NOT GOVERNMENT INSTITUTIONS

The 12 Federal Reserve banks are not Government institutions, although many people think they are. I doubt that many Members of Congress think they are, but people generally over the country believe they are Federal banks owned by the Federal Government and that they are operating for the Federal Government, which, of course, is not true. Under the original act passed in 1913 the Federal Government was authorized to purchase stock in these banks, but this privilege has never been exercised. These banks are owned exclusively by private corporations, so we have the unhappy situation of the Federal Reserve banks, owned by private corporations, having almost exclusive charge and power over the issuance and distribution of our national currency. This is not a situation that should be tolerated or condoned by the Congress in face of the mandate of the Constitution of the United States which says it is the duty of the Congress to coin money and regulate the value thereof.

Mr. LEAVY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington. Mr. LEAVY. Is it not true that by reason of stock ownership a few large banks in a particular Federal region dominate the finances of that region to the prejudice of the smaller banks?

Mr. PATMAN. It is not only the case in some regions: I believe you would be correct in saying it is the case in all regions.

In regard to large banks, the tendency has been in recent years, the last 18 years, toward fewer and larger banks. Today there are 24 banks in this country, 13 being in one city, New York City, which own one-third of the banking resources of the 16,000 banks of the entire country. This is not a healthy situation. Do not overlook that fact. There are 24 banks, just 2 dozen, one-third of them in one city, a majority, that own one-third of the banking resources of the entire Nation.

TAX-EXEMPT SECURITIES

Suppose we were to pass legislation taxing tax-exempt securities, what would be the effect? I am opposed to tax-exempt securities. I doubt if there is a Member of the House who will say he is in favor of tax-exempt securities. We are not in favor of having a privileged class in this country, one class that works and produces the wealth and pays the taxes, and another class owning the tax-exempt securities, owning the wealth of the country and paying no taxes whatsoever. That is the situation in a large way today, and we do not want such a situation to continue to exist. But suppose we decided to just pass a law or pass a constitutional amendment through the regular course which would permit each locality and State where these securities are held to levy a tax upon them, like they do all other goods and chattels or securities of various kinds. I asked the Treasury Department to prepare for me a list giving the States and the amount of tax-exempt securities held by the corporations in the different States. I know the list is not entirely accurate, but it is as near accurate as any list you may obtain.

Corporation income and excess-profits tax returns for 1935, by States and Territories, showing amount of Government obligations owned at end of taxable year and interest received on Government obligations during taxable year 1

[Money figures in thousands of dollars]

	Government obligations 2
States and Territories	Amount owned at end of taxable year 3	Interest received during taxable year
Alabama	77, 190	2,875
Alaska	2, 175 10, 905	117
Arizona	10, 905	834
Arkansas	35, 543	1,886
California	1, 535, 978	51, 302 4, 857
Connecticut	135, 317 779, 579	22, 017
Delaware	128, 359	8, 092
District of Columbia	114, 267	3, 440
Florida	127, 171	4, 309
Georgia	91, 705	3, 410
Hawaii	44, 673	1, 373
Idaho	29, 033	1,098
Illinois	1, 898, 592	48, 464
Indiana	302, 055	10, 501
Iowa	324, 945	10, 867
Kansas	103, 721	5, 710
Kentucky	113, 560	4, 850
Louisiana	143, 216	5, 473
Maine	59, 132	2, 340
Maryland	299, 836	9, 576
Massachusetts Michigan	964, 468 703, 161	29, 597 20, 835
Minnesota	338, 139	13, 242
Mississippi	50, 876	2, 313
Missouri	463, 936	18, 672
Montana	45, 861	1, 633
Nebraska	121, 790	4, 738
Nevada	10, 929	540
New Hampshire	31, 843	1,080
New Jersey	1, 271, 214	50, 634
New Mexico	11, 876	599
New York	6, 887, 693	190, 145
North Carolina	175, 687	5, 356
North DakotaOhio	44, 799	1,716
Oklahoma	907, 382 113, 749	32, 444
Oregon	103, 545	6, 174 3, 576
Pennsylvania	1, 629, 263	62, 117
Rhode Island	97, 735	4, 313
South Carolina.	33, 388	1, 303
South Dakota	24, 195	1, 189
Tennessee	150, 807	5, 788
Texas	361, 475	14, 898
Utah	41, 407	1,952
Vermont	64, 842	2, 388
Virginia	128, 209	6, 802
Washington	-176, 737	5, 995
West Virginia	79, 858	2, 671
Wisconsin	458, 670	17, 012
Wyoming	12, 754	433
Total	21, 863, 240	713, 546

¹In using this table it must be borne in mind that the corporation income-tax returns are filed in the collection district in which the principal place of business or principal office of the corporation is located. The data, although tabulated by the States in which the returns are filed, do not represent what may be called the geographic distribution of the interest received on Government obligations and the amount of such obligations owned.

The amount of Government obligations shown has been tabulated from only those corporation returns accompanied by balance sheets while the interest received on Government obligations has been tabulated from all active corporations reporting income data whether or not accompanied by balance sheets. The amount owned represents the amount received during the entire taxable year and the interest received represents the amount received during the entire taxable year. For these reasons, the amount of interest shown in the table cannot be definitely related to the principal amount owned shown in the same table.

Attention is also invited to the fact that these data are fragmentary since it has been observed from past experience in the tabulation of Government obligations and interest received therefrom that considerable amounts are not completely reported. This is attributable in part to incomplete records of the corporation and to the further fact that the data are not essential to the correct determination of the income tax.

¹ Obligations of States and Territories or political subdivision thereof, obligations of instrumentalities of the United States, and obligations of the United States or its possessions.

² Benorted on returns with balance sheets.

3 Reported on returns with balance sheets.

Prepared for Hon. Wright Patman, Washington, D. C., Mar. 7, 1939.

This list discloses, so far as Government tax-exempt securities are concerned, that out of $21,363,000,000 of tax-exempt securities, which would be taxable under this proposal, approximately one-third of those securities are held in one city, or at least in one State. This table does not include such securities held by individuals. I happen to know from an examination of the reports of banks and insurance companies that this one-third is mostly held in one city. There are one-third of those securities of the entire Nation in one city. If we permitted the States and cities to tax them necessarily this would cause an increase in the tax rate on the people all over the Nation owing these obligations, which would mean that a few fortunate cities, two or three, in which these securities are held, would possibly be enabled to collect sufficient revenue from these securities to almost support their own city, county, and State governments. Therefore, that is not a desirable way to handle the taxexempt problem, according to my view.

Mr. Speaker, the more desirable way is to either more hastily or more quickly have them transferred to the social-security reserve fund, thereby placing them in a position where no one would want to tax them and where the interest when paid would go to the old and needy people of the country and not the private holders of these Government securities; or we should acquire the stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks, and acquire the Federal securities through these banks and eliminate the interest entirely. This can be done. Why should not the Government's credit be used for the benefit of all the people instead of for the benefit of a few?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.
Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. If I have correctly understood the gentleman's proposal, it is that the Government itself will finally absorb the Government bonds?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes; the social-security fund. It is not the Government exactly; it is the social-security fund that has been made possible by the Congress, and the Government, of course.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. By what authority would these bonds be absorbed then?

Mr. PATMAN. The fund is not the Government's fund. It belongs to the workers of this country for unemployment insurance, for old-age benefits, and purposes like that.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. If Secretary Morgenthau's plan works out for the social-security fund to absorb the Government bonds with the security taxes, then we would be constantly reducing the amount of Government bonds outstanding, would we not?

Mr. PATMAN. I do not know whether we would or not. It is possible we would have to issue Government bonds eventually in order to keep the fund going. There is a lot of criticism about spending that fund, and I am glad the gentleman left the inference there that he did. I want to tell you where it started. It is true that as the money is paid in now it, of course, goes into the Treasury and when the Treasury needs money it spends that money, but the Treasury issues bonds and places in the social-security fund bonds providing 3 percent interest to take the place of the money that is paid in.

There is a good reason for this. The Secretary of the Treasury could not do anything else unless there were a higher interest rate on bonds. Today interest rates are low and he cannot go into the market and buy Government bonds that are paying as much as 3 percent. The law states that this fund can be invested only in United States Government securities providing as much as 3 percent interest.

You would not have the Secretary go out and pay \$112 for a \$100 bond just because it was paying $3\frac{1}{2}$ or $3\frac{1}{4}$ percent interest? No. Therefore, the sensible and logical thing to do is what Secretary Morgenthau is now doing, to use the money, issue securities and put them in that fund, and sometimes use the money to pay off securities that are coming due although they are paying less than 3-percent interest.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California. Mr. VOORHIS of California. Is it not also true that when the Treasury does use the money for the payment of ordinary expenses it thereby avoids an increase in the public debt that would otherwise take place, and that if we were on a balanced Budget basis the money then would be used for retirement of the outstanding national debt?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes. Let me tell you when that started. It did not start under a Democratic administration. It started under a Republican administration. In 1924 the Congress passed what was known as the Adjusted Compensation Act for World War veterans. This law provided that each year Congress would appropriate $112,000,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is that agreeable to the gentleman from Montana, who, under a previous special order, is entitled to address the House at this time?

Mr. THORKELSON. It is, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. I thank the gentleman very kindly.

This reserve fund was created for the purpose of having the face value of those certificates in 1945, when they were made payable. The actuaries determined in 1924 that approximately $112,000,000 placed in the reserve fund each year, commencing in 1924, would be sufficient to retire the face value of those certificates in 1945 if 4-percent interest was paid, so the law provided that the reserve fund must be invested in United States Government bonds providing 4-percent interest.

Although interest rates were much higher at that time, Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, the Secretary of the Treasury, was unable to purchase bonds providing 4-percent interest to place in the fund, and he did exactly what Mr. Morgenthau is doing today; and that is the first time it was ever undertaken. He used that money to pay expenses of the Government or to retire different obligations and issued special I O U's or Government certificates providing 4-percent interest to place in the adjusted-service-certificate fund.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is it not a fact that during that time the Government debt was being reduced from $26,000,000,000 to around $16,000,000,000?

Mr. PATMAN. It is true that we were taking in more money than we were paying out. President Wilson during the World War said that those who profited by the war should pay the cost of the war, and he persuaded the Congress to pass tax laws which, if they had remained upon the statute books, would have caused the entire payment, the complete liquidation of the national debt, by June 30, 1927; but when the Republicans came into power March 4, 1921, they did not see fit to keep these war taxes in effect. They did not want to liquidate that national debt so quickly; in fact, many of them argued that a pretty good-sized national debt is a sound thing for the country and that we should have a pretty good-sized national debt.

WAR DEBT COULD HAVE BEEN PAID BY JUNE 30, 1927

In connection with the public debt I desire to invite your attention to a statement prepared by Mr. L. H. Parker, chief of staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. This statement discloses that if the Woodrow Wilson taxes had continued the national debt would have been entirely paid by June 30, 1927, and there would have been a surplus at that time in the Treasury after the payment of the debt of $1,542,000,000.

The statement I refer to is contained in volume 79, part 3, of the Congressional Record for the Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, page 2687, and is as follows:

Estimate of additional revenue that would have been derived under the income and axcess-profits tax rates of the year 1918 continued in subsequent years, with effect upon the public debt by the application of such additional revenue thereto

INDIVIDUAL-INCOME TAX

Year	Actual net income	Actual tax	Theoretical tax	Excess
1918	$15, 924, 639, 000	$1, 127, 722, 000	$1, 127, 722, 000
1919	19, 859, 491, 000 23, 735, 629, 000	1, 269, 630, 000 1, 075, 054, 000	1, 406, 052, 000 1, 680, 483, 000	$136, 422, 000 605, 429, 000
1921	19, 577, 213, 000	719, 387, 000	1, 386, 067, 000	666, 680, 000
1922	21, 336, 213, 000	861, 057, 000 661, 666, 000	1, 510, 604, 000	649, 547, 000 1, 592, 579, 000
1924	24, 777, 466, 000 25, 656, 153, 000	704, 265, 000	1, 754, 245, 000 1, 816, 456, 000	1, 112, 191, 000
1925 1926	21, 894, 576, 000 21, 958, 506, 000	734, 555, 000 732, 471, 000	1, 550, 136, 000 1, 554, 662, 000
Total	178, 795, 247, 000 22, 545, 091, 000	6, 758, 085, 000 830, 639, 000	12, 658, 705, 000 1, 596, 192, 000	6, 400, 620, 000 765, 553, 000
Total	201, 340, 338, 000	7, 588, 724, 000	14, 254, 897, 000	7, 166, 173, 000

CORPORATIONS-INCOME AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAXES

Year	Actual net income	Theoretical net income	Actual tax	Theoretical tax	Excess
1918	$8, 361, 511, 000		$3, 158, 764, 000
1919 1920 1921 1922	7, 902, 655, 000 4, 336, 048, 000 6, 963, 811, 000	3, 399, 895, 000 5, 222, 858, 000	1, 625, 235, 000 701, 576, 000 783, 776, 000	1, 284, 378, 000 1, 973, 060, 000	846, 366, 000 582, 802, 000 1, 189, 284, 000
1923 1924 1925 1926	8, 321, 529, 000 7, 586, 652, 000 9, 583, 684, 000 9, 673, 403, 000	5, 689, 989, 000 7, 187, 763, 000	881, 550, 000 1, 170, 331, 000	2, 149, 530, 000 2, 715, 350, 000	1, 267, 980, 000 1, 545, 019, 000
Total		49, 571, 016, 000 6, 736, 413, 000		18, 726, 569, 000 2, 544, 842, 000
Total	72, 761, 084, 000	56, 307, 429, 000	10, 635, 387, 000	21, 271, 411, 000	10, 636, 024, 000

Public debt June 30, 1926	$19, 643, 000, 000
Additional revenue if rates con- tinued through 1926 $15, 122, 476, 000 Probable saving in interest by annual payment of such addi-tional revenue on public debt_

2, 450, 000, 000

	11, 012, 410, 000
Balance of debt, 1926	2, 070, 524, 000
Public debt June 30, 1927	18, 510, 000, 000

Public debt June 30, 1927. Additional revenue if rates continued through 1927

Probable saving of interest by annual payment of such additional payment of s

817, 302, 197, 000

tional revenue on public debt_

2, 750, 000, 000

20, 052, 197, 000

Surplus after complete payment of public debt_

1, 542, 197, 000

Nore.—It is assumed that business profits (net income) would not have been depressed by the high tax.

(This statement prepared by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. Mr. L. H. Parker, chief of staff.)

I was in Congress in 1929 when, at one time, $190,000,000 was given to the income-tax payers just as an absolute gift, as a subsidy, in order to prevent the payment of the national debt so quickly. Naturally, there was more money coming in under those tax laws than was being paid out. When Mr. Mellon received this $112,000,000 he could not do what Congress had directed-invest it in Government securities drawing 4 percent interest—so he had to use the money in some way, either as current expenses or to retire obligations, which he probably did, and I presume that he did.

Today we have exactly the same situation. Mr. Morgenthau collects money from the employers and the employees and from the United States Government for the purpose of conducting the Social Security Act. What does he do with this money? The law states that he cannot invest it except in United States Government securities providing at least 3 percent interest, and he cannot purchase such securities; therefore, he is doing exactly what Mr. Mellon started back in 1924—he is issuing special United States Government bonds and placing them in that reserve fund.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman

Mr. PATMAN. I yield. Mr. WHITE of Idaho. The thing that bothers me is this: Assuming the Government takes over the Federal Reserve bank, what is it going to use to acquire this large amount of Government bonds outstanding?

Mr. PATMAN. The Government credit, just as it is being used now. Today the Federal Reserve banks own $2,500,-000,000 of these Government securities, purchased on the Government's credit on a capitalization of $132,000,000.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Those Government bonds are Government obligations put out for money that has been received and spent. Now, if the Federal Reserve is going to take them over, it has got to pay something to get them from the private

Mr. PATMAN. That is right. They give them the credit; and if they want the money, they can get it; but no matter how much money we issue, there will only be a certain amount in circulation, and that amount now is approximately

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Referring to that statement that, no matter how much money we issue, there will only be a certain amount in circulation, the money will be in existence, and it will be what is called liquid capital.

Mr. PATMAN. Yes; in actual circulation. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order of the House heretofore entered, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Thorkelson] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I have heard a good deal of discussion this afternoon that is rather interesting to me, and I would like to ask the gentleman from California [Mr. Voornis] a question. Will the gentleman please tell me the difference between a democracy and a republican form of government? The gentleman discussed this a while ago and he used the word "democracy" throughout his discussion, and I would like to know the difference between the two.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. As far as a form of government goes, of course, the gentleman can answer his own question quite as well as I. A pure democracy means a government where all the people actually participate in making the laws. A republican form of government has to be introduced where you have in a nation or political group so many people so far apart from each other that they necessarily have to elect representatives to perform that function for them; but the word "democracy" is, I think, a little broader than merely a description of a form of government. I think when we use that word we mean a way of life, and I tried to define my terms and explain what I meant by Mr. THORKELSON. Does the gentleman mean that we have a republican form of government here?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Necessarily so; the New England town meeting was a form of democratic government. We cannot govern the whole Nation in that manner today.

Mr. THORKELSON. And we should not use the word democracy" as representing our Government, according to the Constitution?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I think it is best to use a word that the people understand.

Mr. THORKELSON. But it is the wrong word to use, is it not?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Technically, it is for our form of government.

Mr. THORKELSON. That is a point we ought to bear in mind in our discussions. We have not a democracy; we have a republican form of government, or a representative form of government. Now, I want to call your attention to something else. In a sense we have a democracy because in 1913 we adopted the seventeenth amendment, and because of that the Senators are now elected by the people. So all the Members of the Congress are elected by popular vote. It is by direct vote of the people, of course; and, therefore, I admit that up to that point we do have a democracy, although the real fundamental basis of our Government is a republican form of government, based upon the right of each State to conduct a government by itself.

LXXXIV-194

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Does the gentleman mean by that statement he thinks we should not have a government which rests, as far as possible, upon the popular will? The gentleman does not mean to give that impression, does he?

Mr. THORKELSON. No government can exist directly on the popular will of the people in this sense. If it depended entirely upon the will of the people, there is so much difference of opinion among the people today that we would have no government, and that is really our position today. The reason we have a Constitution is for the Government to have some basic law upon which it can rest or upon which it can refer to correct itself when it goes wrong. The Constitution provides for that, of course, and we must adhere to it. As soon as we depart from a representative form of government and as soon as we adopt a democracy or a democratic government—there is a difference between the two—we have then departed from a representative form of government and we are really ruled by the masses of the people. That is a condition at variance with a republican form of government, as our Government was before the seventeenth amendment was adopted. A pure democracy may in time, by a large party majority, become a despotism. President Washington warned us against such a possibility.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. We do want the people to elect Representatives and be able to defeat them at will and to have those Representatives responsible to the people absolutely. Is that not true?

Mr. THORKELSON. Naturally, we elect Representatives; but what I wish you to bear in mind is this, that our Government is originally based upon the Constitution itself, and the Constitution provides for the election of Representatives. In the early part of our history until 1913 our Senators were chosen or elected by the State legislatures. Of course, the gentleman knows that. I am not telling him something he does not know. When they reached Washington they represented the State particularly and the people as components of the State. That was right, because it is the basic foundation of the Government, of State representation, and of State sovereignty. That is something that we fail to recognize today. Now we have changed that. By the seventeenth amendment we made our country a pure democracy, and the people are now electing all Members of Congress, both in the House and in the Senate.

Now, here is a possibility that we must also bear in mind in that respect. Of course, this is simply an academic viewpoint, for I realize that no one can be President of the United States unless he is a citizen born within the United States. The seventeenth amendment, however, has actually changed this. If a man should be nominated by, let us say, the "X" party, and if such party should carry sufficient electoral votes, it would be in duty bound to place in office its nominee, whether or not a native-born citizen. That is what the seventeenth amendment did to us.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman does not mean that someone who is not a born American could be President now?

Mr. THORKELSON. He could; yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Now? Mr. THORKELSON. Yes; he could under the seventeenth amendment. The Constitution provides:

No person except a natural born citizen * * shall be eligible to the office of President-

But it does not state that the nominee shall be a nativeborn citizen, and as we are now a democracy, the power is in the hands of the people. That is why I am opposed to constitutional amendments. We must preserve the Government as it was given to us.

Mr. HOFFMAN. You mean if we should happen to elect Hitler he could be President?

Mr. THORKELSON. No; I mean a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Will the gentleman tell me what he does mean so I will get it right?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes: I will tell you that exactly. I mean this: We passed the seventeenth amendment, and Senators are now elected by a popular vote of the people.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I heard that three times.

Mr. THORKELSON. Now, then, if a naturalized citizen is elected by popular majority, the Senate also being elected by popular vote, is practically forced to carry out the mandate of the people.

Mr. HOFFMAN. If the people elect him, we could hardly fail to turn him down?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. What does that mean?

Mr. THORKELSON. It means this: Previous to the advent of the seventeenth amendment, our Senate was a representative body of the States, and in such position independent and free to protect the States' sovereign rights. Both Houses are now responsible to the people who elected them to office. Do you understand what I mean?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I do not believe I do.

Mr. THORKELSON. According to the Constitution, a man shall not be President unless he is born within the United States. That is true, is it not?

Mr. HOFFMAN. That I understand.

Mr. THORKELSON. Now, as our Government is today, a popular form of government or democracy, the majority rules. That is true, is it not?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Do you want me to answer each time?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; I think that is all right.

Mr. THORKELSON. If that is true, then we actually have no control over it, as we did before the seventeenth amendment was passed and when the Senators were chosen by the State legislatures.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Now, what I understand you to say, then, is, if the people should elect someone who is not a citizen as President, we would take him?

Mr. THORKELSON. No; I do not say that.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Well, if we elect someone who is not born here but who is a naturalized citizen?

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Then, under the Constitution, could he be President?

Mr. THORKELSON. No; not under the Constitution before the seventeenth amendment was adopted. But it is possible now.

Mr. HOFFMAN. But we elect him regardless of the Constitution?

Mr. THORKELSON. That is what we have done.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Who did we ever elect who was not born in this country?

Mr. THORKELSON. We have not so far. I am bringing it up as a technical point of interest.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Something that might happen?

Mr. THORKELSON. I do not think it will happen; but I say it might happen if we do not consider the effect of every amendment to the Constitution that we propose.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Well, that is clear.

Mr. THORKELSON. It occurs to me that our safety lies in adhering to the Constitution and a republican form of government.

Now, I am going to start on what I really wanted to talk

Mr. Speaker, last night while I was driving, a news flash came over the radio that recalled to my mind events of 22 years ago. It said: "The President has placed a high tariff on German imports and joins with England and France to stop Hitler and save the world for democracy." I said, "What rot to save the world for democracy." I recall 22 years ago I heard the same slogan. We stepped to the front and saved the world—for what? For socialism and communism. We are today on the verge of internal war as a result of our departure from constitutional government. Our own Government is undermined with socialism and communism until it is about to be destroyed by these two evils.

The Communist, to camouflage his own activities, shouts "nazi-ism and fascism." He waves the swastika to cover the hammer and the sickle. These red-dancing dervishes ought to be exported to go as part of the war materials shipped out of the United States.

A foreign war would bury many blunders committed by the New Deal during the past 8 years. It might even delay disintegration, but it cannot stop it. I do not think for one moment that anything can stop it except the return to constitutional government, and it is apparent that the majority does not favor such procedure.

Personally, I do not believe that our people are receptive to this last deal. Our people do not favor meddling with European affairs, and we have no earthly reason to be mixed up in it. We did have cause for war when Japan sank the Panay, and when Mexico confiscated American property, but Germany has not sunk any of our ships, and she has not confiscated American property. So our bellicose attitude is for some other insidious purpose, and I ask what it is.

I am, of course, opposed to foreign war, and I am firmly convinced that the present attempt to involve us in another European conflict is too much even for those who have faithfully followed the President since he took office.

In the midst of the turmoil of today, let us stop for a moment and review the causes which led to war in 1914. The World War did not begin in Germany, as a certain minority would have us believe. Poincare carried revenge in his heart because of the War of 1870, and he, with Ivolsky and Count Sergius, of Russia, helped to bring about the war. The Minister of Austria, Count von Bechtoldt, lit the fire when he presented the ultimatum to Serbia after Archduke Ferdinand was killed at Sarajevo. The whole thing, if the truth were known, might have been instigated. The money interests of England were not averse to war because commercial competition with Germany was rather acute. It is well to bear in mind that when the international money men are squeezed a little too hard, war is sometimes convenient.

are squeezed a little too hard, war is sometimes convenient. We were not threatened by Germany from 1912 to 1916. What happened in 1917? The threat of German invasion was not greater then than it was the year before, but in spite of that, war was declared. Who controlled and disseminated the propaganda that was instrumental in changing the viewpoint of the American public?

We had always been friendly toward Germany, and there was no particular animosity toward that nation in 1916, as I recall it. We must now be careful that the same agency does not prevail again and so lead us into another war, costly in lives and property.

The wars raging today are to a great extent the aftermath of the Versailles Peace Treaty. This treaty was not only unjust but it was not based upon sound understanding of central Europe. It left some of the victorious nations dissatisfied, because in the division of the spoils England and France received the lion's share; as a matter of fact, the Lion received the most of it.

It is extremely dangerous to deprive a well-organized and patriotic people of their means of livelihood. A highly intelligent people cannot be confined on a small piece of land, for they will overflow—peacefully or by force. That is happening in Germany today. She was deprived of all colonies and even forced to submit to occupation and division of her little empire in the center of Europe. This short-sighted policy on the part of the conquerors brought about a closer union of the German people, and the result may be seen today. It was a case either of submissive disintegration at home or of acquiring sufficient room for healthy expansion. The German nation has chosen the latter.

Let us now look facts squarely in the face. Germany is the key to the peace in Europe and in the Orient. Why? Because Germany allied with England will control Europe exactly as she is doing now, and both of these powers would make it unhealthy for any nation to invade China, with the United States in a neutral position.

This, of course, is not new, as I believe it is recognized by every European statesman; but restoration of colonies might have sealed such alliance and established international peace.

I grant that it is none of our business; but, in the knowledge of it, it is our business to keep out of a war which might have been settled by transfer of colonies instead of loss of life. Congress alone will be responsible to our people, and it must employ sound judgment and common sense before the final decision is made.

In the event of European conflict, which I believe is unavoidable, certain powers will expect our help, and pressure will be brought to bear upon us in the same old way. "Blood is thicker than water," and "We speak the same language." When that happens, it is well for Congress to bear in mind that it does not matter what language we speak, destruction and death are realities in spite of sentiment.

The question Congress must consider is our material interest in such conflict, for destruction and death are certain. It is unfortunately held by our people that we do not want colonies, and as we do not own property in Europe, it is unlikely that we will suffer unless we cross the firing line and invite attack. Neither have we sentimental principles at stake, and this is particularly true if we bear in mind the inheritance from the last war which is now insidiously destroying our own Government.

The little consideration which has been given to us by the powers we helped in 1917 may have a sobering effect when we recall unpaid or defaulted obligations.

Now, my colleagues, with this picture before you, can any one of you find a reasonable excuse for participating in another destructive war if such occasion should arise? I realize, of course, that general war is not declared, but no one can disregard such possibility, and it is our business as Members of Congress to visualize this before it actually happens.

Transportation of troops will not be as easy now as it was in the World War. We have a highly efficient submarine and air force to deal with today. Both of these machines are much more destructive now than in 1917. We may find it very difficult to transport troops across the Atlantic because of these two new weapons. Airplanes, as you know, carry destructive loads of explosives—enough to sink ships carrying troops. Submarines are equally dangerous to such units of the fleet. The loss of one ship will resolve itself into the loss of thousands of lives, and that is a possibility we must not overlook.

There is another serious side to hasty action. The west coast of the United States is not protected by outlying fortifications, something that I believe the Members appreciate now more than when we discussed the harbor of Guam. If the Philippines and other islands were fortified, it would in a measure be an effective protection to the west coast of the United States and the Panama Canal, but Congress has been opposed to taking such action. That was my reason for supporting harbor improvement in our outlying possessions. Submarine and air bases in our Pacific islands are of inestimable value to the protection of the west coast of the United States, and for that reason should be encouraged instead of discouraged by Congress.

It does not require an expert to visualize what may happen in a simultaneous attack on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, for one side must be left unprotected. The greatest danger, of course, would come from consolidation of bases in a convenient proximity to allow concentration of troops for attack. I believe our fleet is now on the Atlantic coast, and it will no doubt remain there if general war breaks out in Europe. It might even be extremely dangerous to move the fleet from the coast, and this would be particularly true in the event of an unexpected collapse of major powers. In such event it will be necessary for us to prevent occupation of islands and places threatening our vital centers.

In the event of another world war it is quite possible that we may be forced to occupy and prepare strategic points with fortifications in order to allow greater mobility of our fleet. This will be the duty of Congress, and my colleagues, as eminent and farseeing statesmen, must aid and encourage such preparation before it is too late.

We are now frantically in the midst of introducing legislation to keep us out of war. A most useless procedure, I assure you. Belligerent nations care nothing about our legislation or expostulations. If they are concerned about our attitude and fearful of it, they would not, of course, declare war. But the fact that war is declared proves that we are not considered. That is no more than right, because we would brook no interference with our plans at home.

I have always found that it is best never to pull your gun until you are going to shoot. I say it is therefore useless and a wasted effort to threaten and complain, and it does in reality show a weakness within our own Nation. Nothing assures peace to a nation so much as a first-class army and navy. Nothing instills confidence, courage, and spirit in our armed forces more than first-class fighting units. The Constitution provides that Congress furnish and maintain such units for the common defense and the general welfare of the United States.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a short article written by me and published in the March issue of the magazine Asia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

SOCIAL SECURITY PROGRAM AND THE TOWNSEND PLAN

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call attention to some phases of the social security program.

On August 14, 1935, our Social Security Act became effective. Among other purposes, it was designed to prevent oldage dependency and give some assurance of protection to certain qualified citizens as a matter of right without the "need test." It was intended to provide a coordinated plan of old-age security. Under the old-age insurance program, the amount of payroll taxes collected through November 1938, was $963,800,000, and at that time the amount in the old-age pension account was $1,132,700,000. Of this amount $830,300,000 was invested in special Treasury notes bearing 3 percent interest. Approximately $300,000,000 was held to the credit of the appropriation made by Congress, and nearly $2,400,000 was held by the Treasury Disbursing Office to care for benefits. Payments for lump-sum settlements from the account amounted to $10,000,000.

It is computed that under title II there will have been collected up to June 30, 1940, $1,826,000,000. This is exacted from the industries of America and some 40,000,000 workers. Out of this huge sum, however, we will have paid only $60,000,000 to the beneficiaries. Approximately 3 cents out of each dollar will go to the beneficiaries, and 97 cents for the reserve account. The employers are now taxed 1 percent of the payrolls, and the employees a like amount. The employers, however, are paying 3 percent for unemployment

Under the schedules of the act these taxes will increase until 1949 when the employers will be required to pay 6 percent and the employees 3 percent, making a 9-percent payroll tax taken directly out of industry. It is patent that this tax is and will be added to the cost of the goods produced and, therefore, will fall upon the consuming public. Should the provisions of this act be carried out and the full amount of taxes exacted, the reserve account will have, by 1980, nearly $47,000,000,000. Furthermore, the social-security law is much restricted in its application, and affords relief to only a selected group of workers, rather than to all senior citizens equally deserving. This huge sum of money exacted from industry and workers is not being devoted to the relief of the beneficiaries, the workers, but is being used to finance the ordinary activities of the Government. Statisticians and economists tell us that it is not necessary to carry a full reserve account to protect these payments. This is apparent to the layman as well. These funds collected as trust funds, having been spent by the Federal Government to meet its running expenses, necessitate the levying of taxes hereafter to pay the beneficiaries as the obligations become due. The plan should be revised, or superseded by another plan, so framed as to cover all senior citizens 60 years of age or over, and with tax provisions designed to raise only such funds as are needed on a pay-as-you-go basis, with a contingency fund sufficient only to meet emergencies. The funds so raised should be restricted to the use for which they were raised.

The Advisory Council of the Social Security Board, in its report submitted to the Committee on Ways and Means, has likewise reached the conclusion that the act should be made to cover other groups, and that a full reserve is not necessary; that it is only necessary to maintain a reasonable contingency fund, and that a much smaller fund than provided in the present act is advisable. The Advisory Council's report shows (social-security hearings, House Ways and Means Committee, p. 40):

With the changes in the benefit structure here recommended with the changes in the benefit structure here recommended and with the introduction of a definite program of governmental contributions to the system, the council believes that the size of the old-age insurance fund will be kept within much lower limits than are involved in the present act. Under social-insurance programs it is not necessary to maintain a full invested reserve such as is required in private insurance, provided definite provision is made for governmental support of the system. The only invested fund then necessary would be a reasonable contingency fund as outlined above.

The Advisory Council further holds (social-security hearings before House Ways and Means Committee, p. 41):

The old-age insurance fund should specifically be made a trust fund, with designated trustees acting on the behalf of the prospective beneficiaries of the program. The trust fund should be dedicated exclusively to the payment of the benefits provided under the program and, in limited part, to the costs necessary to the administration of the program.

On March 12 last, Roger W. Babson, outstanding expert on this subject, made a significant statement with reference to this social-security program. (Social-security hearings, House Ways and Means Committee, p. 1515.) Among other things he said:

Take the social-security program, for example. Under its provisions employers are now taxed 1 percent of their pay rolls, and employees are contributing a like amount. In addition, employers employees are contributing a like amount. In addition, employers are paying 3 percent for unemployment insurance. These taxes are scheduled to increase until 1949, when employers will be paying 6 percent and employees 3 percent or more. This will represent a 6-percent excise tax on employers' pay rolls and a 3-percent income tax on every gainfully employed worker.

Naturally this 9-percent tax must be added to the cost of goods. Therefore it will eventually be paid—as all taxes are—by the consumer. The current 5-percent tax is already a big factor in living costs. It is handicapping thrifty people in saving something for themselves. Now a movement is on foot to put across a national health-insurance program, which would take another 3-percent pay-roll tax. It will also be added to the cost of goods. If enacted, it will boost the total cost on wages to 12 percent.

These social-security taxes alone are now giving the Government twill boost the total cost on wages to 12 percent.

These social-security taxes alone are now giving the Government about $1,000,000,000 a year of new spending money. This is the annual contribution of millions of individuals to the trust fund which is supposed to provide them with a monthly income in their old age. The funds, however, are being used for current public expenses. Is one cent being set aside for the future?

If the social-security system is not changed, I doubt very much if the young people of 20 to 30 years of age will ever receive any benefit from it. When their time arrives to get their $40, $50, or $60 monthly Government check, it may not even buy a pair of shoes or a reast of heef. The Townsend plan on some reasonable or $60 monthly Government check, it may not even buy a pair of shoes or a roast of beef. The Townsend plan. on some reasonable basis, is far safer. It, at least "pays as it goes," even though it, too, may increase prices tremendously.

Despite the swiftly running stream of revenues pouring into Washington, all eyes are focused on new tax possibilities. Never before in our history has the Government collected as much money as it is now doing. Moreover, it is spending every cent of it, including the money collected for the social-security trust fund, and it is still paying only half its bills. Meanwhile, largely to pay for new "social" programs, State governments are considering 482 new licenses and taxes. If the security trend continues, the taxes necessary to pay for our "security" and "insurance" programs may amount to a practical confiscation of every individual's wages. Fundamentally, the only real security is high spiritual and intellectual character. Industry, honesty, thrift, ability, courage, and kindness are those vital factors which make any security program click. Eliminate these qualities, and insurance of any kind is useless. The Government is simply the organization of people. The moral fiber of the Government reflects the moral fiber of the people do not have strong character, their Govern people. If the people do not have strong character, their Government insurance and security is useless.

Economist John T. Flynn, appearing as a witness before the Ways and Means Committee of the House on March 17. 1939, said that the potential $47,000,000,000 reserve account being accumulated under the social-security program actually will be used for battleships, roads, and general expenses, and characterized the reserve as "an elaborate fiction." He said:

will be used for battleships, roads, and general expenses, and characterized the reserve as "an elaborate fiction." He said:

Under the present act, in the first 3 years the tax for paying old-age benefits is 400 percent higher than is necessary for the benefits paid from it. Next year it will be six times higher than is necessary considering the present benefits. By 1950 it will be double what it ought to be. For the next 30 years, the tax levied on the pay rolls will be excessive—even extortionate.

According to the Government's own actuarial figures, the sum that will be paid out by 1970 in old-age benefits will be roughly $35,000,000,000.

But the Government is going to collect in taxes to pay that sum $75,000,000,000. In other words, the Government is going to extract from employers and employees $40,000,000.000 more than it will pay back in benefits in the next 30 years. Why? By 1980 the Government is going to collect $111,000,000,000 on more than it will pay back in benefits in the next 30 years. Why? By 1980 the Government is going to collect $111,000,000,000 of it axes for old-age benefits. But in those 40 years the Government is going to pay out in benefits only a little over half of that, or 57 percent. Over $47,000,000,000 of it, or 43 percent, will never be paid in benefits, but will be used by the Government to pay general Government expenses. * * * "The system is perfectly safe. I do not want anyone to get the idea that the Government is never going to make good on the pensions," he said, but utilization of the revenue to pay mounting costs of government, he said, "is a grave mistake of statesmanship."

The social-security system is new. Already many serious criticisms have been made against it. Most of them are unjustified. But very soon the dissatisfaction will be greater. Next year the taxes will increase 50 percent without rhyme or reason. Then the dissatisfaction will be greater. By the time these taxes are 6 percent for old-age pensions and 6 percent for unemployment, both employers and emp

This program of social security as it is working out under the taxes levied is not affording relief to the workers; the funds, through the subterfuge provided by the act, are being used not for the purposes for which they were raised but to meet Government expenses, and the reserve account, socalled, is only a bookkeeping entry, as the funds collected are used as received to bolster up an unbalanced Budget. Under the fiction indulged in, the I O U's of the Government are all that is left of the tax dollars exacted from industry and the workers. Eventually the same taxpayers who put up this fund with the other taxpayers of the Nation must again be taxed to make the payments to old-age beneficiaries these funds were supposed to cover. These I O U's are called special securities bearing 3 percent interest which the Government must pay from taxes. The Advisory Council on Social Security said on April 29, 1938 (S. Doc. 4, 76th Cong., 1st sess., p. 29):

The United States Treasury uses the moneys realized from the issuance of these special securities by the old-age reserve account in the same manner as it does moneys realized from the sale of other Government securities. As long as the Budget is not balanced, the net result is to reduce the amounts which the Government has to borrow from banks, insurance companies, and other private parties. When the Budget is balanced, these moneys will be available for the reduction of the national debt held by the public. The members of the Advisory Council are in agreement that the fulfillment of the promise made to the wage earners included in the old-age insurance system depends upon, more than anything else, the financial integrity of the Government.

It follows, as shown by the Advisory Council on Social Security, that, so long as the Budget remains unbalanced, these funds will be dissipated for expenses foreign to social security and that fulfillment of the promises of the Government made to the wage earners will depend upon, more than anything else, the financial integrity of the Government. The Government is doing nothing to restore confidence, to balance the Budget, or to provide for the maintenance of its financial integrity.

The burden on the taxpayer has been increased almost threefold in the last 7 years, as shown by tax revenues collected, which are as follows:

1933	$2,080,000,000
1934	3, 116, 000, 000
1935	3, 800, 000, 000
1936	4, 116, 000, 000
1937	5, 294, 000, 000
1938	6, 242, 000, 000
1939	5, 520, 000, 000

The appropriations for the next fiscal year will be approximately $10,000,000,000. The public debt in 1931 was $16,-801,000,000. It will approximate $41,132,000,000 on July 1, 1939, and, it is estimated, will reach $45,000,000,000 by July 1, 1940, which is the maximum allowed under the law. Notwithstanding the huge increase in taxes, the deficit each year is increasing. The deficit is estimated to be for the current year an all-time high of $3,972,000,000, except for 1936, when the soldiers' bonus was paid. The deficits for the last 7 fiscal years are:

1932	$3, 148, 000, 000
1933	3, 063, 000, 000
1934	3, 989, 000, 000
1935	3, 575, 000, 000
1936	4, 764, 000, 000
1937	2, 811, 000, 000
1938	1, 449, 000, 000

If keeping good faith with the wage earners depends upon the financial integrity of the Government, would it not be better to collect from the employers and employees under the social-security program only enough taxes to pay as we go in addition to the emergency fund, and not throw these security tax funds into an ever-increasing deficit to bolster up an unsound fiscal policy?

The American people are pension minded. The Gallup poll, released February 26, 1939, shows that 94 percent of American citizens are in favor of a reasonable pension. Such a pension plan, on a pay-as-you-go basis, is desirable. As Mr. Babson said in the quotation I have given, referring to the social-security law:

The Townsend plan on some reasonable basis is far safer. It, at least, pays as it goes, even though it, too, may increase prices tremendously.

Mr. Speaker, there has been such wide demand from all sections of our country for a program such as is embodied in the Townsend plan that I asked the research department of the Library of Congress to compile a list of the States of the Union that had sent memorials to Congress with reference to the plan. The report is as follows:

ACTION OF STATE LEGISLATURES RELATIVE TO THE TOWNSEND OLD-AGE PENSION PLAN

MEMORIALS TO CONGRESS

Arizona

House Memorial No. 1, 1935 (Congressional Record, vol. 79, pp. 1036-1037): Memorial to the President and Congress of the United States (1) that careful investigation be made of the provisions of the Townsend old-age pension plan; and if the claims made for said plan are found to be justified, that it be enacted into law; (2) that the proposed legislation be so drawn as to merely suspend and not repeal existing pension laws. (Not found in 1935 session laws.)

California

Assembly Joint Resolution No. 6, Laws, 1935, Resolutions, chapter

Assembly Joint Resolution No. 6, Laws, 1935, Resolutions, chapter 30, page 2439 (Congressional Record, vol. 79, pp. 1581, 1707); Memorializing the President and Congress to carefully consider what is known as the Townsend plan of old-age revolving pensions.

Assembly Joint Resolution No. 39, Laws, 1935, Resolutions, chapter 57, page 2529 (Congressional Record, vol. 79, pp. 4724, 4883, 7036); Memorializing Congress to incorporate in a national old-age pension plan the principles and objectives of the Townsend plan.

Assembly Resolution No. 2 (Congressional Record, vol. 80, p. 9315); Relating to endorsement of the old-age revolving pension plan of Dr. F. E. Townsend.

Colorado

House Joint Memorial No. 1, Laws, 1935, page 1144 (Congressional RECORD, vol. 79, p. 1415): Urges Congress to give consideration to "the Townsend old-age revolving pension plan" or other suitable plan, if as, and when the same is presented for its consideration.

Idaho

Senate Joint Memorial No. 5, Laws, 1935, pages 387-388 (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 79, pp. 3285-3286, 3326-3327): Urges upon the Congress of the United States the enactment of the Townsend old-

Congress of the United States the enactment of the Townsend old-age pension revolving fund plan.

Memorial adopted by Nampa City Council, February 18, 1935 (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 79, pp. 2656–2657): Memorializes the United States Congress to enact the Townsend old-age revolving pension plan into law.

Petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Idaho, addressed to Senator Borah (Congressional Record, vol. 79, p. 1629), pray for adoption of the so-called Townsend old-age revolving pension plan.

Minnesota

Resolution (Congressional Record, vol. 81, p. 1394): Memorializing Congress to give the so-called Townsend recovery plan, otherwise known as the General Welfare Act of 1937, careful and serious consideration. (Not found in 1937 session laws.)

Montana

Montana

Senate Joint Resolution No. 2, Laws 1935, pages 533-534 (Congressional Record, vol. 79, p. 1790): Petitioning Congress for passage of an act embracing the principles of an old-age benefit, such as the Townsend plan, or such other old-age-benefit plan as may be just and equitable to all persons over the age of 60 years.

House Joint Memorial No. 2, Laws 1937, pages 494-495 (Congressional Record, vol. 81, p. 1192): Memorializing the Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation for the creation and establishment of the Townsend recovery plan and for benefits to be paid all persons over the age of 60 years.

Senate Joint Memorial No. 2 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 20, 1939, p. 1572): Memorial to the Congress of the United States for the passage of an act incorporating the principles of the Townsend national recovery plan substantially as set forth in a bill entitled "H. R. 4199," introduced in the House of Representatives in the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress of the United States on February 2, 1937.

North Dakota

North Dakota

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 1, Laws 1935, page 479 (Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 79, pp. 2162, 3802): Memorializing Congress to give every consideration to the Townsend old-age revolving pension plan if, as, and when the same is presented for its consideration.

Sideration.

House Concurrent Resolution F, Laws 1937, pages 556-557 (Congressional Record, vol. 81, p. 1192): Memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass the Townsend recovery plan bill, making it the Federal law of the land if, as, and when the same is presented for its passage.

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 18 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 1, 1939, pp. 985-986): Resolved, That the Senators and Representatives of the State of North Dakota in the Congress of the United States be, and hereby are, requested to take such necessary steps as will insure the immediate passage of the aforesaid Townsend recovery plan bill.

Oregon

House Joint Memorial No. 1. Laws 1937, page 886 (Congressional House Joint Memorial No. 1, Laws 1937, page 886 (Congressional Recorp, vol. 81, pp. 2000, 2101): Petitioning the Congress to give a fair, full, and impartial hearing and consideration of the Townsend national recovery plan, with a view to its enactment into law after the Members of Congress shall have settled the details of the legislation.

the legislation.

House Joint Memorial, No. 1 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 1, 1939, p. 985, also Appendix of the Congressional Record, Pebruary 1, 1939, p. 985, also Appendix of the Congressional Record, That, in accordance with the direction of said initiative measure (entitled "A bill for an act authorizing and directing the Legislature of the State of Oregon to apply to the Congress of the United States for a convention to propose the philosophy and principles of the Townsend national recovery plan as an amendment to the Federal Constitution" and adopted November 8, 1938), the Legislature of the State of Oregon hereby does by this joint memorial make application to the Congress of the United States to call a national convention, pursuant to the provisions of article V of the Constitution of the United States, for the purpose of proposing an amendment to the said Constitution to provide for the establishment and operation of the philosophy and principles of the Townsend national recovery plan, otherwise known and described as the proposed General Welfare Act of 1937 (H. R. 4199).

Washington

Washington

Petition relating to national recovery and old-age pensions through a national transaction tax (Townsend plan) (Congressional Record, vol. 81, Appendix, p. 1029): Petitioning Members of Congress from the State of Washington to make a thorough and unbiased investigation of the plan hereinbefore mentioned and give fair and just consideration to the enactment by Congress of give fair and just consideration to the enactment by congress of a law providing for a national old-age-retirement system and create a fund for the maintenance thereof through a 2-percent Federal Government transaction tax levy, the proceeds of which shall be distributed equitably to all citizens over 60 years of age with the provision that it shall be expended within 30 days. (Not found in 1937 session laws.)

Wyoming

Senate Joint Memorial No. 1 (Appendix of the Congressional Record, p. 425): Memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to consider and act upon proposed Federal legislation related to the Townsend plan.

Montana

Montana

(Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 13, 1939, p. 1340):
Joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana favoring the adoption of the so-called Townsend recovery plan and for benefits to be paid to all persons over 60 years of age.

Senate Joint Memorial No. 2 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 20, 1939, p. 1572): Memorial to the Congress of the United States for the passage of an act incorporating the principles of the Townsend national recovery plan substantially as set forth in a bill entitled "H. R. 4199," introduced into the House of Representatives in the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress of the United States on February 2, 1937. States on February 2, 1937.

South Dakota

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 7 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 23, 1939, p. 1802): Memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to discuss and give full consideration to General Welfare Act (H. R. 2).

Wyoming

House Joint Memorial No. 2 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 13, 1939, p. 1340; February 16, 1939, p. 1452): Memorializing the Congress of the United States to immediately consider the General Welfare Act with a view of increasing the amount of old-age benefits. Senate Joint Memorial No. 1 (Congressional Record, vol. 84, February 16, 1939, p. 1452): Memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to consider and act upon proposed Federal legislation related to the Townsend plan.

Since receiving this report, March 13, 1939, I am advised other States have memorialized Congress with reference to the Townsend plan, namely:

Michigan

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 11, 1938: On February 16, 1938, the Michigan Legislature passed a memorial asking the Congress to promptly and diligently and fairly consider and act upon at the current session by its legislative branch as such and not merely in committee the proposed Townsend plan.

Idaho

Senate Joint Memorial No. 10, 1939 (Appendix of the Congressional Recorp, pp. 964-965): On February 28, 1939, the Idaho Legislature adopted a memorial to Congress respectfully urging the Congress to bring H. R. 2 out onto the floor for open discussion to the end that the merits of the bill (Townsend) may be considered in open debate.

The Townsend group, through the Townsend National Legion, is pledged to maintain, uphold, and defend sound American doctrines, as disclosed by its objectives, which are:

- (1) Pledged to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States.
- (2) Pledged to stand against the surrender of any of our traditional American liberties.
- (3) Pledged to oppose fascism, communism, or any other form of dictatorship which may menace the traditional form of American government.
- (4) Pledged to strive for a higher standard of living for the underprivileged classes.
- (5) Pledged to stand as a safeguard of the American tradition against racial, political, or religious intolerance.
- (6) Pledged to carry forth the work of educating the business and professional people as to the principles of the Townsend plan.
- (7) Pledged to put forth every effort to enlist all newspapers and periodicals in support of the Townsend plan.
- (8) Pledged to foster and promote better citizenship by educating the voters to safeguard their own interests.

In view of the failure of the present old-age security law to meet this social problem and the injustice of exacting these huge tax collections from labor and industry ostensibly for old-age security, but in reality for governmental expenses, and the evil effect on industry and the welfare of industrial workers the tax payments are having, and the wide demand throughout our country for the enactment of a law that will afford relief to all of our senior citizens over 60 years of age on a pay-as-you-go basis, such as provided by H. R. 2, this Congress should, in response to these memorials from our people, take up for early consideration H. R. 2, embodying the Townsend proposal.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein certain statements that were presented to the Ways and Means Committee with reference to this program, also a tabulation of the States which have memorialized the Congress with reference to the Townsend program.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a speech made by the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks and to include therein a speech made by Mr. Joseph M. Schenck, of Los Angeles, Calif., during the course of the American Legion convention last September.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

THE TRADE AGREEMENT WITH BRAZIL

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I always have believed, and always have lived up to the belief, that there should be no politics in our foreign affairs. On March 9 there was consummated a trade arrangement between Brazil and the United States signed by the Honorable Cordell Hull, our Secretary of State, and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Brazil, Mr. Aranha. I believe this trade arrangement will bring business to this country and business to Brazil. It will be extremely helpful in furthering friendly relations between Brazil and the United States. These two nations have always been friends.

I should like to pay my tribute to the people who arranged these trade agreements. While it was under Secretary of State Cordell Hull's administration I realize that much of the work was done by the Under Secretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles. Mr. Welles is a brilliant career man who always has had a very close bond with and a great interest in Latin America. He has made those relationships, and friendships, and trade arrangements with Latin America almost his life's work. Great credit is due to Mr. Caffrey, our Ambassador to Brazil. He is one of the most successful of our career men. Great credit is also due Mr. Aranha, the most able Minister of Foreign Affairs from Brazil.

When he was the Brazilian Ambassador to this country, he started friendly relations which made the signing of the trade arrangement much easier.

Some of the outstanding achievements of these arrangements will be:

First. The Brazilian Government will free its exchange market for commercial transactions and will facilitate transfer of equitable returns upon investments made in Brazil by United States citizens.

Second. The Export-Import Bank will extend acceptance credits of up to $19,200,000 to meet amounts due to American exporters for imports from the United States.

Third. The Export-Import Bank has arranged an extension of longer term credits to facilitate Brazilian purchases of American products, to improve Brazil's transportation facilities, and to assist in the development of Brazilian natural resources and national economy.

Fourth. The President has stated that he will recommend to Congress authorization to place at the Brazilian Government's disposal a gold reserve of up to $50,000,000 to assist in the organization and operation of a central reserve bank of Brazil, the gold to be repaid from Brazil's future production of gold.

Fifth. The Department of Agriculture will extend technical cooperation in the development of products, such as tropical products, whose production is complementary to United States production.

Sixth. The Brazilian Government has stated that it intends to resume on July 1 interest payments and amortization on its dollar debt in accordance with an arrangement being discussed with the Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council and which will be made known following the return of the Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs to Brazil.

Seventh. The Brazilian Government has stated that it intends to observe a general policy which will inspire the confidence of the United States investors, giving them no more restrictions than those to which Brazilian investors may be subjected.

The outstanding achievement of these arrangements will be the freeing of Brazil's exchange market, which may be considered to be an important step toward the removal of barriers to international trade and financial relations, a step furthering the commercial policy which has been carried out by the United States Government. Benefits which it may be expected will accrue to Americans include advantages to American exporters consisting of, first, the immediate transfer of blocked commercial accounts; and, second, the maintenance in the future of a free exchange market which will relieve them of the risks of blocked transfer of payments and of fluctuations in the exchange rate during such periods of lag; third, benefits to American exporters, manufacturers, and labor resulting from the extension of facilities for the financing on a longer term basis of American products which may be purchased by Brazil in order to carry out the development of the Brazilian economy; fourth, the development of assured sources of certain agricultural raw materials through technical cooperation in regard to complementary products: and, fifth, benefits to American investors in Brazil through the resumption of public-debt service by the Brazilian Government, and as a result of the Brazilian Government's policy of encouraging American investors by giving them no more restrictions than those to which Brazilian investors may be subjected, and by facilitating the transfer of equitable returns upon American investments in Brazil.

The benefits received by Brazil comprise, first, United States cooperation in the carrying out of a broad program in the development of the Brazilian economy and include the general advantages of a return of its commercial transactions to a free basis; second, acceptance credits to permit the liquidation of amounts due American exporters over a 2-year period; third, longer term credits which will facilitate the purchase by Brazil of American products, the importation of which will assist in improving Brazil's transportation facilities and the development of other domestic undertakings designed to increase the productive capacity of the Brazilian nation and its trade with the United States; fourth, technical assistance in the development of complementary noncompetitive agricultural products for which a substantial market is believed to exist in the United States provided an assured supply could be developed; fifth, and assistance in the organization and operation of a central reserve bank which will have the functions of regulating the internal and external value of the milreis and of controlling credit and the money market in

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Having given credit where credit is due, I will give criticism where criticism is due in bringing to the attention of the House again the fact that during a time when the nations of the world are horrified at what is going on across the seas and at the steps taken by Hitler, which have shocked the United States, our Foreign Affairs Committee is given no information by experts from the Department of State or from the Foreign Service of that situation. What the Members know of the foreign situation is learned from press releases or from friends who happen to be wise in such matters. I personally have asked that our representatives in foreign countries be called before the committee. The committee so voted, but no representatives have appeared. This is also true of the representatives of the Department of State.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, that the administration is extremely lax in not bringing before the great Foreign Affairs Committee of the House every bit of information that we may possibly be given to prevent our getting into, or assisting in, any foreign entanglements. It is a short-sighted policy that keeps important foreign news from us. I earnestly hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Members will join me in asking that these representatives appear before our committee that we may receive valuable information and suggestions from them. I need not remind the Members of the House that we are the nearest and the most direct representatives of the people of the United States and that our constituents desire us to be fully informed upon vital questions, and surely none is more vital than that of peace and war. The economic and physical life of the Nation may well be at stake. Our foreign policy is extremely important today, Mr. Speaker. [Applause.1

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks and to include therein certain short excerpts from some of the important documents of American history and the speeches and papers of some of her great men.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday next, following the address by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN], I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Connery]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TENEROWICZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the Record, and to include two telegrams received on the subject of W. P. A. and the aliens and W. P. A.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Tenerowicz].

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 41 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, March 22, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue on Wednesday, March 22, 1939, at 10 a.m., on social-security legislation in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Wednesday, March 22, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation, H. R. 2531.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, March 22, 1939, on the following bills: H. R. 5030, H. R. 4106, H. R. 3279, H. R. 3215, H. R. 1650, and H. R. 214. The meeting will be public.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Indian Affairs on Wednesday next, March 22, 1939, at 10:30 a.m., for the public consideration of H. R. 2306 and H. R. 3699.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Affairs Wednesday, March 22, 1939, at 10 a.m., in the committee rooms, the Capitol, for the consideration of the following: H. R. 3065, to amend Public Law No. 370, Seventy-fourth Congress (International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico), and S. 1045, to give effect to the International Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed at London, June 8, 1937, and for other purposes.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Beginning at 10 a. m. on Wednesday, March 22, 1939, there will be a hearing held before the subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary on House Joint Resolution 176, declaring the conservation of petroleum deposits underlying submerged lands adjacent to and along the coast of California, below low-water mark and under the territorial waters of the United States of America, essential for national defense, maintenance of the Navy, and regulation and protection of interstate and foreign commerce; reserving the same as a naval petroleum reserve, subject to any superior vested right, title, or interest; and authorizing appropriate judicial proceedings to assert, ascertain, establish, and maintain the right and interest of the United States of America in such reserve and to eject trespassers.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 10 a.m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3759, to authorize a National Mississippi River Parkway, and matters relating thereto.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Thursday, March 23, 1939:

H. R. 141, H. R. 142, H. R. 1819, miscellaneous Panama Canal bills.

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries; H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels.

Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators; H. R. 1010, intercoastal subsidy bill (Welch).

Thursday, April 6, 1939:

H. R. 1011, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission on San Francisco Bay (Welch); H. R. 2870, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Thomas F. Ford); H. R. 3040, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Geyer of California).

Tuesday, April 11, 1939:

H. R. 1783, inspection of hulls of sail vessels and barges (Bland); H. R. 1785, motorboat bill (Bland); H. R. 1795, motorboat bill (Hendricks); H. R. 1809, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (Magnuson); H. R. 2398, regarding pilots on yachts (Angell); H. R. 3837, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (Connery).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 4220, load-line bill for seagoing vessels (Bland).

Tuesday, April 18, 1939:

H. R. 2404, surgeon and hospital on vessels (Sirovich); H. R. 2660, limitation of liability (Sirovich); House Joint Resolution 153 and House Joint Resolution 194, investigate conditions pertaining to lascar seamen (Sirovich).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

561. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting a list of papers consisting of 117 items from the Department of War, which the Department has recommended should be destroyed or otherwise disposed of; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

562. A letter from the Administrator of the United States Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, transmitting report of the activities of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration from January 1, 1937, to June 30, 1938; to the Committee on Agriculture.

563. A letter from the Acting Secretary of State, transmitting draft of a proposed bill to exempt from internal-revenue taxes, on the basis of reciprocity, articles imported by consular officers and employees of foreign states for their personal or official use; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. McLAUGHLIN: Committee on the Judiciary. House Joint Resolution 133. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1939, General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; without amendment (Rept. No. 258). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. POAGE: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 4860. A bill to amend existing law so as to provide for the exclusion and deportation of aliens who advocate the making of fundamental changes in the American form of government; with amendment (Rept. No. 259). Referred to the House Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3782) for the relief of Lt. William J. Wholean; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 5062) for the relief of R. M. Derby; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 4669) granting a pension to Cora B. Henderson; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CASE of South Dakota:

H. R. 5176. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes, in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VAN ZANDT:

H. R. 5177. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes, in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN:

H. R. 5178. A bill to declare that a citizen of the United States who votes in a political election in a foreign state or who participates in certain voting abroad to determine sovereignty of foreign territory shall lose United States citizenship and nationality; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. IGLESIAS:

H. R. 5179. A bill to extend the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife restoration projects, and for other purposes," approved September 2, 1937; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. JOHN L. McMILLAN:

H. R. 5180. A bill to provide Spanish War veterans wartime pension rates for service-connected disability or death of certain veterans of the Spanish-American War recognized by veterans' regulations as "veterans of any war," and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WINTER:

H. R. 5181. A bill to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 and to repeal chapter 474 of 48 Statutes at Large, and all acts supplemental and amendatory thereof, being title 19 of United States Code, sections 1351, 1352, 1353, and 1354, and to terminate certain trade agreements; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McLAUGHLIN:

H. R. 5182. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States" approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto; to create a railroad reorganization court; and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STARNES of Alabama:

H. R. 5183 (by request). A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes, in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VOORHIS of California:

H. R. 5184. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes, in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana:

H. R. 5185. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of on behalf of the United States at public sale a certain plot of land containing about 2 acres, more or less, situated in Natchitoches Parish, La., belonging to the Bureau of Fisheries; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. CLASON:

H.R. 5186. A bill to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of the Connecticut River in the State of Massachusetts, between the Hatfield town line above Coolidge Bridge and the Narrows at Mount Tom, for flood control, for run-off and water-flow retardation, and for soil-erosion prevention; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. CLAYPOOL:

H. R. 5187. A bill to increase the maximum monthly payment by States to individuals for old-age assistance to $60, and to change the age requirement from 65 to 60 years; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN:

H.R. 5188. A bill to provide for the loss of United States citizenship in certain cases; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DINGELL:

H.R. 5189. A bill to provide for the appointment of one additional circuit judge for the sixth judicial circuit; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DIRKSEN:

H. R. 5190. A bill to authorize a preliminary examination of the Illinois River and its tributary (Crow Creek) in the State of Illinois for flood control, for run-off and water-flow retardation, and for soil-erosion prevention; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. FADDIS:

H.R. 5191. A bill to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical materials essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for armed forces and the civilian population in time of national emergency, and to encourage the development of these resources within the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GEYER of California:

H. R. 5192. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to provide for the inclusion of domestic servants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEMKE:

H. R. 5193. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 5194. A bill relating to the making of certain payments in connection with the 1937 soil-conservation program; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MAGNUSON:

H. R. 5195. A bill to amend the United States mining laws in relation to surface rights in mining locations; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. McLEOD:

H. R. 5196. A bill to expedite and foster the naturalization of aliens; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SPARKMAN:

H. R. 5197. A bill authorizing the establishment and operation of a military aircraft engineering center to determine production costs of military aircraft, and for other purposes of national defense; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BUCK: H. J. Res. 221. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite other nations to participate in the Sacramento Golden Empire Centennial commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Sacramento by Capt. John A.

Sutter; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. THILL:

H. J. Res. 222. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BLACKNEY:

H. R. 5198. A bill granting a pension to Ida F. Davidson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANNON of Missouri:

H. R. 5199. A bill for the relief of Orlando William Hutchinson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CULKIN:

H.R. 5200. A bill for the relief of Rena E. Bolton; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DELANEY:

H. R. 5201. A bill for the relief of Frank De Delectis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DINGELL:

H. R. 5202. A bill for the relief of Ajun Khan; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. EDMISTON:

H. R. 5203. A bill granting an increase of pension to Robert Blake; to the Committee on Pensions.

H. R. 5204. A bill granting a pension to William McCans; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ELSTON:

H. R. 5205. A bill granting an increase of pension to Ida Westcott McCue; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

H. R. 5206. A bill granting a pension to Jess Spurlock; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HEALEY:

H. R. 5207. A bill for the relief of Charles Harrington; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana:

H.R. 5208. A bill granting a pension to John Hannon; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia:

H. R. 5209. A bill to authorize and direct the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to reappoint Clarence D. Cunningham as a member of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MAGNUSON:

H.R. 5210. A bill to adjust the civil-service record of one Hulet Wells; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky:

H. R. 5211. A bill for the relief of D. L. Mason; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5212. A bill for the relief of Mat Hensley; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5213. A bill for the relief of Lillie Price; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5214. A bill for the relief of Clyde Thorpe; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5215. A bill for the relief of Arnold Blanton; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RODGERS of Pennsylvania:

H. R. 5216. A bill granting a pension to William R. Jarrett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SWEENEY:

H. R. 5217. A bill for the relief of George Demovich; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. TENEROWICZ:

H. R. 5218. A bill for the relief of Giacoma Cicila; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1898. By Mr. BALL: Petition of the First Baptist Church of Putnam, Conn., protesting against the inclusion of religious bodies under the provisions of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1899. By Mr. BULWINKLE: Petition of the General Assembly of North Carolina; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

1900. By Mr. CASE of South Dakota: Petition of 40 residents of Ipswich, S. Dak., urging support of fair-trade legislation, chain-store tax legislation, and all legislation favorable to the independent retail merchants; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1901. By Mr. COFFEE of Washington: Resolution of the American White Cross Association on Drug Addiction, of Seattle, Wash., the Reverend Dr. M. A. Matthews, president, pointing out that a survey of the problem of narcotic-drug addiction is indispensable to a proper study of this vital subject; asserting its sincere interest in the adoption of a measure for the humanitarian purpose of eradicating, controlling, and combating the illegal sale of narcotic drugs and its attendant evils; therefore urging the adoption by the Congress of House bill 103, introduced by Mr. Coffee of Washington, providing for a national survey of the narcotic-drug evil; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1902. Also, resolution of Committees on Mines and Mining of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, pointing out that the Thomas bill (S. 572), as amended, provides for the acquisition of stocks of strategic and critical mining materials essential for national defense and encouraging the further development of mines and deposits of such materials in the United States; asserting that the State of Washington has extensive deposits of highquality manganese, chromite, tungsten, molybdenum, nickel, mercury, vanadium, and sulfur; and therefore urging that the Congress enact Senate bill 572, as amended, or similar legislation; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

1903. By Mr. ELSTON: Petition of William Powell, Local 1858, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Cincinnati, Ohio, signed by 75 members, urging opposition to the proposed amendments, contained in Senate bill 1000, to the National Labor Relations Act; and petition of Local No. 2022, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Cincinnati, Ohio, expressing opinion of 62 organized workers that any amendments to Wagner Labor Act would seriously undermine the gains made by labor under this law; and also, letter signed by J. G. Rentschler, recording secretary, Lodge No. 1861, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, expressing opposition of local to Senate bill 1000 and all other amendments to Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1904. By Mr. HANCOCK: Petition of Prof. Philip H. Taylor and other residents of Syracuse, N. Y., favoring amendment of the Neutrality Act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1905. By Mr. HARTER of New York: Petition of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, of Buffalo, N. Y.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1906. By Mr. JOHNS: Petition of Works Progress Administration workers of the city of Marinette, Wis., requesting immediate action and passage of an appropriation sufficient to maintain the Works Progress Administration at its full strength the remainder of the fiscal year; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1907. Also, joint resolution adopted by the Wisconsin Legislature, memorializing the President and Congress of the United States to resume negotiations for a Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway treaty; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1908. Also, petition of sundry residents of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., requesting support of House Joint Resolution 4, introduced by Mr. Luplow, of Indiana; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1909. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Resolution of certain citizens of Portland, Oreg., concerning the shipment of scrap iron consigned to Japan, urging that such action as may be necessary be taken to prohibit such shipments; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1910. Also, petition of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, Washington, D. C., opposing the adoption of an amendment to the Interior Department appropriation bill limiting dwelling cost to $3,500 in the United States Housing Authority Act; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1911. Also, petition of the New York Chapter, American Institute of Architects, opposing the adoption of an amendment to the Interior Department appropriation bill limiting dwelling cost to $3,500 in the United States Housing Authority Act; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1912. Also, petition of the New York City Housing Authority, opposing adoption of any amendment to the Interior Department appropriation bill, changing cost limitation in the United States Housing Authority Act; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1913. Also, petition of the De Pinna Co., New York City, opposing the Schwartz wool products labeling bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1914. Also, memorial of the American Photo-Engravers Association, Chicago, Ill., concerning modification of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1915. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, favoring the President's recommendation for $150,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1916. Also, petition of the United Optical Workers Union, Long Island Local No. 208, New York City, favoring the President's recommendation for $150,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1917. Also, petition of the Citizens Housing Council of New York, concerning House bill 2888; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

1918. By Mr. LEAVY: Petition of the Committees on Mines and Mining of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, and signed by the respective members thereof, urging that in consideration of Senate bill 572, or other measures pertaining to the acquisition of stocks of strategic minerals, Congress give attention and preference to domestic resources, there being in the State of Washington extensive and high-quality deposits of the critical minerals desired, namely, manganese, chromite, tungsten, molybdenum, nickel, mercury, vanadium, and sulfur; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1919. By Mr. MACIEJEWSKI: Petition of the Bohemian Lawyers' Association, of Chicago, Ill., relating to the Czechoslovakian situation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1920. By Mr. MOTT: Senate Joint Memorial No. 2 of the Fortieth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning the President of the United States, the Members of Congress from the State of Oregon, and the whole Congress of the United States to consider conservation of our basic natural resources, together with the plight of the forest-products industries in the States of Oregon and Washington; also petitioning the Congress of the United States to extend the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1932 which placed an excise tax on lumber until July 1, 1939, to a future date, and urging further that, for the benefit of employer and employee alike, products extracted or produced in foreign countries shall be marked with the country of their origin; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1921. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Citizens' Housing Council of New York, Inc., Harold S. Buttenheim, president, New York City, urging the passage of House bill 2888, amending the United States Housing Act by providing increased loans and contributions to local housing authorities; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

1922. Also, petition of Eppinger & Russell Co., wood preservers, New York City, urging increased appropriation for river and harbor work; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1923. Also, petition of the American Committee for Nonparticipation in Japanese Aggression, New York City, concerning neutrality; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1924. Also, petition of the United Optical Workers Union, Long Island Local No. 208, New York City, urging support of the additional $150,000,000 appropriation for the Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations. 1925. Also, petition of the Kent Manufacturing Co., Inc.,

1925. Also, petition of the Kent Manufacturing Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing any restriction on Louisiana sugar production; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1926. Also, petition of Henry Engelhardt & Co., Inc., New York City, opposing House bill 234, abolishing the United States Board of Tax Appeals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1927. Also, petition of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists, and Technicians of New York City, favoring the additional $150,000,000 appropriations for the Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1928. By Mr. RISK: Memorial of the Newport (R. I.) Petroleum Industries Committee, protesting against the imposition of Federal taxes on gasoline and lubricating oils and other motorists' taxes; to the Committee on Ways and Means 1929. Also, memorial of the City Council of the City of Providence, R. I., requesting that a cruiser now under construction by the Navy Department be named in honor of that city; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

1930. Also, memorial of the Pawtucket-Central Falls Petroleum Industries Committee (Rhode Island), protesting against the imposition of Federal taxes on gasoline and lubricating oils and other motorists' taxes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1931. By Mr. SCHAEFER of Illinois: Petition of the Czech-American National Alliance, Chicago, Ill., urging support to President Roosevelt, the State Department, and Senator KEY PITTMAN in their joint efforts to stem the forces of international aggression; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1932. Also, petition of Lodge No. 1989, National Lead Co., Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron, and Tin Workers of North America, Lewis E. Goodwin, secretary, of Granite City, Ill., opposing amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1933. Also, petition of Lodge No. 1095, Sterling Steel Co., Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron, and Tin Workers of North America, John Ashbury, secretary, of East St. Louis, Ill., opposing amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1934. Also, petition of Lodge No. 1021, National Enameling & Stamping Co., Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron, and Tin Workers of North America, Max Merz, secretary, of Granite City, Ill., opposing amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act: to the Committee on Labor.

1935. Also, petition of Lodge No. 1063, American Steel Foundries, Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron, and Tin Workers of North America, Ernie Robertson, secretary, of Granite City, Ill., opposing amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1936. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Eva Mae Brown, president, the business and professional woman's group of the Woman's Association of the First Baptist Church of Fairmont, W. Va., urging that church employees be excluded from the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways 1937. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Municipal Council of De Coamo, P. R., urging consideration of their resolution with reference to social security for Puerto Rico; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1938. Also, petition of the Rodeo Ladies Auxiliary, Local 326-A, of Rodeo, Calif., urging consideration of their resolution with reference to amendments to the Wagner National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1939. Also, petition of the Citizens' League of Nurses of Philadelphia, Pa., urging consideration of their resolution with reference to the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22, 1939

(Legislative day of Thursday, March 16, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, ruler of the nations, who keepest covenant and showest mercy unto Thy servants that walk before Thee with all their hearts: Move Thou upon the wills of men and constrain the peoples of the earth in the paths of unity and peace, for in Thee is our only hope in these anguished days, when there is distress of nations with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear and for expectation of the things which are coming on the earth.

Create within us a passion for the reign of righteousness, that, putting on the whole armor of God, we may fearlessly contend against social injustice, the aggression of the strong on the weak, and whatsoever else worketh enmity between man and man, class and class, nation and nation, and also may declare to the world that only by moral and spiritual rearmament on the part of mankind will Thy kingdom come and Thy will be done, as in heaven so on earth.

O God of love, O King of peace, Make wars throughout the world to cease; The wrath of sinful man restrain, Give peace, O God, give peace again.

Amen.

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, March 21, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	King	Reynolds
Andrews	Davis	La Follette	Russell
Ashurst	Donahey	Lee	Schwartz
Austin	Downey	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Ellender	Lodge	Sheppard
Bankhead	Frazier	Logan	Shipstead
Barbour	George	Lucas	Smathers
Barkley	Gerry	Lundeen	Smith
Bilbo	Gibson	McCarran	Stewart
Bone	Gillette	McKellar	Taft
Borah	Glass	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Bridges	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Guffey	Mead	Tobey
Bulow	Gurney	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Byrd	Hatch	Neely	Tydings
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Caraway	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Chavez	Holman	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Idaho	Hughes	Pittman	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Calif.	Radcliffe	White
Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	Wiley

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt] is detained because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] is detained in a meeting concerning flood-control matters.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] is unavoidably detained.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 876. An act to authorize the purchase of certain lands for the Apache Tribe of the Mescalero Reservation, N. Mex.; S. 877. An act to add certain public-domain land in Montana to the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation;

S. 1098. An act to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance;

S. 1104. An act to provide for conveying to the United States the land, buildings, and improvements comprising the Choctaw and Chickasaw Sanatorium and General Hospital; and

S. 1477. An act to repeal section 9 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L. 450), as amended.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

House Joint Memorial 37

To the Honorable the Congress of the United States and to the Honorable Anthony J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in fcurteenth regular session assembled, respectfully submits that:

Whereas the city of Nome, Alaska, is the most important seaport of northwestern United States and the center of a large mining area; and

Whereas storms sweeping from the Arctic Ocean or Bering Sea frequently menace the safety of the port and annually do heavy damage to property; and
Whereas the Honorable Anthony J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Alaska, has introduced a measure (H. R. 2412) in the Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, seeking the construction of a sheet-steel pile revetment for the protection of the port: tion of the port:

Now, therefore, your memorialist endorses the said H. R. 2412 and respectfully urges its immediate enactment into law.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the tollowing joint memorial of the Legislature of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

House Joint Memorial 5

Whereas it now appears that the United States Veterans' Administration and the Federal Hospital Board are considering the establishment of a domiciliary center to serve the States of Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Wyoming, and Utah; and Whereas the Veterans' Administration facility at Boise, Idaho, now has in operation a domiciliary center of limited capacity which serves this territory and with additional construction could adequately supply the needs of veterans from all of these States; and Whereas there is sufficient property in connection with the present facility and owned by it upon which to place such additional construction: and

Construction; and
Whereas climatic conditions, accessibility by rail and highway, and the central location of Boise, Idaho, would insure veterans of this area the best possible service: Now, therefore, we, your memorialists.

memorialists,

The House of Representatives of the Twenty-fifth Idaho Legislature (the senate concurring), hereby memorialize your honorable body the Congress of the United States and you are respectfully requested to appropriate necessary funds for the establishment of an additional domiciliary unit of 300 beds at the veterans' facility located in Boise, Idaho, for the purpose of serving the Pacific Northwest States: Be it

Resolved, That the secretary of state transmit copies of this memorial to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the Idaho congressional delegation, the Director of the United States Veterans' Administration, and to the chairman of the Federal Hospital Board.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of New Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and

House Joint Memorial 7

House Joint Memorial 7

Joint memorial memorializing and requesting the Congress of the United States to enact a law granting 4,000,000 acres from the public lands of the United States of America, situated in the State of New Mexico, in trust to the State of New Mexico for the benefit of the Carrie Tingley Crippled Children's Hospital Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of New Mexico: Whereas there is now established in the State of New Mexico in the city of Hot Springs, the Carrie Tingley Crippled Children's Hospital, the purpose of which is to provide care and treatment for crippled children, and particularly for children who have been afficited with infantile paralysis, and the cause and purpose of said hospital being per se, a worthy and needful one; and Whereas there still remain within the boundaries of the State of New Mexico vast reserves of the public lands of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

New Mexico vast reserves of the public lands of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives and the Senate of the State of New Mexico:

SECTION 1. That the Seventy-sixth Congress of the United States, now in regular session, assembled in Washington, D. C., be, and the same hereby, is memorialized and requested to enact a law during the present session of Congress, as soon as may be done, granting 4,000,000 acres of public lands of the United States, situated in New Mexico, notwithstanding said lands are or may be embraced within any Executive order of withdrawal or grazing district authorized under the act of June 28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269), to the State of New Mexico in trust for the use and benefit of the Carrie Tingley Crippled Children's Hospital.

SEC. 2. That the lands requested to be granted shall be under SEC. 2. That the lands requested to be granted shall be under the same restrictions and limitations as that of the Enabling Act, act of June 20, 1910, provided the selections of same shall in no way be hindered by the reservations and established grazing dis-tricts authorized under provisions of said act of Congress of June 28, 1934, 448 Star 1939)

28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269).

SEC. 3. That engrossed copies of this resolution be placed upon the permanent records in the office of the secretary of state of New Mexico.

SEC. 4. Be it further resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Senators and Representative of New Mexico in Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, favoring the enactment of legislation to rehabilitate the Great Lakes cut-over area, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. WILEY.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, favoring the enactment of legislation similar to the so-called Townsend plan, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

(See resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. VANDENBERG.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of the California Association of Port Authorities, protesting against the enactment of Senate Joint Resolution 24. relative to the establishment of title of the United States to certain submerged lands containing petroleum deposits, Senate Joint Resolution 83, relative to the establishment of a naval petroleum reserve in the submerged lands along and adjacent to the coast of the State of California, and legislation of a similar character, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of Lula Welton, president of the Ladies Charter Club Auxiliary, the National Colored Democratic Association Organization, of St. Joseph, Mo., praying that the office of recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia retain the status of an independent bureau and that it be kept under Presidential appointment, which was referred to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

Mr. CAPPER presented a resolution adopted by a mass meeting of citizens of Riley and Geary Counties, Kans., favoring an additional appropriation of $150,000,000 for continuation of the Works Progress Administration program, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Local G 2041, Kansas Workers' Alliance of America, of Mulberry, Kans., favoring an additional appropriation of $150,000,000 for continuation of the Works Progress Administration program, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Belpre. Kans., remonstrating against inclusion of religious bodies under the operation of the social-security system, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Atchison, Kans., praying that the United States adhere to a general policy of neutrality, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WILEY presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Joint resolution memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to rehabilitate the Great Lakes cut-over area

Whereas the problems of unemployment and relief in Wisconsin are especially acute in the sparsely settled areas of the west central and northern portions of the State, where the forests were formerly

Whereas the economic situation of this region has steadily become less favorable for 40 years since the lumber industry passed its peak during the late 1890's, resulting from the cutting of the forests: and its peak during the late 1890's, resulting from the cutting of the forests; and

Whereas the culmination of the difficulties of this cut-over region has come with the depression years since 1929, and the relief measures undertaken during this period, though timely and effective for relief, have not made progress toward a substantial and permanent rehabilitation of the region, which will make it self-supporting to the same degree as other portions of the State; and

Whereas such rehabilitation is necessary for the Nation as a whole, as well as for the State and for the region itself; and

Whereas the President of the United States, through the National Resources Committee, has directed that an "economic survey for the Great Lakes cut-over area" be made, such area consisting of large areas in the northern portions of the States of Michigan, Minnesota, as well as Wisconsin; and

Whereas, through such direction, the northern Great Lakes regional committee of 16 has been set up, consisting of 4 members from each State and 4 Federal representatives, and such committee has been working diligently for 8 months in making plans for the rehabilitation of the region, in collaboration with more than a hundred associates selected for their special knowledge of conditions in the region, such associates being in part scientists connected with the universities of the 3 States, in part Federal, State, and local officials, and in part businessmen from the 3 States; and Whereas the report of the northern Lakes States regional committee, outlining a plan for such rehabilitation, which is nearing completion and about to be published and issued by the National Resources Committee, recommends a program for rehabilitation based on the encouragement of agriculture in the region through completion and about to be published and issued by the National Resources Committee, recommends a program for rehabilitation based on the encouragement of agriculture in the region through aids and measures which will tend to stimulate individual self-help and initiative, the restoration of the original great forest resource, both for its own sake and as a means of providing useful employment within the region during the period of rehabilitation, the more extensive development of the recreational possibilities, and the utilization of all industrial opportunities; and Whereas it appears that such a program embodies the considered opinion of those who have been most intimately concerned with the problems of the region with many years of experience, is capable of making progress toward the complete rehabilitation which is necessary, and will be effective if persevered in; and

Whereas the report recommending such a program is the direct result of the expressed direction of the President of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That this Legislature of Wisconsin memorializes the President and the Congress of the United States to take cognizance of the report of the northern Lakes States regional committee, and to enact such legislation supported by such adequate financial provision as may be necessary to put into effect a program which will rehabilitate the Great Lakes cut-over area; be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, to both Houses of Congress, to each Member in Congress from the States of Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, to the Governors of such States, and to each house of the Legislatures of Michigan and Minnesota.

Mr. REVNOLDS presented the following concurrent resolutions.

Mr. REYNOLDS presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of North Carolina, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

Senate Resolution 25

An act memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact legislation amending the Merchant Marine Act of 1936

Whereas the United States has adopted as a policy the construction and maintenance of an adequate and well-balanced merchant marine for the development of its foreign and domestic merchant marine for the development of its foreign and domestic trade and for national defense; and

Whereas the United States Maritime Commission, pursuant to authority conferred by the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, has adopted a long-range building program for replacements and additions to the American merchant marine; and
Whereas the program adopted by the United States Maritime Commission calls for the building of 50 vessels annually for 10

Commission calls for the building of 50 vessels annually for 10 years; and

Whereas it is further the policy of the United States Government to have such ships built where possible in private shipyards, otherwise the Commission is authorized to construct such vessels in the navy yards at various points in the United States; and

Whereas under title 5, section 502 (f) of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 if at any time the Commission finds that the existing shipyards, including the navy yards, do not provide adequate facilities to meet necessary requirements for purposes of national defense and national emergencies, with special regard to providing facilities for the national defense at strategic points, it may, with the approval of the President, allocate such construction in such shipyards in such manner as it may determine to be fair, just, and reasonable to all sections of the country; and

Whereas it has been necessary, due to competition, for the present shipyards to be established near the sources of supply of steel and other materials necessary for shipbuilding; and

Whereas such concentration of the present shipyards has resulted in many strategic points from the standpoint of national defense being unable to establish yards for the building of vessels; and

Whereas the United States Maritime Commission, pursuant to authority vested in it by the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, is authorized to take into consideration cost differentials in awarding contracts for the construction of vessels; and authorized to take into consideration cost differentials in awarding contracts for the construction of vessels; and

Whereas this particular provision of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 would enable the construction of vessels at important strategic points in the United States, if the facilities were available for such construction, which would result in a more equitable distribution in the allocation of construction work along the Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific coasts; and

Whereas it would seem most necessary to decentralize the shipbuilding industry which is so important to our national defense;
and

and
Whereas the coast of North Carolina is considered from a military standpoint very important strategically; and
Whereas it has been proved that large seagoing vessels can be built in the harbor of Wilmington, N. C., which is a natural land-locked harbor, many of such vessels which were built during 1917 and 1918 now being in service; and
Whereas the facilities which were erected during 1917 and 1918 were forced to be dismantled due to competition; and
Whereas Southport and Morehead City are located on deep-water harbors and possess an ideal climate for building and assembly:
Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of North Carolina (the house of representatives concurring):

Resolved by the Senate of the State of North Carolina (the house of representatives concurring):
SECTION 1. That this group of North Carolina citizens hereby petition the United States Congress to enact legislation amending title 5, section 502 (f) of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, authorizing the United States Maritime Commission, from a standpoint of national defense, and in order to bring about a more equitable distribution of labor in carrying out its building program, to furnish facilities for shipbuilding at such strategic points as in its opinion are necessary to further the policy adopted under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936.

SEC. 2. That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the North Carolina congressional delegation and to His Excellency the President of the United States, Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and to the Chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, Hon. Emory

S. Land.
SEC. 3. That this resolution shall be in full force and effect from and after its ratification.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I present a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, which I ask may be referred to the Committee on Finance and printed in the RECORD, as is

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be received and referred as requested by the Senator from Michigan and, under the rule, printed in the RECORD.

To the Committee on Finance:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 11

Concurrent resolution respectfully memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to consider proposed legislation relative to the Townsend plan

Whereas there is now pending in the current session of the Congress of the United States of America legislation embodying essential principles of the so-called Townsend plan, in which thousands of Michigan citizens are keenly interested: Now, therefore,

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the members of the Michigan Legislature respectfully memorialize the Congress of the United States of America to promptly, diligently, and fairly consider in the current session, by its legislative branches as such, the proposed legislation aforesaid; and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be spread on the journals of the senate and house, and copies transmitted to the President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives in Congress, and the Michigan Members in the Senate and House of Congress.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1554) to provide that the district judge for the western district of Washington, authorized to be appointed under the act of May 31, 1938, shall be a district judge for the eastern and western districts of Washington, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 193) thereon.

Mr. MINTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 39. A bill for the relief of the heirs of T. J. Kinser (Rept. No. 194); and

S. 1016. A bill to authorize reimbursement of appropriations on account of expenditures in connection with disposition of old material, condemned stores, etc. (Rept. No. 195).

Mr. REYNOLDS, from the Committee on Military Affairs. to which was referred the bill (S. 841) to authorize the Secretary of War to prescribe the number of grades and ratings of enlisted men of the Army, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 196) thereon.

Mr. SCHWARTZ, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1019) to authorize the Secretary of War to pay certain expenses incident to the training, attendance, and participation of the equestrian and modern pentathlon teams in the Twelfth Olympic Games, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 197) thereon.

He also (for himself, Mr. Lundeen, and Mr. Gurney), from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1462) to amend an act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, so as to confer on the commanding general, General Headquarters Air Force, the same retirement privileges now enjoyed by chiefs of branches, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 198) thereon.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 473) for the relief of George Francis Burke, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 207) thereon.

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1258) for the relief of the Rent-A-Car Co., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 199) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 1001) for the relief of Albert Pina Afonso, a minor, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 200) thereon.

Mr. ELLENDER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 1430. A bill for the relief of Hyman Ginsberg (Rept. No. 201);

H.R. 1836. A bill for the relief of Jack Nelson, a minor (Rept. No. 202); and

H. R. 3090. A bill for the relief of C. R. Henderson (Rept.

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 216) for the relief of A. C. Williams, administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 204) thereon.

Mr. BROWN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2079) for the relief of Charles T. Wise, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 205) thereon.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 767) for the relief of Benjamin Weisenberg, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 206) thereon.

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 105) increasing the limit of expenditures for the investigation of railroad financing and certain other matters, reported it without amendment, submitted a report (No. 208) thereon, and, under the rule, it was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. PEPPER, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was referred the bill (S. 795) to provide for the education of all types of physically handicapped children, to make an appropriation of money therefor, and to regulate its expenditure, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 209) thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on today, March 22, 1939, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 876. An act to authorize the purchase of certain lands for the Apache Tribe of the Mescalero Reservation, N. Mex.; S. 877. An act to add certain public-domain land in Montana to the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation;

S. 1098. An act to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance;

S. 1104. An act to provide for conveying to the United States the land, buildings, and improvements comprising the Choctaw and Chickasaw Sanatorium and General Hospital; and

S. 1477. An act to repeal section 9 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L. 450), as amended.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HARRISON:

S. 1899. A bill to provide for the detail of a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. DANAHER:

S. 1900. A bill to amend section 148 (f) of the Internal Revenue Code, with respect to the sale of information derived from income-tax returns; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. LOGAN:

S. 1901. A bill to extend to Sgt. Maj. Leonard E. Browning, United States Marine Corps, the benefits of the act of May 7, 1932, providing highest World War rank to retired enlisted men; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McNARY:

S. 1902. A bill for the relief of Dave W. Stearns; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. BROWN:

S. 1903. A bill to provide for the appointment of one additional circuit judge for the sixth judicial circuit; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MEAD:

S. 1904. A bill relating to age requirements for persons in the classified civil service; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. WALSH:

S. 1905. A bill for the relief of Elizabeth E. Burke; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1906. A bill for the relief of William H. Rouncevill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER:

S. 1907. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State of Montana, or the counties of Roosevelt, Richland, and McCone, singly or jointly, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Missouri River at or near Poplar, Mont.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. TYDINGS:

S. 1908. A bill to amend section 691a of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, and of any act or acts amendatory thereof, relating to foreign building and loan associations doing business in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HILL:

S. J. Res. 99. Joint resolution to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL

On motion by Mr. SHEPPARD, the bill (S. 840) to amend and clarify the provisions of the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1507), and for other purposes, was taken from the calendar and recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT-AMENDMENT

Mr. MEAD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1303) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, with respect to cotton, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

TEMPORARY DETAIL OF UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES-AMENDMENTS

Mr. PITTMAN submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3134) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the temporary detail of United States employees, possessing special qualifications, to governments of American republics and the Philippines, and for other purposes," approved May 25, 1938, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. WHEELER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to House bill 4852, the Interior Department appropriation bill, 1940, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 8, line 17 (item for printing and binding), (1) strike out "$275,970" and insert in lieu thereof "$309,130", and (2) strike out "$66,840" and insert in lieu thereof "$100,000."

On page 104, between lines 10 and 11, insert the following:
"Photographic mat service: For initiating and maintaining a service for the purpose of furnishing mats to be used for the reproduction in magazines and newspapers of photographs of scenery in the national parks, $5,000."

PAYMENT OF NON-INDIAN CLAIMS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill, S. 1476, to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933, which were, on page 2, line 7, after "them", to insert "including $1,000 to be paid to Alberto Cruz for his house"; on page 2, line 8, to strike out "$10,733.05" and to insert "$9,733.05"; and, on page 2, line 9, to strike out "$10,826.05" and insert "$9,826.05: Provided, That no part of the amounts appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. HATCH. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

WHICH WAY RECOVERY?-ADDRESS BY SENATOR O'MAHONEY

[Mr. Murray asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a radio address delivered by Senator O'Mahoney during the American Forum of the Air, Sunday evening, March 12, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SENATOR TRUMAN BEFORE JOINT SESSION OF MISSOURI LEGISLATURE

[Mr. Barkley asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an address delivered by Senator Truman before a joint session of the Missouri Legislature on March 21, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

OUR PRESENT PROSPERITY-ADDRESS BY SENATOR GURNEY

[Mr. Vandenberg asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a radio address on the subject of Our Present Prosperity, delivered by Senator Gurney on March 21, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE PRESIDENT-ADDRESS BY ATTORNEY GENERAL MURPHY

[Mr. Minton asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a radio address on the subject of The President of the United States, delivered by Hon. Frank Murphy, Attorney General of the United States, under the auspices of the Hibernian Society of Baltimore, at Baltimore, Md., March 17, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

FLOOD-CONTROL PROGRAM FOR THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY

[Mr. Overton asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an address delivered by Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley before the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association at its annual meeting in Washington, D. C., March 22, 1939, on The Flood-Control Program for the Mississippi Valley, which appears in the Appendix.]

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON VICE PRESIDENT GARNER

[Mr. Bridges asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an editorial from the Washington Times-Herald of March 22, 1939, relative to the Vice President of the United States, and an editorial on the same subject from the Philadelphia Inquirer of March 22, 1939, which appear in the Appendix.]

TOO MUCH PUBLIC DEBT-EDITORIAL FROM NEW YORK SUN

[Mr. Bridges asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an editorial from the New York Sun of March 21, 1939, entitled "Too Much Public Debt," which appears in the Appendix.]

LOOK AT THE FUTURE THROUGH THE PAST—ARTICLE BY DR. JOHN J. WICKER

[Mr. Byrd asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an article entitled "Look at the Future Through the Past," by Dr. John J. Wicker, published in the magazine This Week of the issue of January 15, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE SILVER PROGRAM

[Mr. Townsend asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an article from the New York Herald Tribune of Sunday, March 19, 1939, by Herbert M. Bratter, under the heading "Silver Leaders' Reserve Note Stand Assailed," which appears in the Appendix.]

REORGANIZATION OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. When the Senate took a recess yesterday evening, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] gave notice that he would seek recognition this morning for the purpose of withdrawing his motion to reconsider the vote by which the so-called Wheeler amendment was adopted.

The Chair feels that he should recognize the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I withdraw the motion to reconsider.

Mr. BYRNES. I make the point of order that the Senator cannot withdraw it without the consent of the Senate, and I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The Senate is familiar with paragraph 2 of rule XXI, but the Chair will read it for the information of the Senate:

2. Any motion or resolution may be withdrawn or modified by the mover at any time before a decision, amendment, or ordering of the yeas and nays, except a motion to reconsider, which shall not be withdrawn without leave.

The question before the Senate is the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] to reconsider the vote by which the amendment known as the Wheeler amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I do not intend to detain the Senate. Because I believe some Senators have been influenced in their position by the interpretation placed upon the bill as to functions, I simply wish to state to the Senate that when the proper place in the bill is reached, and the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney] is offered, I intend to ask the Senate to agree to that amendment, making it plain that functions may be abolished only when agencies are removed and consolidated.

I am willing to have a vote.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I feel impelled to make a few comments on the pending motion. I know that the Senate would rather vote, but it seems to me necessary to try for a very few moments to hold the attention of the Senate to the specific question that is before it.

In what I have to say I am assuming that we have full and complete power to make any delegation we see fit to the President. What we are now concerned with is the Wheeler amendment. We are not concerned with questions of functions. We are not directly concerned with questions of agencies. Today the President has no power to reorganize the departments of the Government. Today that power vests in the Congress of the United States. The question we have before us is, How far do we propose to delegate to the President the power which now vests in us?

Apparently it is the view of some that any hesitation in making the delegation is a monstrous thing. We are the ones who are making the grant. We are making a grant of powers which belong to us. Does the bill give the President full powers to reorganize? It does not. It specifically exempts some 20 major agencies from his reorganization powers if we pass the bill. I say that because one of the most eminent Members of this body said that in opposing any part of this measure we were expressing and indicating lack of trust in the President. I say that every grant of power which we make in the bill is to that degree an expression of trust. We are taking nothing from the President. The question is, How much shall we give him of the powers vested in us?

We show some question by limiting the delegation of the power to reorganize to agencies after exempting some 20. Again we do not permit the President to make a transfer of all the functions. That is the argument which was made yesterday by the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown], which for my present purpose I concede. The President may transfer 99.99 percent of the functions, but he must retain a fraction. Then he may not abolish an executive department. Again he may not change the name of an executive department. Those are minor matters.

The plan of the President under the bill is effective only if not disapproved by both Houses. We say to the President, "You may propose a plan," and I am not questioning the delegation of power. I am questioning our action in the matter. We are unwilling to give the President unrestricted powers as to the plan.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. HAYDEN. I should like to inquire whether the powers granted in the pending bill are greater or less than the powers which have been granted to other Presidents in other reorganization bills.

Mr. ADAMS. They are not so great.

Mr. HAYDEN. I have been in Congress under six Presidents. My recollection is-in fact, I am certain-that we have granted more extensive powers to three other Presidents, and probably to four.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator from Arizona that there is no question that in the past the Congress has granted more powers to the President. It is to be pointed out, however, that the powers granted have never been efficiently exercised by the President any more than Congress has efficiently exercised its powers to reorganize.

Mr. HAYDEN. The conclusion I draw from that statement is that we should do nothing about reorganization.

Mr. ADAMS. Not at all. The conclusion is that the Senate of the United States should exercise its own powers. I am trying, however, to hold myself narrowly to the point that we are unwilling that the plan should go into effect without submission to Congress.

One of the plans that the Senator from Arizona recalls did not require submission to the Congress. There was a direct delegation to the President. At this time, under this bill, there is a requirement that the plan be submitted to Congress, and that it shall not go into effect unless within a limited time the Houses of Congress, or one of them, refuses to approve the plan. I think that is an accurate statement, is it not?

Mr. HAYDEN. And I hope the idea has the Senator's approval.

Mr. ADAMS. I intend to make it as clear as I can.

The President has no just complaint. I am somewhat doubtful why he would be willing to accept the burden. We are putting a burden upon him. Under the bill we grant to him powers he does not now possess. The question is, as I see it, what we shall do. We gave to the President power to devalue the dollar, but we fixed the range of devaluation, but it is complained that in this delegation we should not fix limitations.

Under the Constitution the President is required to see that the laws are executed. It is for us to pass the laws and for him to execute them. Now, what do we do? Both under the bill and under the Wheeler amendment, the Congress of the United States surrenders these powers which belong to it.

It surrenders the right to accept or reject the plan according to customary legislative processes. We surrender that power, which is ours today.

Then under both the Wheeler amendment and the bill, we surrender the right to propose amendments to the plan. Under either of them we must accept or reject the plan as it is submitted by the President. That is a surrender by the Congress.

In addition, we surrender the right which we now have to fix the times for consideration, debate, and decision. We limit ourselves as to time of consideration and as to time of decision.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Do we not also abrogate the rules of the Senate by which we are governed, and by which the Senate has been governed for many years? Do we not supersede them by the introduction into the provisions of the bill of matters which deal with and make inoperative our rules, as against the procedure set up in the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. That is all a part of the surrender which I see here. I want it made clear that we are surrendering those rights which we now have under the bill but not under the Wheeler amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

LXXXIV-195

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Utah [Mr. King] raises the point that the Senate is surrendering its rulemaking functions.

Mr. KING. No.

Mr. ADAMS. Of course we do not do that.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I did not state that. I said that we are abrogating rules which now exist and by which the Senate has been governed for many years. I do not mean that if we were foolish enough to abrogate them we could not recapture them if we had enough courage to do it.

Mr. ADAMS. What we are doing is to surrender the right which we now possess, in the consideration of the plan submitted by the President, to do these various things. We are not making any permanent surrender. We are not making any general surrender.

Mr. BARKLEY. All we are doing here so far as the rules are concerned is modifying the existing rules of the Senate by a statute, if the bill is enacted.

Mr. ADAMS. As to one particular measure only. We are not going beyond that.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADAMS. We provide in the bill that the plan shall become a law if approved by either House, regardless of the unanimous disapproval of the other House. That is the provision of the bill which disturbs me. The passage of the bill means to me that Congress does not trust itself. It means to me that Congress does not believe it is worthy of trust. We are unwilling to trust ourselves to act upon a plan or a program submitted to us. If we pass the bill, we admit the truth of the statements made on the floor of the Senate that we are incompetent to legislate intelligently upon the organization of the Government. That admission we make if we pass the bill as it is without the Wheeler amendment.

During the past 6 years the Congress of the United States has passed the most intricate legislation that has ever been passed in the history of the world. That legislation has largely come to us with a recommendation from the President of the United States. He has not hesitated to submit it to us. We have acted upon it; and what have we done? It is assumed that we would try to work out a reorganization plan on the floor of the Senate. Of course, that is not the fact. The Senate has committees in which detail work is done, and well done. The President of the United States will not himself work out a plan of reorganization, but he will refer the drafting of the plan to someone who was not elected by the people of the United States or any part of them. He must call in someone else. I say to you, Mr. President, that the Senate of the United States has within its membership the most competent men in the United States to work out the details of such a bill. One of them is the Senator from South Carolina, Hon. James F. Byrnes. Another is the Senator from Virginia, Hon. HARRY F. BYRD. Nobody can equal them in capacity and ability and experience to work out the details of a plan; and yet we say that Congress, the Senate, cannot do that, and we must delegate it to someone in the executive department.

It is said that to secure efficiency in governmental organizations the Congress must surrender its constitutional power. The passage of the bill will concede the correctness of the contention, mind you, that a majority of Congress lack the courage and lack the public experience to legislate for the public welfare when opposed by the pressure of Government departments and their friends. It has been said openly that we, as Senators, could not withstand the pressure of departments. It is a reflection of grave character upon the membership of this body that we are not sufficiently interested in the public welfare to take the personal political hazard of doing our duty. I am unwilling to concede that; I do not believe it.

The Wheeler amendment, while tying our hands as to the time of discussion and decision, merely seeks to save for the Senate of the United States the right to prevent a plan going into effect which a majority of the Members of this body disapprove. That is all that is involved in this question. Is the Senate of the United States willing to say, are the individual Members willing to say, that, coming here as the representatives of sovereign States, as ambassadors from their States, they are willing to abdicate their power, are willing to leave to the House of Representatives to determine what shall be the form of this Government; and, notwithstanding each and every Member of the Senate may oppose a plan of reorganization, if the House approves it, it shall go into effect regardless of our unanimous opposition?

Yet we are sent here to represent the people and the interests of our States. I for one do not see how I can feel in my civic conscience that I am a representative of the State of Colorado if I so tie my hands that I have no voice, no vote, as to a plan of reorganization which may be detrimental and injurious to the people of my State; and leave it to another body where no Senator can be heard.

I think this is a question of far greater importance than the mere matter of reorganization. I think reorganization itself will not accomplish much. The President makes no claims as to economy; the declarations of the bill will not be very fully carried out; but I do think that involved in this important question is a matter of great fundamental principle, which I think every Senator owes it to himself to consider, whether he, as an ambassador from his State, is willing to abdicate and surrender his voice.

The bill provides for submission of any reorganization plan to Congress. There is no objection to submission to Congress except, instead of requiring the approval of both Houses, the bill provides that if one House approves the plan becomes a law. In other words, the objections of one House are to be disregarded. If the House of Representatives is willing to be disregarded, that is not our concern. I am not willing, as a Senator from the State of Colorado, to be denied an effective voice upon a question. I am not discussing the question of constitutionality; I am not discussing the question of functions but merely the one thing. The Wheeler amendment does not involve, Senators, much of a change in the bill, it does not defeat its purposes; it allows the same procedure, but merely provides, in substance, that, instead of requiring the approval of only one House, the approval of both is required. After very considerable study and very considerable thought, I feel that there is involved in this matter an issue of very great moment, an issue to which, I think, every Senator should give thought.

We come here, my fellow Senators, with certain powers. I am willing to tie our hands as the bill does, take away the right to amend, force us to say "Yes" or "No"; but I do think that the Senate of the United States, heretofore the most powerful body in our Government, should not absolutely abdicate its power and its right.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. Mr. KING. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. We have just listened to a powerful and eloquent address by the senior Senator from Colorado. He has marshaled arguments in favor of the adoption of the socalled Wheeler amendment, and in the light of the same it seems to me all opposition to the amendment should vanish. It is my opinion that the bill before us is unconstitutional; it attempts to delegate legislative authority, and if it shall become law its validity would be challenged in the courts. It calls for the abdication of the authority of the legislative branch of the Government and seems to proceed upon the theory that Congress is incompetent to deal with legislative matters. I am not willing to concede that Congress is impotent and that it is willing to surrender its authority to other branches of the Government. In no critical spirit I call attention to the fact that the legislative branch of the Government is not infrequently charged with being too subservient to the execuive branch as a result of which policies are adopted and measures enacted into law which are not for the best interest of the country.

I shall now devote some time to a discussion of what I conceive to be constitutional questions involved in this measure.

A day or two ago the senior Senator from Colorado referred to an important case decided by the Supreme Court of the United States many years ago. The case referred to is reported in Seventh Cranch. It was, as I recall, the earliest case decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in which the question of the delegation of legislative power was considered. I have examined that case, as well as a number of others since then, and desire to bring them, and the principles which were therein discussed, to the attention of the Senate. I appreciate the fact that a discussion of constitutional questions is regarded by many as of but little importance, if not a waste of time. I fear there is a growing disregard of the fundamental principles of our Government, and the limitations expressed in the Constitution of the United States.

Judge Cooley, a great law writer and a great jurist, in his work on Constitutional Limitations points the path of safety which should be followed by the various branches of the Government as well as by the people themselves.

The Constitution of the United States is our great charter of government. It did not create or establish the Federal administrative service which is now stated by the President in his report of January 1937 to the Congress to consist, as I recall, of approximately 130 different agencies.

I might add that in the majority report submitted in favor of the bill under consideration by Representative Cochran in the House of Representatives, it is stated that there are four or five hundred agencies of the Federal Government.

Until recent years the various administrative agencies have been created by the Congress in statutes enacted for that purpose. We departed from that practice when we purchased the French rights to the Panama Canal, including the Panama Railroad, which had been, and now is, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, and which has been expanded to such an extent that it now operates not only a railroad in Panama, but department stores, warehouses, hotels, dairy herds, and various other and sundry activities for which no mention whatever will be found in the statutes of the United States for the government of that strip of territory connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

Since the acquisition of this Panama Railroad corporation, many other corporations have been organized under the laws of various States for the performance of Federal functions, or rather for functions which administrative officers thought they saw a need.

Congress has authorized the organization of a comparatively few of these Government-owned corporations, but most of them have been created by Executive order and then confirmation sought indirectly in appropriation acts of their creation. In most, if not in all, instances, such indirect confirmation of the Executive ukase has been granted.

Thus it has come about in our history of some 150 years that all of the existing administrative and executive agencies of government have been created by statute or confirmed by statute. It is now proposed in this reorganization bill before this body, with a favorable report by eminent Senators, to except certain of these agencies and functions from terms of the bill, and to give to the President the absolute right to reorganize, redistribute, regroup, and remake all of these sundry 130 agencies which are not expressly exempted from the terms of the authority purported by the bill to be conferred on the President.

I know that it is urged that the Congress may by a concurrent resolution, passed within a limited period, negative any proposed order of reorganization which the President may issue! I shall discuss that a little later. This should not be permitted to confuse the issue or to fool the people of the United States. It takes a majority vote of both Houses of the Congress to pass a concurrent resolution. I say, and say it sadly, that pressure has sometimes been exerted upon Members of the Congress in an attempt to pass a concurrent resolution—pressure which has come in the past few years—and there is little possibility of passing such a resolution. However, I may say, based upon a statement made by the President, that it would be ineffective, as I shall demonstrate before I conclude.

In effect, and I now call the attention of the Senate to the practical aspects of the matter, the enactment of the reorganization bill in the form reported by the committee means the turning of the entire administrative and executive service over to the President to reorganize as he sees fit, saving and excepting the agencies and functions expressly excepted from the terms of the reorganizing authority.

However, vitally concerned as I am with the maintenance of our democratic institutions of government in a world rapidly turning to dictatorships and autocracies, I raise my voice in defense of our Constitution and the sole and exclusive right of the Congress, the elected representatives of the people, to legislate. The agencies of government to which the bill would apply were created by statutes enacted by the Congress; they may not constitutionally be changed except by the same process—by statutes enacted by the Congress. More than that, under the Constitution it is the function of the President to make reports and submit recommendations to the Congress for the consideration of the membership drawn from every State in the Union. The bill would reverse the process by purporting to authorize the President actually to make or remake the statutes enacted by the Congress and the acts of the President in that respect could only be set aside by a concurrent resolution adopted by a majority vote of each House. I therefore submit that upon both grounds the bill is palpably unconstitutional, and if there be any who argue that similar bills have been passed during the last few years, my answer is that two errors, two violations of the Constitution, do not make any law constitutional-much less such a measure as the one before us. which would or might affect every individual and every business concern in America.

The bill is unconstitutional and if enacted into law would be void upon the following grounds:

First. Because the bill purports to confer upon the President the power to legislate, which power by virtue of article 1, section 1, of the Constitution, is solely committed to the Congress of the United States, subject to the veto power of the President, but with the right in the Congress by a two-thirds vote to pass the bill over his veto.

Second. Because the bill purports to confer upon the President the power to change and modify the terms of statutes enacted by the Congress since the foundation of the Federal Government—a power which is vested exclusively by the terms of the Constitution in the Congress.

Third. Because the Supreme Court of the United States has held that delegations of legislative power may not be made to the President except to the extent of filling in details in accordance with a standard set up in the statute and within well-marked channels for the exercise of his discretion.

Fourth. Because any attempt of an Executive to change and modify statutes of the United States affecting the rights, privileges, and immunities of any individual or business concern would constitute a violation of the due-process clause of the Constitution of the United States and could not be judicially confirmed.

The legislative and judicial history of the times since the case of the Brig Aurora (7 Cranch, 382), referred to by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] a few days ago, the case of Wayman v. Southard (10 Wheat. 1), reviewed in Field v. Clark (143 U. S. 649), and re-reviewed in Hampton v. United States (276 U. S. 394), and further reviewed in both the Schechter case (295 U. S. 495, 555), and in the Panama Refining Co. or Hot Oil cases (293 U. S. 388) indubitably establishes that the proposed legislation is unconstitutional.

From an examination of the cases in the Supreme Court of the United States from the Brig Aurora case in the early days of our Government down to the present time it is clear that not one instance is presented in which the power delegated to the President was as broad as in the bill now before the Senate. With the exception of the Schechter and Hot Oil cases during the past few years, in all the previous cases what the President or administrative agency was required to do was simply in execution of an act of Congress, merely as an agent. to ascertain the facts prescribed by the Congress and declare the event upon which its expressed will was to take effect. Not one of these statutes invested the President, or purported to invest the President or any administrative agency, with discretion and judgment in proclaiming a duty, but authorized the proclaiming of a duty shown by a prescribed "state of facts," or as shown by "ascertained facts" legislatively prescribed. The bill under consideration would do much more than that. It would reverse the constitutionally prescribed legislative processes by purporting to authorize the President to act, subject to the veto of the Congress within a limited period by a majority vote of each House, instead of requiring the President to make his recommendations to the Congress, subject to approval by a majority vote of each House.

It seems clear that under the terms of the bill before us the President will have authority to amend statutes, to adopt policies and, indeed, measures which consolidate agencies and determine their functions. Certainly this authority which it is proposed to grant to the Executive in the "highest sense" concerns legislative matters which are exclusively within the domain of the Congress.

Article I, section 1, of the Constitution provides in unmistakable terms that:

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Article II, section 3, of the Constitution provides that:

He (the President) shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; • • •.

Mr. President, he is not given legislative authority. He may make recommendations to the Congress, but he may not enact laws nor be the recipient of delegated authority which would authorize him to repeal, modify, or consolidate statutes.

In these two articles of the Constitution the first dealing with the legislative power and the second dealing with the executive power we find too clear for argument that the Chief Executive, the President, may recommend to the Congress and that the Congress shall legislate. These two articles do not provide, as the Senators who reported this bill apparently would have us and the country believe, that the President may legislate and report to the Congress, which cannot undo what he has done except by a concurrent resolution requiring a majority vote of both Houses. If the power to legislate concerning what agencies of Government there shall be; where they shall be located; whether in the War Department or in the Navy Department, or in the Department of Commerce, or in the Department of Agriculture, or in some one or more of the dozens of Government-owned corporations is not a "legislative power in the highest sense," I must admit that my study of the Constitution has been utterly wasted. How can any lawyer, knowing the history of despotic power in the hands of kings and potentates, argue that there is any authority in the Constitution or in the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States for what is here proposed passes my understanding-unless, indeed, they have joined the ranks of those who suggest that our Constitution is outmoded and unequal to the tasks before the Nation; and that, in fact, the Congress is so impotent that it cannot legislate. That argument has been made in recent years in Italy, Germany, and Russia. Are we to ignore and disregard the terms of the Constitution at the same time that we are preaching to the nations of the world to observe the fundamental rights of men? The fundamental rights of men, of Americans, are involved in the proposed legislation the rights of our constituents, who must deal with the various agencies of the Federal Government which the bill purports to authorize the President to shuffle as he may deem proper.

Mr. Justice Harlan, the eminent constitutional lawyer, writing for the Court in the Field case (143 U. S. 649), reviewed many acts of the Congress deemed by the Court similar as a congressional precedent, and said, at pages 692-694:

a congressional precedent, and said, at pages 692–694:

That Congress cannot delegate legislative power to the President is a principle universally recognized as vital to the integrity and maintenance of the system of government ordained by the Constitution. The act of October 1, 1890, in the particular under consideration, is not inconsistent with that principal. It does not, in any real sense, invest the President with the power of legislation. For the purpose of securing reciprocal trade with countries producing and exporting sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides Congress itself determined that the provisions of the act of October 1, 1890, permitting the free introduction of such articles, should be suspended as to any country producing and exporting them, that imposed exactions and duties on the agricultural and other products of the United States, which the President deemed—that is, which he found to be—reciprocally unequal and unreasonable. Congress itself prescribed in advance the duties to be levied, collected, and paid on sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, or hides produced by or exported from such designated country, while the suspension lasted. Nothing involving the expediency of the just operation of such legislation was left to the determination of the President. The words "he may deem," in the third section, of course, implied that the President would examine the commercial regulations of other countries producing and exporting sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides and form a sugar molasses, coffee, tea, and hides and form a sugar molasses, coffee, tea, and hides and form a sugar and the president whith the president was to whether they were reciprocally. the President would examine the commercial regulations of other countries producing and exporting sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, and form a judgment as to whether they were reciprocally equal and reasonable, or the contrary, in their effect upon American products. But when he ascertained the fact that duties and exactions, reciprocally unequal and unreasonable, were imposed upon the agricultural or other products of the United States by a country producing and exporting sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, or hides the agricultural or other products of the United States by a country producing and exporting sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, or hides, it became his duty to issue a proclamation declaring the suspension as to that country, which Congress had determined should occur. He had no discretion in the premises except in respect to the duration of the suspension so ordered. But that related only to the enforcement of the policy established by Congress. As the suspension was absolutely required when the President ascertained the existence of a particular fact, it cannot be said that in ascertaining that fact and in issuing his proclamation, in obedience to the legislative will, he exercised the function of making laws. Legislative power was exercised when Congress declared that the suspension should take effect upon a named contingency. What the President was required to do was simply in execution of the act of Congress. It was not the making of a law. He was the mere agent of the lawmaking department to ascertain and declare the event upon which its expressed will was to take effect. It was a part of the law itself as it left the hands of Congress that the provisions, full and complete in themsleves, permitting the free introduction of sugars, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, from particular countries, should be suspended in a given contingency, and that in case of such suspension certain duties should be imposed.

"The true distinction," as Judge Ranney speaking for the Supreme Court of Ohio has well said, "Is between the delegation of power to make the law, which necessarily involves a discretion as to its execution, to be exercised under and in pursuance of the law. The first cannot be done; to the latter no valid objection can be made."

* * The proper distinction, the court said, was this: "The legislature cannot delegate its power to make a law; but it can make a law to delegate a power to determine some fact or state of things upon which the law makes, or intends to make, its can make a law to delegate a power to determine some fact or state of things upon which the law makes, or intends to make, its own action depend."

Mr. President, there is no claim by the proponents of this bill that the facts are not known to the Congress or could not be ascertained by its respective and proper committees.

A committee 2 or 3 years ago was named to study the question of reorganization. It was known, as I recall, as the Committee on Administrative Management. It employed a large staff and prepared a report which was submitted to the President and by him transmitted to the Congress. It was an elaborate report and signed by three persons, experts in municipal government, and the report set forth the reasons why the committee, inferentially, at least, believed that the Federal Government should be reorganized on the basis of a municipal government with which they were most familiar. They did not claim to be experts in the problems of State or National Governments. Their report submitted to the President was by him transmitted to the Congress.

This work has continued. Just a few days ago a young professor of political science in an important university published a book on one phase of the reorganization program, wherein he advocated streamlining the spending power of the administrative agencies by depriving the Congress of all control over the spending of public money, which it now exercises to some extent through the General Accounting Office. Recently the Brookings Institution has submitted a most exhaustive and elaborate report to a Senate committee on reorganization of the administrative branch of the Government; and it has recently published a book on the subject | which shows some of the utter fallacies in the report made by the President's committee of municipal experts who essayed the task of reorganizing the Federal Government's administrative machinery. Moreover, the committees of the Congress have the legal authority to summon witnesses and elicit the facts.

No; it is not for want of adequate and accurate information. It was admitted on the floor of this Chamber by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, who is chairman of the committee having the bill in charge, that the bureaucrats in the Federal service will not let the Congress legislate on the subject to reorganize the service by law, which is the only way in which it can constitutionally be

This admission and the record demonstrate beyond all possibility of successful contradiction that the proposed law does not come within the rules stated by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Brig Aurora, Wayman against Southard, Field against Clark, and Hampton against United States.

The bill prescribes no standard with any degree of definiteness. The President is not left with the sole duty of ascertaining a fact and issuing a proclamation to fit in a category named in the law. On the contrary, it is freely admitted by the proponents of the bill that the President is being given the duty of reorganizing the administrative agencies because the Congress cannot legislate, as they say, and he is to use his own discretion as to the agencies he will reorganize and the ones he will not reorganize, except with respect to the agencies exempted in the bill.

Such broad discretion not only fails to bring the bill within the rules stated in the cases I have mentioned, but. on the contrary, such broad and uncontrolled discretion brings the bill squarely within the terms of the Panama Refining Co. case (293 U.S. 388) and the unanimous opinion of the same Court in the Schechter case (295 U. S. 495, 555). In both these cases, acts of Congress were held unconstitutional because of the broad delegation of legislative power to the Executive; but even in those cases the delegation did not attempt to give the President power to remake, redistribute, and reorganize the entire administrative machinery of the Federal Government which had grown up under specific statutes of the United States since the first Congress in 1789. Nor was there an attempt to reverse the constitutional procedure of lawmaking.

Mr. President, in my opinion, the bill proposes to transfer to the Chief Executive the whole of the legislative power with respect to the reorganization of the Federal administrative service. It proposes to reverse the constitutional process of the President recommending and the Congress legislating; and, if it is enacted into law, the confusion resulting therefrom will be such as this country has never known. If such a bill as this is unconstitutional, as I firmly believe, then it follows that the action of the President as to any one of the 130 agencies in reorganizing, redistributing, and remaking its duties will be subject to challenge in the courts by the aggrieved citizen. For example, the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs, the two great taxing agencies of the Federal Government, are not exempted from the terms of the bill.

If the President attempts to reorganize, redistribute, and remake these bureaus, his action in that respect is subject to instant challenge by any taxpayer in the United States, or by any importer. The courts will be swamped with cases; and if the Supreme Court of the United States adheres to its position throughout the years since the Brig Aurora case, it must hold such action to be unconstitutional. Do we wish the revenues of the United States to be brought into a state of chaos? If we do, we should pass the bill.

The Reclamation Service, the Grazing Service, and the Bureau of Mines, as well as the Forest Service, are of particular importance to my constituents and to the constituents of every Senator from the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast States. Suppose the President attempts to retransfer, redistribute, and remake these several agencies of the Federal Government, and our constituents challenge that action: If the Supreme Court of the United States adheres to its position throughout the years since the Brig Aurora case, it must hold that such a law is unconstitutional and that the President had no constitutional authority to retransfer, redistribute, and remake the duties, functions, and administrative organizations of the several services.

I do not intend to labor this point, but I earnestly insist that the bill, if enacted into law, is in the teeth of the Constitution of the United States; that it would reverse the constitutional process that the President recommends, and that the Congress must legislate; and that Congress has no constitutional authority to give to the President the power to reorganize the Federal administrative service. Persistence which may culminate in the enactment of the bill, can only bring chaos to the Federal administrative service, because the Supreme Court of the United States—unless it is willing to turn its back upon 150 years of its history—must hold the bill, if enacted into law, to be an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to the President.

Mr. President, I shall now submit some general observations respecting the bill, and discuss some matters which have been suggested during the debate. It has been stated during the debate that this bill proceeds upon the theory that Congress is incompetent to legislate upon a matter which the Constitution commits to it; that a Democratic Congress is incapable of meeting the situation by the ordinary processes of legislation. And the bill seems to sustain this view by stating:

* * Congress declares that the carrying out of these purposes can be accomplished more speedily than by the enactment of specific legislation. * *

The claim is not made that a democracy is a government most suitable for speedy action. It is alleged that the most efficient government from the point of view of celerity of action is one where a single individual consults himself and declares what the law shall be. Germany furnishes an example of a government in which speed is attained, but justice and liberty are ignored if not destroyed. Our fathers understood that a democracy may be unwieldy and slow moving in comparison with dictatorships, but that fact was regarded as a point in its favor. It may be admitted that the acts of our Government—executive, legislative, and judicial—can be more speedily accomplished by the authority of one individual—the President—than by legislation or judicial action.

Important legislative power is sought to be conferred upon the President by the terms of this measure, the argument being, as I understand, that reorganization can thereby be more quickly secured than by congressional legislation. other words, it is contended that by the abdication of its power by Congress the President may perform legislative functions and execute those powers with greater speed than can a body of 96 Senators and more than 400 Representatives. I am unwilling to support that view, or to confess that the Congress of the United States is incompetent to discharge a duty imposed upon it by the Constitution of the United States. I grant that reorganization is needed. With the powerful bureaucracy which has been builded up, the hundreds of millions of dollars which have been expended unnecessarily in the maintenance of a bureaucracy, some parts of which are incompetent, it is important that there should be a reorganization of the departments of the Government. But I contend that reorganization is a legislative function and that Congress may not delegate power to the President to accomplish that result.

It is not improper to call attention to the fact that the President has had the authority to investigate the executive branch of the Government and submit recommendations to Congress, for the more efficient and economical operation of the Government. It is not improper to inquire why, with the authority granted to the President to make such investigations and recommendations, that course has not been pursued.

Section 209 of the Budget and Acounting Act of 1921 gives the President ample authority to make the studies and investigations necessary for the submission to Congress of a plan for reorganization. The section referred to reads as follows:

The Bureau, when directed by the President, shall make a detailed study of the departments and establishments for the purpose of enabling the President to determine what changes, with a view of securing greater economy and efficiency in the conduct of the public service, should be made in (1) the existing organization, activities, and methods of business of such departments or establishments, (2) the appropriations therefore, (3) the assignments of particular activities to particular services, or (4) the regrouping of services. The results of such study shall be embodied in a report or reports to the President, who may transmit to Congress such report or reports or any part thereof, with his recommendations on the matters covered thereby.

The President now has the authority to obtain the information necessary for recommendations to the Congress as a basis for a reorganization of the departments of the Government. The act of 1921, however, provides that the reorganization shall be in the ordinary manner of legislation provided in the Constitution. It provides that the President shall submit recommendations to Congress for appropriate legislation dealing with reorganization. The Constitution provides in article II, section 3, paragraph 1, that—

He (the President) shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.

Both the Constitution and the act of 1921 grant the power to the President to recommend to Congress any reorganization he deems proper. Notwithstanding this grant of authority, the demand is made that Congress shall, without due consideration and before many new Members of Congress are familiar with the bill, give to the Executive vast powers.

The record shows that demands for hearings upon the bill were made in the House and were denied, and but 3 short days for debate were permitted on a measure reversing the entire legislative processes and granting to the Executive the legislating power and taking from Congress the veto power. This bill, as I have stated, attempts to confer legislative powers upon the President. His action may result in the repealing of statutes enacted by Congress after mature deliberation.

Section 7 and subsection (c) of the bill provides:

All laws relating to any executive agency or function transferred to, or consolidated with, any other executive agency or function under the provisions of this title, shall, insofar as such laws are not inapplicable, remain in full force and effect.

It may be asked what about the laws that are not applicable? It would seem there is but one conclusion: That such laws are repealed.

The majority report of the House recognizes that the measure before us confers legislative power on the President. It states:

Section 4 proceeds on the constitutional theory that the power conferred upon the President by the section is legislative in character.

Disregarding the question of the constitutionality of such procedure for the moment, may I quote the views of President Washington as to the undesirability of giving to the Chief Executive legislative power:

It is important, likewise, that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres; avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus, to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism * * *. To preserve (the reciprocal checks of our Government) must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

I am supported in my contention that this bill is unconstitutional by Hon. HATTON W. SUMNERS, chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House. It is not necessary to state that he is a lawyer of great ability whose opinion upon constitutional questions is entitled to great consideration. In discussing this measure when it was before the House, he says:

This thing which the House proposes to do to itself, to its power, and its responsibility is far more important than its relationship to the particular item of legislation. We know that fundamental changes in governments like ours are brought about by precedents and practice. When we put our feet into the road and begin to walk, we are going somewhere, and where we arrive depends upon the direction we take. This bill, unamended, leads in the wrong direction. It is a bad precedent.

There is no question that in formulating this bill we of the House could either keep or surrender this constitutional power without interfering with the efficiency of the Executive in carrying out the purposes of the bill. Any assumption to the contrary must be based upon the notion that the House as an institution is unfit to be trusted with the exercise of its constitutional power must be based upon the notion that the House as an institution is unfit to be trusted with the exercise of its constitutional powers. We raise the question ourselves that if the House cannot be trusted with its constitutional powers with regard to reorganization, as we seem to believe, why should the House be trusted with regard to legislation?

It is the surrender of the power conferred by the Constitution to protect the people against that which we may believe to be bad which is the vicious thing in this bill unamended.

Granting that a reorganization of government through legislation by the President may be "an instrument of good" in the one instance, it is, as Washington stresses, an evil precedent since it is leading the way to a course which inevitably destroys free government.

It has been charged that the so-called "congressional veto" contains a dangerous joker. Section 5 (a) of the bill is a most obnoxious section providing as it does that any reorganization plan shall become effective automatically after 60 days unless both Houses of Congress adopt a resolution declaring that the Congress does not favor the plan. This means that it will be necessary to secure a majority of both the House and the Senate affirmatively declaring opposition to the plan to prevent it from becoming effective. But the situation is even worse. Under the Constitution such a concurrent resolution would probably be wholly ineffective and the plan would go into effect regardless of its passage by both Houses. Bearing upon this view I refer to article I, section 7, paragraph 3, of the Constitution which reads:

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and the House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the Senate and the House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

But the concurrent resolution proposed in the bill does not deal with a question of adjournment. The bill requires the concurrence of both the House and the Senate. Under the Constitution, therefore, this resolution, before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by the President.

I repeat, when I state before both Houses of Congress pass a resolution disapproving a reorganization plan, that resolution, it would seem, under the Constitution, would be of no effect, but it would be disregarded, and the plan, despite the disapproval of a majority of both Houses of Congress, will go into effect automatically. It is contended that the only way in which such a resolution may become effective is that it shall be signed by the President or passed by a two-thirds vote over his veto. Shall it be assumed that the President would sign a resolution disapproving his own reorganization plan? Therefore, it is suggested that under the bill as it passed the House, a two-thirds vote of both Houses of Congress, in order that a reorganization plan shall not take effect, would be required.

I assume that the President understands this situation. He has stated that such a concurrent resolution by both Houses will be of no effect in preventing a reorganization plan.

I invite attention to a statement made by the President in a letter dated March 29, 1938, which will be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 83, part 10, at pages 1338-1339. This statement had reference to a reorganization bill which was then pending before Congress. His statement is as follows:

But there are two cogent reasons why the bill should go through as it is now drawn. The first is the constitutional question involved in the passage of a concurrent resolution, which is only an expression of congressional sentiment. Such a resolution cannot repeal Executive action taken in pursuance of a law. The second is the very remote possibility that some legislative situation might possibly arise in the future where the President would feel obligated to veto a joint resolution of the Congress and properly require a two-thirds vote to override his veto. two-thirds vote to override his veto.

The way to obviate this difficulty is to require affirmative action on the part of Congress before a reorganization plan can go into effect. That would be the situation exactly as it exists at present-that the President would submit recommendations to Congress, which would then do the necessary legislating. And such a procedure, incidentally, would be following the plan specified by the Constitution.

As I view the situation, the way to obviate this difficulty is to require affirmative action on the part of Congress before a reorganization plan can go into effect. That would call for the President to submit recommendations to Congress concerning reorganization which would then call for affirmative legislation. Such a procedure would be in harmony with the plan specified in the Constitution.

Reference has been made by the proponents of the pending bill to a measure passed during the administration of President Hoover. That measure, however, was limited by section 407 of the act, which provided that disapproval by either House of Congress should render any Executive order thereunder null and void.

Under the procedure outlined in part 2 of the pending bill, relating to the disapproving resolutions, in case a resolution is referred to a committee, and that committee fails to report thereon in 10 days, a motion to discharge the committee from further consideration thereof will be in order. Such a motion can be debated only 2 hours-section 24 (b)and if such motion is defeated, no further motion of a similar nature can be made-section 24 (c). The result will be that the committee will not report thereon, and the plan will go into effect upon the sixtieth day, despite the fact that the other House of Congress may have voted unanimously to condemn the plan. In other words, congressional debate on any sweeping plan-seriously affecting the lives of thousands of persons upon the Government pay rolls—can be limited to

I respectfully submit that the pending measure is designed to prevent Congress from disapproving a reorganization plan. As I have indicated even with the vote of both Houses disapproving a plan, the Executive in view of the statement to which I have referred, might disregard such a concurrent resolution and the plan would thereupon go into effect. If the Senate disapproves a plan and the House failed to act on the resolution the action of the Senate would be futile, or the House might vote on a resolution but fail to secure the required majority in order to disapprove a reorganization. In that event it would be immaterial what action the Senate would take, since the plan would have been approved by one House while the bill requires the disapprovel of both Houses. The Senate might disapprove a plan and yet a motion to discharge a committee in the House from further consideration of the resolution might fail of passage. Such a motion would be debatable for a limited time under the Senate amendment. If it failed it could not be renewed, nor the vote reconsidered. The effect of such a provision is that the resolution would die in committee. Thus the disapproval of the Senate, after full consideration, would be of no avail because the House after a limited time of debate had failed to discharge the committee.

One explanation given by the proponents of this legislation for entrusting this power to the President is that the President is responsible for the administration of the executive branch of the Government, and that he should have the power to reorganize the same. But the fundamental point that is overlooked in such an argument is that the President should not be granted the power to legislate. The power to pass and repeal laws has been given to the Congress by the Constitution. The Brookings Institution, in their new book, Reorganization of the National Government, released March 6, 1939, indicates the practical result of enacting the pending legislation:

Under the 1932 act, the President could only transfer the func Under the 1932 act, the President could only transfer the func-tions from one agency to another. Such a power was undoubtedly within the sphere of the Executive. Under the power to abolish functions granted in 1933, the President could virtually repeal any law conferring powers on an executive agency, because if the function of an agency was abolished the entire body of sub-stantive law built on the function would fall. For instance, the President could abolish the function of the Interstate Commerce Commission dealing with railroad rates.

Abolishing of functions is obviously one that is within the province of the legislative branch, and is not a duty of the President, except insofar as he participates in legislation through the approval or disapproval of bills. (P. 199.)

The advocates of this measure admit that the primary purposes of general reorganization of the Government are to secure economy and efficiency. They must assume that economy and efficiency go hand in hand and that neither economy nor efficiency is possible without a material reduction in the number of Federal agencies and organizations and a drastic reduction in the number of Federal employees, but the measure, as I interpret it, is not an economy measure. It contains no provision indicating any saving of money; it does not require any decrease in Government personnel, nor does it require any decrease in the number of Federal agencies or bureaus. It is singular that a measure for efficiency and economy which merely states a declaration of policy but does not require what steps are necessary to secure the desired results. It is manifest that economy and efficiency can only be met, as I have indicated, by drastically reducing the number of agencies, and more drastically reducing the number of Federal employees.

The monthly pay roll of the executive branch of the Government for June 1938, according to the Civil Service Commission, was more than $128,000,000. Thus, the annual pay roll of the executive branch of the Government amounts to more than one and one-half billion dollars. For the present fiscal year a much larger amount will be required to meet the Government pay roll. There must be added to this sum appropriations for the retirement for Government employees. The total administrative cost for 1939 will be approximately $2,000,000,000. Eighty-eight percent of the administrative costs of the Government is represented by salaries to Government employees, according to the Brookings Book on Reorganization. Since 88 percent of administrative costs are required for salaries of employees, it is obvious that reductions in the administrative costs can only be secured by a decrease in the number of employees.

It is an interesting fact that the number of administrative personnel in the executive departments and independent commissions, as of September 1938, according to the Civil Service Commission, was 870,031. More than 85 percent of this total, or 743,826, were employed in eight agencies; the Post Office Department, War Department, Agriculture Department, Navy Department, Treasury Department, Interior Department, Veterans' Administration, and Works Progress Administration. In regard to these eight agencies, with the possible exception of the Veterans' Administration, the President can bring about any economies and reductions of personnel that he desires without the authority contained in the measure under consideration. In other words, the President can at present bring about a reduction in expenditures so far as pay roll for administration is concerned in eight agencies which employ 85 percent of the total number of Federal employees, and such employees-that is, the total number-are paid 88 percent of the total administrative cost of the Government.

The President, in his annual message to Congress January 4 of this year, states:

Therefore, it does not seem logical to me, at the moment we seek to increase production and consumption, for the Federal Government to consider a drastic curtailment of its own investments.

He refers to the $44,000,000,000 deficit which has been piled up in the last few years as an investment. He continues:

The whole subject of Government investing and Government income is one which may be approached in two different ways.

The first calls for the elimination of enough activities of Government to bring the expenses of Government immediately into balance with income of Government. This school of thought maintains that because our national income this year is only $60,000,000,000 ours is only a $60,000,000,000 country; that Government must treat it as such; and that without the help of Government the proposed of the property appears to $60,000,000,000 ours of $60,000,000 ours. it may someday, somehow, happen to become an $80,000,000,000 country.

If the Congress decides to accept this point of view, it will logically have to reduce the present functions or activities of Government by one-third. The Congress will have to accept the responsibility for such reduction; and the Congress will have to determine which activities are to be reduced.

The pending bill calls upon the President to investigate the Government to find out how to "reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government." The Congress in this bill requests the President to "reduce the number of agencies." The President, in the foregoing quotation has said that it is the duty of Congress to determine which functions and which agencies it will abolish:

The Congress will have to accept the responsibility for such reduction; and the Congress will have to determine which activities are to be reduced.

The President further continues:

The Congress alone has the power to do all this, as it is the appropriating branch of the Government * * *. There are many complicated factors with which we have to deal, but we have learned that it is unsafe to make abrupt reductions at any time in our net expenditure program.

There must be a curtailment of activities if the Government is to effectively reduce expenditures. This fact is inescapable when it is recalled that the present Budget calls for expenditures of nearly $10,000,000,000, and that the administrative costs are only $1,827,000,000. In other words, administrative costs amount to only 17.65 percent of the Federal Budget. Therefore, any reorganization that merely reduces personnel and arranges agencies more efficiently, could affect a savings only in 17.65 percent of our expenditures. It is apparent, therefore, that if any perceptible economy is to result, there must be a drastic abolition of major functions of the Government.

As the Brookings Institution points out on page 86:

If savings in the expenditures of the National Government large enough to play a major part in balancing the Budget and reducing Federal taxation are to be made, they must be effected mainly through curtailment of the functions and activities of the Govern-

If this reorganization bill is to accomplish its purpose of economy, it must result in a curtailment of the activities of government. The authority to do this, under this bill, is given to the President, who has stated that-

Congress * * * will have to reduce the present functions or activities of Government by one-third. The Congress will have to accept the responsibility for such reduction; and the Congress will have to determine which activities are to be reduced.

The Brookings Institution states, page 101:

The power to determine the functions and activities of government is a legislative power and by the Constitution it is vested in the Congress. The President, under the Constitution, has unlimited power to make recommendations for needed legislation to the Congress but the Congress makes the decisions. The President may veto the decisions of the Congress, but the Congress may pass its acts over the veto of the President by a two-thirds vote of each House.

Under the Constitution the Congress may delegate, and has frequently delegated, to the President or to one of his administrative subordinates a wide measure of administrative discretion as to the selection of the specific activities which are to be carried on in the prosecution of a given function or in giving effect to a broad policy of government. But determination of the broad functions of government and large matters of public policy is so purely a legislative power that it cannot be delegated to the President without doing violence to the principle of separation of powers established by the Constitution.

Senators are aware of the need for economy in our Government's operation-which can only mean a curtailment in the activities of the Government. Senator Byrn, on Friday last, painted the picture of our amazing growth insofar as public expenditures are concerned. He indicated that Federal expenditures, exclusive of debt retirement, increased from less than four billion dollars in 1933 to nine and one-half billion in 1939. He stated that the national debt has increased from $16,801,000,000 in 1931 to what will be an approximate forty-five billion on July 1, 1940; and this, despite the fact that revenue from taxation has increased from two billion in 1933 to five and one-half billion in 1939.

In my opinion, the economy that is needed will not result from the enactment of this measure. The only real economy that can be achieved is through a curtailment in the functions of government and the consequent reduction in the vast army of Federal employees.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator recall that in the last Congress when a reorganization bill was pending before this body the question of the transfer of the Forest Service was under discussion?

Mr. KING. I recall that fact, and there was great objection to that proposal.

Mr. McCARRAN. And today that very question is pending here as to whether or not the Forest Service shall be entirely transferred from its present place or shall remain where it is.

Mr. KING. I think that is true; and if the transfer should be made, undoubtedly there would be very great concern and very great opposition in many parts of the United States, particularly in the West.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, for various reasons I had not intended to speak on the pending bill. Year after year, the country has heard arguments in relation to reorganization.

I have read the bill, H. R. 4425, which is to be called the Reorganization Act of 1939.

I came to the conclusion that until section 5 of the bill was reached there was no attempt to delegate any power to the President which he did not already have. In other words, he could investigate, he could recommend, and, I believe, if there was an earnest desire to bring about reorganization, he should have recommended long ago to the Congress his ideas in relation to the reorganization of the executive departments and agencies.

In section 5 of the bill there is the novel provision that the recommendation of the President shall take effect upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been adopted by the two Houses a concurrent resolution providing, in substance, that the Congress does not favor the reorganization plan as

In other words, section 5 provides that such executive agencies, except those excepted in section 3, which the Congress itself has brought into being could be put out of existence by the Executive, if both House of the Congress could not agree to the contrary.

The question whether the proposed act provides for the abolition of functions has been ably discussed. The discussion has thrown considerable light upon the issue whether the provisions of the bill seek to delegate legislative power. When Congress has created an office, can it delegate the power to another branch of the Government to abolish that office or abolish the functions of the office? Or must it by an act of the Congress itself perform that act? These and other matters have been discussed during the debate.

I believe it was argued by one Senator that there might be a saving of $25,000,000 to the Government if the various executive agencies were reorganized. Personally, I believe if an efficient job could be done, many times that amount could be saved. It has been common talk in this Chamber that even if we pass the bill there will not be any reorganization. What, then, is the purpose of this discussion?

Now, when the thunder of marching men is heard in Europe—because the Munich pact has been torn up—I believe, if a poll of the people of America were taken, it would disclose an overwhelming majority in favor of raising at this time no question of Congress attempting to give away any power to the Executive branch. In other words, the people would say: "If you are going to pass this bill, pass it with the Wheeler amendment. This is not the time to surrender power to the Executive under the guise of a reorganization bill."

I think, also, the people of America are asking the Congress to consider the problem of the farmer, the problem of industry, and the problem of relief for the aged. The suffering millions are not so much interested in intricate arguments in the Congress as they are in having something constructive done, so that they can get off the economic detour and return to the highway of economic recovery.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Donaney	Lee	Schwartz
Andrews	Downey	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Ashurst	Ellender	Lodge	Sheppard
Austin	Frazier	Logan	Shipstead
Bailey	George	Lucas	Smathers
Bankhead	Gerry	Lundeen	Smith
Barbour	Gibson	McCarran	Stewart
Barkley	Gillette	McKellar	Taft
Bilbo	Glass	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Bridges	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Guffey	Mead	Tobey
Bulow	Gurney	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Byrd	Hatch	Neely	Tydings
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Caraway	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Chavez	Holman	Pepper	Walsh
Clark, Idaho	Hughes	Pittman	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Calif.	Radcliffe	White
Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	Wiley
Danaher	King	Reynolds	IKHESESSA TELEVISION TO THE
Davis	La Follette	Russell	THE STREET, ST

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] to reconsider the vote by which the so-called Wheeler amendment was adopted.

Mr. BYRNES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ANDREWS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holl], who is detained because of illness in his family. If he were present, he would vote "nay," and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "yea"

Mr. BYRNES (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale]. If he were present, he would vote "nay." If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I am authorized to announce that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], who is unavoidably detained, is paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Miller], who is absent in attendance on a conference on flood-control matters. If the Senator from Louisiana were present and at liberty to vote, he would vote "yea," and the Senator from Arkansas, if present and at liberty to vote, would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 44, as follows:

	7	EAS 46
Ashurst Bankhead Barkley Bilbo Brown Caraway Chavez Connally Downey Ellender Gillette Green	Guffey Harrison Hatch Hayden Herring Hill Hughes La Follette Lee Lewis Logan Lucas	McKellar Mead Minton Murray Neely Norris O'Mahoney Pepper Pittman Radcliffe Reynolds Russell	Schwartz Schwellenbach Sheppard Smathers Stewart Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Truman Wagner Walsh
	N	AYS-44
Adams Austin Bailey	Bone Borah	Bridges Bulow Burke	Byrd Capper Clark, Idaho

Andrews Byrnes

Clark, Mo.	Glass	McCarran	Tobey
Danaher	Gurney	McNary	Townsend
Davis	Holman	Maloney	Tydings
Donahey	Johnson, Calif.	Nye	Vandenberg
Frazier	Johnson, Colo.	Reed	Van Nuys
George	King	Shipstead	Wheeler
Gerry	Lodge	Smith	White
Gibson	Lundeen	Taft	Wiley

NOT VOTING—6
(ale Miller Overton

So Mr. CLARR'S motion to reconsider the vote by which the so-called Wheeler amendment was adopted was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment known as the Wheeler amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. On that question I call for the yeas and navs.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ANDREWS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt]. If he were present, he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote. I should vote "nay." I withhold my vote.

Mr. BYRNES (when his name was called). I again announce that I have a pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale]. If that Senator were present, he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holf] is detained from the Senate by illness in his family.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] is unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] is attending a flood-control conference.

On this question the Senator from Arkansas [Mr Miller] is paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton]. If present, the Senator from Arkansas would vote "yea," and the Senator from Louisiana would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 44, nays 46, as follows:

	Y	EAS-44
Adams Austin Bailey Barbour Bone Borah Bridges Bulow Burke Byrd Capper	Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo. Danaher Davis Donahey Frazier George Gerry Gibson Glass Gurney	Holman Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo. King Lodge Lundeen McCarran McNary Maloney Nye Reed	Shipstead Smith Taft Tobey Townsend Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Wheeler White Wiley
	N	AYS-46	NOTH OF REAL PROPERTY.
Ashurst Bankhead Barkley Bilbo Brown Caraway Chavez Connally Downey Ellender Gillette Green	Guffey Harrison Hatch Hayden Herring Hill Hughes La Follette Lee Lewis Logan Lucas	McKellar Mead Minton Murray Neely Norris O'Mahoney Pepper Pittman Radcliffe Reynolds Russell	Schwartz Schwellenbach Sheppard Smathers Stewart Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Truman Wagner Walsh
	NOT	VOTING-6
Andrews Byrnes	Hale Holt	Miller	Overton

So Mr. Wheeler's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BYRNES. I move to reconsider the vote by which the so-called Wheeler amendment was rejected.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move to lay that motion on the table. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina moves that the vote by which the so-called Wheeler amendment was rejected be reconsidered. The Senator from Kentucky moves that that motion be laid on the table. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. WHEELER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRNES (when his name was called). I again announce that I have a pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale]. If he were present and voting, he would vote "nay," and if I were permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I repeat my announcement of the absence of certain Senators and the reasons therefor.

The senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] has a pair with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Miller]. If present and voting, the Senator from Louisiana would vote "yea," and the Senator from Arkansas would vote "nay."

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. On this vote I have a pair with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour]. If he were present and voting, he would vote "nay." If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 41, as follows:

Andrews	Green	Lucas	Russell
Ashurst	Guffey	McKellar	Schwartz
Bankhead	Harrison	Mead	Sheppard
Barkley	Hatch	Minton	Smathers
Bilbo	Hayden	Murray	Stewart
Brown	Herring	Neely	Thomas, Okla.
Caraway	Hill	Norris	Thomas, Utah
Chavez	Hughes	O'Mahoney	Truman
Connally	La Follette	Pepper	Wagner
Downey	Lee	Pittman	Walsh
Ellender	Lewis	Radcliffe
Gillette	Logan	Reynolds
Content of the	NA	YS-41	UNIE WHILE GLICK
Adams	Davis	King	Tobey
Austin	Donahey	Lodge	Townsend
Bailey	Frazier	Lundeen	Tydings
Bridges	George	McCarran	Vandenberg
Bulow	Gerry	McNary	· Van Nuys
Burke	Gibson	Maloney	Wheeler
Byrd	Glass	Nye	White
Capper	Gurney	Reed	Wiley
Clark, Idaho	Holman	Shipstead
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Calif.	Smith
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Taft
	NOT T	OTING—9
Barbour	Byrnes	Holt	Overton
Bone	Hale	Miller	Schwellenbach
		- CONTRACTOR CONTRACTOR

So Mr. Byrnes' motion to reconsider was laid on the table. Mr. McCarran. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 3, line 11, after the colon, to insert the title "Civil Aeronautics Authority"

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk a letter purporting to come from the President of the United States, and ask that it be read by the clerk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE, Washington, D. C., January 24, 1939.

To the National Aviation Forum:

Civil aviation is clearly recognized as the backlog of national defense in the Civil Aeronautics Act which set up the effective machinery for a comprehensive national policy with respect to the air.

Underlying the statute is the principle that the country's welfare in time of peace and its safety in time of war rests upon the existence of a stabilized aircraft production—an economically and technically sound air transportation system, both domestic and overseas—an adequate supply of well-trained civilian pilots and ground personnel.

This new national policy set up by the Congress views American aviation as a special problem requiring special treatment. Aviation is the only form of transportation which operates in a medium which knows no frontiers but touches alike all countries of the earth. One fact which stands out is that hardly another civil activity of our people bears such a direct and intimate relation to the national security as does civil aviation. It supplies a reservoir of inestimable value to our military and naval forces in the form of men and machines, while at the same time it keeps an industry so geared that it can be instantly diverted to the production of fighting planes in the event of national emergency.

I hope the forthcoming National Aviation Forum will give serious thought to the many phases which enter into aeronautics as a national problem.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment for the purpose of excluding the Civil Aeronautics Authority from the number of agencies which may be affected by an Executive order. A very good reason exists for my offering the amendment. The Civil Aeronautics Authority has been in existence about 8 months. It was created as an independent authority because the President of the United States wished that it be so created. I need not draw the attention of the Senate to the various messages which came from the President to the Congress dealing with this matter.

Mr. President, in order that the Senate may be fully advised, I wish to say that in 1934 the junior Senator from Nevada offered the first bill to create an independent authority to have control over and to regulate the affairs of civil aeronautics in America. If I may, I will go back and give a brief history of the reasons for that bill. As a member of the committee having to do with the investigation of ocean-mail and air-mail subsidies the junior Senator from Nevada became advised of the fact that civil aviation in America was being dealt with by three major departments, and perhaps four. The Post Office Department was regulating civil aviation in this country. The Post Office Department in reality held the "big stick," because the Post Office Department had the money with which to control civil aviation.

The Department of Commerce had a measure of control. There were some 2,900 employees in the Department of Commerce who were controlling to a greater or lesser extent the affairs of a great transportation agency.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with all its employees, was also controlling civil aviation in America. By reason of the divided control, civil aviation in America was not keeping pace with civil aviation in other countries, which were going ahead of us by leaps and bounds. The result is today evidenced by the fact that other countries of the world are far ahead of America in the matter of civil aviation.

Mr. President, if we can but sustain that which we created after 4 years of desperate effort, if we can but sustain this agency as an independent agency, then we can come abreast of the rest of the world in respect to civil aviation.

There is no more important method of transportation in America today than that newest method of transportation, namely, that through the air. If we are to make air transportation subservient to some other agency, to be kicked about as a football, if you please, to be played up and down in the political life of America, then we will go backward instead of going forward as we have during the past 8 months.

Let me go a little further. The first bill that was offered by the junior Senator from Nevada was opposed by the President, because in his message he said that he would prefer to have all methods of transportation under one head, namely, the Interstate Commerce Commission. So, following his message, the junior Senator from Nevada revamped and redrafted his bill and brought the new bill before the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate, and before the Senate Committee on Commerce, and then, with their approval, brought it before the body of the Senate. That bill was filibustered to death. I give credit to the able Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], the chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of the Senate, who was so efficient as to do that.

Then, in January 1938, the President did us the honor to call us to the White House and say that his view had changed, and that he felt that our first ideas were right; in other words, that an independent commission should have control over civil aviation in America. So, with that in mind, we redrafted our bill. It was reported favorably by the Senate Committee on Commerce. Then, after having been amended, it was passed by this body after many days of careful consideration. Through it all, Mr. President, we fought for, and the Senate and the House passed, a bill providing for an independent commission to have control over this new and greatest means of transportation.

It is now proposed to take it out of the category of an independent agency, and throw it into some other agency; I do not know where nor have I been advised. I respectfully say to the Senate that in view of many things of vital importance to our country this independent agency, created at the last session of Congress, should remain an independent agency so long as it may go forward with independent activity.

Let me say more than that. When my bill was presented at the last session of Congress civil aviation in America was about to be torn down so that in the next half century it could not find itself. Why? Because the private lending agencies of America had lost faith in civil aeronautics; the banking concerns of America had lost faith, and, having lost faith, they were not inclined to lend their money so that civil aviation might go forward.

Mr. President, I am not in a position to state how many million dollars of private investment have been made following the passage of the Civil Aeronautics Authority bill, so that civil aeronautics in America might go forward, but the total investment has been large. Investors had confidence in the industry, based upon the fact that Congress, after long deliberation, had finally passed an independent civil aeronautics authority bill, and that bill became a part of the law of America, and America and the world recognized that we were about ready to go forward and develop the greatest avenue of commerce the world has ever known, commerce by the air.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to ask the Senator if his amendment is comprehensive enough so that the Air Safety Board in the Civil Aeronautics Authority could be excluded from change by the President?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have had that matter presented to me. It is my judgment that the Air Safety Board is under the Civil Aeronautics Authority. With that in mind we can with entire safety proceed with my amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator then believes that the amendment is worded so that it will comprehend the Air Safety Board.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is my intention, that is my idea, that is my belief based on my study of the subject.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I am wholly in accord with the sentiment expressed by the able Senator from Nevada, and, of course, will support his amendment. Does the Senator think that as a matter of legislation we should include in the amendment the Aeronautical Board?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am somewhat at a loss to know just what the Aeronautical Board is. However, I do not think it was included in the bill known as the civil-aeronautics bill.

Mr. McNARY. It was created before the bill offered by the Senator from Nevada. It looks into the scientific operation of aircraft, mainly from the standpoint of national defense. I think it is a coordinator between the Army and the Navy in the air. I am wondering if that agency should also be included in the Senator's amendment. I am not suggesting it. I wonder if the Senator has it in mind?

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not have it in mind. However, I wish to say that in the Appropriations Committee I have been exceedingly interested in what the Senator has said. I do not believe that the Aeronautical Board belongs to the subject which is now uppermost; and, unless the Senator insists, I hope such an amendment will not be offered.

Mr. McNARY. I will follow the judgment of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have little more to say. The Civil Aeronautics Authority is a newly created organization, having come into existence only 7 months ago. It is about ready to go forward. Today the aviation industry and the wealth of the country which has been invested in it are looking to the Senate to see to it that we maintain that which we created 7 months ago—namely, an independent agency to remain independent and not to be thrown into the Department of Commerce. I do not know whether it would go to the Department of Commerce or to the Post Office Department.

I do not know that anyone now has in mind any line that this independent agency might follow in the reorganization. Let me say, however, that we found by experience that the Department of Commerce had accumulated some 2,900 employees in connection with this activity. We found the Department of Commerce dealing with one phase of aviation. Then we found the Post Office Department, with all the appropriations which are awarded to it, dealing with aviation from another angle. Neither of those two great agencies, if I may use a homely expression, was on speaking terms with the other as regards the control of this all-important avenue of commerce.

What is to be done? Suppose, Mr. President, that the railroads of America today were under the Department of Commerce as to one phase, under the Post Office Department as to another, under the Department of Agriculture as to another, and under the Interstate Commerce Commission as to another. Where would the railroads of America be today? Let me say in frankness that had an independent Interstate Commerce Commission been created 50 years before it was created the railroads of America would not today find themselves in the unhappy position that they occupy, as reported to the Senate and to America at large.

We were interested in creating a new agency to have control over a new and great avenue of commerce. We were interested in seeing that that agency was not tied to any political department in the Government. The Civil Aeronautics Authority has gone forward with unusual success and a marked degree of confidence on the part of the American people.

I ask that my amendment be adopted, to the end that we may keep that agency, which the Congress at its last session created as an independent agency.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. I agree with the argument being made by the distinguished Senator from Nevada. I wish to leave the thought that after much consideration on the part of Congress and as the result of a stalemate in the legislative efforts to clarify the aviation situation a commission was appointed to make an exhaustive study of the subject. That commission made the study and recommended to the Congress that an independent agency be created. The Congress approved the recommendations of the commission. The agency was set up and it is about its business, doing a fine job. Until it has the industry on its feet, nothing should be done to deter it in its work. So I agree heartily with the Senator.

Let me say further that no doubt the Civil Aeronautics Authority would have been eliminated from the reorganization bill a year ago if the situation then had been as it is now. However, we were then considering the creation of the agency, and therefore the separation of it in the bill could not be accomplished at that time.

I agree with the Senator, and I feel that his amendment should be approved.

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish to express my gratitude to the able Senator from New York. During the past 4 years I have had many conferences with him when he was in the House, as head of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. I believe he knows the subject as well as I do. I am grateful for his expression of cooperation.

Mr. President, I am not presenting my amendment as a political effort. I am appealing to the Senate to save an agency which is only getting on its feet, and not to allow it to become emmeshed in the toils of a political department. Let us adopt this amendment. Let us have it over with. Let us say to the people of America that we can go forward with a great independent agency which represents the traffic and the commerce of the country-interstate, intrastate, and international.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, I do not think anything has been made more clear during the past few days of debate on the pending bill than the importance that can be attached to precedents. Precedents of extreme importance have been brought forward, as well as some of lesser importance. We have had examples of legislation which has been passed on matters of small moment, and yet those very acts have established a precedent that can be effectively used in the future. We have had other examples of precedents which have been created after much thought and due deliberation. In any case such precedents, no matter how they may arise, no matter what the reason, or the time in which they have been created, are important as arguments in the future when other precedents are about to be established.

Personally, I do not feel that we could establish a more unusual precedent, if I may use the word, than is sought to be established by the pending bill, a precedent which, to my mind, reverses the whole idea of our legislative theory. I do not see how anyone can deny that statement.

We are saying in the bill, not that the Congress shall pass legislation and that the President may veto it, not that the Congress shall take affirmative action, but that legislation which is recommended by the President under the proposed delegation of power shall become law unless the Congress votes against its becoming law.

We go even further than that; we say that it shall become law if one House agrees to the legislation. I do not see how we could go further in changing the whole theory on which our legislative system is based.

Mr. President, if there is one thing that stands out in the history of parliamentary government and in the history of free institutions, and the whole story of their development, it is the history of the fight for parliamentary control. The fight has been for the parliament, or the congress, to have power, and to increase its power. The congress, or the parliament, representing the people, fought the people's battles to obtain that power; and as the centuries went on the people recognized that it was their battle. There has been a continual growth of the power of legislative government.

Then, at times after the parliament had obtained power, we find efforts being made to grant it away and delegate it instead of the parliament itself exercising the power in its hands. Exceptions were made, and they established precedents, and they whittled down the power of the legislature, although very often those in the legislature did not realize at the time what was being done and its aftereffects. Often the legislation was passed without due deliberation and without careful thought.

That, I am afraid, is what we are doing today. There is no question in my mind that it is what we have been doing. In times of great stress there is always an urge to grant powers to the executive or to smaller bodies in order to get quick results; but when the emergency passes it is always wise to go back to the old principles and to exercise parliamentary government in the way it was intended to be exercised by the fathers, by the founders of our Government.

To my mind the test of liberalism is the test of the fight of legislative government against any delegation of power. The less powers we delegate and the more we exercise our own authority the further liberalism advances. The more they are delegated the more we admit that the legislature is not competent to govern. We admit that it is more difficult—which is true—to obtain immediate action, and probably in many cases as efficient action than if we follow the policy of not delegating power. I do not see how anybody can deny, however, that in the long run it is much wiser, it is much sounder—in fact, it is fundamental—that we exercise all the powers we have and that we be very jealous of delegating any of them.

This sort of legislation, delegating powers to the Executive to act for us, we are very apt to consider as an emergency measure or a temporary measure, or something that can be safely done now; but when we do it we are establishing a precedent. In the future we shall have other Presidents; we shall have other legislatures; and yet this precedent will come up and be used as an argument for future legislation and for future impairment of legislative power.

The balance of our three branches of government—the executive, the judicial, and the legislative—was well defined by the fathers. It was an example of political wisdom that has withstood the test of the ages. It is withstanding the test today. Therefore I cannot help doubting the wisdom of deviating from it, no matter to how small an extent.

When we go so far as even to change the whole principle by which the legislature is to act first and change it, besides, in the way that we have in this bill, so that one House alone may overcome the will of the other, I feel that I cannot support such legislation. It goes too much to the fundamentals of government.

If there ever was a time when conditions in the world were chaotic, if there ever was a time when we have a practical picture of the danger of limiting in any way parliamentary control, we have it today. I, for one, feel that the time has come when Congress, instead of yielding its functions, should jealously guard them and should see that they are maintained to the full.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I hope the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] will be agreed to by the Senate. I should like to see it agreed to unanimously, if possible. I know of no reason for transferring or abolishing the functions of a brand-new agency of government, intended to be an independent agency, having charge of probably the most important aspect of transportation with which we are concerned today, when we measure its importance by its vast opportunities of development and the relatively short life of the form of transportation.

I made certain inquiries of the Senator from Nevada because, as we have studied aeronautics here in Congress, I have always thought that the element of safety was paramount; that if there was involved a question of sacrificing human life or of health in the interest of some other consideration, such as speed, or gainful occupation, or something of the kind, we should put on the brakes. On the other hand, I believed that if there was anything we could do as legislators to render safer the development of this new form of transportation, we ought to do it. That is one reason why I was so actively interested in the bill of the Senator from Nevada and why I supported it in my rather modest and feeble way.

I think it would be a blunder—it would be a "boner," to use a common expression—not to exclude this new agency from the power of the President either to abolish its functions, or to transfer its functions, or to reduce its personnel or to increase its personnel at will. I think it would be a great blunder to put this institution at the hazard of any man's whim or any man's notion that he may bring about some economy by transferring or transforming this new agency right in the midst of a very successful and progressive beginning.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President-

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. First of all, I desire to draw to the attention of the able Senator from Vermont this idea, in which he has always been interested, and with reference to which we have both worked, namely, the Safety Board, the safety features of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. If I thought for a moment that the Safety Board was not completely embraced within my amendment, I should, of course, modify my amendment so as to embrace the Safety Board. But the Senator from Vermont and I were interested in working out the Safety Board as a part of and under the Civil Aeronautics Authority; so when I use the term "Civil Aeronautics Authority" in the amendment I contemplate that the Safety Board is to remain within the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and therefore not be interfered with.

I say that for the RECORD, and I say it in view of the splendid remarks of the able Senator from Vermont and of our cooperation on the subject.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I am glad to accept the opinion of the Senator from Nevada that the Civil Aeronautics Authority comprehends all that is within the two covers of the act. I have not examined the question of interpretation at all. I accept his opinion.

I wish to have the Senate realize that in the very brief time the new Authority has been inaugurated and has started this work it has developed a plan for educating and training pilots with special reference to safety in piloting and in the transportation of passengers and commodities. The elements contained in the bill which created this Authority include provision for national defense; and the Civil Aeronautics Authority has been considered in our efforts to plan for the development of the aerial branch of our military institutions for national defense. Practically 90 percent of the bill which the Senate will have under consideration probably within 24 hours is devoted to the subject of training and educating pilots and ground crews to man the planes which are authorized in only about 10 percent of the bill to be manufactured and purchased. The Civil Aeronautics Authority is depended upon by the military branch of the Government to afford a special service with reference to the education of pilots and their training to fly with safety.

Mr. G. Grant Mason, Jr., testified before the Committee on Military Affairs on the bill, and, among other things, I cause to be inserted in the RECORD his remarks to the following effect:

Now, I would like to revert to our training program, which was announced recently by the President and the first phase of which will be put into effect during the second semester of the current school year at not to exceed a dozen selected colleges and universities throughout the country. Because funds were needed immediately to give the Authority's plan this practical try-out before attempting to launch the full-scale program of training 20,000 pilots a year, and because these funds were allocated to us from the National Youth Administration, the impression has been created in some quarters that our flight training program is a National Youth Administration project. This is a misconception that I would like to clear up once and for all. The training program was developed by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and will be carried out by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The initial funds required—$100,000 for the training of 300 students at educational centers selected on the basis of the pioneer work they have done in actual flight training—simply are being supplied to us by the National Youth Administration.

cational centers selected on the basis of the pioneer work they have done in actual flight training—simply are being supplied to us by the National Youth Administration.

If the results obtained between now and next June prove that our program is as sound in fact as it seems to be in theory, the training pattern developed at our selected educational demonstration centers will be applied during the 1939-40 school year at several hundred schools and colleges throughout the United States. We have estimated that the full-scale plan which calls for the training of 20,000 pilots a year will cost $9,800,000.

Mr. President, I have just read from the hearing before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs on House bill 3791, at pages 151 and 152. There is much more of value there recorded, showing that the Civil Aeronautics Authority as an independent agency has gone right to work laying down a rational program for education, which starts now, but contemplates running far into the future, so that this civil side of our Government can cooperate with the military and naval aspects of our Government in the development of pilots, not only for private flying but also for national defense, and our bill, which the Senate will have under consideration very soon, contemplates making direct use of the Civil Aeronautics Authority in carrying out its national-defense program.

I will not now take the time of the Senate to go into it in detail. I hope time will not be required on this matter when the conference report comes before us; that it will not be necessary to go into the details of it. The Senate ought to be fully aware of what I can state to be true without any further discussion of the matter.

Mr. President, before taking my seat, I observe that whenever there is a crash of a plane, and lives are lost, publicity of that fact sweeps around the world, by radio, by announcements in the newspapers, and through other forms of communication. It is well that that is so, because it tends to make people aware of errors in construction, of the necessity of education of pilots, and those things for which the Civil Aeronautics Authority was set up. But when do we ever hear anyone glorify the remarkable achievements in the transportation by air of passengers and of things?

Let me call attention to the simple truth that within a very short time—I cannot speak the date, but I think it was in January of this year—600 private airplanes were piloted from different sections of this continent to Miami, Fla., without a single casualty. Perhaps that was noticed by the public. In any event, I want it to be noticed now. It is evidence of the remarkable advancement made in the direction of flying in safety.

Mr. President, that is one of the preeminent objectives of setting up this independent agency, not making it a junior board, a subsidiary of some other independent agency whose objective may be of such a nature as to relegate the safety of transportation by air to a subordinate place, but a complete, independent, and major agency of the Government.

It has just begun its work, and it is working diligently. I have visited its offices within a few weeks, and have been in touch with them by telephone at other times, and I know that that agency is working early in the morning and late at night performing the function of placing its work upon a systematic basis, and carrying on with a technical undertaking.

So, Mr. President, I hope that the amendment of the Senator from Nevada will be agreed to by the Senate.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I am in thorough accord with the distinguished Senator who has just yielded the floor, and I trust that the amendment put forward by the Senator from Nevada will be accepted by the committee and by the Senate.

I have been very close to the development of aviation ever since the Post Office Department advertised for the first airmail contracts, and it was very natural that aviation in its development should be divided up, insofar as authority was concerned, among several agencies of the Government before its final administration by a single agency became effective.

In the first place, back in 1919 aviation was in such a state of development that it was impossible for the Post Office Department to secure a contractor with sufficient equipment to carry the mail on a given contract. It was necessary, if we were to develop the industry in this country, that some department of Government should supervise and subsidize the development. So the Post Office Department took it upon itself, in order to determine as to the feasibility of the Air Mail Service as a service which would expedite the transportation and delivery of the mail, to make experimental tests in connection with the development of this industry.

For a time the Post Office Department itself flew the mail, under its own jurisdiction, for a while using Army pilots, then again for a while with pilots in the employ of the Postal Service. In due time the industry developed to such a point that contractors were available to bid on carrying the mail. Then, of course, it became the problem of the Congress to establish fair and reasonable rates; and from 1919 until 1926 the development of this industry was wholly within and confined to the Post Office Department.

About 1926 that great developing Department of the Government, the Department of Commerce, as a result of the enactment of legislation, took over the developing feature of the industry. Air lines were established, beacon lights were constructed, emergency fields were located, and the industry began to take on the semblance of maturity.

Later on, when many lines were established, when the rate problem became a vexing one, legislation was again enacted, back in 1934, sponsored by the distinguished Senator who has just taken his seat, and the Interstate Commerce Commission was given authority to inquire into and to establish reasonable rates for carrying the mail.

Then we had three departments of the Government administering jurisdiction over a growing, yet immature industry. Of necessity, conflict and difficulty were bound to ensue. I can recall the presence of proposed legislation in the Senate, reported from two committees, legislation sponsored by two distinguished Senators, dealing with the one problem, while at the same time two similar bills were pending in the House of Representatives. For two full sessions of the Congress progress of the industry, insofar as legislation was concerned, was stopped in its tracks.

The President of the United States created a commission and authorized it to make a specific study of the wants and needs of this young and growing industry. As a result of that study, the present statute was brought upon the floor of the Senate and the House and enacted into law. Thus aviation became of age; it was given the dignity of having a separate, a distinct agency of government created to manage and administer its affairs. Today it is on the threshold of its greatest period of expansion, and it should be permitted to expand under the guiding genius of this creature of the Congress.

Mr. President, I do not believe the President of the United States is interested in transferring this agency to any other agency, because the very report of his commission recommended that an independent and separate agency administer aviation matters. The time may come in some future session when an agency for the control of all forms of established transportation may be given consideration, but today, and for the present, I hope that this particular agency will remain distinct, separate, and independent; that the recommendation made by the distinguished Senator from Vermont and the thought he has left with us will guide the conferees in keeping together every element of this agency, and that the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Nevada will be accepted unanimously by the committee and adopted by the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, it is always a matter of regret to me to disagree with my friend the Senator from Nevada, for whom I have great respect and a deep affection; but it seems to me that the Civil Aeronautics Authority—

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield that a quorum may be called? The Senator from Nevada is not present, and I should like to call a quorum of the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I shall be glad to yield. I intend to speak for only a few minutes, for the purpose of putting some figures in the Record, but I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWARTZ in the chair).

The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Danaher	King	Reynolds
Davis	La Follette	Russell
Donahey	Lee	Schwartz
Downey	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Ellender	Lodge	Sheppard
Frazier	Logan	Shipstead
George	Lucas	Smathers
Gerry	Lundeen	Smith
Gibson	McCarran	Stewart
Gillette	McKellar	Taft
Glass	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Green	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Guffey	Mead	Tobey
Gurney	Minton	Townsend
Harrison	Murray	Truman
Hatch	Neely	Tydings
Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Holman	Pepper	Walsh
Hughes	Pittman	Wheeler
	Radcliffe	White
Johnson, Colo.	Reed	Wiley
	Davis Donahey Donahey Downey Ellender Frazier George Gerry Gibson Gillette Glass Green Guffey Gurney Harrison Hatch Hayden Herring Hill Holman Hughes Johnson, Calif.	Davis La Follette Donahey Lee Downey Lewis Ellender Lodge Frazier Logan George Lucas Gerry Lundeen Gibson McCarran Gillette McKellar Glass McNary Green Maloney Guffey Mead Gurney Minton Harrison Murray Hatch Neely Hayden Norris Herring Nye Hill O'Mahoney Holman Pepper Hughes Johnson, Calif. Radcliffe

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ninety-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, as I was in process of saying when the suggestion of the absence of a quorum was made, it is always a matter of great regret to me to disagree with any proposition advanced by my friend the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], for whom I have not only a very deep respect but a very great personal affection. But, Mr. President, it seems to me that the Civil Aeronautics Authority furnishes a classical example of the evils and dangers of mushroom bureaucracy, and if there is any agency in the whole Government in connection with which it might be practical and possible to effect economy and efficiency by merger and consolidation, it is the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

I recall that when the bill providing for the creation of the Authority was originally introduced by the Senator from Nevada, it provided that the functions in connection with civil aeronautics should be performed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to correct him at that point?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If I am in error, I shall be glad indeed to have the Senator correct me.

Mr. McCARRAN. My first bill, introduced in 1934, provided for an independent authority.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I recall that that is correct. I was in error. The bill which the last bill succeeded did provide for administration by the Interstate Commerce Commis-

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator from Missouri was not here when I made my opening statement. Following the introduction of the first bill, the President sent a message to Congress in which he proposed to put all transportation facilities under one authority, namely, the Interstate Commerce Commission. Then, following the President's message, the junior Senator from Nevada introduced a bill placing the air-transportation facility under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

I stated of record previously today, and I am now stating it again so the Senator from Missouri may be advised, that in January 1938 the President called us to the White House and said that he believed we were right in our first position, and that the Authority should be an independent agency, and, with that in mind and in view, we redrafted our entire bill and made the Civil Aeronautics Authority an independent body.

I will not ask the Senator a question, but I wish this thought to be left with him: Would the Senator wish the executive department again to change its mind?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Nevada that I voted for the bill creating the Civil Aeronautics Authority. I was one of the conferees appointed by the Vice President on that bill representing the Senate, and resigned in favor of my colleague the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN].

But, Mr. President, I was recently shocked to find the extent of the expenditures which this infant Commission has already made. Senators will all recall that the act creating the Civil Aeronautics Authority was passed only in the last day or two before the end of the last session of Congress. The members of the Commission were not actually confirmed by the Senate until within the last month. Yet this infant Commission has already created a pay roll on which is carried in excess of a thousand more employees than are carried by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has been charged with all the responsibility for the regulation of rates and of safety and of everything else that has to do with all the railroads in the United States, and which has been in existence for 40 years.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I desire to call a matter to the attention of the able Senator, so that he may discuss it during the course of his remarks, because I have a great deal of respect for the Senator's judgment. Does the Senator from Missouri realize that the Civil Aeronautics Authority took over 2,900 employees from the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce, and that those employees have been carried on the pay roll of the Civil Aeronautics Authority since that time? Will the Senator, before he concludes, compare what is now paid those who were transferred to the Civil Aeronautics Authority with what they received when they were under the Department of Commerce? If he will do so, he will enlighten me.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I do not have those figures, but I know that the Bureau of Air Commerce in the old Department of Commerce was one of the most wasteful, one of the most inefficient, one of the most negligent bureaus of Government that ever existed, and that was why Congress passed the act creating the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Mr. President, that this Commission, which has been but newly organized, needs as large a pay roll as that of the Interstate Commerce Commission, with all its far-flung activities, and needs a larger personnel, seems to me to be simply astounding. I told the Senator from Nevada that I was not going to fight his amendment, and I do not intend to do so, further than the reading of a few figures may constitute a criticism of it.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority, which has come into being since the last session of Congress, now employs in the District of Columbia 768 employees, with a pay roll of $1,955,500. In the field it employs 2,778 employees, with a pay roll of $5,089,228, making a total of 3,546 employees and a pay roll of $7,044,728. In addition to that, there were 75 employees in both the District of Columbia and the field paid out of W. P. A. funds, with an annual pay roll of $179,880.

Those figures compare with the following figures for the Interstate Commerce Commission. I do not need to expatiate on the activities of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the tremendous volume of work it has to do. The Interstate Commerce Commission employs only 2,593 persons, as against 3,546 employed by the new Civil Aeronautics Authority. The pay roll of the Interstate Commerce Commission amounts to only $7,065,000, as against $7,044,000 for the new Civil Aeronautics Authority. If the Civil Aeronautics Authority, in the few brief months of its existence, has made such strides as that, no one can estimate the number of employees they will have on the pay roll by the end of the next fiscal year.

Mr. President, it seems to me that if there is any agency of the Government which may require a little regulation. it is the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield. Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Has the Senator from Missouri made any investigation to ascertain whether any of these employees are not needed to carry out the necessary functions of the Authority?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I have not had the opportunity to make such an investigation, but I say that when a Commission set up to regulate the air lines employs a far larger number of persons than the combined total of all the employees of the air lines it is set up to regulate, it is a preposterous proposition on its face. In other words, Mr. President, the number of persons on the pay roll of the Civil Aeronautics Authority is in excess of the number of persons on the pay rolls of all the air lines combined they are set up to regulate. I cannot reconcile that with efficient government.

Mr. President, I desire to detain the Senate for just one moment more in order to put into the RECORD a few figures of other commissions comparable to the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The Federal Communications Commission, having jurisdiction of great engineering problems in connection with radio, telephone, telegraph, and other forms of communication, employs only 618 persons, with a pay roll of The Maritime Commission, charged with the $1,529,140. duty of regulating safety and rates, and of actually superintending the building of ships in the whole tremendous program of the merchant marine which has been set up, has 1,010 employees, with an annual pay roll of $2,695,440.

It seems to me that no argument is necessary on this matter other than the statement of those figures.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish to express complete agreement with everything the distinguished Senator from Missouri has said. We have heard a great deal of debate in the last few days about what ought to be included and what ought to be excluded. There is a rule of reason and reasonableness which ought to run through all these things. I agree with everything that has been said about the extravagance of Government, and the continually increasing expenses of all the bureaus which have been set up. Here is the most recently established bureau, which, according to my information, has increased the number of its employees by 1,000 in the short period of its existence.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. REED. I prefer to conclude, if the Senator from Nevada will permit me, and then he may have the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Will the Senator yield for a question? Mr. REED. I hope the Senator will excuse me. What I shall have to say will be very brief.

Mr. McCARRAN. I merely wanted to set the Senator right by way of a question. However, if he does not wish to be set right, it is all right with me.

Mr. REED. Very well; I yield to the Senator from Nevada. Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator know that the Civil Aeronautics Authority took over 2,900 employees who were enrolled under the Department of Commerce at the time the Civil Aeronautics Authority came into existence, and that it has taken over none since that time?

Mr. REED. I admit to the Senator from Nevada that my opportunity for investigation has been incomplete. However, I take the position that the Civil Aeronautics Authority is the most recent of the various bureaus which have been created under this administration, and if there is a single activity which ought to be subject to the executive branch of the Government, which ought to be available for control, limitation, adjustment, organization, and reorganization, it is the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

I hope the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada will not prevail. Certainly this organization is an outstanding example of a bureau which ought to be under the direct and immediate control of its creator, which, of course, was Congress, but upon the recommendation of the President.

I hope the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. BYRNES and Mr. McCARRAN addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief statement with reference to the matter under discussion.

In the House of Representatives an amendment was offered to the bill to exempt the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 123 to 47. The amendment now offered assumes that the President is going to transfer the Authority to some other department of the Government. I have no knowledge that that is true. There is no reason for assuming it to be true. However, I must say that I am in accord with what has been said by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. The facts with reference to the organization are such that the Congress should be willing to leave the matter open for consideration until after we have had sufficient time to see what is done by the organization.

We all know what happened. There was a compromise in the views of those interested with reference to the subject, and the Civil Aeronautics Authority was established as the most remarkable organization in the Government. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] will remember that when the general counsel of the Authority came before the Appropriations Committee just about 6 weeks ago, he made the following statement in referring to the organization of which he is general counsel:

Out of that grew a rather strange organization,, consisting of an authority of five members, to which are entrusted quasi legislative and judicial functions under the act; an administrator who is an independent officer in some respects

He was not very emphatic in his statement when he said "an administrator who is an independent officer in some respects."

The fact is that the Authority is a house divided against itself. When the Appropriations Committee went into the consideration of the bill carrying an appropriation for this organization for the next fiscal year, it received requests for hearings from officials who wanted to change the language of the appropriation as it passed the House and as it was recommended by the Bureau of the Budget. When they came before the Appropriations Committee we endeavored to see what the difficulty was. We heard some officials representing the administrative functions of that organization. They wanted to change the language so that they would control the expenditure of administrative funds. The members of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, administering the regulatory features of the act, were opposed to that course. We had to have a hearing as to two different organizations within an organization.

Finally I inquired of the Director of the Budget what reason he had for submitting to Congress the language which he submitted; and I learned from him that the members of the Authority and the Administrator had been to the Director of the Budget with the same pleas and the same intraorganization fight.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The Senator undoubtedly is aware of the fact that there is now before the Congress a supplemental estimate for $1,600,000 on behalf of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to bail them out for the excessive expenditures for the rest of the current year.

Mr. McCURRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator realize that never before in the history of the country was any independent organization asked to perform the functions that this independent organization has been asked to perform? This independent organization has been asked to make a survey of the entire United States with the idea of establishing airports in the several sections.

I wish to go a little further, so that the Senator may expound his thought along certain lines. I shall answer the Senator when he has concluded.

A program has been set up for this independent agency to carry out, and it has attempted to carry it out, not only under the Authority but also under the direction of Congress, with the idea that the Authority must serve the entire United States in the establishment of airports in America.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I know that; and I shall refer to it, if the Senator will permit me. Then the Senator can make reply.

The facts are as stated by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. In the few months of its existence, the Authority has accumulated a staff of 3,655 persons, according to the estimates. The Senator gave the exact number. It has 1,000 more employees than has the Interstate Commerce Commission. For the year 1940 the estimates provide for an additional 800 employees, so that next year the Authority will have 1,800 more employees than will the Interstate Commerce Commission.

What do we find with reference to the duties of the organization? Let us compare the regulatory features with the administrative features. With respect to the regulatory features, there is no doubt in my mind that, according to my idea of the distribution of Government organizations, the Authority should be an independent organization. But how much of the organization is regulatory and how much administrative? Of the total expenditures for the organization, those for regulatory features for the year 1939 are $4,617,000; for maintenance and construction, $11,333,000. For the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1939, the appropriation for regulatory features is $5,000,000, and for maintenance and construction $15,000,000, or a ratio of administrative to regulatory appropriations of 3 to 1.

Therefore, I have thought, in opposing the amendment, that in the case of an organization which is three-fourths administrative, whenever the President comes to make a survey of the Government departments he may well come to the conclusion, without disturbing in any way the regulatory features in which the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] are interested, that the features of construction, which involve the expenditure of $15,000,000 as against $5,000,000, may well be administered by a department of public works, if there were one, or by some other department.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. I will yield in a moment. If internal dissension continues—a dissension which is known to every member of the Appropriations Committee—the President might find that it would be advisable to separate the regulatory features from the administrative features, and let the organization perform the regulatory functions in the same manner in which the Interstate Commerce Commission performs its regulatory functions, putting the construction activities into another organization. After the experience of the Appropriations Committee I said to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce that the Commerce Committee should investigate the matter. The law was framed with the best intentions in the world of providing an organization which would function in a proper way, and without dissension; but if dissension is to exist to such an extent that even an appropriation bill cannot be sent to the Congress without having two sets of officers coming to see who shall have jurisdiction over the expenditure of money for expenses of traveling in the field, the Congress should reconsider the matter and determine who is boss in the Civil Aeronautics Authority. To whom must the Congress look for a statement of the Budget necessities of that organization? The Congress cannot consider the internal dissension within an organization. It cannot settle the internal row. It must rely upon its being settled in the executive department; and, if it is not done by the Chief Executive under the powers given him, the Congress should do it.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. McCarran. First of all, referring back to a statement made by the Senator a moment ago, that the matter of construction might be referred to some other department, does the Senator know that in the past 4 or 5 years we have referred the construction of air fields to other departments, with a resulting loss of $5,000,000, of which the Senator from South Carolina and myself, as members of the Appropriations Committee, are entirely cognizant?

The Senator says every member of the Appropriations Committee knows of the dissension which exists within this independent agency. I wish to say that I do not know of it, and I am a member of the committee of which the Senator is also a member.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, that is true, but when the dissension occurred the Senator was in Nevada. The Senator sent me a telegram, which I presented to the committee, with reference to the matter. I know the Senator will remember that he sent me a letter about the amendment. In the first place, the Senator was not a member of the subcommittee, and could not have known of it. However, the Senator was not present in the full committee. If the Senator will recall, he sent me a telegram telling of his interest in an amendment, and because of his interest I stated on the floor of the Senator that I had no objection to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

Mr. BYRNES. I knew the Senator would remember it. I wish the Senator had been present because it was no matter of pleasure to me. It was a matter of great disappointment to me, and I expressed that disappointment to the Chairman of the Authority, as well as to the other gentlemen representing the Authority. On the same day that the Senator from Nevada telegraphed me the Senator from Alabama presented to same request, and on the floor of the Senate I finally agreed to the amendment, which I understood represented some settlement of the differences in the Authority.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one more question?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator oppose my amendment because there is a difference of opinion within the Authority?

Mr. BYRNES. Oh, no. I say this-

Mr. McCARRAN. I take that to be the force of the Senator's argument.

Mr. BYRNES. That, partly. I say now that I oppose the amendment for the reason that when an agency of government is only one-third regulatory and is two-thirds administrative, there is no reason why it should be granted an exemption which is denied to other agencies of the Government.

Because of the President's interest in this particular agency it is my personal opinion that he has not in his mind now any idea of disturbing it; but I hope that when he investigates it, when he makes a survey, when he finds what the Appropriations Committee has found, he will give consideration to it, because of my firm conviction that something must be done about it, and that the President must do something to bring about greater accord in the administration of the act in which the Senator from Nevada has been so greatly interested.

I think, therefore, that the Civil Aeronautics Authority should not be put in the exempt class, beyond the power of the President to do anything about it hereafter should he conclude that something should be done 12 months from now, after we have had a longer time to see how the Authority functions. It should not be put beyond his power to do something about it, to place the construction features in some other department, apart from the regulatory features that are administered by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

I say again that I have no idea what the President's views are on the subject. I have never discussed the matter with him; but I do not know any reason why an exception should be granted to this one particular agency which is in this status when it is denied to others. I am sorry I cannot agree with the Senator from Nevada about the matter.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, before the Senator leaves the floor, will he admit that this agency has quasi-judicial functions?

Mr. BYRNES. I will. I said that one-fourth of its functions for the year 1940, $5,000,000, are quasi-judicial, and three-fourths, $15,000,000, are administrative. I will say that were all the functions quasi-judicial, I should have no objection at all to exempting the Authority; but when it is one-fourth, $5,000,000, quasi-judicial and three-fourths administrative, at some time between now and 1941, after there has been a survey, the Senator himself may conclude that it is wise to do something about the Authority, and he should not be denied that opportunity.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, first let me deal with the expressions of the able Senator from South Carolina in which he says that the President may change his mind about this matter.

Let me say to the Senate that for 5 years now I have been trying to bring about the establishment of an independent civil aeronautics agency. Finally, in January 1938, after the President had sent to Congress message after message on the subject, he called Representative Lea and the junior Senator from Nevada to the White House and asked them to reform the Civil Aeronautics Act in its present condition. Is he now going to change his mind again? I do not believe he is. I have enough faith in the President to believe that after 5 years of study on the part of a man who represents 130,-000,000 human beings as Chief Executive, he will not again change his mind after 7 months of Executive action on the part of an agency which he himself, by his message, created.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield for a question.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator from Nevada if he can escape the clear inference, from the debate of the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from Missouri, that it is definitely intended to meddle with the Civil Aeronautics Authority in some way, and the further inference that it is intended to split it up. Is not that already apparent?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I would rather have the question of the able Senator from Vermont answer itself. Then, again, I would rather have the history of this legislation answer the able Senator from Vermont.

May I repeat the history of this legislation? Let me say that in 1934 aviation in America was about to go out of existence, or, at least, to go into a chaotic condition. Three departments of the Government were attempting to control aviation. The private lending agencies of the country had refused to lend further, because they could not determine who was going to control this all-important factor of transportation. The Post Office Department, under Mr. Farley, was using it as a political club. I do not hesitate to make that statement. I make it emphatically, and I challenge the voice of any man on the floor of the Senate to deny the statement, because out of the researches throughout the country there came evidence of that fact. I say Mr. Farley was using this agency in the way I have described; but preceding Mr. Farley was Mr. Brown, also showing evidence of using this agency as a political factor.

So there is no politics in the matter. It is just a question of taking this agency out of politics. Let it be an independent agency. Let it be something that will stand out in this country in the same way that similar agencies today stand out in Germany, and in France, and in England, as the greatest agencies of commerce by way of the air. Why does aviation in these countries stand out? Because each of them long ago assigned this agency of transportation in its particular nation to an independent authority. We only had the courage to do it in the Seventy-fifth Congress. And now we want to take our agency out of that authority and put it where? Where will the investing public say that this all-important matter is going?

Let us say that one particular line which now seeks to borrow private money comes to a lending agency and says, "We propose to put in a certain line, or to augment our service along a certain line." Immediately the question arises, "Where will this activity be tomorrow? Who will have control over you tomorrow?" The railroads could answer, "The Interstate Commerce Commission has control over us." But who will answer for the Civil Aeronautics Authority if it is transferred from an independent agency?

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President, will the Senator

yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield for a question.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Is it not true that the Civil Aeronautics Authority has precisely the same quasi-judicial powers with regard to air commerce that the Interstate Commerce Commission has with regard to land commerce?

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator from Idaho is correct.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Then, if that is true, there cannot be any distinction between that body and the Interstate Commerce Commission with regard to exempting the Civil Aeronautics Authority from the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator from Idaho is entirely correct. The Interstate Commerce Commission has been exempted because it has quasi-judicial functions. This Authority has quasi-judicial functions. We ask that it also be exempted

I say again, as I said earlier in the day on the floor of the Senate—I said it here so that we might think about it for a moment—that if the Interstate Commerce Commission had been in existence for 50 years before it actually came into existence the railroads of America today would not be in the bankrupt condition in which we find them. They would not be in their present condition if the regulatory powers had only grown up with them.

According to the statement made by the able Senator from Missouri and the statement made by the able Senator from South Carolina, there may be some differences of opinion in the Civil Aeronautics Authority itself; but I wonder if the able Senator from South Carolina—if I may have his attention for a moment—or any member of the Interstate Commerce Committee now on the floor of the Senate will say that there are not differences of opinion in the Interstate Commerce Commission itself. I do not believe any Senator will deny that there are such differences of opinion. In all regulatory bodies there are differences of opinion.

I am a little astonished by the way the able Senator from South Carolina reads the record. It reminds me of someone who wants to impress a court with a phrase without reading the entire phrase. I read now from the hearings before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the United States Senate, of which the able Senator from South Carolina and I are both members, on the independent offices appropriation bill for 1940. I read from page 76, the identical page from which the able Senator read, under the caption "Organization of Civil Aeronautics Authority":

Mr. GUTHRIE. May I explain a somewhat complicated situation, Senator Adams? The act was drawn at the time when the reorganization bill was before the Congress. The Brownlow committee had commented on the Supreme Court decision in the Humphrey case, under which the President did not have the power to remove quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative officers.

I now come to the part read by the able Senator from South Carolina; and I say again, now that I have his attention, that I am entirely astonished that an able lawyer such as he is, and an able Member of this body, should read only a part of a sentence, when the whole sentence explains the entire meaning of the man testifying before the committee.

Out of that-

Mr. Guthrie says-

grew a rather strange organization, consisting of an Authority of five members, to which are intrusted quasi legislative and judicial functions under the act; an Administrator, who is an independent officer in some respects.

Of course, the Administrator is not an independent officer at all. In no respect is he an independent officer. He never was intended to be an independent officer. He is under the Authority. The body was named the Civil Aeronautics Authority, consisting of five members, and the Administrator acts under the Authority. He is subject to the will of the Authority and always will be, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I desire to interrupt only because the Senator is interested in the act. I certainly thought I read—in fact, I know I read—just what the Senator has read.

Mr. McCARRAN. I quoted what the Senator read, and also what he did not read.

Mr. BYRNES. I did not read the whole page. I was reading just one statement.

Mr. McCARRAN. I did not read the whole page. I read the statement.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator is under the impression that the Administrator is under the Civil Aeronautics Authority in the administration of the act.

Mr. McCARRAN. Of course he is.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator should be better informed about it than I am, because he is more familiar with it; but the act, in section 301, on page 14, contains this provision:

The Administrator and the Air Safety Board shall cooperate with the Authority in the administration and enforcement of this act.

I will say to the Senator that that language—not that the Administrator shall be subject to the Authority, but that the Administrator and the Board shall cooperate with the Authority—is what causes those gentlemen, according to the information I have, to conclude that no one is under the other, and that they all have equal authority; and that is responsible for the dissension. I think the trouble arises from the language I have read—and again I am not reading the whole section, but that is the sentence to which I refer:

The Administrator and the Air Safety Board shall cooperate with the Authority in the administration and enforcement of this act.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the fact that we are dealing with a bureau which is now, from an administrative standpoint, in the making, causes differences of opinion. But shall we destroy this all-important agency of Government simply because within the ranks of those who constitute the administrative agency there may be a difference of opinion?

Let me refer again to those who have studied this matter, none greater than the President, whom the able Senator from South Carolina assumes to represent by his statement

Mr. BYRNES. O Mr. President, I would not want the Senator to think that I know anything at all about what the President believes as to this question. I have not talked to the President about the bill.

Mr. McCarran. The President's views have been impressed by the letter I had read today, and by his message.

Mr. BYRNES. I did not want the Senator to say that I assume to speak for the President. I do not.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will modify that.

Mr. BYRNES. I do not speak for the President.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let me say, in honor to the Senator, that it is quite prevalently reported that he is the voice of the President, and I like to have him given that credit.

Mr. BYRNES. That is very fine, because the President is said to have a wonderful voice.

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; and the Senator from South Carolina is a wonderful man; so the two run together.

Mr. President, let me now deal with the observations made by the Senator from Missouri, in which he charged that the Civil Aeronautics Authority had become overburdened with employees. Let me remind the Senator that in the law the Authority was compelled to take over all the Federal employees in the Aeronautics Bureau of the Department of Commerce, and that Bureau, when this law came into existence, had 2,900 employees. In addition to that, this Authority, by the terms of the law, was compelled to make a survey, so that they might report to Congress on every available airport in the United States.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. If I recall correctly, the Senator from Missouri stated a moment ago, in making his observations to the Senate, that the Civil Aeronautics Authority at present employed approximately a thousand more men than are employed by the Department of Commerce. Is that true?

Mr. McCARRAN. Will not the Senator state that again? Mr. REYNOLDS. It is my understanding that the Senator from Missouri stated in his observations a moment ago that at the present time the Civil Aeronautics Authority employs about 1,000 more than are employed by the Department of Commerce.

Mr. McCarran. Of course, if that statement was made by the Senator from Missouri, I would deny it flatly, because the record is to the contrary. But let me say in explanation—and I have the figures before me, and will put them into the Record—that the Civil Aeronautics Authority took over from the Bureau of Air Commerce as it was in the Department of Commerce 2,778 employees. That was pursuant to law. The President wanted those employees taken over, and they were taken over.

Mr. REYNOLDS. And they were assumed initially by the new Authority?

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In addition thereto, how many employees are there?

Mr. McCARRAN. In addition thereto there are about 375 or 400 employees.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Then, as a matter of fact, since the organization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the organization itself has employed only about three or four hundred new employees?

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct; and they have now a total of 3,621 employees.

Mr. REYNOLDS. May I inquire how that compares with the total number of employees in the Department of Commerce itself? Mr. McCARRAN. I am unable to answer. I would say it is probably half; but that may be a wild guess.

Mr. REYNOLDS. May I inquire of the Senator further as to whether or not he is conversant with the number of employees under the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am not conversant with that; I cannot answer. Perhaps the Senator from Montana will answer the question. Will not the Senator from Montana enlighten the Senate as to the number of employees in the Interstate Commerce Commission, approximately?

Mr. REYNOLDS. The total number.

Mr. WHEELER. I have not the figures with me, and I would not attempt to state the approximate number.

Mr. BYRNES. The total number is 2,649.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I should like to be permitted to bring to the attention of the junior Senator from Nevada the fact that this Authority extends beyond continental United States; it extends into Canada, it extends to all the Territories, and, in addition, it extends to every place upon the face of the earth where we have established air lines or where American companies or financiers are about to establish air lines.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I was about to dwell on the fact that the Civil Aeronautics Authority extends from the aurora borealis on the north to the unknown Little America on the south, and it extends from continental America to God knows where. Continental America has reached out to bring to it the commerce or the world, and I may now say, in keeping with the suggestion of the able Senator from North Carolina, that no agency in the world has ever gone so far or invested so much or taken so much upon itself as that agency, which seeks today by private investment to bring the commerce of the world to America and to take American commerce abroad.

I do not wish to mention names, I do not desire to applaud anyone, but credit is deserved by the Pan American organization, which has extended its lines throughout the entire world, and if we as a Government are lending our efforts to obtain this great spread of the commerce of the United States, and if we find ourselves employing a great number in that effort, is there any more worthy effort in all the world than that which is directed to extending the commerce of the United States at a time when we do not know where we are going or how we are going to send out our surplus products?

Mr. President, in view of the fact that it has been declared that this independent agency is a great employer of a surplus of employees, and that the Lighthouse Service of the United States today employs 5,000, let me draw the attention of the Senate to the fact that this independent agency and its facilities cover far more in territory than all the lighthouse agencies, because it extends from one end of the globe to the other, because it extends all over the United States, because in every hamlet in the United States today the people are clamoring for air facilities for the transportation of mail and for the transportation of commodities. So whatever we are expending along this line is a dollar well expended.

Mr. President, I am surprised that this organization should come in for criticism, in view of the fact that this new agency has created but a small bureau as compared with what the agency did during the years it was in existence under the Department of Commerce and under the Post Office Department. I do not want this activity to go back again under three or four political agencies. I do not want it to be destroyed. I do not want the United States to go backward a half century in air transportation. I do not want us to lose control of that which means the development of American commerce, and, at the same time, the development of American defense, because every pilot who flies a civil air line plane is a potential soldier in time of war. Every man who scans the terrain under a commercial ship is in time of war the best-equipped man to fly military planes over the same terrain. If we have expended some money in investigating that activity and developing it in our Nation, are we going to say now that we are to go backward and again put this agency under the Department of Commerce?

Not long ago the Secretary of Commerce intimated that this whole branch would come back under him again. I hope that will never take place, because I do not want to place it under Mr. Hopkins for the reason that I do not want to burden him. In his great responsibility of developing commerce in the world I would not want to burden him with something which was foreign to his particular department. It was a burden to the Department of Commerce under former Secretaries. It should stand alone, and by itself.

Nor would I want it to be placed under the Post Office Department, because the Post Office Department is an institution entirely foreign to a commercial line. The Post Office Department should not control the railroads. If it should not control the railroads, then why should it control the air lines of the country? It may well see to it that air lines are developed—and that is the provision of the bill, that air lines may be so developed that air mail may be delivered to the various sections of the country.

Let this agency stand aloof from every political agency in the country, so that no one department of Government may be held responsible, and if there be differences of opinion within the agency, Congress, the power which created the independent facility, may rectify and arrange so that the differences may not exist.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amend-

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, some statements made today seem to have excited Senators to form a quick judgment regarding the pending amendment. I understood the statement of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], which seemed to excite certain Senators, to be to the effect that the Civil Aeronautics Authority employs more men than are employed by all of the air lines together. Is that correct, I The Senator from Missouri does not seem to be present.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, my recollection of the statement of the Senator from Missouri is that he said that the Civil Aeronautics Authority has more employees than all of the air lines of the United States combined.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, that is exactly the way I understood the statement. I observe that the Senator from Missouri is not present, and therefore I hesitate to make a statement, but I have been informed within a few moments of the number of employees the American air lines have, and I have been told the number of employees of some three other air lines.

The American Airline employs just under 2,000, the United Airlines employ about 2,000; the T. W. A. employs about 1,500; the Eastern Airlines employ about 1,400. That makes 7,000 employees. That alone should satisfy Senators who reacted so suddenly that the statement was slightly incorrect

I call attention to the fact that I have named only four out of a great number of air lines, and the employees of the other lines should be added to this group in order to indicate how inaccurate it is to oppose the amendment on a statement of such a character.

Mr. President, I ask leave to have inserted in the RECORD at this point in my remarks the short statement contained at page 154 and following of the hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate, a statement by Mr. Mason regarding the activity of the Civil Aeronautics Authority in education for safe flying.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Washington, D. C., January 15, 1939.
Working details of the initial phase of its plan to give flight training to 20,000 students a year in the schools and colleges of the country were sent today by the Civil Aeronautics Authority to 13 educational institutions in widely separated parts of the United States which will give the program a practical try-out during the second semester of the current school year.

The schools were chosen on the basis of pioneer work they have done in aeronautical engineering and in actual flight training of their students, as well as on their informal assurance to the Authority of their eagerness to participate in this project. Eight of the schools selected were named some time ago by the Authority of their eagerness to participate in this project.

Eight of the schools selected were named some time ago by the Authority, and to this list were added today the names of the University of Michigan, the University of North Carolina, the University of Kansas, and San Jose State College and Pomona Junior College in California. A total of 330 students between 18 and 25 will be selected for training in the entire group of schools with $100,000 in National Youth Administration funds allocated for the purpose by President Roosevelt when he announced the flight-training program on December 27. The President last week included in his national-defense message to Congress a request for a special appropriation of $10,000,000 to be used by the Civil Aeronautics Authority in the training of 20,000 student pilots during the 1939-40 school year if results obtained between now and next June demonstrate the soundness of the Authority's program.

This full-scale program would require the participation of several hundred schools and colleges in all parts of the country. Eventually, it is believed that flight training under the Authority's plan can be given not only to those actually attending schools and colleges, but through properly supervised extension courses, to qualified young men and young women in all walks of life.

In a letter sent to presidents of colleges and universities which are expected to carry out the demonstration phase of its training program, the Authority disclosed that the Army Air Corps, which has given its fullest cooperation since the plan was first conceived, because of the national-defense value of the reservoir of trained filers the Authority is attempting to create, will have its flight surgeons give free physical examinations to all students selected for training. School authorities, however, have been advised that their own physicians should conduct preliminary weeding-out examinations in order to spare the Army's flight surgeons an unnecessary burden of work. A list of physical standard warded to the educational institutions concerned.

The Authority revealed in its letter that participating colleges and universities which do not already offer flying training as a regular curricular or extracurricular activity are expected to follow in general the example of institutions that have pioneered in this field by arranging with qualified flying instructors now operating on airports within easy reach of their campuses to give the necessary flight instruction with their own planes.

As a means of insuring the wholehearted interest of the students themselves by requiring personal financial participation, it is felt that a nominal laboratory fee should be charged those taking the course.

"It is the Authority's feeling," the letter said, "that the individual schools and colleges participating in this plan should nominate the flight instructors they wish to engage and make all necessary arrangements with them, though such instructors and their equipment, of course, must be approved by the Civil Aeronautics Authority's inspectors before they can take part in our training plan."

The Authority indicated its belief that the schools selected al-

The Authority indicated its belief that the schools selected already are giving instruction in aeronautical engineering and other subjects directly related to flight training which is at least equivalent to the Civil Aeronautics Authority's requirements for ground-school training as a preliminary to actual flight instruction. It included with its letter, however, a copy of its approved ground-school curriculum as a guide to school authorities in making any minor adaptations of or additions to their existing courses which may be necessary to meet these standards.

may be necessary to meet these standards.

"In connection with the actual flight-training program," the Authority's letter said, "we are instituting a special controlled-instruction course differing materially from the general training now required for a private pilot's license, though generally similar to that required in flying schools whose curricula have been formally approved by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. This course calls for an initial period of 8 hours dual instruction plus 9 hours of dual check time by the instructor and 18 hours of solo flying time for the student, the dual check time to alternate with the student's solo flying on the basis of 30 minutes check flying for each hour of solo. It is felt that this type of instruction not only will result in a much higher degree of safety than now exists in private flight instruction where such supervision is not exercised, but that it will enable all candidates to pass with ease the required test for a private pilot's certificate at the end of 35 hours' instruction.

"As a special incentive to instructors selected under the Author-

"As a special incentive to instructors selected under the Authority's program it is intended, however, to pay for the training of each student on the basis of 50 hours' instruction with the understanding that only 35 hours' training need be given, if the student at the end of this time passes his examination for a private pilot's certificate."

A complete list of the educational institutions selected to par-A complete list of the educational institutions selected to participate in the first phase of the Authority's program follows: Purdue University, University of Alabama, University of Minnesota, University of Washington, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College (Arlington, Tex., branch), Georgia School of Technology, New York University, University of Michigan, University of North Carolna (State college at Raleigh), University of Kansas, San Jose State College, Pomona Junior College.

Senetar August This is the speech Mr. Meson, and this is the Senator Austin. This is the speech, Mr. Mason, and this is the release [indicating]?

Mr. Mason. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Brown in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran].

Mr. McNARY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BYRNES. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	Johnson, Calif.	Reed
Andrews	Davis	Johnson, Colo.	Revnolds
Austin	Donahey	King	Russell
Bailey	Downey	La Follette	Schwartz
Bankhead	Ellender	Lee	Schwellenbach
Barkley	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Bilbo	George	Logan	Shipstead
Bone	Gibson	Lucas	Smith
Borah	Gillette	McCarran	Stewart
Bridges	Glass	McNary	Taft
Brown	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bulow	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Burke	Gurney	Minton	Tobey
Byrd	Harrison	Murray	Townsend
Byrnes	Hatch	Neely	Truman
Capper	Hayden	Norris	Tydings
Chavez	Herring	Nye	Vandenberg
Clark, Idaho	Hill	Overton	Van Nuys
Clark, Mo.	Holman	Pepper	White
Connally	Hughes	Radcliffe	Wiley

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on what is known as the McCarran amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McKELLAR (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator from Utah [Mr. King] is paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour].

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] is detained at a meeting of the Naval Affairs Committee. I am advised that if present and voting he would vote "nay."

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt] is detained because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst], the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney] are detained in committee meetings.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] are detained on departmental matters.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Lundeen], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] is attending a conference on flood-control matters.

Mr. BYRNES. I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale], which I transfer to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], and vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 41, as follows:

The result	was announced-	-yeas so, nays	41, as 10110ws.
	YE	AS-38
Austin Bailey Bone Borah Bridges Burke Byrd Capper Clark, Idaho Danaher	Davis Donahey Frazier Gibson Gillette Glass Gurney Holman Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo.	Lodge McCarran McNary Mead Murray Nye Radcliffe Reynolds Shipstead Smith	Taft Tobey Townsend Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys White Wiley
	NA'	YS-41
Adams Andrews Bankhead Barkley Bilbo Brown Bulow Byrnes	Downey Ellender George Green Guffey Harrison Hatch Hayden	La Follette Lee Logan Lucas Maloney Minton Neely Norris	Russell Schwartz Schwellenbach Sheppard Stewart Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Truman

Connally

Hughes

Overton Pepper

NOT VOTING-17

Ashurst	Holt	Miller	Walsh
Barbour	King	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Caraway	Lewis	Pittman
Gerry	Lundeen	Smathers
Hale	McKellar	Wagner

So Mr. McCarran's amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments, and the third reading of the bill.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina desire recognition before action is taken on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I do not see the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] on the floor of the Senate at the moment. I desire to ask whether or not the amendments he previously referred to have been offered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is advised that the amendments have not been offered.

Mr. BYRNES. I offer the amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments will be stated. Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming is now on the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments have been offered. Does the Senator from South Carolina now withdraw them?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I withdraw the amendments. Mr. O'MAHONEY. I send forward an amendment and ask to have it stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated. The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 11, it is proposed to strike out the words "or such functions thereof."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I send forward another amendment which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated. The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 21, it is proposed to strike out the words "or the functions thereof" and to insert in lieu thereof a comma and the words "all of whose functions have been transferred pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. McNARY asked for the yeas and

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. BYRD. I desire to announce a pair between the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], who is unavoidably detained, and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour]. If the Senator from Montana were present, he would vote "yea," and if the Senator from New Jersey were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. BYRNES (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS], and will allow my vote to stand. If the Senator from New Jersey were present, he would vote "yea." If the Senator from Maine were present, he would vote "nay."

Senator from Maine were present, he would vote "nay."
Mr. LEWIS. The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] are detained at Government departments on official business. I am advised that if present and voting they would vote "yea."

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holf] is detained because of illness in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is unavoidably detained, and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] is absent, attending a conference on flood-control matters.

Mr. WHITE. I announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. If he were present, he would vote "nay" on the passage of the bill. The result was announced—yeas 63, nays 23, as follows:

YEAS-63

Adams	Donahey	Lewis	Reed
Andrews	Downey	Logan	Reynolds
Ashurst	Ellender	Lucas	Russell
Bankhead	George	McCarran	Schwartz
Barkley	Gillette	McKellar	Schwellenbach
Bilbo	Green	Maloney	Sheppard
Bone	Guffey	Mead	Shipstead
Brown	Harrison	Minton	Smith
Bulow	Hatch	Murray	Stewart
Burke	Hayden	Neely	Taft
Byrd	Herring	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Byrnes	Hill	O'Mahoney	Thomas, Utah
Chavez	Hughes	Overton	Truman
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper	Van Nuys
Clark, Mo.	La Follette	Pittman	Wagner
Connally	Lee	Radcliffe
CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF THE	NA	YS-23
Austin	Frazier	King	Townsend
Borah	Gerry	Lodge	Tydings
Bridges	Gibson	Lundeen	Vandenberg
Capper	Gurney	McNary	White
Danaher	Holman	Nye	Wiley
Davis	Johnson, Calif.	Tobey
Davis		OTING—10
Bailey	Glass	Miller	Wheeler
Barbour	Hale	Smathers
Caraway	Holt	Walsh

So the bill H. R. 4425 was passed.

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the conference report on House bill 3791, the military aviation bill, which lies on the table, and that it be considered at this time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have no objection to bringing up the conference report at this time. If it does not involve very much debate we might consider it this afternoon. Otherwise, I ask that it go over until tomorrow.

Mr. LEWIS. I am informed that that which was controversial has been settled. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] informs me that his objection is now satisfied. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan] and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], the other two conferees, may inform the Senate if there is any objection.

Mr. BARKLEY. I had indicated that at the conclusion of the consideration of the bill which we have had under consideration all week I intended to move that the Senate adjourn until tomorrow. If the conference report does not involve any debate, I have no objection to its consideration.

Mr. LEWIS. If it does, I shall withdraw the request. Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, this is a very important The report should have been agreed to sometime ago. The House is very urgent about it, and so is every one else. I do not think there is any objection. Mr. BARKLEY. I do not object to the report being brought up now. It is a privileged matter anyway.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows: tive Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, and 37.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 6, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 22, 23, and 25, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In Ileu of the language proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "one or more of which shall be designated by the Civil Aeronautics Authority for the training of any Negro air pilots,"; and the Senate agree to the

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 14. All the provisions of section 3 of the act of March 27, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 505; 49 Stat. 1926), and as amended by this section, shall be applicable with respect to contracts for aircraft or any portion thereof for the Army to the same extent and in the same manner that such provisions are applicable with respect to contracts for aircraft, or any portion thereof for the Navy: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall exercise all functions under such section with respect to aircraft for the Army which are exercised by the Secretary of the Navy with respect to aircraft for the Navy: Provided further, That section 3b of the act of March 27, 1934 (48 Stat. 505), as amended (49 Stat. 1926; 34 U. S. C., Supp. IV, 496), is hereby further amended by inserting in the first sentence after the words "for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or portion thereof, and in excess of 12 per centum of the total contract prices for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete aircraft or portion thereof"; by inserting in the first proviso after the words "That if there is a net loss on all such contracts or subcontracts" the words "for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or portion thereof"; and the interior at the conference of the Serveries of the construction and vessel or portion thereof"; and the interior of the construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or portion thereof." construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or portion thereof,"; and by inserting at the end of the first proviso after the words "income taxable year" a comma and the words "not that if there is a net loss, or a net profit less than 12 per centum, as aforesaid, on all such contracts or subcontracts for the construcaforesaid, on all such contracts or subcontracts for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete aircraft or portion thereof completed by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income taxable year, such net loss or deficiency in profit shall be allowed as a credit in determining the excess profit, if any, during the next succeeding four income taxable years, and that the method of ascertaining the amount of excess profit, initially fixed upon, shall be determined on or before June 30, 1939": Provided further, That when aircraft are procured by the Secretary of War as a result of competitive bids requiring the submission of sample aircraft with bid, the Secretary is authorized, in his discretion, to purchase sample aircraft of competitors to whom an award is not made, not more than one each from not more than three such competitors, in order of merit, at prices not exceeding 75, 60, and 50 per centum, respectively, of the cost applicable in the opinion of the Secretary to the development and manufacture of such sample aircraft."

And the Senate agree to the same.

And the Senate agree to the same.

J. HAMILTON LEWIS, M. M. LOGAN, M. M. LOGAN, WARREN R. AUSTIN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
A. J. MAY,
EWING THOMASON,
DOW W. HARTER,
W. G. ANDREWS,
DEWING SHOPE DEWEY SHORT Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] inform the Senate what disposition was made of the amendment offered by the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY]?

Mr. LEWIS. That amendment was not agreed to, and therefore is not now in the bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Does the Senator mean that the amendment was eliminated altogether?

Mr. LEWIS. The amendment has been eliminated alto-

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I merely wish to say that I hope the employees of the country, the wage earners of the country, will appreciate that the treatment of the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky, which would afford protection to those employed in plants where munitions of war are to be purchased, is merely a foretaste of what will happen to labor in this country and to the legislation which has been erected for its protection if the United States should become involved in another war.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I ask for action upon the | report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the conference report is agreed to.

PRINTING OF HEARINGS BEFORE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON TAXATION OF GOVERNMENTAL SECURITIES AND SALARIES

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Printing, I report back favorably, without amendment, Senate Concurrent Resolution 6 and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 6) submitted by Mr. Brown on March 7, 1939, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Special Committee on Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 1,000 additional copies of the hearings held before said committee during the current session on the resolution (S. Res. 303, 75th Cong.) establishing a Special Committee on the Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Kentucky if it is his purpose at this time to move to

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. I was planning to state to the Senate that it is my purpose to move to adjourn until noon

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] has indicated his desire to take up a cotton bill which is on the calendar, and which has been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I do not know anything about the merits of the measure, but the Senator is entitled to move for its consideration and to have it considered. I think that is about the only business which will be before the Senate tomorrow, except a possible call of the calendar. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] has a resolution lying on the table which he indicated he desires to have considered tomorrow.

Mr. GEORGE. I certainly shall bring it up tomorrow, if possible. I shall bring it up during the morning hour, and hope to obtain final consideration of it before the morning

Mr. BARKLEY. Also, I am informed by the Committee on Appropriations that no appropriation bill is now ready for the consideration of the Senate.

Mr. SMITH. Earlier in the day I spoke to the Senator from Kentucky about taking up the bill to which reference has been made. He indicated that perhaps the military appropriation bill might be ready tomorrow. Since he has indicated that it is not, I shall move tomorrow to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1303, which has been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from Kentucky when he expects to have a call of the calendar.

Mr. BARKLEY. We shall have a call of the calendar tomorrow during the morning hour, if possible, or at the very earliest opportunity.

Mr. CONNALLY. I hope the Senator will do so, because it has been a number of days since there has been such a call.

Mr. BARKLEY. I realize the importance of calling the calendar at an early date.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I do not intend to discuss the matter; but I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1303, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, with respect to cotton.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask the Senator why he does not defer that motion until tomorrow. Some of us may want to object to the consideration of the measure at this

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, all I have to say is that I think every Member of this body ought to recognize the condition in which agriculture finds itself. When the bill is under discussion I shall give some figures to show that we have been talking about the forgotten man. He has the least resistance, and therefore he gets the butt of everything that is done here.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator will lose no rights by letting the matter go over until tomorrow.

Mr. SMITH. Oh, yes, Mr. President; I am perfectly willing to let it go over until tomorrow, as everything else that pertains to the farmer goes over.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nomination of Haden H. Phares to be postmaster at Clinton, La., in place of R. A. Dilly, removed, which was ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Van Nuys in the chair). If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. That completes the calendar.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 22 (legislative day of March 16), 1939

MONTANA

Lewis W. Fetterly, Eureka. John R. Kruger, Plains.

Albert J. Dorris, Thompson Falls.

OREGON

Ann B. Heydon, Valsetz.

PENNSYLVANIA

Millie E. Moore, Westover.

WISCONSIN

Vincent J. Dwyer, Alma Center.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Blessed art Thou, O Lord God of heaven and earth. Incline our hearts to keep Thy law. Help us to accept our joys as Thy blessings, our duties as Thy commands, and our sorrows as Thine appointments. Endue us with such a strong faith that shall enable us to believe that Thou wilt turn that which seems harmful to us into everlasting good. So influence our wayward wills that we shall not walk in selfish ways, nor forget the bonds which bind us one to another. For Thy goodness and mercy, for the opportunity of service, for love and sympathy, we thank Thee. Of all this wondrous world we see, Thou art, O God, its life and light; all things fair and bright declare Thy glory. Dear Lord, forgive our failures and keep us ever Thine; so shall we be rich, indeed. Through Christ our Saviour. Amen,

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address I delivered by electrical transcription at Washington, D. C., on March 16, 1939, and a short letter written to me by a constituent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. Sabath asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker. I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I call to your attention the enormous amount of propaganda now being sent to Members of Congress in behalf of the additional one hundred and fifty million for relief, so urgently requested by the President in his three messages to Congress. Who is behind it? I refer you to letters I received from C. I. O. affiliates:

(1) The United Federal Workers of America, affiliated with Congress of Industrial Organizations, 532 Seventeenth Street

NW., Washington, D. C.

(2) Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, affiliated with

C. I. O., Dauphin Building, Harrisburg, Pa.

(3) A thousand circulars from Workers' Alliance of Pennsylvania, collective-bargaining agency for unemployed and W. P. A. workers, 315 Market Street, Harrisburg, Pa., stating, "Save W. P. A. jobs," and so forth; "Mr. Congressman, either," and so forth; "or," and so forth.

(4) Mr. Speaker, I received in a franked envelope from Philadelphia, Pa., postmarked March 21, 1939, from the Works Progress Administration, housekeeping aide project, 534 North Orianna Street, Philadelphia, Pa., marked "Official business," the following:

SAVE W. P. A. JOBS

President Roosevelt has acted to stop all W. P. A. lay-offs and save W. P. A. jobs by requesting Congress to appropriate $150,000,000 more for W. P. A.

If this money is not appropriated, 100,000 W. P. A. workers in Pennsylvania will lose their jobs.

Either: You support the request for an additional $150,000,000 for W. P. A.

Or: I will hold you personally responsible if W. P. A. workers are laid off; if unemployment increases; if business suffers in the district you represent.

W. P. A. Ed. and Rec., Delaware County, Pa.; Helen W. Fulweiler, Orchard, Lower Rose Valley; Priscilla Jenkins, 1721 Bainbridge Street; Rose F. M. Serwazi, 2735 Somerset Street; Andrew Falcone, 731 South Twelfth Street; Margaret Craig, 5031 Market Street; Anne M. Duffy, 2335 North Seventeenth Street; Marie F. Walter, 3322 North Fifteenth Street; Mary White, 2112 South Fifty-seventh

Also, Mr. Speaker, I herewith submit an article from the Erie Dispatch-Herald, of Erie, Pa., Monday, March 20, 1939, showing how they are intimidating the State legislators in Pennsylvania:

PICKET LINE TO PROTEST BILL-WORKERS' ALLIANCE TO FIGHT RELIEF MEASURE

Protesting against a bill which would allow county relief boards to assign relief recipients to jobs on various types of public works, members of the Workers' Alliance this afternoon were planning to picket the home of East County Assemblyman John Van Allsburg at North East.

Heading the picket line will be Joseph Kress, State president of the Pennsylvania Workers' Alliance, who is here to address a meet-ing of his organization in C. I. O. headquarters at Eleventh and State Streets this evening.

Kress attacked the bill, which Van Allsburg this morning announced would shortly be introduced before the State legislature, claiming that such a measure would fail to provide "adequate and humane relief as promised by the James' administration."

He declared that it would mean that a single man would be forced to work for perhaps an entire week for $4.40.

Kress also stated that his organization is definitely opposed to the county board system of relief administration because of the politi-cal dangers that such a system would involve.

The Van Allsburg home on Buffalo Road is to be picketed for several hours, Kress told the Dispatch-Herald.

Mr. Speaker, it is propaganda of the worst sort, and the people of this country certainly will resent such propaganda to get easy money. Gentlemen, we need jobs at good, hard work for 8 hours a day, and they can be had if we all put our shoulder to the wheel and help private industry. [Applause 1

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address I delivered last night.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, the State of Maine offers to Mr. Ripley a "Believe it or not."

The State of Maine has been the subject of many goodnatured jests in recent years as a result of its peculiar political complexion. It seems proper therefore to share with our friends on the other side of the aisle and with the country the latest and best joke in the series. It is found today in the report of the Treasury Department where it appears that the State of Maine is the only State in the Union to show an increase in income-tax payments for this past year-a 20-percent increase as against an average decline for the country of 30 percent. This would seem to be a clear case to prove that political virtue is its own reward and to indicate that if the Nation will only follow Maine next year we will yet bail the country out. [Laughter and applause.]

TRUST INDENTURES

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD at this point in brief explanation of a bill I have just introduced.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, H. R. 5220 is a substitute for H. R. 2191, the proposed Trust Indenture Act of 1939, which was introduced by Mr. Lea, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, on January 10, 1939. The objectives of the original House bill, and of the companion Senate bill introduced by Senator BARKLEY, met with general approval, namely, the raising of the standards of corporate trust practice to the high level now observed by the more conscientious trust institutions, and the improvement of the nonbusiness features of trust indentures relating to the protection and enforcement of the rights of the bondholders. The new bill preserves those objectives and at the same time meets the criticisms of method which were developed at the hearings on the Senate bill

First. All of the requirements of the original bill have been converted into specific statutory requirements, with the exception of the provisions relating to the specific duties to be imposed upon the trustee prior to default, the kind of certificates and opinions upon which the trustee may rely, and the type of default as to which the trustee may not withhold notice from the bondholders. It is only with respect to these three matters that the S. E. C. will have any administrative authority to see that the indenture conforms to the legislative standards. All of the other requirements of the bill will be satisfied by the inclusion in the indenture of provisions in the precise language of the statute. These changes will greatly simplify compliance with the bill.

Second. In general, the bill will apply only to indentures which are now required to be filed and examined under the Securities Act of 1933. The provisions with respect to incorporation by reference and consolidation of applications, reports, and proceedings under the new bill with those under the Securities Act will avoid duplication and expense. In fact, a single combined statement will suffice, if both are filed at the same time. If the issuer desires, however, it may file its application for qualification of the indenture in advance of its registration statement and thus protect itself against the possibility of delay.

Third. The exemption limit has been increased from $250,-000 to $1,000,000. Statistics gathered by the S. E. C. show that the expense of registration of larger issues represents a comparatively small proportion of the total expense of public distribution, underwriter's commission, and discount being from four to nine times as important a factor.

Fourth. The provisions relating to the periodic reports by the trustee and the duties of the trustee after default have been clarified.

Fifth. The new bill is designed to insure that the S. E. C.'s refusal orders will be reviewable by the courts.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on the Judiciary, I ask unanimous consent that that committee may sit today and tomorrow during the sessions

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is that agreeable to the Republican members of the committee?

Mr. CELLER. It is.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What is the subject under consideration?

Mr. CELLER. The California oil lines bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject of radio activities.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, now that it is generally recognized as an accepted fact that the next occupant of the White House will be a Republican, we in Illinois are particularly anxious that the next Republican National Convention be held in Chicago, the wonder city of the world. I have written to Hon. John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, urging the selection of Chicago. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that I may insert a copy of my letter to Mr. Hamilton at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the letter to which I refer is as follows:

MARCH 20, 1939.

Mr. JOHN HAMILTON

Chairman, Republican National Committee,

MY DEAR CHARMAN: This is to submit to you for your personal consideration, as well as to the Republican National Committee, a specific location in which our party should hold its 1940 national convention.

I am not unmindful of the many things to be considered by your committee in the selection of such a convention city.

Great as are the demands that it be a city of accessibility, of temperate climate. transcontinental transportation, adequate existing facilities for essential communication, hotel accommodations, and a dozen other items looking to the convenience and comfort of the delegates which must be considered. There is one other essential thing which transcends comfort and convenience to its delegates, which is the confidence which would flow out of a convention, held in the very heart of the United States in a land-locked city, where all American citizens could look from all points of the compass into the very heart of the convention. To a convention where they could give and dominate by the very weight of their great moral and political influence the selection of the candidates, who will carry their standards and merit their greatest support in the coming Presidential election.

The future history of our county will long revolve around this coming convention of the Republican Party.

Out of the elected delegates must come the formulation and projection of American national policies of vital interest to every citizen, the future of our children, our farmers, our labor, and our private and public fortunes, which are in the balance.

The 1940 convention should be primarily national, and only secondarily should it be partisan by the ever-lengthening of the rolls of the unemployed under the "Roosevelt Democratic New Deal Party." They can only find the solution of their unemployment and their future security insured by gainful employment in private industries.

Our agriculture, our labor, and our initiative must be given a

Our agriculture, our labor, and our initiative must be given a new birth of freedom. Our Federal Government in Washington must be stripped of its every bureaucratic and autocratic powers, its spendthrifts must be expelled from public office, or else we will continue to plunge headlong into debt repudiation, national bankruptcy, and national decay.

Let these vital public questions be openly debated in a forum held in a truly American city, in an industrial city located in the heart of our great agricultural farmside. Insure the openness of its debate equally against those who wax fat, either on political pillage, patronage, or foreign propaganda.

I submit to your consideration and urge upon your committee the name of a city, young in our national history but a city which in the not distant future will become not only the greatest but the largest city of our land. I submit to you the city of— Chicago—the hog butcher of the world; the maker of steel, of tools, and of implements; the stacker of wheat; the center of railroads; the continent freight handler.

roads; the continent freight handler.

Chicago, a vital, a bureau-young American city * * * located in the Mississippi Corn Belt, set down on the shores of the Great American Lakes. A city which pulses and throbs with purely American sentiments. * * * A city built with confidence in the future of our farms and our industries.

Let there ring forth from a center such as this, national program and policies conceived by the representatives of the people in honesty and decency, to be expounded in truth by the candidate of our selection to our people everywhere.

Then, indeed, will our fellow citizens, without regard to party, fearlessly face the ballot box, confident there is a way out of this long nightmare of New Deal hard times; then will all Americans go down a highway to a greater measure of national prosperity than down a highway to a greater measure of national prosperity than we have ever known before.

Thanking you for giving this your earnest consideration,

Very truly yours,

LEO E. ALLEN. M. C. Thirteenth Illinois District.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a resolution passed by the Indiana House of Representatives and Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including a radio address I delivered in the New York Herald Tribune Forum last fall.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

SECOND DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, 1939

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 260), which was read a first and second time and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TABER reserved all points of order on the bill. Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5219, the second deficiency appropriation bill; and pending that, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate may continue for 2 hours, to be equally divided between the gentleman from New York and myself, the debate being confined to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5219, the second deficiency appropriation bill, with Mr. Cole of Maryland in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the committee print of the bill and the committee print of the report are available if members of the Committee wish to have them.

The bill provides a total appropriation of $160,833,931, and in addition to that there are some contractual authorizations. A full statement is set out on page 2 of the committee report and I shall not take the time to analyze further that statement unless there are questions to be asked about it.

There is a net reduction made by the committee of $21,962,903 in the amount estimated by the Bureau of the Budget.

I think I shall briefly touch the high points in the bill and then yield briefly for questions, if anyone wishes to ask any.

One of the deductions made in the bill is under the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The committee allowed sufficient funds for the Civil Aeronautics Authority to continue its present set-up during the remainder of the fiscal year, or at least to function at its January expenditure rate, and earmarked $144,750 for the procurement of airplanes for the Air Safety Board, but did not report favorably the estimate of $7,300,000 for student-civilian pilot training, there being no organic authorization for such a program. This program, however, is now under consideration by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House, and doubtless that committee will shortly make some report to the Congress on the subject.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. This does not indicate any hostility to the project, as I understand.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. None whatever.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. The action of the committee was simply due to the failure to have an authorization.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. It is a very broad and comprehensive program, and the deficiency subcommittee did not think such a program should be launched without a very careful hearing, which we were not in a position to give, even if we had jurisdiction.

There is an item of $5,000,000 estimated by the Bureau of the Budget and coupled with the Works Progress Administration, which affects irrigation projects in the Dakotas and in Montana and other States in the Great Plains area. The committee went into that matter very carefully, but there is no authorization in the law for the project, as it is proposed to be handled, and I may say to the Committee that we have not brought in any item in this bill for which there is no authorization of law.

There are certain items provided in the bill for the District of Columbia, and they are payable out of District of Columbia funds.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. In connection with what the gentleman said about the Dakotas and Montana, I believe in a deficiency bill passed a year ago there was a provision for an appropriation of $5,000,000 for irrigation projects in the Dakotas and Montana to take care of the drought-stricken areas there, but the appropriation was tied up by a restriction that only $50,000 could be used for any one project, which really makes that appropriation inoperative, and I understand the Director of the Budget so advised the President, and that statement will be found in House Document 194. I believe it is. I mailed this document to the chairman of the committee yesterday. I believe that law should be amended so as to remove this restriction on the $5,000,000.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I may say to the gentleman from Montana that the gentleman was most industrious and very much interested in this item which affects his State and in which there is undoubtedly a great deal of merit. The committee went into it very carefully and there is no possible question about the fact that at present it is not authorized by the organic law; and that being the case, regardless of its merit, we were powerless to include it in this bill.

The Department of Agriculture has about the usual sum carried here for its forest-fire-prevention program. committee did not allow an item of $200,000 for Dutch elm disease eradication, feeling that the funds carried in the regular bill for the current fiscal year, of over $375,000, is Funds are allowed by the committee for the Department of Commerce, a goodly portion being for hurricane damage, and let me say here that there is carried in this bill under various titles more than $3,000,000 for the rehabilitation of Government property under the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard damaged by the New England hurricane.

Under the Interior Department an item for the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration of $3,000,000 was disallowed. I want to say here what I stated in the full Committee on Appropriations this morning. I think there is some question about whether the committee acted wisely in making this reduction, although I voted for it in the committee.

I should be glad to have you read the statement of the Assistant Administrator of the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration on page 7 of the report, where he speaks of the economic conditions in Puerto Rico, occasioned by the application of the wage and hour law, which practically has put all of their local industries out of commission. They have a real, tragic emergency down there. The committee did not allow this item, hoping that the failure to include it would precipitate immediate consideration of the fundamental question involved as to what you are going to do with that situation, which cannot be cured by simply sending more relief there.

The Department of Justice estimate of $600,000 for the Bureau of Investigation was cut to $300,000. It appeared in the hearings that notwithstanding very definite budgetary limitations the Bureau of Investigation had exceeded their Budget allocations, and employed people for which they had no funds, unless the Congress would give them a deficiency appropriation. Our Committee on Appropriations and each subcommittee has been doing everything in its power to prevent departments from operating in this fashion, feeling that the Congress should, by legislative enactment, determine their policies and their programs. We allowed in this bill enough money to continue the people who are already on the rolls, but did not allow the amount they asked for for expansion. We did not allow the sum of $70,000 requested as a deficiency for immediate expansion of the division of the Department of Justice concerned with antimonopoly and antitrust operations, feeling that that matter should come before the regular subcommittee which is shortly to take up the regular appropriation for the Department of Justice.

Items are carried here for the further carrying on of the construction program of the Navy. There are certain items for the Treasury Department, which are set out in detail.

Of course, 74 percent of the funds carried in this bill have to do with the Army and Navy, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, for the defense program. We carry in the bill the funds requested by the President for critical items for the defense program. You will find them fully set out and analyzed in the report. I will say to the committee that much of the testimony on those items was, as a matter of public policy, off the record. The committee has in its possession, subject to your inspection, if you wish to look at it, intimate details in connection with this program. We went through the proposals very carefully. The bulk of the money for the Army is under the Ordnance Department. It will be used in the procurement of critical items of equipment, such as ammunition, arms, weapons, and paraphernalia of various sorts to equip our standing Army and also our National Guard units. There is an amount also for seacoast defenses, $5,478,000, for projects in the United States, Panama, and Hawaii. A part of that amount is made up of contractual authority.

As I said, the committee went into the estimates very carefully. While there may be some little difference of opinica as to whether this or that item should be put off a year, or something of that sort, certainly in the main purpose of that defense program the committee is a unit in that the plan looks to be an orderly and logical strengthening of our defense forces, and recommends it to the Congress.

Mr. Chairman, unless there are some questions, I will yield the floor.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. The gentleman knows I am interested in the President's recommendation for a new research station to be located on the Pacific coast. I notice that this item has been left out of this bill. Is the Committee to understand from that that the Appropriations Committee is opposed to any further research development in this country?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I am glad the gentleman from California has called my attention to that item. I am very glad to testify to his great interest in this item for Sunnyvale.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 additional minutes.

The gentleman from California [Mr. Anderson] has been very industrious and persistent in advocating this item in the appropriation bill. The committee felt, and I think I can say without exception, that the building of another laboratory for research, which would involve an initial expense of ten or fifteen million dollars, was certainly not necessary at the moment. Undoubtedly, with our expanded program for the development of the air facilities for the Army, the Navy, and the Coast Guard, we should have increased research facilities.

It may well be that under mature consideration it will be advisable to build a plant at Sunnyvale, and perhaps others; but the Deficiency Committee felt there was not any emergency about it; there was no reason for any great rush about it; and that before embarking upon so comprehensive a program there should be more leisurely and more orderly consideration given to the project. There was no hostility to it. The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, in my judgment, is one of the best groups we have in the Government service, and the committee thinks a great deal of that agency and is disposed to lean upon its judgment.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. O'BRIEN. The gentleman spoke of the fact that there was a cut in the estimate of the Department of Justice of $300,000?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. A cut in the Budget estimate: yes.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That $300,000 cut will not impair the efficiency of any department, particularly the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in the gentleman's estimation?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I do not think it will. We gave them enough money to keep the present force intact.

Mr. O'BRIEN. You are aware of the fact that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has returned $10 for every dollar spent in perpetuating the organization.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I think it has been a very useful agency of the Government, but I think that every agency of the Government ought to handle its fiscal affairs in an orderly and logical way, and should not be permitted to expand its functions unless it has the authority of Congress to do so.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Has this particular branch, to the gentleman's knowledge, been guilty of such action?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Yes; it employed people right here who will have to be discharged unless we give this money. That is the difficulty about it.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, the portion of the bill which I desire to discuss at this time is that which has to do with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In going into the records we find that the President and the Director of the Budget have recently sent some two or three messages to the Congress in which certain items are recommended by both. Document No. 167, dated "the White House, February 16," signed by F. J. Bailey, executive assistant, Director of the Budget, recommends several items for the F. B. I., among which we find $600,000 for salaries and expenses, Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In looking over the report which I have been able to secure within only the last few minutes I find reference made to this item, and I direct your attention thereto so that you will be more familiar with the general trend in connection with this Department.

I would like to point out first that according to the available public records of the F. B. I. during the fiscal year 1938, the Department spent $6,222,976 for its complete operations. For the fiscal year 1939 it spent only $5,978,000, which is $244,000 less than the appropriation for last year.

In May 1938, former Attorney General Homer Cummings and Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the F. B. I., appeared before the Appropriations Subcommittee and stated that the Bureau would start the current fiscal year with a deficit and that additional funds would be needed in order to get through the year. As of January 1, 1939, there was an actual deficit in the appropriation of the Bureau in the amount of $425,923.

Recently the President recommended a deficiency item for the Bureau in the amount of $600,000. This would take care of the actual deficit and would permit the employment of 55 more special agents and 12 additional clerks for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The F. B. I. has been called upon to perform a number of duties which were not anticipated prior to the beginning of the current fiscal year. As newspaper reports indicate, considerable work has been done in connection with the investigation of members of the Federal judiciary; the antitrust work of the Department of Justice has brought about additional work for the Bureau; and espionage investigations have been required in all parts of the country. A large number of special agents is currently assigned to the two unsolved kidnaping cases—the one involving the kidnaping of Charles Fletcher Mattson, of Tacoma, Wash., and the one involving the kidnaping of Peter Levine, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

The fingerprint work of the F. B. I. has steadily increased. Recently, the President, in a public statement, encouraged the filing of the fingerprints of citizens and this is bringing about additional work. Many demands are being made upon the Bureau from all parts of the country for assistance in law-enforcement problems.

In connection with fingerprinting and the increase of work along this line you will remember that the President has just had the White House staff put through the works and had them fingerprinted. This is going to add momentum to the movement for civilian fingerprinting.

Since the passage of the Federal Kidnaping Act in June 1932 there have been 149 kidnaping cases and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has solved 147, the only unsolved cases being the two I mentioned. In bank-robbery cases there has been an 80 percent decrease of bank robberies throughout the United States since the Federal Bureau of Investigation was given jurisdiction to handle such work. Last year the Bureau brought about the conviction of 95 out of every 100 persons whom it took into court for trial. While the Bureau spent $6,222,976 last year, the total fines imposed, savings and recoveries effected, amounted to $47,568,419, which represents a good investment for the Government.

As I recall the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] only a few days ago stood on this floor and pointed out this tremendous saving, and highly complimented the accomplishments of the F. B. I.

I feel that it is imperative that the Federal Bureau of Investigation be granted sufficient funds which will enable it to efficiently carry on its many functions. The Subcommittee on Appropriations has recommended that the $600,000 deficiency item for the Federal Bureau of Investigation be reduced to $300,000. This reduction will necessitate a drastic curtailment in the activities of the Bureau and it is felt that it is imperative that Congress restore the full amount of the deficiency item so that the Bureau will not be hampered in the deficiency bill, the necessary funds should be provided for in the regular appropriations.

I wish someone on the committee—and I think perhaps the chairman would be the appropriate person to deal with it-would make very clear whether or not this reduction which has been made in the amount approved by the President and the Budget is only a tentative disallowance; and if, in setting up the Budget for the full fiscal year 1940 in the regular appropriation bill, it is the intention of the committee to bring into the allowances the full amount which will be required to run the F. B. I. without proceeding to cut down its operating staff or to hold down its operating staff and thereby materially cripple the work of this highly important Bureau, which, in my opinion, is becoming more important every day. I also understand there has been a material reduction of some $70,000 which the Bureau of the Budget and the President recommended, particularly in connection with the antitrust-law enforcement and the anticipation of this new work in this new field in which we are using the F. B. I. for the purpose of protecting small business. It ties in to what the Secretary of Commerce had to say at Des Moines, Iowa, the other night when he made an address of appeasement to business. There is no need for having antitrust laws unless you are going to have the F. B. I. and the Federal Trade Commission enforce them. Here we cut them down $70,000; and I assume that the chairman of the committee will probably point out that this is a tentative disallowance. If the chairman wishes in this regard, I shall be pleased to yield to him at this point to give us further light on this highly important proposition.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, with reference to the $70,000 to which the gentleman refers, I may say that the committee felt that, inasmuch as the regular subcommittee handling this appropriation is just about to take up the appropriation for 1940 and that that committee will consider this question, we should leave them unhampered. If they feel that the force should be augmented and expanded, they can make the necessary funds available. Our committee otherwise would be put in a position of giving them a temporary appropriation which would be a club over the head of the regular committee if, in their judgment, this work should not be expanded in 1940.

Mr. CRAWFORD. May I ask the gentleman this question: Would it be reasonable for us to assume, then, that it is not intended in any way to cripple the work of the Department, but this is simply a deferring of the appropriation for the action of the full committee?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That is correct.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In its general appropriation work?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. TABER. This Budget estimate that was cut by the committee, as I understand the situation, would carry the amount that is available to the F. B. I. way beyond the figure that is carried in the Budget estimate for the year 1940. The deficiency committee felt it should not pave the way for something like that immediately in advance of the Justice Department's committee's regular hearings, at which time they can go into the matter for 2 or 3 days if necessary and work out a program for next year. It felt it should not lay out next year's program in advance of the Budget.

Mr. CRAWFORD. May I ask this further question? The $266,940 which has been allowed, I understand, is sufficient to take care of the 85 special agents and the 28 clerks which have already been put on the pay roll up to June 30 this year?

Mr. TABER. That is the idea.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is that correct?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. This disallowance, then, in no way cripples the present staff?

Mr. TABER. That is right.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It permits them to go ahead and function?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It simply prevents the addition of these agents and clerks which were anticipated in the Bureau's recommendation?

Mr. TABER. Yes; but it does prevent them from going beyond the 1940 bill, and prevents them getting a set-up that they could not carry on after the 1st of July, perhaps.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And thereby incur a further deficiency?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona. Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. The gentleman is aware of the fact that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has had to close down some of its offices all over the country. He is also aware of the fact that its staff is short, so that they are doing more overtime work in that department than in any other I know in the city of Washington? Last year, when we made $65,000 available to F. B. I. at once, I was under the impression that that amount would remedy the situation with regard to their shortage, but apparently that was a wrong notion.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes. I would like to call the attention of all Members of the House to the record that was made on this particular proposition last June.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, if you will refer to the RECORD of June 8, 1938, page 8552, you will find considerable information which deals with this highly important work. You will find where the late Robert Bacon, of New York, who was a Member of this House, served notice that when he returned to the present session of Congress he would lead a special fight to see that first the Bureau of the Budget recommended the necessary funds for the operation of the F. B. I., to the end that we could no longer say the fault rested in the Budget rather than in the Appropriations Committee or on the floor of this House.

This is a subject which I assure you the entire country is watching with great interest, particularly organizations of women. It is a matter which we can well afford to pay strict attention to, in order to see that that Bureau is in no way handicapped on account of a few dollars that we may let them have.

Mr. Chairman, I am just hard-headed and practical enough to know how to appraise efficiency and public service when I run across it. If it will please some of my colleagues, may I say that I am just sentimental enough to also value and appreciate efficient service on the part of a Government bureau when it functions with the speed and satisfaction to the public as the F. B. I. renders. We can talk about letting our sentimentalism run away with us, but no other bureau of Government is called upon to face the cold steel of the underworld with all of its cunning and calculations. Running down and capturing, prosecuting, and convicting the kidnapers, bank robbers, and other thugs is no kid's play. Let the soft-living Members of this House go out and try one or two cases. Then we might have a little more respect for the personnel of the F. B. I.

WHO PLACED THE EXTRA AGENTS AND CLERKS ON THE PAY ROLL

Now let us look at the record in order to clear the brush away from some of the remarks made on the floor this afternoon. At the top of page 293 of the hearing we find this interesting statement made by Mr. Tamm to the effect that the placing on the pay rolls of the additional agents and clerks was on the specific approval of former Attorney General Homer Cummings. What should be done when extraordinary cases develop? The F. B. I. is always being called into action for the solution of "tough" problems. Let us look at the recent situation which developed in connection with the judiciary of New York City. Just refer to the remarks of Attorney General Murphy and the action which he took. Now and then the scenes shift pretty rapidly.

The F. B. I. is the "trouble shooting" organization for 130,000,000 people. Praises have been sung to the "trouble shooters" of the telephone companies and the electric light companies who stand ready at every moment to face the hazards of the elements to repair storm damage in order that homes and hospitals of a stricken area might have light and communication service. These companies carefully budget every other branch of their organization except this particular unit, because they never know what an emergency will bring. Their primary interest is the restoration of service to their customers, regardless of cost.

It is about time we made a hard-headed business application of this same nature to the agency of government entrusted with protecting the lives of the men, women, and children of this great Nation. When an emergency arises—when a dastardly crime has been committed against society—the people want action, and they generally get what they want, particularly if it is service from the F. B. I. Director Hoover has built around him a politically independent personnel that looks after the service end of this particular Bureau and the mass of American taxpayers have not complained, because they have had no room for complaints.

Complaints have been heard, to be sure, from crooked politicians who have been squeezed out of their blood-money earnings and from the un-American agitators who with their yellow and vile propaganda constitute as great a menace to society as the creatures of the underworld and their offsprings roaming the land to snatch a citizen for lust or gain.

If it is sentimentality to respect, defend, and praise the Gmen who have fearlessly smashed their way into the realms of underworld racketeers, gangsters, and murderers to the extent that the kidnaper, gunman, and their ilk have been forced into a cowardly retreat before these clean, alert young agents of Mr. Hoover, then I plead guilty. If it is sentimentality to agree with the attorney in his recent expression of hope that the improvement of law-enforcement methods and standards will continue with ever-increasing momentum—and that momentum will not exist if we stymie their operations, then I am doubly guilty of being a sentimentalist. And if those things are the mark and brand of a sentimentalist then I firmly believe I am keeping company with millions and millions of American citizens who swell with pride at the thought that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is to the protection of our society from the crouching beast of the underworld, what the Army and Navy are to the protection of our shores against the invasion of an enemy horde.

F. B. I. HAS NOT VIOLATED THE LAW

Mr. Chairman, no sane Member of this House will stand here and plead for the right of any bureau to run roughshod over the provisions of the law. For some time we have been trying to get fair recognition for the monetary needs of this activity. At one time it appears the trouble is in the Bureau of the Budget. Again, it appears the trouble is in the Appropriation Committee. Then we may find the blame thrown at the feet of the House. There should be no "buck passing" insofar as appropriations-reasonable sums I mean-for this Bureau are concerned. If the Congress does not want the Bureau properly financed, it can assume the responsibility; but I serve notice here and now that I am going along with what I think is a reasonable sum for this Bureau. I shall study the records; try and inform myself of legitimate needs based on the increasing demands which we impose on this Department, and then lend my support to such appropriations as are necessary to properly implement the Bureau to carry out its program.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the Delegate from Puerto Rico [Mr. IGLESIAS].

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Chairman, this is an occasion on which I have been very excited with emotions and with tender sentiments on account of the condition of the people of Puerto Rico. The President of the United States and the administration has previously recommended the grant of $3,000,000 as assistance and cooperation to help the people of that island, which recommendation was submitted to the Subcommittee on Appropriations.

Mr. Chairman, I have appeared before that committee, as others did, to plead for help of the people of that island. My astonishment was great and I feel a tremendous shock when I read the report of the committee and noticed in same that it had not recommended the $3,000,000 for the island of Puerto Rico at this critical time. It is true that the Fair Labor Standards Act is applicable to the island of Puerto Rico and that it has caused some unemployment among the people in various industries down there. The philosophy of this argument as it appears in this report means that if the Congress is not going to grant the $3,000,000 to help those people they are not going to get the results that we are looking for. This, in my opinion, seems to be the application of a penalty to the people of the island of Puerto Rico they do not deserve. Of course, they have the ambition, perhaps the noble desire, to be assisted and cooperated with in their efforts in uplifting the conditions of the men and women who are working hard over there.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the denying of this relief will be an economic catastrophe at this time. To deny such assistance and cooperation we asked of the Congress of the United States to the people of Puerto Rico could never be understood, and it could not be explained to them, that it is because the wage and hour law applied over there as well as here they are going to be penalized. It is for this that Congress is going to cut out an appropriation of $3.000 .-000 which was suggested by the President and approved by the man in charge of the administration of the Budget.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Puerto Rico.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. IGLESIAS. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it not also true that in addition to the absolutely impossible conditions which have been imposed upon the people of Puerto Rico by the operation of the wage and hour law, which will destroy you as surely as the sun shines unless we correct it, you have another burden which borders on causing as great a degree of misery for you, and that is the operation of the Sugar Quota Act, which is tending to close all your sugar mills and put your people off the pay rolls?

Mr. IGLESIAS. Exactly; the gentleman is right.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman inform us on this point: Is any move in which the gentleman has any particular faith being made at the present time for amendment of the Wage and Hour Act to correct this situation, or do we have to correct it through additional deficiency appropriations?

Mr. IGLESIAS. Labor organizations in the island, the administration over there and here have already been at work conducting the consideration and study of proper amendments to that law, and the matter will be covered by way of a bill introduced perhaps by the chairman of the House Committee on Labor to remedy in part the conditions prevailing at this time in Puerto Rico.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman understand from the House Committee on Labor that there is some chance of getting an amendment like that favorably reported by the committee?

Mr. IGLESIAS. I believe a good number at least of the House Labor Committee is in favor of remedying the situation in Puerto Rico in some way.

Mr. Chairman, I wish I could explain myself in the language with which I am most familiar, the Spanish language. I began to learn English when I was 30 years old.

You may rest sure that on this day there has been stricken out of the bill the provision of relief for the needy of Puerto Rico, because enforcement of the wage and hour law would cause more havoc and sufferings among the unemployed there than anything else. It is just the same as would happen in many other modest communities of this Nation if something like it should occur.

Mr. Chairman, we are appreciative of the wonderful help the Congress of the United States has given to Puerto Rico for years and years, which has enabled the people of the island to make progress and continue to make that island richer and greater. We are ready all the time to do our part in correcting all bad conditions that may prevail and do it through action by the Puerto Rican Legislature and the authorities of the people in general, and this would be done always with the cooperation and the help of this House of Congress of the United States. We are in great need, the 1,800,000 inhabitants of Puerto Rico. I appeal, as their legal representative, to you for our relief which I hope to get. It will be a terrible blow to the people of Puerto Rico to find in their morning papers that it was not possible to get any help or relief and cooperation. Mr. Chairman, for many years I was a representative in some way in Washington before being a Commissioner, and therefore have known Congress for more than 40 years, thanks to the assistance of the American Federation of Labor, and I know that this great body has never been unfriendly to the people of Puerto Rico. I request, Mr. Chairman, that the Members of Congress rectify this error, which will do so much harm to the island and to the people over there. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Anderson].

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call to the attention of the House the fact that a vital part of our air-development program has been left out of the bill under consideration. The Congress has recently passed bills running into millions of dollars for the manufacture of aircraft that should give this country a defensive air force second to none. We are blessed with the finest airplane factories and the most able engineers in the world. There is no reason why this country should run second best in any race for air superiority.

However, the building up of a first-class air force does not consist entirely of manufacturing airplanes. Superior design of motors and planes is of major importance. Various research experiments now under way may result in a plane or a motor of such advanced design that the airplane industry might be revolutionized almost overnight. In other words, if we are to keep abreast of competing countries we must expand our research facilities as rapidly as we expand our aviation industry.

Some weeks ago President Roosevelt sent to this body a recommendation for the building of another research laboratory similar to the one conducted by the N. A. C. A. at Langley Field in Virginia. He recommended that this be constructed at Moffett Field in Sunnyvale, Calif. This move was not made until a careful study of location and other factors had been made. The special committee on site for a second major aeronautical research station for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics considered the problem from the following considerations:

First. That the new N. A. C. A. research station should be located on an Army or Navy flying field under a status similar to that of the committee's present research station at Langley

Second. That the site should be located within a convenient distance of the aircraft manufacturing industry on the west

I might add that approximately 60 percent of the airplane manufacturing industry of the country lies west of the Mississippi River.

Third. That the site should have climatic conditions that will permit the efficient conduct of flight research throughout the year.

Being from California I am not prejudiced as to climate, but we really do feel that we have something unusual out Fourth. That adequate electric power at reasonable rates should be available.

Fifth. That the site should be near an industrial center for skilled labor and technical supplies and should afford satisfactory living and working conditions for employees.

Sixth. That the site should preferably be located at or near sea level.

I presume that is because of the fact that the Langley Field site is at sea level.

The committee considered a large number of sites. The advantages and disadvantages of each of the sites considered were carefully studied, and the conclusion arrived at that, after considering all factors, the selection of the Sunnyvale site in California for the proposed second N. A. C. A. research station would best serve the interests of the Government and, all things considered, is the best available site for the new research station from the point of view of most effectively advancing the science of aero-

It has been stated in this Chamber before that when our Army or Navy engineers render a report there is generally sufficient study behind such a report to warrant its adoption. The President's recommendation was made as the result of such a survey conducted by men in the Government who know their business. It is difficult to understand why the committee in charge of this bill has ignored this recommendation in view of the excellent testimony offered by witnesses during the hearings.

Germany has five experimental research stations, one of which employs four times the personnel now stationed at Langley Field, our only station of a comparable nature. Langley Field experimental station has about reached the end of its expansion. If we are to remain as a competing factor in the rapidly expanding aviation development in the world, further research facilities should be developed without delay. [Applause.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. EATON].

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, we are confronted in this country at the present time by a very serious menace in the nature of a disease attacking the elm trees.

There are two points of view in discussing this question. One is the economic value involved, the other is the sentimental value, if I may use that term, connected with the elm as a shade tree, as it occupies a position in this Nation perhaps beyond that of any other shade tree in our country.

Many years ago we began on a dangerous scale to import pests, insects, and other disease carriers into this Nation. I remember when I was a boy on the farm away back in prehistoric times, when the potato bug and the Hessian fly began to assert themselves, an old farmer had a verse which went like this:

As long as Hessian flies exist and 'tater bugs abound, There'll be some tall profanity at times afloatin' 'round.

But profanity proved itself unequal to the task of reducing these plagues.

Since those halcyon days we have seen inconceivable numbers of pests lay destructive hold upon our grain crops, upon our vegetables, and upon our forests, not to mention the intellectual and moral pests now running riot in the country. A few years ago there came a shipment of lumber from Holland to this country, and when, a little later, after some of these logs were unloaded in Cleveland, Ohio, it was discovered that among the elm trees of that great city a new disease had taken hold, and it was found that this was what we now call the Dutch elm disease. It is a blood infection inflicted upon a healthy tree by a species of beetle flying from a diseased tree. When the blood system is thus affected the tree is doomed. Under the skillful, able, and expert leadership of our Agricultural Department a persistent attempt has been made to grapple with this problem.

The only cure so far discovered is to find the trees that are affected, cut them down, burn them, and in this way head off the spread of the disease.

We have come to Congress from time to time for the last few years asking for an adequate appropriation to meet this need. We have about 16,000,000,000 board feet of elm lumber in our forests, worth between two and three billion dollars in cash money. We sell for important commercial uses between one and two million dollars' worth a year of that lumber now. We have about 25,000,000 shade elm trees in this country, and if you want to get a picture of what it would mean to destroy these magnificent gifts of God, go out in our park here and look at those magnificent elm trees standing as a monument to His glory and His power. Look at this city and imagine what it would be if the 25,000 elm trees were cut down. Go back to your homes in New England or in New York or in New Jersey or in Illinois or in Minnesota and imagine what such a condition would be. In Minneapolis alone there are 600,000 of these trees, and they have an enormous value to the real estate in that community.

It has been estimated that the actual value of these elm trees in the shade areas alone is over $600,000,000, and I find in this proposed deficiency bill the Budget asked for only $200,000 more to add to the $378,000 we had already available. We have been trifling with this thing. We have surrendered to a counsel of despair, and unless we lay hold upon this problem now and put enough money in the hands of our leaders in the Department of Agriculture, who are eminently competent to grapple with it and overcome it, we are going to see the elm trees of this Nation destroyed just as the glorious chestnut trees were a few years ago. So I would like to see, instead of striking out this $200,000 asked for, to see it put back in this deficiency bill, and instead of having in the agricultural bill, which comes in here tomorrow, a paltry $100,000 instead of $370,000, I would like to see an adequate amount appropriated. Why you might as well throw the $100,000 down a sewer pipe as pretend that that amount is sufficient to meet the need. You are just trifling with the thing. Unless we grapple with this problem with courage and intelligence, and put enough money in the hands of the experts of the Department of Agriculture to solve it, we are going to see the elm trees of this Nation destroyed. For one I am asking the Members of this House, no matter what part of the Nation you come from or what party you claim adherence to, to stand up for the trees and by your votes today and tomorrow see to it that they have some proper support and defense. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question or two?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I am particularly interested in the statements in the report of the committee with reference to the Puerto Rican allowance. I have had to read this so hurriedly that I am not very clear about what the action of the committee has been, but, as I understand, $3,000,000 asked for has been disallowed.

Mr. TABER. That is correct.

Mr. CRAWFORD. On the theory it would simply be a mere drop in the bucket in attempting to handle the great problem which exists there at the present time. Would the gentleman enlighten us on that a little more?

Mr. TABER. The situation with reference to Puerto Rico is something like this, as I understand it, and it is pretty well developed on pages 260 to about 267 or 268 of the hearings. Including the appropriation that was made in the last Congress, there was available for Puerto Rican relief considerably over $12,000,000. Less than one-half of that amount was spent in the first 6 months. It was spent in a very extravagant manner, in that the expenditures ran at the rate of $54 a month, which is more than double the going wage for almost any type of employment in Puerto Rico. There is no head or tail to the whole set-up there. It is organized not on the basis of giving relief but on the basis of seeing how much money they can shovel out of the Treasury.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman's remarks now are-

Mr. TABER. They are my own.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And they relate to the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration?

Mr. TABER. And the administration of W. P. A. insofar as it is handling the Puerto Rican situation.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it not true that that Administration has attempted to go down there, and in a way, set up planned economy, go into industry, and operate in the building of homes and the running of plantations and the manufacture of sugar, and taking other steps of that kind? That is, roughly, about the program they have been following, is it not?

Mr. TABER. They have done worse than that. For instance, the Congress has helped them to create planned economy by throwing everybody out of work by this Wage and Hour Act. That is, they have raised the minimum wage beyond any possibility of anybody paying it, and done away with home work, on which a lot of those people who did linen work and that sort of thing, have been accustomed to subsist, so that they have absolutely destroyed all employment of that type amongst the women in the island.

Mr. CRAWFORD. All needlework operation?
Mr. TABER. Yes. It has been absolutely destructive. I do not know whether the Labor Committee of the House has in mind bringing in a bill to eliminate Puerto Rico from the operations of that Wage and Hour Act or not. If they do not, Puerto Rican industries are absolutely out.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it the gentleman's judgment, then, that the real step that should be taken would be to correct the Wage and Hour Act, to remove its application from Puerto Rico, and let the industries go ahead and operate and give the people work, instead of trying to run them through the planned economy of the Puerto Rican Relief Administration?

Mr. TABER. Absolutely. I think that is a terrible thing. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional

If you will turn to page 260 of the hearings, you will see there a schedule of the type of wages that are prevalent in the island. They will show that ordinary labor is not accustomed to any such wages as are provided for in the Wage and Hour Act. They have a different standard of living, different requirements, due to the type of housing they can live in, and due to the type of food they are accustomed to. A family there lives very well, for them, on 75 cents a day, and they are able to provide themselves with a great many of the luxuries. For us to go down there and set up a standard away beyond what the Puerto Ricans are accustomed to, is absolutely criminal. That is just what we have done, and that is just why the situation exists that has been described.

It was testified before our committee that they were running along on the basis of practically $1,000,000 a month during the fall—$1,034,000—and they had the money already in their hands to operate on that basis. That is shown on page 261. Frankly, the committee felt we should not go any

There may be some evidence that I do not know about that has not been brought to my attention, but what the Congress ought to do to help out the distress of Puerto Rico is to wipe out the application of that wage and hour bill to Puerto Rico. It in no way conflicts with our people in their employment. It in no way interferes with the work of anyone here. If they do not do the work, it will be done in China or India or Japan, perhaps, where they can hire people to work for that wage. I cannot see any sense in our forcing that employment in the needlework industry over into Asiatic countries.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it not also true that in their entire economy, not only in the needlework but in all lines of manufacturing as may exist, and such agricultural work as may exist, they must compete with tropical labor in all other areas?

Mr. TABER. That is true.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And this proposition applies to the entire economy of Puerto Rico, not only to the needlework industry?

Mr. TABER. It does.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Although it falls heavier on the needlework industry?

Mr. TABER. That is the industry that has immediately been put out of business.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If the gentleman will permit me, the Senate has been considering a bill—S. 1028, I think it is—which is an amendment to the Philippine Independence Act, which vitally affects this whole Puerto Rican situation, addirectly ties into the amount of relief money that will eventually be asked to be sent to Puerto Rico if the Philippine Independence Act gets into operation.

Mr. TABER. I think it is criminal for us to pass legislation creating set-ups that destroy this whole Puerto Rican group.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

policy must be adopted.

Mr. PACE. Does the gentleman state that their products do not come in here in competition with the American farmer?

Mr. TABER. There is no set-up of that kind in this country in connection with the needlework, that is particularly harmed by this operation. It is this fancy linen work that is bought in the Tropics that comes from there, that our people in the States do not have the patience or the time to work on. They cannot do it and sell it for a price that anyone can afford to pay for it with the wage scale that our people would be satisfied with.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes. I will discuss the bill briefly and then I will yield the floor.

This bill calls for $138,000,000 of direct appropriation and, in addition, about $46,000,000 of contract authority. Most of it goes for the Army and the Navy. The cuts that were made by the committee, with one exception, I am completely satisfied with. That is a small item of a couple of hundred thousand dollars that Dr. Eaton talked about. The Army proposition, in my opinion, provides more money than it should, because it provides for arms and ammunition on the basis of the completion of the program about 2½ years from now, which is not an emergency set-up and could just as well be spread out over a period of 5 years.

It would be better if it were; but, frankly, I seem to be so alone in the committee on the subject that I believe I shall not care to offer an amendment on the floor to correct it. I do feel that when the larger items are brought in, this

There is no particular criticism of the items that are requested so far as I can see, but I do think that the interests of the national defense would be promoted if they were strung out over a longer period in the hope that when any other program comes in, the interests of having a steady work load for our factories over a period of years will be considered and that we shall try to establish the thing on a basis where we can have a steady work load instead of an enormous build-up and then a let-down which completely upsets our factory situation.

This is one of a series of deficiency bills that I suppose we shall have. It is supplemental, very largely, to estimates for the regular bills of next year. The deficiency items themselves, as far as I can estimate, are something like $20,000,000. The supplemental items make up the rest of it. By supplemental items I mean additions to the 1940 appropriations which are to be used after the 1st of next July. Unless we are very careful in dealing with the public money, I can see that we are going to have a tremendous amount of money carried in deficiency bills for the rest of the year. I hope we shall be able to put the brakes on before that comes. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak about the child of this administration of which it is the most proud. Much boasting has been made of the Securities and Exchange Commission. I have gathered a great deal of information about this Commission. We shall not speak at length for the moment as much time will be needed to give it proper attention. I shall, however, make a few comments.

Early this administration tried to formulate a new principle. Formerly it was "Let the buyer beware"; when you went out shopping you were to beware lest you did not get your money's worth. This is now changed to "Let the seller beware." It is a startling change. Whenever an organization like this Commission asks the Congress for large increases of funds I think it is a good idea to consider such demands most carefully. It is stated in this report that they need it because Congress added certan duties. These extra duties are highly interesting.

I read in the Christian Science Monitor on last Saturday a very courageous article stating that with the Securities and Exchange Commission came the great freeze upon business. We cannot have an unfreezing of business until we unfreeze the Securities and Exchange Commission. Recently we have heard much about cooperation with business. This apparently has been a very recent doctrine. We wondered if they really meant it. In the New York Times of Sunday appears the explanation. After months of trying to cooperate with Wall Street, they say that cooperation was now ended. The man upon whom fell the great burden of cooperating has now been kicked upstairs, and Wall Street has to begin all over again in this work of cooperation. However, before he was rewarded he had, according to the papers, abandoned all cooperation with Wall Street.

Did this organization freeze business? Certainly it did. We watched it carefully from the first. After 3 long years of its existence I received a letter from former Commissioner Landis containing the admission that very little new business had been registered. It was nearly all refunding, taking advantage of the low-interest rates adversely affecting endowed schools, colleges, and all other such institutions, by depriving them of the long-term investments at rates of return on which they had based their activities. The refinancing obliged the investing public and public institutions to take a very low rate of interest and greatly reduced incomes from investments.

It was not until last year that the Securities and Exchange Commission seemed to acknowledge the existing fear. They decided to offer small business their own lawyers to help them prepare the troublesome documents required for presentation. We read that usually some 20,000 pages of manuscript must be furnished, as I recall the statement of last week, to which I have referred. The public desires protection, but the public has been smothered with protection. Who of you would dare form a corporation to start a new enterprise and sell securities to the public? Perhaps later it might be found that you had made misrepresentation through your enthusiasm and hopefulness that the project might succeed. And if an agent should misrepresent you in the marketing of such securities your entire directorate would be faced with a jail sentence. In England only one, the one actually making the misrepresentation, suffers the penalty of the law.

Mr. THILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I hope it is on this subject.

Mr. THILL. Yes.

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. THILL. Does the gentleman realize that it costs tens of thousands of dollars to register these stock issues with the Securities and Exchange Commission?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes. The Commission says they have been working on the holding-company matters and the stock market and have not been able to send many sleuths out into the rural districts. And they said, "We have been at this more than 3 years and are gaining." Gaining what? They seem to get nowhere. They claim they have caught many of the blue-sky operators. The report reads that "we caught 33." That is not an astounding number if conditions were as painted. It has cost a great amount to catch even those few blue-sky operators. They are now to be a party at issue before the Federal courts, working in conjunction with such courts and another powerful Federal agency, all at the Nation's expense. The defendant must pay his own attorney fees, and against such an array of investigators and lawyers what chance has he?

With all the resources of the Securities and Exchange Commission before the courts, in any reorganization, scattered stockholders would be entirely at their mercy and have to accept any proposed plan in line with the views of the S. E. C. You will build up this immense organization to hound honest men, as well as culprits, and, as a prominent Senator recently stated, "Every individual is regarded as a presumptive crook."

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. GIFFORD. I always yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. From the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts, I take it he believes that these high-powered salesmen should have a free hand to go out and sell worthless securities, stocks, and bonds to the American public?

Mr. GIFFORD. No, indeed; far from that; but we now have laws sufficient to cover such activities. So-called bluesky laws are probably on the statutes of all States.

You have built up this tremendous organization which has caught few culprits and frightened many honest men. What culprits have the Securities and Exchange Commission caught? Has it solved the holding-company problem? Not at all. It is still at variance with business. Has it solved the stock-market problems? Not at all. It may have proved a deterrent to rascals, but it seems that the rascals are about the only ones who dare to take a chance. Certainly it has deterred the honest man in the ponderous complexity of its demands and through fear that they might honestly err. They dare not go ahead and hesitate to comply with their restrictions, furnish all this information and all the proof necessary before they are permitted to proceed. You would not attempt registration under such liability.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. CRAWFORD. Can the gentleman tell us the total amount of securities, new issues and refundings, that have passed through the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the small percentage of new capital?

Mr. GIFFORD. There has been a tremendous amount of refundings, which is probably easy; but when we come to the new issues it is another matter. It has caused a great freeze upon business and we cannot deny it. It has proven to be the greatest deterrent to business. The gentleman from Michigan and I spoke recently over a national radio hook-up on this general subject. I wish to speak of another deterrent to business, which is probably worse. Your Mr. Douglas, about to become a Supreme Court Justice, joined with us in that radio talk. We startled him into enthusiasm about his work, but I think he was somewhat annoyed by the information which we had at hand and to which reference has been made in these remarks.

Why will business not proceed? Let me illustrate. Will business hunt business? Will investment hunt profit? Will squirrels hunt nuts? Not if you snipe at the squirrels all the time; not if you take all of his nuts in taxes; not if you take the social-security nuts you promised to save for him and he has to watch you munch them now and knows he will have to be taxed more nuts even to get his social-security nuts. Is that plain to you? [Applause.] I borrowed this suggestion from a commentator. That is another very great deterrent to business.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 4 additional minutes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.
Mr. CRAWFORD. I understand from the Securities and Exchange Commission that during all the period it has been in operation only $15,000,000,000, in round figures, of new issues and refundings have passed through its hands, and only about 30 percent in the form of new issues. I also understand from the Commercial Chronicle, which is the bible we refer to, that in January of this year new issues dropped to the low figure of $52,000,000, and in only 8 months during the last 20 years have we ever scraped the bottom so completely as we did in January, which, I think, supports the gentleman's statement.

From the Commercial and Financial Chronicle we learn that new capital issues for 1929—total corporate securities—amounted to $8,639,000,000; for 1930, $4,944,000,000; and that for the period throughout the life of the Securities Exchange Act—May 27, 1933, to 1938, inclusive—we find the total new capital corporate securities amounted in 1933 to only $161,000,000; 1934, to only $178,000,000; 1935, to only $404,000,000; 1936, to only $1,215,000,000; 1937, to only $1,227,000,000; 1938, to only $854,000,000. The trend for 1939 down to February 28 is very bad indeed, with the month of January giving a very, very poor showing, and, outside of one large issue, February was not so promising itself.

Bear in mind this poor and inadequate showing has been in spite of the fact the Government has pumped billions of dollars into the buying power of the Nation, yet the capital markets have failed to respond except in the very limited manner above set forth. Restrictions that have been imposed by the S. E. C. on those who would venture, added to rapidly rising taxes, civil disturbances arising from strikes condoned by the administration, low money rates artificially inspired. changes in the social order, increased regulations of business, and threats of the entry of Government into business-these have all contributed to a lack of confidence in the future on the part of those who would otherwise be entrepreneurs. A deliberately unbalanced Budget policy has been pursued by the administration, and a continued abandonment of sound fiscal policies have added their contribution to scaring would-be investors away from new enterprise. We need political peace and sound fiscal policies with a discontinuance of the enactment of punitive and unfriendly legislation, so that long-term commitments will again become attractive to our people.

If, as Commissioner Douglas has informed us, there has been handled by his Commission only $15,000,000,000 worth of all securities—new capital and refunding—and only 30 percent new issues, we certainly need to reexamine our whole procedure. If we are to go along on the basis of around $900,000,000 per annum or only $75,000,000 per month for new issues, at a time when our savings are amounting to more than $1,500,000,000 annually, the time will soon come when the very pressure of circumstances will force us to recast our policies

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman's figures are always correct. To produce an $80,000,000,000 income that you are seeking, listen to that. No doubt this administration has tried to bring about reforms. It has tried to reform everybody. In the process it has frightened everybody. No one cares to go ahead, with the feeling of fear that exists, brought about by those high in this administration.

Is it possible that these facts have not reached certain ears? Is it possible that these later advances toward cooperation with business are after all not to be taken as sincere? The collapse of cooperation is rather sudden. Before we appropriate these huge sums and give this Commission an enlarged field in which further to freeze activities we should pause and consider. Shall we make of them public administrators of every phase of business that they may deem in the public interest over protest of the defendants? At the Nation's expense, they will now supplant the district attorneys, or add to them, before the Federal courts. Heaven help the little man who may have a case in court against this array of probers and Federal prosecutors.

Shall I rejoice with you in the great success of the Securities and Exchange Commission? I hope now someone will now rise and attempt to refute the charge that this Commission has proved the greatest possible deterrent to recovery.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time on this side to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER], which I believe is 10 minutes.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, many of us who served in the last Congress are sympathetic toward that group of new dealers who fell by the wayside last November. Many of us had a high regard for these men. All of us are concerned with the efforts which the administration has put forth to find berths that these men might occupy with profit to themselves and with a seeming degree of satisfaction to the public service. It has been a difficult thing for the New Deal to find berths for all the defeated new dealers. It was a large number. You and I have seen them around in Washington, scurrying hither, thither, and you in the hope that a job could be found. I am here today to serve that group of men, for I think I have found a lucrative place to which they might aspire. The fact of the matter is, those of the new dealers who are apprehensive today as to what may happen to them in November of 1940 might look with a great deal of interest to the same post.

The National Mediation Board has a splendid sinecure that I think every one of the defeated new dealers should make a bid for. There is less work to it, more pay to it, and certainly a great deal less worry to it than there is to any seat in the Congress. If you will turn to page 125 of the hearings you will find that a distinguished favored son of Chicago—whether there is any Kelly-Nash connection to this I do not know, and I am making no charges-by the name of Millard, who for 165 days of work last year got the fine salary of $12,412.50. Now you figure it out for yourselves-165 days of work as a mediator, bringing in $12,000 a year salary. In addition you may have your private law practice. You may enjoy your private clientele. You may have all the privileges that an active practitioner at the bar can have. You will not have any of the worries that annoy the new dealers today. You know how worried you are. You know the apprehension with which you look to 1940. You know how disturbed you are as to what the future holds in store for you. Out of consideration for you, because of my regard for you, I wonder whether it would not be a splendid thing for every one of you to file application now to take the place of our friend, Mr. Millard. You would be relieved of all your worries.

You would not have to worry about any of the distressing and disturbing problems with which every new dealer is faced today. With calm and ease and peace of mind that would enable you to sleep soundly you could accept this job, this sinecure, and reap your $12,000 plus a year.

Then may I point out to you that in addition to the salary you get your subsistence. Now, subsistence is a fine thing. It means that you get your food and your drink, and where is the new dealer who is not thinking about the matter of food and drink? Those are things that bolster the waning spirit of the New Deal, and they are provided for you at Government expense. Again, you will have the privilege of traveling, paid for at Government expense. I know there are a lot of new dealers that have been doing a lot of traveling since the 8th day of November last year. All of that is provided for you. No worries, no alarm, no apprehension, no one to disturb you; and all the food, drink, and travel that you need thrown in free.

I wonder who is going to be the first candidate? Mark you, I serve you men today. I am serving you men today, all of that group who, either because of fear or apprehension, are disturbed as to their political future.

Mr. FITZPATRICK rose.

Mr. DITTER. Here is the first applicant. I am surprised that my friend would apply. He is the least worried. I yield to my distinguished friend from New York, for whom I have the highest regard. I want to say to him before I yield to him that I did not think he would be an applicant. He is not one of those to whom I referred. However, since he appears, I now yield.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. According to the gentleman's statement, then, we are going to elect a Democratic President in 1940 to fill those vacancies. The gentleman admits it. And may I say that in 1930 in the Seventy-second Congress Members on our side took many seats from Members on your side, and some of them are holding those seats today.

Mr. DITTER. My dear sir, I am not making a political speech. There is no suggestion of politics in it. I am making a speech only because of my disturbed mind and distressed heart for those of you who today are in fear and apprehension as to what may befall you. Then again I am concerned about that group that finds itself today on the outside of the portals of the privileges of the patronage of the New Deal, our former Members. You have had them come to see you. They have been all around here. You have seen them walking up and down the corridors with anxious eyes and with disturbed faces. I am trying to serve them. I suggest to my distinguished friend that he should try to place those of his former colleagues from New York who fell by the wayside last November.

May I also point out to my esteemed friend, that my observations today do not give the assurance that he takes from them. Every new dealer is grasping at any straw. These mediators are appointed by a Board which we cannot upset when a Republican President is elected in 1940.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In answer to that— Mr. DITTER. I have not yielded further.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I want to tell the gentleman there was none defeated.

Mr. DITTER. I have not yielded further. I have only 1 minute left.

Mr. HOUSTON. Will not the gentleman yield to the gentleman from New York as an announced applicant for this job?

Mr. DITTER. I yield to my distinguished friend, for whom I have the highest regard.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It happened that in our great city they were all returned except one.

Mr. DITTER. I know that my distinguished friend does not limit his vision of new dealism to the city of New York.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The gentleman referred to New York. Mr. DITTER. I know the gentleman takes in the whole State of New York. I know the gentleman does not limit his influence to the metropolitan district. I consider my friend an outstanding new dealer from the great Empire State of New York. [Applause.]

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I saw the same thing happen in 1930 on the gentleman's side.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The Clerk read as follows:

The appropriation under the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, for New England hurricane damage, contained in the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939, is hereby amended by including with the States named therein the State of New York: Provided, That the Federal Government shall not expend of such appropriation in such State an amount in excess of $60,000.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Eaton of New Jersey: On page 10, line

13, after "$60,000", insert a new paragraph, as follows:
"Dutch elm disease: For an additional amount for the eradication of Dutch elm disease, including the same purposes and objects specified under this head in the Agricultural Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1939, $200,000."

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I understand that in the agricultural bill which is coming before the House tomorrow, the regular allotment for the eradication of this elm tree disease has been cut from $378,000 to $100,-000, and when that bill comes before the House we who are in favor of saving our elm trees, are prepared to introduce amendments giving the battle for the life of the Nation's elms a fair chance to be won. Meanwhile the board of the Agricultural Department experts appeared before the deficiency committee and asked for an additional $200,000 this year to the $378,000 already allotted. This was cut out, and it was cut out for reasons which are set forth in the report. One of these reasons is that $14,000,000 has been spent. The fact is that in this battle against the Dutch elm disease the authorities have been forced to use W. P. A. workers and the most of this $14,000,000 has been taken from the W. P. A. funds. These workers have been absolutely incompetent. They have been absolutely unfit for the job. This is a battle for experts and I believe if we can grapple with this problem as it ought to be grappled with, and spend enough money and put in the field men who know what they are doing, know an elm tree when they see it, and are prepared to apply the remedies that are necessary to win the battle, it can be won.

For this reason I hope sincerely that the committee will agree to this amendment and give this vitally important work the $200,000 that it needs. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 3 minutes

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I wish I might have just a few minutes.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me a matter as important as this ought to be entitled to at least 10 minutes of our valuable time. We are treating this just as if it were child's play instead of a very important

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I had in mind giving everybody all the time they asked for.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 10 minutes.

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. I object, Mr. Chairman. Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, this is not a matter of any very great moment so far as the Committee on Appropriations is concerned. If this Committee wishes to put $200,000 in here. I do not think anybody is going to quarrel about it. However, we do not believe it is needed. The evidence showed our committee that the Government has spent $14,000,000 in an endeavor to eradicate this blight.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield. Mr. EATON of New Jersey. I would say the Government has misspent most of that by employing incompetent help when they could have employed experts from the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Then why misspend $200,000 more?

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. This will be used by the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. There is no evidence that there has been any reformation from the standpoint of the Government employing competent people. All they have been doing is cutting down elm trees.

The Government has spent $14,000,000, and the localities have spent $1,000,000. This is just another effort to have the Government carry the whole burden of something that individuals and localities and States ought to aid the United States in doing.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Certainly.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. It is vital to us in New England to save the remaining elm trees. A good many of our elm trees are down as a result of the hurricane.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I thought the $5,000,000 was going to take care of all of those elms.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. That is to remove a tremendous fire hazard and has nothing to do with rebuilding. That work has to do with taking away underbrush, those trees that are down, to prevent fires. It is very vital to us to save our remaining trees from every standpoint.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. We are going to carry $100,-000 in the regular agricultural bill for the eradication of this Dutch elm disease. All they are doing with it, and all they expect to do with it, is to cut down elm trees.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. They are not cutting down just any old elm tree, they are cutting down diseased trees. Has the gentleman seen this work in operation?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I am not minimizing the seriousness of the proposition, I will say to the gentleman, and I am not unwilling to do whatever is reasonably proper, but the great Department of Agriculture, with all its personnel and its vast resources, including the C. C. C. camps, will have $100,000, which, after all, is just used to cut down diseased elm trees.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. That is what we are afterto get rid of them.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That will cut down all the diseased trees you can find.

Mr. EATON of New Jersey. How are we to find out where these trees are unless we have men employed for that purpose who know the difference between an elm tree and a thistle?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Does not the gentleman think the State park service, the Forest Service, the Conservation Service, the C. C. C. camps, and the hundreds of thousands of Department of Agriculture agents all over the country can do something along that line? Why is it that every time we find some little thing that has to be done we cannot ask a gentleman over here to turn 6 inches out of his path and disturb himself from his repose to do it? It seems we always have to set up a new agency and appropriate new funds to do it. It is an idiotic and ridiculous proposition. [Applause.] I am anxious to see how you gentlemen who are always talking economy are going to vote on this proposition. Personally, I do not care what you do with it.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, it was not my intention to take the floor. and I doubt if anything that I shall have to say will change the result. I yield to no man on the floor of this House in my interest in trees. I have been setting out trees ever since I was 10 years old. I have a large number of elm trees on my property, some of which are at least a foot and a half in diameter, which I set out as a boy. Elm trees mean a great deal to this country, as do all trees. It is interesting to know that the leaf surface of the averagesize elm tree covers about 5 acres. Through the process of transpiration, an average-size elm tree will throw off into the atmosphere in 1 day 7½ tons of water. Trees exercise great influence in communities where they are located, especially in the parks in the cities, where it is very hot and where women and children assemble on those days for comfort. We have had one tragedy in this country in regard to the neglect of trees. We imported a disease that has destroyed the chestnut trees all over this country. I have driven down through Virginia and it is a sad sight to see these skeleton forms of thousands of massive chestnut trees. Every chestnut tree in the United States has been wiped out, and they have found no variety that is immune to the disease. This Dutch elm disease has traveled as far west as Cleveland, Ohio, possibly farther. When it gets in there is only one thing that can be done, and that is to destroy the diseased trees.

Why not appropriate some money to save this great national asset? There are expenditures that are perhaps reckless and wasteful, and there are other expenditures that contribute to the economic stability of the country. It is an investment. I believe at this time instead of cutting down this appropriation which was very small it should be increased. In 1938 the appropriation was $460,000; in 1939, $370,000, and in 1940, if the cuts are made, the appropriation will be reduced to $100,000. More money should be appropriated as proposed by the pending amendment to protect our investment in these trees. Thousands upon thousands of elms have been set out by people, set out by school children, as the result of encouragement of the Federal Government and the State governments. Now, let us not be picayunish in regard to dealing with this disease to protect this great national investment. It is economy to adopt the amendment. I think that the amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Eaton] should receive the support of the Congress.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. GIFFORD. I want about 2 minutes.

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. I would like to be heard. The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Virginia asks the question what those who are preaching economy in this House are going to do about this item. We are here to economize where economies should be made, not when it is vital to such an interest as that of the trees of this country. There are different kinds of economy. There is the very small type of parsimony and there is the other type of the fair economy. There is economy, Mr. Chairman, in carrying out the appropriation asked for by the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey. The gentleman from New York [Mr. REED] has just explained the scientific value of these trees, and certainly the interest, as displayed by the people throughout New England and the Eastern States in this item, is positive proof that the amendment should prevail. Within the last year I do not think I have had more general correspondence with the people in my district than on this one subject. Every group of people which is interested in the well-being of New England and the Eastern States want to see this appropriation authorized. The fact that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Eaton] only asked for $200,000 shows his extreme interest in economy, because by the evidence of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine itself more can be advantageously used.

It is not altogether as the gentleman from Virginia has said, cutting down trees; money is used in what is known as scouting—that is, studying the question as to where the disease is spreading. That is the interest that we people in western Massachusetts have, that my constituents have, in seeing that this appropriation is included in this bill. are not directly affected in my district at the present time, but there are colonies of the Dutch elm beetle in the immediate vicinity in the edge of New York State, the eastern boundary of New York State, and the northern boundary of Connecticut. We are frightened lest the wonderful growth of elm trees in western Massachusetts will very soon be seriously affected by this disease. Representing the people that I do who are interested in this subject throughout New England, I urge most strongly that we show economy in the preservation of the great natural attraction in the trees by voting unanimously for the modest appropriation asked for in the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD], the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. JENKS], and the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHANLEY] asked to recognized. The Chair will divide the 10 minutes equally between these three gentlemen.

The gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Jenks] is recognized for 31/3 minutes.

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman, while we in New Hampshire are not so much interested in this matter as neighboring States, nevertheless the fact remains that this disease and this pest is spreading and is coming our way. We have an abundance of elm trees in New Hampshire.

When the last flood came upon us in New England I had occasion the next day to motor from New York up to New Hampshire, and in doing so I passed through the city of New Haven, known as the Elm City. The destruction of trees in this city was simply appalling, and those fallen trees create another great hazard.

Let me read a statement made by Dr. J. H. Faull, professor of forest pathology at Harvard, and Dr. J. S. Boyce, professor of forest pathology at Yale. These gentlemen have just completed a joint field study of the eradication campaign. They state:

It is our belief that unless radical changes are made this coming year in the methods employed and in the system of financing the work, the battle for eradication will be lost.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] is recognized for 31/3 minutes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, let me say briefly that I observed some 3 years ago while motoring through New Jersey with friends the destruction wrought over perhaps a 40-mile stretch by this pest. We were simply aghast at the tremendous damage that had been done. Any man in this House who had seen it would vote for this amendment. Elm trees with hundreds of beetles larger than hornets all over them beside the highways that we have spent thousands and thousands of dollars to build to the perfect ruination of the beauty of that whole section. It would impress anyone sufficiently to vote for this amendment.

To my amazement I found that in my own locality last year these beetles were attacking not elm trees, but maple

This destruction is too great to be passed over lightly. Minneapolis, Detroit, Dallas, Chicago, St. Louis, Sacramento, Salt Lake City, as well as New Jersey, are reported as affected. Do you wish the automobile and other carriers to spread this pest all over the United States? I repeat that if you once saw what I saw in New Jersey and what you can now see in those so-called elm cities, it would be sufficient to cause you to vote for this amendment. You who have not been eyewitnesses may say: "Let us not vote with those asking for this because they have recently voted for economy." We shall be glad to vote for real economy, and we are not logrolling this in an Interior Department bill, either. [Applause.]

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield. Mr. PLUMLEY. Is it not true that this destructive beetle migrates in swarms and attacks unprotected areas without any warning?

Mr. GIFFORD. Of course we want them to cut down these trees or to paint them with poison the same as they are painting for protection against the gypsy moth, and some effective method of treatment. The utter destruction of these trees is facing us.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. The only purpose of the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey is to restore the figure recommended by the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. GIFFORD. That is all, and there is every necessity for the greater sum.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHANLEY] is recogned for 31/3 minutes.

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I know that the spenders are always better organized than the savers, and I hesitate to depart from the man whom I think is one of the ablest chairmen we have, a man whose judgment I respect; and when I differ from him I do so with great reluctance, but this is a problem that interests us very deeply. This amendment is submitted to the House not because we want to override the committee, but because we believe it follows what the Bureau of the Budget wishes.

As a man who has Druidic blood in his veins I have the greatest respect for trees. Representing the City of Elms, as my city was so referred to by the distinguished gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Jenks] I may say that the elms have been a historical tradition of our city. The City of Elms is known throughout the country.

I believe that the recommendations made by Professor Faull, of Harvard University, and Professor Boyce, of Yale University, will materially help if they are carried out, and I hope that they will be carried out if this amendment passes. I certainly would not want these recommendations to be disregarded by the Department of Agriculture.

This amendment, plus these recommendations, in my humble opinion, will fulfill all the criticism made by the distinguished gentleman from Virginia. I believe these three things taken together with the possible suggestions contained in the amendment will enable us to eradicate and correct the criticism made by the distinguished gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. SANDAGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHANLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. SANDAGER. Is it not a fact that after the last storm in New England we can ill afford to lose any more trees up there?

Mr. SHANLEY. Certainly not in Connecticut, and I know in Rhode Island the same situation holds true.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHANLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman is in favor of the amendment offered by the Republican side, indicating that the money should be expended only for cutting down trees. After we have passed the $150,000,000 W. P. A. appropriation, can we not make provision that the W. P. A. will cut down those trees and we will call upon those gentlemen to take care of human beings as well as elm trees?

Mr. SHANLEY. The gentleman presents a vast problem and I shall try in revising and extending my remarks on the bill tomorrow to include an answer to the question.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. EATON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia and Mr. Schafer of Wisconsin) there were—ayes 65, noes 36.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Salaries and general expenses: The amount of $50,000, available only for the payment of extra compensation for overtime services of local inspectors of steam vessels and their assistants, and United States shipping commissioners and their deputies and assistants, contained under the heading "Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, salaries and general expenses," in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1939, is hereby made available also for the payment of extra compensation for overtime services of customs officers and employees, for which the United States receives reimbursement, in accordance with the provisions of the act of May 11, 1938 (52 Stat. 275–276, 345).

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I was very much interested in the debate concerning the protection of elm trees. In that same paragraph was contained the appropriation for cleaning up the debris left after the hurricane that happened in the East.

I fully realize the immensity of the problem confronting the people of this Nation along the line of protecting elm trees. I also appreciate the problem that confronted the New England States after the hurricane of last year. May I call your attention to the fact that there has been a pest traveling throughout this Nation in the past and that pest has been the unwieldy swinging of the woodsman's ax by the lumbermen, who came into the territory of the Great Lakes States and without any thought of the future practically destroyed our virgin forests wherever they have been able to operate—not only our elms, not only our towering pines, not only our hemlocks and hardwoods but practically every tree that came within the scope of their march of destruction.

We have in the Great Lakes area, however, some very fine stands of virgin timber that can be saved. We must protect this virgin timber in order to rehabilitate the Upper Peninsula. In order to save from the woodsman's ax the last stand of these great forests, I have introduced a bill that will be considered by this House which will have for its purpose the saving of these last great stands of virgin timber. It will set up, if you please, a program of cutting by sustained yield under Government supervision.

I am in sympathy with the fact that you want to save your elms, but I hope when my bill comes to the floor of the House for consideration you will join with us from the Great Lakes States to save the great forests in that territory. I hope you will help us bring back some vestige of honest, clean, sensible cutting of those forests, so that our people will be able to carry on from an industrial angle and rehabilitate themselves, not only from part-time farming and part-time industrial work through lumbering operations, but by building up of our recreational facilities for the tourist business. I hope you will be just as anxious to save the forests in our territory as you are now interested in saving the elms for this Nation.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOOK. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts. Mr. McCORMACK. There is also involved the question of conservation of the soil. When the forests are recklessly destroyed it has an effect upon rivers, the topsoil, and in many other ways. Is that correct?

Mr. HOOK. There is not any doubt about that. For instance, unless these great stands of virgin timber along the southern shores of Lake Superior are saved, erosion will occur in that territory to such an extent that practically all of the topsoil will be washed into Lake Superior. The erosion that will follow will destroy our rivers, our lakes, and our farms. If given the opportunity by the passage of my bill known as H. R. 931, we will set up a program which will rehabilitate one of the blackest spots in the United States today by properly caring for the forests in northern Michigan.

On January 3, 1939, I introduced the bill (H. R. 931) for the acquiring of lands in the Ottawa National Forest and other lands to safeguard the public interests in certain lands in Baraga, Gogebic, Houghton, Iron, and Ontonagon Counties in the State of Michigan. This bill would authorize and direct the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire such of said lands within the described counties as would carry out the purposes of the act under the provisions of the act approved March 1, 1911, as amended. To cover the costs of purchase the bill would authorize the appropriation of $3,000,000 for the fiscal year of 1939, $3,000,000 for the fiscal year 1940, and $4,000,000 for the fiscal year 1941, the appropriations so made to continue available until expended.

As known to the Forest Service, the circumstances within the described counties which would justify enactment of the bill are as follows:

Prior to white settlement and occupancy the Lake States, in large part, supported a heavy growth of timber and for decades constituted a principal source of timber supply for the people of the United States. But widespread and destructive practices of timber utilization, without any studied provision for a maintenance of the forest capital, resulted in the devastation of millions of acres of lands not permanently valuable for any economic service other than timber production. The communities which had been established were left without means of economic life; the thousands of people who had derived their livelihood from lumbering operations were left without adequate means of employment. Large acreages of cut-over land were allowed to revert through tax delinquency, thus markedly diminishing the means for the support of counties and public institutions. The economic and social losses thus occasioned have not adequately been offset by new types of economic activities.

These conditions, however, have not yet occurred in the extreme northwestern corner of the State of Michigan. In the five counties described in the bill there still exists a large acreage of virgin timber, which under constructive forms of forest management could be made a permanent economic asset and a permanent source of support and economic security to the population now residing within the five counties. It was recognition of that fact that led to the establishment of the Ottawa national forest-purchase unit and the initiation therein of a program of forest-land acquisition and management under the provisions of the act of March 1, 1911—Thirty-sixth United States Statutes, at page 961—as amended.

Within and adjacent to the Ottawa National Forest are to be found substantially the last large remaining stands of virgin northern hardwoods in the Lake States region which offer opportunity to practice selective cutting and sustained yield forestry. Over the years the process of timber exploitation steadily has been moving toward these remaining stands of virgin timber and during the last 10 years have partially invaded the region, with the same old processes of clear cutting which have had such disastrous consequences to social security and public welfare in other parts of the Lake States. Notwithstanding that fact there still exist a number of economically and naturally defined units of forest management in which forestry and forestry products can be maintained as one of the chief sources of income for the dependent communities and in which timber utilization is and can continue indefinitely to be the ranking industry and source of

Within the five counties described in the bill approximately 90 percent of the land area is chiefly valuable for forest purposes. It consists in part of denuded land of a type upon which artificial reforestation would be necessary; in part of cut-over lands upon which, however, an adequate secondgrowth forest has been or is being established; and in part lands supporting large volumes of merchantable timber not yet exploited industrially. The remaining 10 percent of the area consists of farm land, mining properties, town sites, lands chiefly valuable for recreational uses, and so forth, but this other 10 percent will not escape impairment and diminished economic value if the 90 percent of the 3,000,000-acre area fails to receive the constructive management necessary to realize its potentialities for timber production. On the contrary, impairment of the economic value of the 90 percent of the area chiefly valuable for forestry largely will impair the economic value of the remainder and will leave the dependent population without adequate provision for the future.

Most of the area suitable for farming is at present so used. However, farming is limited by the factors of a short growing season and of adverse soil and topographic conditions. The rainfall is ample for farm crop-production purposes, but the mean temperature varies according to the nearness of Lake Superior and to the altitude, ranging from a seasonal maximum of about 90° F. in summer to a minimum of minus 40° or 50° in severe winter. The area of really valuable and productive farmland is relatively limited.

Farming is closely related and dependent upon the mining and wood-using industries which at present demand and consume a large proportion of the farm crops locally produced. Additionally, about one-half of the resident farmers are dependent upon part-time employment, either in the mines or winter woods work of some kind, for sufficient income to enable them to maintain reasonable living standards. Thus it is evident that within this area the future economic security of agriculture to a large extent is dependent upon the continuation of the stable lumber industry which in turn depends on the continuation of stable sources of timber supply.

In earlier years the consumption requirements of the local wood-using industries were not grossly out of balance with the available sources of timber supply. These established industries own part of the forest lands upon which their operations are dependent and hoped to be able to acquire stumpage from lands held by nonoperating owners. Such nonoperating owners, however, were unwilling or unable to await such disposal of their properties, but, instead, began to arrange for or contract with additional wood-using industries, which, added to the existing ones, would greatly overdraw the forest capital and accelerate its complete liquidation.

The logical solution of the problem seemed to be Federal acquisition of the heavily timbered holdings of the nonoperating interests, so as to withdraw them from the pressure of quick and uneconomic exploitation. With such stumpage available as a part of the continuous supply required under sustained-yield management, it would be practicable to induce the operating owners of forest lands to change their plans of utilization from those of complete exploitation to those of selective cutting, which would leave on the cut-over lands residual stands that would form the basis for succeeding cuts, the owners of such lands either to hold them for such future cuts or to exchange them with the United States for equal values of national-forest stumpage. By these means maximum control over the utilization of the timber resources could be accomplished with a minimum outlay of public funds and with due regard to the sound needs of the existing woodusing industries. Agricultural lands would not be acquired. except as minor parts of holdings primarily forest in character. Lands containing minerals would be allowed to remain in private ownership or could be acquired subject to reservations of mineral rights where the retention and exercise of such rights would not be incompatible with the objectives of forest management.

These possibilities of Federal participation in a constructive program of natural-resource management within the five counties described in the bill led the National Forest Reservation Commission, at its meeting of January 21, 1935, to approve the establishment of the Gogebic National Forest Purchase Unit, which subsequently was merged with the previously established Ottawa National Forest. This action was taken in recognition of the obvious need for a practicable solution of the serious economic problem confronting the dependent population and also of the less directed but nevertheless national interest in both the social and economic phases of the situation. At the time this project was presented for consideration the Commission was advised that the estimated cost of acquiring all of the lands involved and the timber thereon would be approximately twenty-five to twenty-eight million dollars, but that a plan of acquiring the holdings of the nonoperating companies through purchase, and then the partially cut-over holdings of the operating companies through either exchange or purchase, would make it possible to carry out the plan at a cost of approximately eight million to ten million dollars. At the time the matter was considered there were grounds for the belief that because of the large measure of unemployment relief and social welfare which would result there was reasonable promise that the necessary funds would be available.

Subsequently there was a sharp curtailment in the amount of money available for land acquisition, and due to the requirements in other established purchase units a sharp reduction in the purchase program within the Ottawa National Forest became unavoidable. It is true that 561,568 acres have been approved and in large part acquired within this unit, but these lands largely are in a cut-over condition, and to date only a minor proportion of the lands supporting the important remaining stands of merchantable timber has been acquired by the United States. While the acquisitions to date have been distinctly worth while and highly beneficial, they represent only a framework for the real program of land acquisition which remains to be accomplished.

One important consideration is the fact that, in addition to the industrial value of the existing stands of mature timber, is their supplemental value as elements of an environment rich in opportunity for outdoor recreational activities. The combination of lake, broken terrain, fishing opportunity, wildlife resources adjacent to Lake Superior and proximity to large centers of population offers promise that service to the recreational needs of the American people will be one of the major economic functions of the region in the future. Not only will this contribute to the social security and economic stabilization of the dependent populations, but it will afford to millions of American citizens needed opportunity for constructive forms of outdoor recreational activities. But the widespread removal of the present forest stand threatens to so completely impair the scenic charm and inspirational quality of the region as to make impossible types of recreational use which otherwise could be permanent features.

During the past several years a large percent of the local residents have been compelled to resort to Federal relief because of lack of opportunity for profitable employment. If the hitherto prevailing trend continues unchecked the need for relief will increase rather than diminish; will in fact become chronic and continuing. If, on the other hand, the natural resources of the region are managed constructively, with primary regard for promotion of social welfare, the demands for Federal relief should be markedly reduced or perhaps wholly eliminated. The expenditures of Federal funds necessary to establish ownership of the requisite forest lands therefore would be offset, at least in part, by these economies of Federal funds resulting from the reduction of the relief load.

The resources of this area are such as to warrant the belief that if effective principles and programs of selective cutting and sustained-yield management could be established, the volume of timber available for cutting each year would be at least as great, and might be greater, than the volume hitherto and now being removed under the prevailing clear-cutting methods, but with the difference that the sustained-yield principle would be a guaranty of economic stability of local communities, industries, and governments, and economic security to the dependent local people. Such a program, however, can be accomplished only through the whole-hearted cooperation of operators and timber-land owners in the practice of real forest management, or by the public ownership and administration of the timber resources, or by a combination of the two, as is the apparent objective of H. R. 931.

As the Ottawa National Forest now exists, it contains a gross area of 1,722,628 acres, of which, however, 348,978 acres is classified as land more valuable for purposes other than forestry, or for some other reason nonpurchasable by the United States. Within the borders of the national forest 354,000 acres have been reserved from the public domain and 561,568 acres have been or are being acquired by purchase under the act of March 1, 1911, at a cost of $1,974,125, or an average of $3.52 per acre. The further requirement of Federal acquisition as hitherto foreseen has involved the further purchase of 828,528 acres, at an estimated cost of $10,646,000. It is, however, possible that the remaining desirable lands could be acquired at a lesser cost, either through changes in market values or due to the removal of some of the stumpage which they hitherto have supported. It should be noted that the bill, H. R. 931, contemplates Federal acquisition of other lands outside of the present boundaries of the national forests for which no estimate of cost hitherto has been made. But, on the basis of the facts as now known to the Forest Service, there is justification for the reasonable presumption that an expenditure of an additional $10,000,000 in payment for lands within or adjoining the Ottawa National Forest would place the Federal Government in a position effectively to establish a sound foundation of industrial and social economy for the region.

The general topography of the area is rugged, semimountainous, there being relatively little smooth land, most of it being rolling and hilly. The elevation varies from an altitude of about 500 feet along the shore of Lake Superior to a maximum of 2,023 feet, which is the elevation of the Porcupine Mountains in Ontonagon County, the highest point in the State of Michigan. The area in the main is drained by the Ontonagon River, which flows into Lake Superior, but the extreme eastern part is drained by rivers which flow into Lake Michigan, the southern part by rivers flowing into the Mississippi.

With some curtailment in mining, due to adverse conditions such as extreme depth or water or leanness of cre bodies, and the fact that the timber which constitutes the chief wealth of the counties rapidly is being removed without restriction, in such a manner that future crops will not be possible without very intensive management and replanting, there has been some decrease in population and a considerable decline in the taxable value of properties within the counties. Unless the trends are effectively checked the counties will have increased difficulty in maintaining the necessary facilities and institutions and will be confronted by numerous difficult questions of both finance and government.

Because of clear local recognition of the situation which exists or impends, Nation-wide public sentiment strongly is favorable to a constructive program of land ownership and management by the Federal Government. Thousands upon thousands have requested such action by formal petition, the editorial comment of the Nation's largest newspapers generally is supportive of the program. Support also was expressed by considerable numbers of the owners of the lands involved who have indicated willingness to cooperate in some fair and equitable adjustment of the situation.

While present and prospective conditions in northwestern Michigan are by no means unique they nevertheless merit immediate and constructive attention. Through the utilization of the forest, farm, mineral, wildlife, and recreational resources there has been developed in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan a social and industrial structure which merits preservation. The many fine communities, the public institutions of service, the public utilities, all of the essentials of civilized existence, have been established on relatively high planes. The region is characterized by a population of high cultural standards. This whole fine structure is menaced by the threatened depletion of the remainder of the natural resources upon which its existence depends. Action such as contemplated by H. R. 931 is indispensable to its preservation.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I feel it is proper at this time to make a few remarks in connection with this very important matter because of the speeches we have just listened to in respect to the important matter contained in the amendment offered by the gentleman on this side having to do with insect damage to trees and other forestry problems.

In the last Congress we passed a resolution appointing a special forestry committee. On account of last year being a campaign year, we did not have an opportunity to investigate the various problems in connection with forestry in this country. Today the Rules Committee has reported a concurrent resolution which will extend the services of this committee for 12 months, to end April 1, 1940.

This is a very important matter. Since I have been a Member of Congress, from time to time we have had various bills introduced and various amounts of money appropriated, many of them meritorious and others of a very wasteful nature. It is very important in carrying out the message of the President submitted to the Congress about 12 months ago that this committee be permitted to go into the various sections of the United States for the purpose of holding hearings to find out about the many forestry problems that we have, so that we may be able to take care of and preserve these resources for the people of the Nation.

I am merely bringing this to your attention, because if this investigation is made we will then be in position to pass upon these bills and appropriations intelligently. What has been happening in the past? Members have been introducing bills, perhaps in the interest of their people or section that would not meet the situation or the problems in other sections. So I am hopeful that when we have an opportunity to consider this resolution—and we want to bring it up at the earliest possible moment—we shall have no trouble in passing it and continuing the service of this committee, every member of which is deeply interested in helping to solve the many forestry problems in the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendments were withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

The paragraph in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, under the caption "National Bituminous Coal Commission," is hereby amended by striking out the following proviso: "Provided, That expenditures during the fiscal year 1939 under this head and under the head 'Salaries and expenses, office of the Consumers' Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission,' shall not exceed an amount equal to the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury under the provisions of section 3 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937."

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the paragraph that it is legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is conceded by the gentleman from Virginia, and is therefore sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insane of Alaska: For an additional amount for the care and custody of persons legally adjudged insane in Alaska, including the same objects and for the same services specified in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1938, fiscal year 1938, $759.50.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. IGLESIAS: Page 15, after line 15, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration. For relief and work relief in Puerto Rico, fiscal year 1939, including the same objects and for the same purposes specified in section 1 (4) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, $3,000,000, which amount shall be added to and become a part of the appropriation contained in section 1 (4) of said act: Provided, That not to exceed $5,000 of the foregoing amount may be used for defraying the expenses of a comprehensive study under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior of the curriculum, facilities, and operation of the University of Puerto Rico."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is legislation on an appropriation bill and not authorized by law.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman reserve the point of order so the gentleman from Puerto Rico may explain the amendment, and so that those of us who favor this relief appropriation for Puerto Rico may be heard?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order so the gentleman from Puerto Rico may speak on the amend-

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Chairman, as I stated before, this matter is of tremendous importance to the people of Puerto Rico. The help we are asking through this amendment is so badly needed in the island that I ask the gentleman from New York to withdraw the point of order and let the Committee vote in favor of the amendment. This amendment has been discussed by the members of the committee. This point of order is against the relief for the terrible situation of thousands of women, men, and children of Puerto Rico who are waiting for the action of this Congress to bring help

Mr. Chairman, I do not know how to convince the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], but I request and beg the gentleman to withdraw the point of order and let the House vote for this amendment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. IGLESIAS. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia. Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. May I say to the distinguished Commissioner from Puerto Rico, who is naturally very much interested in this matter which affects his people so vitally-and I may say I am in sympathy with the gentleman's attitude-that it appears the amendment is perhaps subject to a point of order and might go out if the point of order is insisted upon. I wonder if the gentleman would be willing to accept an amendment to his amendment cutting the amount to $1,000,000, so that sum might tide over the emergency until some more permanent solution can be reached.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Of course, anything that means help to the people of Puerto Rico would be accepted if it could not be obtained in any other way.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. If the gentleman would accept such an amendment, I would entertain the hope that the gentleman from New York would withdraw his point of order.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. IGLESIAS. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. DONDERO. Is the situation the gentleman describes the result of the action of the wage and hour law in the

Mr. IGLESIAS. Some part of that situation comes from that, some part of it from the sugar quota, and some part from commerce outside.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. If the gentleman will yield, in view of the suggestion of the distinguished gentleman from Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee, may I suggest to the Commissioner from Puerto Rico that the amendment be accepted, with the reservation, however, that we may later on in the Senate apply for the additional $2,000,000. In other words, we do not want to be put in the position of waiving our rights to have the amount increased.

Mr. IGLESIAS. For the time being I accept the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia, because no other practical course can be got.

Mr. Chairman, I request and appeal to you to vote for the amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, is the gentleman going to insist on his point of order?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I am willing to reserve the point of order and let the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] speak on the amendment if he wishes to.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, just a few moments ago the Committee by an overwhelming vote went on record for a worth-while cause, the preservation of elm trees. The proposition before us presents a cause which I believe is much more worth while, and that is the cause of the suffering human beings on the island of Puerto Rico. Puerto Rico has a population of 1,700,000, and 250,000 of these people are unemployed, involving 1,125,000 persons.

I disagree with the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] in his contention that the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, which is the relief administration for the island, is paying $54 a month to the people on its rolls. I call his attention to page 262 of the hearings, where we find the testimony of Mr. Fairbank, assistant administrator of the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration. Mr. Fairbank said:

P. R. R. A. wages are not higher than the local prevailing wages. would like to explain, however, that the $54 average man-cost I would like to explain, however, that the $54 average man-cost per month does not represent the average amount paid by this administration for wages. The figure covers many other items such as materials, and so forth—so-called nonlabor items. The $54 average also includes Federal funds expended by way of loans, which this administration has been authorized by the Congress to make. These do not go directly into wages. Ordinarily 60 percent of P. R. R. A. expenditures goes out for labor, the remaining 40 percent for material costs, and so forth. Thus to answer your questions, I would say that the wages paid by P. R. R. A. are the same as those paid by private employers in Puerto Rico.

I believe this answers completely the argument advanced by the gentleman from New York earlier today when he stated that this money was being squandered. The wages paid by the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration are the equivalent but not higher than the wages paid by private employers. There certainly cannot be any doubt left that the gentleman was in error when he stated that the wages paid were $54 per month.

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. SECCOMBE. If a condition exists in Puerto Rico such as the gentleman has described, is not that under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The direct responsibility for the shocking conditions in Puerto Rico falls on the Governor of Puerto Rico and on Mr. Ernest Gruening, Director, Division of Territories and Island Possessions, but I do not want to enter into a political discussion at this time. I shall deal with these two at the proper time, unless the President removes them before then. However, we are now dealing with a matter involving human misery and urgent relief and we must lay politics aside for the moment.

The report filed by the committee in refusing to recommend the $3,000,000 appropriation admits the existence of a most deplorable economic situation in Puerto Rico, it admits a tremendous amount of human suffering, it admits a large percentage of unemployment in Puerto Rico; but the report in justifying the committee for not making the appropriation of $3,000,000 and for recommending not a single penny states that no appropriation should be made because—

Obviously there is urgent need for something to be done to meet this aggravated condition. But the answer is not to provide work relief for a relatively small part of the number of employable persons who are without work but to restudy with a view to lifting or narrowing the application of the Fair Labor Standards Act as it relates to Puerto Rico. The grant of the additional appropriation now requested would be but a poor palliative. A cure is what is needed, and it is more to accentuate that fact and to stimulate action in that direction that the additional appropriation is not recommended (committee report, pp. 7 and 8).

I do not desire at this time to interject the issue of whether or not the Fair Labor Standards Act should be amended so as not to apply to Puerto Rico, because I do not want to bring into a discussion of relief any question that might jeopardize the granting of funds which is so imperative for a bare existence to the people of Puerto Rico. However, I am firmly opposed to lifting or the narrowing of the application of the wage and hour law as it relates to Puerto Rico. That law is necessary to the well-being of the people, the working people on the island of Puerto Rico. In fact, it is the only real legislation that can bring about an economic readjustment of the diabetic economy of wholesale exploitation of labor of Puerto Rico.

I wonder if the Members of the House know that chiselers who have run away from New York and other industrial sections of our country have been sending down to Puerto Rico needlework. Very little of this needlework is done in factories, where they pay the ridiculous wage of $5 per week. The balance of this work is parceled out by contractors and subcontractors to the women on the island, who earn no more than 4 cents an hour.

Furthermore, the sad plight of Puerto Rico today cannot be attributed to the application of the Fair Labor Standards Act, because it has not been enforced up to this minute in Puerto Rico. A valiant attempt at enforcement was made by the representative of the wage and hour division in Puerto Rico, Mr. Claiborne. The story of how he was obstructed and sabotaged by the Governor of Puerto Rico and his satellites is one that will make interesting reading. But here again I do not want to go into a question which does not directly affect the real issue, and that is whether or not an emergency exists in Puerto Rico, and whether or not this emergency necessitates the appropriation of relief funds for Puerto Rico.

It seems to me that it is grossly unfair to force a change in the Fair Labor Standards Act as it applies to Puerto Rico by holding up relief funds for Puerto Rico. Despite the statement made by Mr. Fairbank against the application of this law in Puerto Rico and by Governor Winship and company, Congress should not be put in the position of saying "Repeal the Fair Labor Standards Act as it applies to Puerto Rico or we will give Puerto Rico no relief funds."

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. For a brief question.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] has reserved a point of order solely for the purpose of having the gentleman from New York [Mr. Marcantonio] recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the representative of a great political party, the gentleman from New York, be permitted to address the House for 5 additional minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to be placed in the position of objecting, provided my reservation of a point of order may stand.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's reservation of a point of order stands.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for the request as well as for the left-handed compliment to my political party. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Reed].

Mr. REED of New York. I thought the gentleman would be very pleased to know that the Governor of Puerto Rico was before the Ways and Means Committee this morning and gave us one of the most vivid, graphic, and convincing statements about conditions in Puerto Rico I believe I have ever heard. He pointed out that one of the reasons for the unemployment in Puerto Rico today is the trade agreement entered into with Switzerland, stating that under the most-favored-nation clause the goods they were making are now coming in from China and Japan, to the ruin of Puerto Rico; that the women in Japan engaged in that line of work are paid only 5 cents a day, as against a far higher wage paid in Puerto Rico.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. On that point I do not thoroughly agree. However, I must say that the proposed treaty with Cuba will hurt; but the cause of the deplorable conditions in Puerto Rico is not limited by any means to the trade agreements.

Mr. REED of New York. I may also say that he referred to the effect of the wage and hour bill.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The Governor of Puerto Rico is opposed to the application of the wage and hour law to Puerto Rico. The House will be very interested to know of the saboteur role played by the Governor against a law passed by Congress and against its administrator. He and I disagree not only on that question but on many others; but, as I have said before, I am not going to enter into a discussion of the administration of Puerto Rico at this time. There is a proper time for it, and it will not be long now. I simply confine myself in this discussion to the need for relief funds for Puerto Rico, which, I submit, must be granted to relieve the people of Puerto Rico from a plight for which they are not responsible.

It is also my considered judgment that the committee's position, to the effect that funds are not recommended because a cure is what is needed and that the cure can be brought about by withholding these funds, is untenable and grossly inhuman. Certainly we cannot by means of an appropriation bill and a debate which will undoubtedly last no more than 15 minutes solve Puerto Rico's economic ills or adequately discuss its causes. Certainly we cannot solve Puerto Rico's unemployment problem through the medium of this appropriation bill. I submit that it is horrible to have 250,000 unemployed, involving 1,125,000 persons, suffer and starve until an economic cure is found for Puerto Rico.

Certainly we cannot solve Puerto Rico's unemployment problem by the refusal of relief funds. An emergency exists and the only orthodox and humane manner of dealing with the emergency is to grant relief. The committee is in the same position as though it were coming before this House with a relief bill for our 11,000,000 unemployed and said, "Let us first solve the unemployment problem and until then let us appropriate no money for relief." That is the situation we have here and that is the position the committee is now taking. They say that granting this money now would only be a "palliative" and that Congress should wait until this problem is solved, and then we can deal with the whole matter. I say before this problem can be ultimately solved 250,000 people, with 1,125,000 people involved, are directly affected by unemployment on an island of 1,700,000 people. They are actually on the verge of starvation. We face a condition and not a theory. This is a matter of emergency relief, and relief funds should be granted until an ultimate solution is found for the problems of Puerto Rico.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, the Puerto Rican authorities in the hearings told us that the minimum wage in Puerto Rico for needlework was $1 a day and that there was a special classification, however, for apprentices who had only had a year or so of experience of 6¼ cents an hour. I thought that might interest the gentleman.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Yes; and may I say to the gentleman that what he is referring to is factory work. The bulk of the needlework in Puerto Rico is done at home.

Mr. TABER. And it is piece work?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. And the wage paid for home needlework is 4 cents an hour.

Mr. TABER. Is it not piecework?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. That does not change the picture at all. The work done at home pays no more than 4 cents an hour. The number of people employed in the factories as far as needlework is concerned is insignificant. In view of these conditions, in view of the fact that it is wrong to wait until we can obtain an ultimate solution for Puerto Rico's problems, and in view of the fact that the Fair Labor Standards Act is not responsible for these conditions, and in the face of an existing emergency, I submit that in withholding relief funds we are taking it out of innocent people, people who have nothing to do with the conditions under which they are suffering; people who find themselves in their present economic plight because of exploitation and tyranny. I submit, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of this Committee that this is a matter of relief, to relieve suffering. It is not a matter of politics. There are no politics in this at all. It is a matter of aiding 1,125,000 people, a great and good people. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield on his point of order?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I was going to suggest to the gentleman that if he should see fit to withdraw the point of order it would be my intention to offer an amendment reducing the amount to $1,000,000 and strike out the proviso.

Mr. TABER. I will be willing to go along with the gentleman on that.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York withdraw his point of order?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I renew the point of order,

Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not recognize the gentleman from Wisconsin. The Chair desires to know if the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] withdraws his point of order?

Mr. TABER. I do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I renew the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Virginia. Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment striking out $3,000,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $1,000,000 and striking out the proviso.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from Wisconsin desires to make a point of order to the amendment offered by the Commissioner from Puerto Rico, the Chair will hear the gentleman. [After a pause.] The gentleman from Virginia offers an amendment to the amendment offered by the Commissioner from Puerto Rico which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia to the amendment offered by Mr. IGLESIAS: Strike out the sum of $3,000,000 and insert in lieu thereof the sum of $1,000,000, and strike the proviso, reading as follows: "Provided, That not to exceed $5,000 of the foregoing amount may be used for defraying the expenses of a comprehensive study under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior of the curriculum, facilities and operation of the University at Puerto Rico."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia to the amendment offered by the Commissioner from Puerto Rico.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the amendment offered by the Commissioner from Puerto Rico, as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Salaries and expenses: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses, Federal Bureau of Investigation, fiscal year 1939, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Justice Appropriation Act, 1939, $300,000.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Randolph: On page 16, line 17, strike out "$300,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$600,000."

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, there are many agencies of the Federal Government that we feel spend huge sums of money and bring little return for the funds that are expended. No one has ever charged that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been one of these. For every dollar that the Government of the United States invests in the Federal Bureau of Investigation approximately $7 has been returned. I believe this is a unique situation, and for that reason I offer the amendment which has just been read.

According to the available public records, the Federal Bureau of Investigation spent during the fiscal year of 1938 $6,222,976 for its complete operation. For the fiscal year 1939 only $5,978,200 was made available to this organization, which is $244,776 less than the appropriation which we made for the last year. In May 1938 former Attorney General Homer Cummings, in company with the Chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, appeared before the Appropriations Subcommittee and stated that this Bureau would begin the current fiscal year with a deficit, and that additional funds would be needed in order to get through that period. As of January 1, 1939, there was an actual deficit in the appropriation for the Bureau in the amount of $425,923. Recently the President recommended a deficiency item for this Bureau in the amount of $600,000. This would take care of the actual deficit which now exists and allow the employment of 55 additional special agents and 12 additional clerks working for the remainder of the fiscal year.

We all know, as a matter of fact, that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been called upon to perform a number of duties that were not anticipated prior to the beginning of this fiscal year.

We know that considerable work has been done in connection with the investigation of the members of the Federal judiciary. We know that the antitrust work of the Department of Justice has brought about additional work to this bureau, and that espionage investigations have been required in all parts of the United States. Special agents have been currently assigned to two kidnaping cases which have not yet been solved; namely, the one involving Charles Fletcher Mattson, of Tacoma, Wash., and the one involving Peter Levine in New York.

The fingerprint work of the F. B. I. has steadily increased. Recently the President of the United States in a public statement encouraged the filing of fingerprints by citizens, and this has brought about additional work. I am a believer in this program of fingerprinting.

Many demands are made upon this bureau from all parts of the country for assistance in law-enforcement problems. Since the passage of the Federal Kidnaping Act in June 1932 there have been 149 kidnaping cases. The Bureau has settled 147 of them. There has been a decrease of 80 percent in the number of bank robberies throughout the United States since the Federal Bureau of Investigation was brought in and given jurisdiction to handle this work. Last year the Bureau brought about the conviction of 95 out of every 100 persons whom it took to court for trial.

While the Bureau spent $6,222,976, the total fines imposed, savings, and recoveries effected amounted to $47,568,419. That is certainly a good investment for this Government of yours and mine to make. It is absolutely necessary and imperative that the F. B. I. be granted sufficient funds to enable the organization efficiently to operate in a time like this and to carry on its rightful functions. Mr. Hoover and his staff are doing a really splendid job.

I believe that the subcommittee has erred in bringing in an item of $300,000 when it should have been $600,000 as recommended by the President and by the Bureau of the Budget. The F. B. I., as I say, is an agency of the Government which returns $7 for each dollar expended, and is an arm of the Government that has the confidence of the American people. If ever there was a time when we needed to bolster the law enforcement agency of this country through an organization like the F. B. I., that time is the present. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes, of which 5 are to be allotted to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, apparently more than a generation ago there were abuses in the matter of deficiency appropriations even as there are abuses today. I was a boy in grade school only 11 years old when the Antideficiency Act went on the books passed by the Congress of the United States. It provided that there should be no deficiency appropriations except in the case of extraordinary emergencies, or unusual circumstances; and then it provided that the money had to be apportioned over a 12 months' period, and in the event that there were abuses the head of the department concerned must be summarily removed from office, and he could be fined. That law was put on the books by Congress in 1906, and it is there today.

In the deficiency bill under consideration there are items which, in my judgment, violate that act of 1906. Nobody can tell me, for instance, with respect to fingerprinting pointed out by my dearly beloved friend from West Virginia, that this activity could not have been foreseen by Mr. Edgar Hoover and the administrative personnel of the F. B. I. Nobody could convince me and persuade me that lots of the items in this bill could not have been foreseen. They have no business coming here with some of these deficiency items, but they are here; and, in my judgment, some of these department heads are violating the solemn law of the United States. When they do it, two things are happening. We have heard so much about bureaucracy! Well, Mr. Chairman, this is the way "strangling bureaucracy" really grows and gets its tentacles upon the Government of the United States. Do you not know that under the procedure that is taking place here at the present time you are really alienating the appropriating power of the Congress?

Why, they fairly snap their fingers at the Congress down at the other end of the Avenue. They will put on 80 or 100 people if they need them and virtually say, "Oh, to the devil with Congress. We will put these people on, and then when the time comes we will go up and get ourselves the necessary money in the form of a deficiency bill. If they say 'No,' we will say, "Then we will have to furlough these people." The employees are there sometimes through the instrumentality of the influence of some Member of Congress, and, manifestly, they do not want them to be furloughed. The result is that the deficiency item is approved.

So what is happening, then, is that the power to appropriate is being transferred from Congress to an executive agency; and all they do is to come and collect afterward in the form of a deficiency bill. This is precisely what is happening here at the present time. Did this Congress authorize the F. B. I. or the Department of Justice to lend a lot of personnel to some other governmental agency or make the money available? Certainly not. Then what do they do it for? Was there an extraordinary emergency as provided by the law of 1906? Was there an unusual circumstance as provided by the law of 1906? Oh, there is nothing in writing to show that there was justification for it. Apparently it is done through the procedure and practice that has grown up under the so-called deficiency procedure. There is, consequently, first one deficiency bill and then another. Sooner or later we shall have to attack this thing and take it in hand, because these deficiency bills will be more and more numerous year after year, and they grow larger as time goes on. I say to you frankly, as one Member of Congress who still has some regard for his oath, that I do not want to see the appropriating power divested from this body and transferred to some agency in the executive branch.

It is not fair. It is a wrongful delegation of power, and we are going to have to put an end to it sometime because it simply adds to the national burden, as well as to the national debt, and it is developing the hold of bureaucracy on the Government.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky. Mr. MAY. As I understand a deficiency appropriation, it is to provide additional money that has been spent by the departments concerned, over and above what Congress had authorized?

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is right. There are some things that we cannot foresee; but when they come in here asking for summary millions for ordinary purposes and for such things at putting on 100 or 200 people, is there anybody who would make so bold as to say that is an extraordinary emergency? Is there anybody who could command such persuasion as to say that is an unusual expense? Oh, indeed not. So we are going to have to put an end to it sometime, and I hope you will vote down the pending amendment in the interest of orderly procedure and for the purpose of preserving the appropriating power in the Congress of the United States.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen] remembers on this particular occasion the so-called Antideficiency Act. I wonder if there is any significance in the gentleman's remarks with reference to those that were directed at the Bureau of Investigation. I wonder if the Members of Congress and the American people are to draw the inference from the gentleman's remarks that he directs them at J. Edgar Hoover. I think for the gentleman's own benefit he ought to clarify that.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois. Mr. DIRKSEN. I directed my remarks to all items in this bill that are guilty, and I may say to the gentleman I am going to strike out one item.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman's remarks, of course, were addressed at a time when this particular item was up for consideration.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. Briefly. Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Hoover did put on 89 inspectors without any authority of law, did he not?

Mr. McCORMACK. Is the gentleman through? Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Coming back to my remarks in reference to the gentleman from Illinois, it is rather significant that he should address his remarks at this time, particularly when an item relating to the Bureau of Investigation is up for consideration. The thought enters my mind as to whether or not that was an implied or an indirect reflection upon J. Edgar Hoover.

Mr. DIRKSEN. No.

Mr. McCORMACK. I notice the gentleman says "no," and I am glad to have that put in the RECORD.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michi-

Mr. CRAWFORD. I came into the Hall a little while ago and I noticed when the words "F. B. I." were used, it was a direct attack upon the whole Bureau of Investigation, Director Hoover and all the rest of it. I asked the gentleman to yield and I was going to submit this question: What would the situation be if his own child was kidnaped and the F. B. I. was forced to put 150 men on the job to clean up the mess?

Mr. McCORMACK. I wanted to make the observation because I did not want the gentleman's state of mind to be misunderstood in the RECORD. The gentleman I know has a most profound respect for J. Edgar Hoover and for the Bureau of Investigation.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois. Mr. DIRKSEN. May I ask the gentleman from Michigan what was there in my remarks that would be in derogation of anything having to do with the F. B. I.?

Mr. CRAWFORD. When the words "F. B. I." were used in his statement.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman talks like a sentimentalist now.

Mr. McCORMACK. He is a practical fellow, from my observation of him.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. May] asked the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] if a deficiency is to take care of an amount expended by a department or bureau in excess of that appropriated by the Congress. The gentleman's answer was "Yes," which is partly correct. However, sometimes an emergency arises between the date of an appropriation for a fiscal year and the period during the operation of that fiscal year when additional men must be put on. A deficiency appropriation is necessary to meet the situation.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. I merely wanted to get before the House what a deficiency was. I knew the Members knew what it was, but someone ought to ascertain how much the deficiency appropriations have amounted to in the last few years, regardless of the department it applies to.

Mr. McCORMACK. I have not drawn any inference from the gentleman's inquiry. I simply wanted to show that deficiency appropriations are made, also because of emergencies occurring during a fiscal year requiring that additional help be put on.

The Bureau of the Budget recommended for the Bureau of Investigation the sum of $600,000. This amount has been reduced to $300,000. Since the beginning of the fiscal year the Bureau of Investigation has had tremendously increased responsibilities imposed upon it that were not contemplated at the time the appropriation for the present fiscal year was made. In connection with the antimonopoly, antitrust investigation there were over 100 agents assigned exclusively to that. A bill I was the author of last year, which aimed at Communist, Nazi, and Fascist activities in this country, a bill compelling those in the employ of foreign governments or foreign agencies for propaganda purposes in the United States to register, requires the emergency services of 25 special agents. That bill should be enforced. The success of the law will be its enforcement, and the enforcement of that law rests with the Bureau of Investigation.

Mr. Chairman, I respectfully submit that the amendment offered by the gentleman from West Virginia should be adopted and that the Bureau of the Budget's recommendation should be carried into this pending bill. Mr. Hoover and those associated with him have done wonderful work. They enjoy and command the respect of all of the people of the country. If favorable action is not taken on the pending amendment, I hope that the Senate will increase the amount.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York has indicated he does not care to speak. I want the last 5 minutes of the 10 minutes remaining, if anyone else desires any time.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I should like to have a minute to ask a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. REED] has notified the Chair he does not desire recognition. The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I understand this deficiency appropriation will include funds which are necessary to carry on the Department of Justice investigation and prosecution of the moving-picture monopoly?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I will give the gentleman that information in just a moment.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. It appears that the Department will need some additional funds, because Mr. Goldwyn, who was named as a defendant in the Attorney General's moving-picture antitrust action, went to the White House and hired James Roosevelt, the President's son, at a salary of $50,000 a year. James Roosevelt was later substituted as a defendant in the Government antitrust action in place of Mr. Goldwyn.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, much of the impassioned speeches here about this agency has been builded around its fine record in kidnaping cases. I would not for a moment detract from the fine service which has been rendered by the Bureau of Investigation, although I do not hang any halo about its head as a department or about its men as individuals. To me, it is just a branch of a Government department. To me, it has to abide by the law, and it ought to be the first one to live within the law.

One of my friends asked the melodramatic question, "How would you feel if your child were kidnaped and there were no funds available to handle the case?" I will say to my good friend that this Congress in its wisdom in the last session placed a $150,000 emergency fund in the hands of the Attorney General to be used in cases of emergency, and not one red copper penny of it has ever been used.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I had the pleasure of participating in a 2 or 3 weeks' fight to get that $150,000 provided to meet emergencies.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. And I had the pleasure of helping you get it. It is there for use in an emergency if it is needed. However, that question is not involved here. What have they done? Here is a question I asked Mr.

Mr. Woodrum. It was stated, I think, that in the fertilizer investigation there would be 200 men.

Mr. Tamm. Mr. Arnold stated that they should have 200 men assigned to that. That is correct. However, only 165 men are being assigned now and the number decreases each day as the work is completed.

You cannot work up a lot of emotionalism about the fertilizer investigation, can you? Is there anything about that that is going to cause our great Government to collapse and crime to be rampant, or, at least, before the regular subcommittee dealing with the Department of Justice has had opportunity within the next few weeks to determine whether or not the Federal Bureau of Investigation should be expanded? What happened with this agency is that we gave them a certain amount of money which they have not lived within. Listen to this question on page 293 of the

Mr. O'Neal. How many men above the number authorized were put on during the fiscal year 1939 on a full-time basis and how many on a temporary basis?

Mr. Tamm. The only personnel authorized was a total of 831. The overobligation represents 85 special agents and 28 clerical employees, or a total of 113 people.

Mr. O'Neal. In other words, in addition to the personnel allowed by the last appropriation, you have added 85 special agents and 28 other employees.

Mr. Tamm. Yes, sir: or a total of 113.

Mr. TAMM. Yes, sir; or a total of 113.

We have given them enough money, more than enough money, in fact, to take that unauthorized personnel through the rest of the fiscal year. We should not have done it. We made a mistake. We should have required the Bureau to live within its appropriation, but here again you are faced with the human element. They put the people on and they come in and say, "Well, if you don't give it to us we will have to turn them off," so Congress yields and we give them enough money to do that.

The complaint today is that in a deficiency bill we do not give them enough money for more agents and more clerks during the rest of this fiscal year. Our committee has said to them, "We would like you to go to the regular appropriating subcommittee dealing with the Department of Justice. which will be in session in a few days and which can consider whether or not there should be a further expansion of the Federal Bureau of Investigation." That is the whole case in a nutshell. This is a great law-enforcement agency. It should be required to set a good example. [Applause.]
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH. 1

The amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

CHILDREN'S BUREAU

Salaries and expenses, Conference on Children in a Democracy: For expenses of holding a conference on children in a democracy For expenses of holding a conference on children in a democracy and conducting the necessary research and consultation work preparatory thereto; personal services, including employment of experts and temporary assistants without regard to the civil-service laws and regulations; purchase of reports and material for reports; travel, including attendance at meetings when authorized by the Secretary of Labor and including traveling expenses and subsistence of consultants and of members of conference committees; and other necessary expenses, fiscal year 1939, to continue available until June 30, 1940, $18,000.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dirksen: On page 21, line 18, strike out beginning with line 18, on page 21, down to and including line 5 on page 22.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, Miss Lenroot, Director of the Children's Bureau, appeared before the committee and requested the sum of $60,000 for the purpose of holding a conference on children in a democracy. Obviously you can always hold a conference on children in a democracy if it promotes jobs. This conference on children in a democracy was going to create 12 jobs. The $60,000 was to be apportioned about as follows: $6,500 for supplies, $20,500 for travel, and $33,000 for salaries.

I am not quite sure of what would come out of a conference of that kind, but I doubt very much that it would be very efficacious. It was, of course, to be addressed to such questions as the extent to which the needs of children are met in a democracy. I believe every father and every mother has a pretty fair idea of the extent to which those needs are met. It was to be addressed to the question of the degree of preparation of children for citizenship. Well, as a father, I have some ideas about the preparation of children for citizenship. I believe the finest kind of preparation they can have is the preparation that comes from the contentment and felicity that go with a very happy home. If you want to solve this problem of democracy, and confer upon children the full beneficences of democracy, let us start finding the solution of unemployment in this country and confer upon the homes of the land the contentment and the happiness that come from the full dinner pail; and then we will have gone a long way toward solving the problem.

Now, what can come of bringing 250 women to Washington to sit around a conference table for 2 or 3 days and then bring them back again for another 2 or 3 days and finally have them draw up 100 pages of conclusions on the position of children in a democracy.

We know what their needs are. Their needs are education, first of all; their needs are full bellies, plenty of food and plenty of nourishment. Their needs are contentment and recreation, and we do not need a lot of folks sitting around a conference table here in Washington to get out mimeograph matter by the ton telling 50,000,000 women in America what the needs of children are in a democracy.

She wanted $60,000 for this purpose and the committee finally reduced the amount to $18,000, but that would be $18,000 sheerly wasted. So the purport of my amendment that is on the desk at the present time is to strike the $18,000 out also. If you want to save pin money this afternoon, I suggest that you join with me in striking out the last vestige of this suggestion about a conference for children in a democracy and take out this $18,000 also.

Mrs. O'DAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield with pleasure to the gentlewoman from New York.

Mrs. O'DAY. I thank the gentleman very much. We women, and the men, too, should be very much concerned over the plight of the children in this democracy. Do you know that in the old-age pension the Federal Government matches the appropriations dollar for dollar and the old people have their lobby and there are a great many old people, and they are well represented. The Federal Government only pays one-third of what is paid by the States. in aid of dependent children who have no lobby. The consequence is the dependent children, not your children, not mine, not the children of you gentlemen here, but the dependent children are not properly looked after, and we women want to get busy on that because the old people will die off and those dependent children will be our citizens who will supplant us and take our place and hold the reins of government in their hands, and they are not taken care of.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, may I say to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. O'DAY] that I recognize, first of all, the splendid work she has done in this connection and the interest she has manifested at all times; but now let me say this: We have been appropriating about $360,000 a year for the Children's Bureau; secondly, we have a National Youth Administration, for which we have been appropriating $75,000,000 a year. We spend hundreds of millions of dollars on the C. C. C. for various purposes, including some instructional work. These are the instrumentalities with which we have to carry out the democratic principle and have it pervade the youth structure of this country. So a conference like this can offer very little, except to reduce a few conclusions that we already know to paper and waste another $60,000. This is my principal objection to it.

There are agencies of government that are already doing this work, and, finally, the work is being done through the Social Security Board and through the Children's Bureau, which articulates section 5 of the Social Security Act so far as its administrative functions are concerned.

Now, if I had been Miss Lenroot I never would have asked for this conference, because to me it would be a kind of confession that my own bureau was not doing the work for which $360,000 was appropriated last year. This is why I am opposed to wasting even $18,000 for this purpose. I do not believe it will do any good.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. HAWKS. I wonder if the gentleman can tell us how many of the women who will attend these meetings or who have attended them in the past ever bore children?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I must say to the gentleman that he embarrasses me in asking a question of that kind. [Laughter.]

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsyl-

Mr. DITTER. Is the gentleman familiar with the fact that the 1930 conference was held under President Hoover without any cost whatever to the Government?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes; I understand the 1930 conference was held without any expense to the Federal Government.

So let us not expend this $18,000 unless we can be reasonably sure some good will accrue. There are many agencies that are carrying on this work at the present time, so we can perform a service for the taxpayer by striking the last vestige of this suggested appropriation from the bill.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FULMER. As a matter of fact, this is just the beginning of what will eventually be a tremendous amount requested later on for the same purpose.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am rather inclined to believe that once we establish the idea it may become an annual conference, and then instead of $60,000 it will go to $100,000 and then $200,000 and finally become a very substantial sum.

So, Mr. Chairman, I respectfully suggest that the amendment be adopted and this provision stricken from the bill.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute in order that I may yield for a question by the very charming lady from Illinois, the very distinguished judge from Illinois [Miss Sumner].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the lady from Illinois.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Thank you very much. I just wanted to say that as one who, during the past year as county judge in my county, had done quite a bit of work in connection with child labor and had attended several conferences, I feel the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen] is quite right in feeling that the need is not so much for more information to be derived from conferences as for more economy and more money to be spent to help rear little children and bring them up as they should be brought up. [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. I feel honored to think the charming lady from Illinois shares my views. [Applause and laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

It is very easy to stand before Congress and ridicule a proposition and cast doubt upon it. I think all organizations these days find it is highly profitable and very helpful to the cause to meet and confer. I do not know why there should be any exception as to women dealing with subjects relating to children, child improvement, and child care. Professional men do it. Business houses do it. It has become the common practice all over the country for groups to study and give each other the advantage of what has happened under their supervision and their observation. It is no different in this matter. Many very helpful improvements have come out as the result of these child conferences. I will not take the time to go into them. It is not a new idea. I would like to read to you from the hearings on page 310;

Conferences on child welfare under the auspices of the President of the United States have been held at intervals of approximately 10 years since 1909. The first conference was called by President Theodore Roosevelt and resulted in conclusions regarding the care of dependent children which have had far-reaching effects in encouraging provisions for preserving home life for children when the maintenance of the home was threatened by the death or illness of the father or some other catastrophe. The second was called in 1919 by President Wilson to consider irreducible minimum standards for the health, education, and welfare of children.

I think this is a subject that is very properly within the scope of conferences.

The third, designated as the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, was called by President Hoover in 1930.

This conference has already been called. The invitations have gone out. People are expecting to be taken care of. We of the Appropriations Committee have attempted to do the job in as economic a way as possible. Sixty thousand dollars was first asked for. We insisted that the personnel of the Bureau be used, and we therefore saved the cost of personnel. There was travel expense, which we declined to appropriate for, and we cut the amount to a figure which we feel is sufficient, which will do the job economically; and we believe that satisfactory results will come out of this conference. We made the amount $18,000. We believe that is moderate, that it is economical, and that it is enough; and we ask the Committee to vote down the amendment striking out the $18,000. [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is it not true that every previous conference that was held was before the time when we had C. C. C. camps, the National Youth Administration, and the child welfare work that is now being conducted under the Social Security Act?

Mr. O'NEAL. Well, I do not know that it is a complete job they are doing. I suspect some of these women know a little more about the rearing and the care of children than some of our C. C. C. camp instructors.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, that is true.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield.

Mr. HAWKS. I would like to insert right there that we have raised our children on the books that are gotten out by the Department of Labor. I do not believe the average wife in this country needs any more information on how to raise children than that contained in those publications put out by the Department of Labor.

Mr. O'NEAL. I think the gentleman will find that much of the information which is contained in those books has come about as the result of conferences of women on this subject.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'NEAL. I yield.

Mr. KUNKEL. Were appropriations made for those three previous conferences?

Mr. O'NEAL. Some of it has been paid in the past by private funds, I understand.

Mr. KUNKEL. There were no general appropriations?

Mr. O'NEAL. In some cases it has been the other way. [Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia) there were ayes 72 and noes 46.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I demand tel-

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. Dirksen and Mr. Woodrum of Virginia to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were-ayes 84, noes 52.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Cole of Maryland, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments to final

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the Dirksen amendment.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the Eaton amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment on which a separate vote is demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Draksen: On page 21, line 18, strike out beginning with line 18, on page 21, down to and including line 5 on page 22.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the House divided, and there were-ayes 83, noes 60.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has just counted the membership in the Chamber. Evidently there is no quorum present. The doorkeeper will close the door, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 167, nays 189, not voting 76, as follows:

[Roll No. 39]

	YEA	S-167
Alexander	Dondero	Норе	Owen
Allen, Pa.	Douglas	Horton	Pace
Andersen, H. Carl	Durham	Houston	Patton
Anderson, Calif.	Dworshak	Hull	Peterson, Ga.
Andresen, A. H.	Eaton, Calif.	Jeffries	Pierce, N. Y.
Andrews	Edmiston	Jenks, N. H.	Pittenger
Arends	Elston	Johns	Plumley
Austin	Engel	Johnson, Ill.	Rankin
Ball	Faddis	Johnson, Ind.	Reed, N. Y.
Barry	Fenton	Jones, Ohio	Rees, Kans.
Barton	Ford, Leland M.	Kean	Robertson
Beckworth	Ford, Miss.	Keefe	Robsion, Ky.
Bender	Fulmer	Kilday	Rodgers, Pa.
Bolles	Gamble	Kinzer	Routzohn
Bolton	Garrett	Kunkel	Rutherford
Boren	Gathings	Lambertson	Sandager
Bradley, Mich.	Gearhart	Landis	Satterfield
Brewster	Gehrmann	Lanham	Schafer, Wis.
Brown, Ohio	Gerlach	Lemke	Schiffler
Bryson	Gifford	Lewis, Ohio	Seccombe
Carlson	Gilchrist	Lord	Shafer, Mich.
Carter	Gillie	Luce	Smith, Maine
Case, S. Dak.	Gore	McDowell	Smith, Ohio
Chapman	Graham	McLean	Smith, W. Va.
Chiperfield	Grant, Ind.	McLeod	Springer
Church	Griswold	Mapes	Stearns, N. H.
Clason	Guyer, Kans.	Marshall	Stefan
Clevenger	Gwynne	Martin, Iowa	Sumner, Ill.
Cluett	Hall	Martin, Mass.	Taber
Coffee, Nebr.	Halleck	Mason	Talle
Cooley	Hancock	May	Thill
Corbett	Hare	Michener	Thorkelson
Cox	Harness	Miller	Tibbott
Crawford	Harter, N. Y.	Monkiewicz	Tinkham
Culkin	Hawks	Mott	Treadway
Curtis	Heinke	Mundt	Van Zandt
Darrow	Hess	Murray	Vincent, Ky.
Dirksen	Hinshaw	O'Brien	Vorys, Ohio
Ditter	Holmes	Oliver	Vreeland

ı	West	White, Ohio	Winter	Woodruff, Mich
ı	Wheat	Whittington	Wolcott	Youngdahl
ı	Whelchel	Wigglesworth	Wolfenden, Pa.
ı		NAY	5—189
ı	Allen, La.	Duncan	Kerr	Ramspeck
ı	Angell	Dunn	Kirwan	Randolph
ı	Ashbrook	Eaton, N. J.	Kitchens	Rayburn
ı		Eberharter	Kocialkowski	Richards
ı	Bates, Ky.	Ebernarter
ı	Beam	Elliott	Kramer	Robinson, Utah
ı	Bell	Ellis	Larrabee	Rogers, Mass.
ı	Bland	Ferguson	Lea	Rogers, Okla.
ı	Bloom	Fernandez	Leavy	Romjue
ı	Boehne	Fitzpatrick	Lesinski	Ryan
ı	Boykin	Flaherty	Lewis, Colo.	Sabath
ı	Bradley, Pa.	Flannagan	Ludlow	Sacks
ı	Brooks	Flannery	McAndrews	Schaefer, Ill.
ı	Brown, Ga.	Folger	McArdle	Schuetz
ı	Buck	Ford, Thomas F.	McCormack	Schulte
ı	Buckler, Minn.	Fries	McLaughlin	Schwert
ı	Bulwinkle	Gavagan	McMillan, John L.
ı	Burch	Geyer, Calif.	Maciejewski	Secrest
ı	Burdick	Gibbs	Magnuson	Shanley
ı	Burgin	Gossett	Mahon	Sheppard
l	Byrne, N. Y.	Grant, Ala.	Maloney	Sirovich
ı	Byrns, Tenn.	Green	Marcantonio
ı	Caldwell		Martin, Colo.	Smith, Conn.
ı		Gregory		Smith, Ill.
ı	Cannon, Fla.	Griffith	Massingale	Smith, Va.
ı	Cannon, Mo.	Hart	Merritt	Snyder
ı	Casey, Mass.	Harter, Ohio	Mills, Ark.	South
ı	Celler	Hartley	Mills, La.	Spence
ı	Chandler	Havenner	Mitchell	Starnes, Ala.
ı	Clark	Healey	Monroney	Steagall
ı	Claypool	Hennings	Moser	Sutphin
ı	Cochran	Hill	Mouton	Tarver
ı	Coffee, Wash.	Hobbs	Murdock, Ariz.	Tenerowicz
ı	Cole, Md.	Hook	Murdock, Utah	Terry
ı	Collins	Hunter	Myers	Thomas, Tex.
ı	Colmer	Izac	Nelson	Thomason
ı	Connery	Jacobsen	Norrell	Tolan
ľ	Cooper	Jarman	O'Connor	Turner
ı	Costello	Jarrett	O'Day	Vinson, Ga.
ı	Crosser	Johnson, Luther A		Wallgren
ı	Cullen	Johnson, Lyndon		Warren
ľ	D'Alesandro	Johnson, Okla.	Patman	Weaver
ı	Darden	Johnson, W. Va.	Patrick	Weich
ı	Dempsey	Jones, Tex.	Pearson	Williams, Mo.
ı	DeRouen	Kee	Peterson. Fla.
۱	Dingell	Keller	Pierce Oreg	Wood Wood

NOT VOTING-76

Pierce, Oreg. Poage Polk

Powers Rabaut

Woodrum, Va.

Zimmerman

Allen, Ill.	Dies	McGranery	Seger
Anderson, Mo.	Doughton	McKeough	Shannon
Arnold	Englebright	McMillan, Thos
Barden	Evans	McReynolds	Simpson
Barnes	Fay	Maas	Smith, Wash.
Bates, Mass.	Fish	Mansfield	Somers, N. Y.
Blackney	Gartner	Martin. III.	Sparkman
Boland	Goldsborough	Nichols	Sullivan
Buckley, N. Y.	Gross	Norton	Sumners, Tex.
Byron	Harrington	O'Leary	Sweeney
Cartwright	Hendricks	Osmers	Taylor, Colo.
Cole, N. Y.	Hoffman	O'Toole	Taylor, Tenn.
Creal	Jenkins, Ohio	Pfeifer	Thomas, N. J.
Crowe	Jensen	Reece, Tenn.	Voorhis, Calif.
Crowther	Kennedy, Martin	Reed, Ill.	Wadsworth
Cummings	Kleberg	Rich	Walter
Curley	Knutson	Risk	White, Idaho
Delaney	LeCompte	Rockefeller	Williams, Del.
Dickstein	McGehee	Sasscer	Wolverton, N. J.

So the amendment was rejected. The Clerk announced the following pairs: On this vote:

Kelly Kennedy, Md

Kennedy, Michael

Kee Keller

Keogh

Dingell Disney Dowell

Drewry

Mr. Simpson (for) with Mr. Barnes (against),
Mr. Short (for) with Mr. O'Leary (against).
Mr. Gross (for) with Mr. McKeough (against).
Mr. Hoffman (for) with Mr. Sullivan (against).
Mr. Hoffman (for) with Mr. Bullivan (against).
Mr. Reed of Illinois (for) with Mr. Delaney (against).
Mr. Reec of Tennessee (for) with Mr. Martin J. Kennedy (against).
Mr. Bates of Massachusetts (for) with Mr. Pfeifer (against).
Mr. Gartner (for) with Mrs. Norton (against).
Mr. Cole of New York (for) with Mr. Boland (against).
Mr. Crowther (for) with Mr. Dickstein (against).
Mr. Williams of Delaware (for) with Mr. Fay (against).
Mr. Allen of Illinois (for) with Mr. Buckley of New York (against).
Mr. Rich (for) with Mr. O'Toole (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Doughton with Mr. Wadsworth.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Knutson.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Taylor of Tennessee.
Mr. Nichols with Mr. Seger.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Sparkman with Mr. Wolverton of New Jersey.
Mr. Curley with Mr. Blackney.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Engelbright.
Mr. Kleberg with Mr. Jensen.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Maas.

Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Osmers.
Mr. Barden with Mr. Risk.
Mr. Evans with Mr. LeCompte.
Mr. McGehee with Mr. Rockefeller.
Mr. Sweeney with Mr. Martin of Illinois.
Mr. Anderson of Missouri with Mr. Crowe.
Mr. Walter with Mr. Voorhis of California.
Mr. McGranery with Mr. Creal.
Mr. Smith of Washington with Mr. Arnold.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Somers of New York.
Mr. White of Idaho with Mr. Hendricks.
Mr. Thomas S. McMillan with Mr. Goldsborough.

Mr. Green changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. Lanham and Mr. Hare changed their votes from "nay" to "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my request for a separate vote on the Eaton amendment in order to expedite the business

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot entertain that motion at this time.

The Clerk will read the second amendment, on which a separate vote was demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Eaton of New Jersey: On page 10, line 13, after the figures "$60,000", insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Dutch elm disease. For an additional amount for the eradication of the Dutch elm disease including the same purposes and objects specified under this head in the agricultural appropriation act for the fiscal year 1939, $200,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. EATON) there were-ayes 117, noes 160.

So the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the

The bill was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) entitled "An act to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress."

SURVEYS AND TEST BORINGS IN RE PASSAMAQUODDY BAY

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 57, authorizing the Secretary of War to cause a completion of surveys, test borings, and foundation investigations to be made to determine the advisability and cost of putting in a small experimental plant for development of tidal power in the waters in and about Passamaquoddy Bay, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for such examinations.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. will the gentleman explain this?

Mr. DEROUEN. I will be glad to do so. This is a resolution dealing with the matter of review and there are no expenditures involved. As a rule, the Committee on Rivers and Harbors approves these without difficulty and they are put in an omnibus bill. I think many Members from the Rivers and Harbors Committee will admit this. However. the Senate passed this joint resolution, sending it to the House, where it was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. We have reported it back to the House and I ask that it be considered now because it is simply a review. We are asking for no money. It is not necessary to spend any money because a lump-sum appropriation has already been made.

Mr. CARTER. I do not know anything about this. Mr. TABER. Were the minority members of that committee present at the time this was considered?

Mr. DEROUEN. I do not remember. Mr. TABER. Did they approve this?

Mr. DEROUEN. Yes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think this should lie over until tomorrow.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my request.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman may withdraw his request.

There was no objection.

ADEQUATE NATIONAL DEFENSE

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. May]?

There was no objection.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carof January 12, 1939, to the Congress, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36,

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 6, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 22, 23, and 25, and agree to same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same, with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following: "one or more of which shall be designated by the Civil Aeronautics Authority for the training of any Negro air pilot,"; and the Senate agree to same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment by the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following:

"See 14 All the provisions of section 3 of the cet of Moreh."

proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following:

"Sec. 14. All the provisions of section 3 of the act of March 27, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 505; 49 Stat. 1926) and as amended by this section shall be applicable with respect to contracts for aircraft or any portion thereof for the Army to the same extent and in the same manner that such provisions are applicable with respect to contracts for aircraft, or any portion thereof for the Navy: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall exercise all functions under such section with respect to aircraft for the Army which are exercised by the Secretary of the Navy with respect to aircraft for the Navy: Provided further, That section 3b of the act of March 27, 1934 (48 Stat. 505) as amended (49 Stat. 1926; 34 U. S. C., Supp. IV, 496), is hereby further amended by inserting in the first sentence after the words "in excess of 10 per centum of the total contract prices" the words "for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or portion thereof, and in excess of 12 per centum of the total contract prices for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete aircraft or portion thereof"; by inserting in the first provise after the words "That if there is a net loss on all such contracts or subcontracts" the words "for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or portion thereof"; and by inserting at the end of the first provise after the words "income taxable year" a comma and the words "and that if there is a net loss, or a net profit less than 12 per centum, as aforesaid on all such contracts or subcontracts for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete aircraft or portion thereof completed by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income taxable year. such net loss or deficiency in profit shall pleted by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income taxable year, such net loss or deficiency in profit shall be allowed as a credit in determining the excess profit, if any, during the next succeeding four income taxable years, and that the method of ascertaining the amount of excess profit, initially fixed upon shall be determined on or before June 30, 1939": Provided further, That when aircraft are procured by the Secretary of War as a result of competitive bids requiring the submission of sample aircraft with bid, the Secretary is authorized, in his discretion, to purchase sample aircraft of competitors to whom an award is not made, not more than one each from not more than the submission of the sub three such competitors, in order of merit, at prices not exceeding 75, 60, and 50 per cent, respectively, of the cost applicable in the opinion of the Secretary to the development and manufacture of such sample aircraft."

And the Senate agree to the same.

A. J. MAY, EWING THOMASON, DOW W. HARTER, W. G. ANDREWS, DEWEY SHORT, Managers on the part of the House. J. HAMILTON LEWIS,

M. M. LOGAN. WARREN R. AUSTIN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to H. R. 3791, "To provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress," submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommend in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments nearly."

of such amendments, namely:
On amendment No. 1: Authorizes an airplane strength of 6,000 instead of the 5,500 contained in the House bill. In view of recent international developments and of the fact that the number of airplanes actually procured and maintained will depend upon such appropriations as may be provided from time to time, your committee believes that the larger limit specified in the Senate amendment is not unreasonable. It is doubtful that, as a practical matter, more than the number authorized in the House bill can be maintained.

than the number authorized in the House bill can be maintained, due to accidents, necessity for overhaul, and similar factors keeping airplanes out of service for extended periods.

On amendment No. 3: Limits to $300,000,000 the amount authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of equipping and maintaining the Air Corps with airplanes, airships, balloons, spare parts, equipment, and other accessories. That amount for such purposes is greater than the War Department contemplates expending, according to the testimony given at the hearings on the bill, and, in any event, the amount actually expended will be determined by the Congress in its action on annual appropriation bills.

On amendment No. 6: May be considered clarifying language which does not alter the legal effect of the related language in the House bill.

House bill. On amendments Nos. 22, 23, 25: Were requested by the War Department in order to broaden the sources from which officers may be secured.

On amendment No. 5: Merely provides for the designation by the Civil Aeronautics Authority of one or more schools for the training of Negro air pilots.

of Negro air pilots.

On amendments Nos. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20: Substantially restore the provisions of the House bill. It broadens the House bill so as to include all military personnel of the Army of the United States called or ordered into the active service of the United States. On amendment No. 38: Establishes a limit on the profits which may be made by manufacturers of airplanes, without imposing under head states.

may be made by manufacturers of airplanes, without imposing undue hardships on them, and also provides for reasonable reimbursement to not more than three unsuccessful competitors in airplane design competition of the costs of developing and manufacturing sample airplanes.

A. J. MAY. EWING THOMASON, DOW W. HARTER, W. G. ANDREWS, DEWEY SHORT, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include an address I delivered today before the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein an address delivered by the Chief of Engineers, Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, before the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a radio broadcast engaged in by my colleagues the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HILL], the gentleman from Maine [Mr. OLIVER], and former Congressman Binderup, of Nebraska

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. Izac]?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein an address by the Honorable John E. Miller before the Rivers and Harbors Congress on the legal status of flood control in the Mississippi Valley.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. KITCHENS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made this afternoon and to include the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Craw-FORD] as an extension of my own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers]?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a brief history of the life of the great patriot, Stephen Decatur.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Masachusetts [Mrs. Rogers]?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, today is the anniversary of his death, and especially in these trying days is it fitting for us to pay tribute to Americans whose lives were dedicated to their country.

A bill has been introduced in the Congress for the purchase of the Stephen Decatur house, so that it may be kept as a memorial to him and other naval heroes. It was he who was largely responsible for developing a read navy in this country.

Stephen Decatur is one of the most brilliant figures in American naval history. Born in Sinepuxent, Md., January 5, 1779, he entered the Navy as a midshipman at 19, was a lieutenant at 20, a captain at 25. At the age of 41 he died in a brave but useless duel.

He subdued the Tripolitan pirates, defeated the crack frigate of the British Navy, and helped to lay the foundation of a strong American Navy.

Admiral Lord Nelson pronounced his act of dashing into the harbor at Tripoli at the head of a small party and burning the frigate Philadelphia, which had fallen into the hands of the Tripolitans, "the most daring of the age." It was in recognition of this exploit that he was made captain, presented with a sword, and put in command of the Constitution by Commodore Preble, commander of the fleet.

Following the War of 1812 he was made Navy commissioner, with Commodore Rodgers and Commodore Porter, an office which he held until his death, March 22, 1820, in a duel with Commodore Barron at Bladensburg.

The sea was Decatur's life. His grandfather was a lieutenant in the French Navy; his father a captain of privateers in the American Revolution. The young Decatur, to quote his biographer, Irvin Anthony, "pursued his destiny with a vigorous sincerity that made his life intense-and without regret."

Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong. (Stephen Decatur.)

After Stephen Decatur's death, Decatur house was occupied by many distinguished men.

Decatur house was designed by Benjamin H. Latrobe, architect of St. John's Church, and one of the early planners of the United States Capitol. It was built for Commodore Stephen Decatur in 1818 with the prize money he won in the wars with the Barbary pirates, and was the first private house constructed on Lafayette Square after the White House. In the roof are "look-outs" where slaves were posted during the occupancy of Martin Van Buren, Secretary of State under President Jackson. Similar ones on the White House roof made possible a system of wigwagging before the days of the telephone.

Stephen Decatur and his young bride had lived in the house little more than a year when he was brought home mortally wounded from his duel with Commodore Barron at Bladensburg.

After Decatur's death, many famous men lived there in spite of the ghost that still haunts it. Baron Hyde de Neuville, French Minister to the United States, was the first to occupy the house. Then came Baron de Tuyll, a Russian Minister. He was followed by Henry Clay, Secretary of State under President John Quincy Adams; Martin Van Buren and Edward Livingston, succeeding Secretary of State under President Andrew Jackson; Sir Charles Vaughan, British Minister to the United States; John Gadsby, "mine host" of the old National Hotel; George M. Dallas, when Vice President under President Polk.

In 1849 to 1851 two sons of the brilliant Rufus King came to the House of Representatives, taking up their abode in Decatur house, followed by the Honorable William Appleton, Congressman from Massachusetts.

The last tenant before the Civil War was Judah P. Benjamin, eloquent Senator from Louisiana, afterward Attorney General, then Secretary of War, and finally Secretary of State for the Confederacy. The house was used as offices during the war, but at the close was bought by Edward Fitz-gerald Beale, a Virginian, the grandson of Commodore Truxton. Edward Beale also began life in the Navy and won great distinction in the Mexican War. He explored the West and helped to found the State of California. President Grant appointed him United States Minister to Austro-Hungary. His son, the late Truxtun Beale, was formerly United States Minister to Persia and to Greece. The historic mansion is now occupied by his widow. His son, Walker Blaine Beale, was a gallant soldier in the World War, who died on the battlefields of France.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a letter from the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors commenting on the appropriation for rivers and harbors as recommended by the Bureau of the Budget.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, first, I would like to call your attention to a project which is of vital importance to the State of Louisiana, and the Nation as a whole—that is, the Calcasieu River and Pass, La., project.

The port of Lake Charles is one of the several new deepwater inland seaports created in the low country back of the Gulf coast. The port was constructed and financed entirely by local interests at a cost of $6,000,000 and was officially opened to traffic in November 1926.

Since that time it has established a notable record for development and growth. Regular steamship services are scheduled to Atlantic and Pacific coast ports of the United States and to the principal ports of Europe and South America, with irregular sailings to all world ports.

Seagoing traffic passing through the present waterway-Lake Charles Deep Water Channel and Sabine-Neches waterway—has increased from 561,776 tons, valued at $18,127,215 in 1930, to 3,308,595 tons in 1937, valued at over $45,000,000, and is constantly increasing. Internal traffic has leaped from a mere 531,383 tons, valued at $5,280,502, to 1,265,132 tons, valued at $11,674,550, during the same period of time, and the total tonnage at this time is approximately 6,000,000

Approximately 600 ships, oceangoing vessels, visited the port of Lake Charles, La., during the year 1938. Counting motor vessels and barges, approximately 7,034 vessels visited the port during the year 1938.

It will be noted that the port of Lake Charles carries on world-wide commerce or trade, and that the construction of the new ship channel to the Gulf will be seriously impaired under the meager $30,000,000 appropriation recommended by the Bureau of the Budget for all river and harbor improvements throughout the United States.

At this point permit me to point out that the Chief of Army Engineers, War Department, in his annual report for 1938, stated that $102,975,800 could be profitably expended on river and harbor improvements during the fiscal year 1940. The Bureau of the Budget, on the other hand, recommends only $30,000,000, and I feel certain the Members of the House of Representatives of the United States can readily see that such a small sum is inadequate to carry on the river and harbor improvements already authorized and under actual construction.

It will mean a tremendous expense and loss to the many contractors who are presently engaged on these projects and increase unemployment, as there will not be sufficient money to continue the many projects now in the process of construction throughout the United States. It is my hope that some remedy may be had whereby this $30,000,000 can be increased and an adequate appropriation be made to provide for the continuation of the work now under way without any unnecessary delay being occasioned by lack of funds.

In conclusion I offer in support a letter from Hon. J. J. MANSFIELD, the able chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee, House of Representatives, stating his views on the inadequacy of the amount recommended by the Bureau of the Budget and endorsing an increase in this appropriation, to wit:

> COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES Washington, D. C., March 21, 1939.

Hon. R. L. DEROUEN, M. C., Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.

My Dear Colleague: I am writing you about a matter in which I am sure the people of your district are much interested. The law imposes upon the Army engineers the duty of telling Congress each year the amount of money which should be spent upon river and harbor projects during the following fiscal year. The Army engineers during this session have advised Congress that the economic needs for new work for rivers and harbors during the next fiscal year will require an appropriation of $102,975,800, and the Chief of Engineers has specified the projects and has set forth the amount needed for each project.

I herewith enclose you are extract from the report of the Chief of

I herewith enclose you an extract from the report of the Chief of I herewith enclose you an extract from the report of the Chief of Engineers, naming the projects in your district and in your section on which the engineers say money should be expended for new work during the next fiscal year, and the amount which they recommend for each project. The appropriation for new work on rivers and harbors for the current fiscal year was $75,020,000. The Director of the Budget has recommended that the appropriation for new work during the next fiscal year be cut down to $30,000,000. This means, of course, that more than two-thirds of the money which the Chief of Engineers officially reports should be expended for new work upon the projects in your district and upon the projects in every other district in this country must be eliminated.

Friends of river and harbor work on the Rivers and Harbors Committee and in the House feel that such a drastic cut in funds for river and harbor work is not in the public interest. Experience has river and harbor work is not in the public interest. Experience has taught us that the recommendations of the Army engineers, who have no selfish interests and no interest whatsoever, except the public interest, have been sound, and I am writing you this letter to urge that you earnestly cooperate with others who share our views in an effort to procure an amendment to the nonmilitary activities bill of the War Department which will provide adequate funds for deserving and meritorious river and harbor works throughout the country. This bill is now under consideration by the Appropriations Committee. out the country. This b

Hoping for your active and earnest cooperation, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

J. J. MANSFIELD.

Projects: Red River, White and Black, Ouachita and Louisiana waterways, which the Army engineers say should be improved with new work during the next fiscal year

Project	Amount	Congressmen
Southwest Pass and South Pass, Mississippi	$1,694,000	Rankin.
River, La. Mississippi River between Baton Rouge and	200,000	Fernandez, Maloney, Griffith.
New Orleans. Grand Bayou Pass, La	25, 000	Fernandez, Maloney.
Calcasieu River and Pass, La	1, 500, 000 81, 000	DeRouen. Mouton.
Sabine-Neches Waterway, Tex	1, 314, 000	Dies.
Louisiana-Texas Intracoastal Waterway, Sa- bine River to Corpus Christi section.	2, 034, 500	Dies, Mansfield, Kle berg.
Total for new work	6, 848, 500	Designation of the

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KITCHENS and Mr. BENDER asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein several letters.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a radio address delivered by myself, and I also ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein a brief article by David Lawrence, well-known columnist.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, my discussion today is to clarify my statement of yesterday, when I said: "It is dangerous to improvise on the Constitution." It is well for us to bear in mind that the Constitution of the United States is of a deeper and more fundamental significance than is generally accepted by a great number of people. It provides for a complete protection of the Government, for legislation, and regulation. It provides for the common defense of the Nation and for the general welfare of all the people. The Constitution also guarantees to every State in this Union a republican form of government.

By the introduction of amendments without due consideration-and, I desire to say, serious consideration-it is possible that constitutional government may be undermined. As I study this document I marvel at how completely all contingencies are covered, because it really provides rules for perpetual protection of our Government, a republican democracy.

I contend that Congress must adhere strictly to the Constitution without reservation or evasion in any manner whatsoever. My reason for speaking on this subject is due to the fact that I am fearful of the safety of our Government as I recall past legislation and the recent passing of the Reorganization Act of 1939 by this House.

The perpetuation of our Republic must rest upon the powers of the States to regulate everything within the State and for positive control of the Federal Government. This was provided for in the tenth amendment:

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitu-tion, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people.

It follows therefore: The Constitution limits the powers of the Federal Government, but reserves to the States their sovereign rights not only to regulate their own affairs but also to wield a beneficial control of the Federal Government. The Constitution provides for this power in section 3, para-

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the legislature thereof, for 6 years; and each Senator shall have one vote.

This paragraph made the Senate an exclusive body in Congress because its Members were direct representatives of the States in contradistinction to the representatives in the House, who were and still are direct representatives of the people. The same paragraph was, therefore, of the most vital importance because it was actually the keystone in the arch of the Republic and upon the observation of it the life of the Republic was safe.

The repeal of this paragraph has in a sense changed the tenth amendment to read:

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States are reserved to the people.

In order to have a clearer understanding of this, let me quote the seventeenth amendment:

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof for a period of 6 years and each Senator shall have 1 vote.

The seventeenth amendment made three fundamental changes. First, it deprived the States of direct representation in Congress. Second, it made the Senate and the House direct representatives of the people. Third, it changed our Government from a republic to a democracy.

The change made in the form of our Government by the seventeenth amendment is to a great extent responsible for the present chaotic state in the Nation, for it upsets balance in the Federal Government. It is my personal opinion that it would be better if the seventeenth amendment were repealed, for it will reestablish the proper balance in the Government necessary for a republican form of government.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday I called the attention of my colleagues to the danger of amending the Constitution and of enacting unconstitutional or unsound legislation. I said that it is now possible to elect a naturalized citizen President of the United States, and my reason for making that statement was in reality not only to warn Members of Congress, but the people, not to treat the Constitution disparagingly. This is how it may happen: The votes of the majority of the people now control both branches of Congress and the same majority controls the two legislative branches of the State. This majority, free from senatorial control, wields the power that elects all officials to office. As a matter of academic interest only, let us compare what may happen with past performance.

Article II of the Constitution provides:

No person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President, neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of 35 years, and been 14 years a resident within the United States.

This paragraph does not state that the party nominee must be native-born, and it does not say that a naturalized citizen who has been in the United States 14 years cannot be seated. It follows, therefore, that as the complete power is now in the hands of the majority of the people, and free from State control by the Senate, unforeseen changes may take place. It is, therefore, important that Congress preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution as it actually was given to us, and not as we think it ought to be, or as we think the Supreme Court might decide, for Congress is first responsible for the constitutionality of all legislation. I am prompted to make this statement because of arguments on the reorganization bill which I heard on both sides of the Capitol. There seems to be an opinion prevalent among some of the Members that any legislation acceptable to the Supreme Court may be looked upon as constitutional. This is not a fact, because the constitutionality does not rest upon the opinion of anyone, but must instead be decided upon the Constitution itself. Opinions in interpretation may differ, but in such event the ninth amendment prevails. Upon the reading of section 8, paragraph 5, we find:

Congress shall have the power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standards of weights and measures.

Upon the construction of the meaning of the word "regulate," the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of this legislation. This act deprived the people of their right to have gold in their possession and to be secured by gold, although it allowed international credit to be settled in gold.

This act was clearly unconstitutional, but it was enacted by Congress and upheld by the Supreme Court. Is it now unreasonable to suppose that further misinterpretation may be made, particularly in the instance to which I refer? Let us not forget that we now have a democracy, and in such form of government the majority rules.

In closing, allow me to give you another comparison between a republican form of government and a democracy: Last year the head of the Democratic Party attempted to purge his own party of members who were not entirely in accord with his views. Do you suppose it would have been possible for the head of any party to wield sufficient influence within the State legislatures to force preference for a Senator agreeable to him? I say "no." It could not have been done before the enactment of the seventeenth amendment, but it was attempted last year by an appeal to the voters to bring about such repudiation.

NEED FOR TAX REFORM

The SPEAKER. Under a special order previously entered, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, the major problem before the country today is to put a definite end to the depression and to restore to gainful occupation the 10,000,000 unemployed workers in the Nation. For several years we have tried various remedies, most of which merely relieved the pain but did not remove the cause. It is time, therefore, that we turn to the basic reason for the conditions that exist in this country today, and then apply the remedy that will put an end to this situation.

The feeling has become fairly general that the most important need for the improvement of conditions in the United States today is drastic revision of certain tax laws. This revision is imperative because the operation of these measures tends to stop the normal functioning of any enterprise system such as that of the United States. The American system is propelled chiefly by individual savings on the one hand and business savings on the other. The value of these savings as a propellent has largely been vitiated by the higher brackets of the income tax. It is only natural, therefore, for the whole machine to slow up.

The recent statement by President Roosevelt followed in succession by similar statements by Secretary Morgenthau and Secretary Hopkins indicate clear recognition of these facts. They were openly welcomed by businessmen, and properly so. What the Nation needs now is a follow-up of these statements by tangible evidence of an intention to translate them into action.

During the past 10 months I have conferred with many groups of businessmen in various parts of the country, and almost uniformly these various groups, and individual members thereof, have impressed upon me the fact that sound tax revision would be the greatest incentive that could be offered to business today. Sound revision of our existing tax system will produce most of the capital required to stimulate industry and to provide jobs for the vast army of unemployed in this country.

Mr. Speaker, the solution of this problem will be found in the adoption of the joint resolution—House Joint Resolution 1—introduced by me at the opening session of this Congress on January 3. This resolution places a ceiling of 25 percent maximum on Federal taxes on income, gifts, and inheritances. Its adoption will accomplish definitely two things:

First. It will stimulate production and reduce unemployment. The chief and first beneficiaries will be the farming groups, miners, cattle raisers, labor in all industries, and business generally.

Second. It will actually increase the revenue to the Federal Government and will further leave to State and local governments their proper share of the tax yield of the Nation.

Prior to 1913 the National Congress had no power to tax the incomes of individuals or corporations. But in that year the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution was adopted and became part of the fundamental law of this Nation. At the time this amendment was adopted it was never dreamed that a tax on incomes of more than 25 percent would ever be imposed. At that time no one thought that it would ever reach the point where it would become what was described by Secretary Morgenthau "as a deterrent to business revival." We have seen ample demonstration of what this taxing power can do to business. Capital is scared and is afraid to come out of hiding, and will not engage in new enterprises that would put the unemployed to work until it is made secure from this danger in the future.

Before capital will flow freely into business channels the danger of future destruction must be removed. This danger can be removed only by an amendment to the Constitution limiting the power of Congress to tax incomes, gifts, and inheritances. When this course is adopted capital will pour into business with such a rush that not an idle man will be found in this country if he is willing to work.

Mr. Speaker, there is a wealth of precedents to support my position in this matter. I will not impose upon the time of the Members of this body to enumerate them in detail. I merely wish to make a few brief citations to show clearly that the position I have taken in these matters is not a new one, but merely stated anew.

The late President Wilson, in a message to Congress in 1918, advocated the principle of lowering rates to secure more revenue. He said:

The Congress might well consider whether the higher rates of income and profits taxes can in peacetime be effectively productive of revenue and whether they may not, on the contrary, be destructive of business activity and productive of waste and inefficiency. There is a point at which, in peacetime, high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprise, encourage extravagant expenditures, and produce industrial stagnation with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.

In his annual report to Congress in 1920 Secretary of the Treasury Houston declared:

Since the adoption of the heavy war surtaxes in the Revenue Act of 1917, the Treasury has repeatedly called attention to the fact that these surtaxes are excessive, that they have passed the point of maximum productivity. The effective way to tax the rich is to adopt rates that do not force investment in tax-exempt securities.

Senator Glass, in a speech on January 15, 1924, said, in part:

In my report as Secretary of the Treasury I specifically advocated the reduction of the maximum tax, and, indeed, of all the taxes of the upper brackets of the surtax and laid down the principle—not a new principle, but laid down anew—a perfectly well-recognized principle that the maximum surtax could easily be placed at a figure which would deprive the Government itself of revenue and would also divert capital from productive activities.

In his Lincoln Day address at New York on February 12, 1924, President Coolidge recommended tax revision a long the lines outlined by those whom I have just quoted. The President said, in part:

The first object of taxation is to secure revenue. When the taxation of large incomes is approached with that in view, the problem is to find a rate which will produce the largest returns. Experience does not show that the higher rate produces the largest revenue. Experience is all in the other way.

I agree perfectly with those who wish to relieve the small taxpayer by getting the largest possible contribution from the people with large incomes. But if the rates on large incomes are so high that they disappear, the small taxpayer will be left to bear the entire burden. If, on the other hand, the rates are placed where they will produce the most revenue from large incomes, then the small taxpayer will be relieved. The experience of the Treasury Department and the opinion of the best experts place the rate which will collect the most from the people of great wealth, thus giving the largest relief to people of moderate wealth, at not over 25 percent.

It must be borne in mind that the maximum rate, normal and surtax, at the time these statements were made was considerably lower than at the present time when the maximum rate, normal and surtax, is 79 percent. The paramount issue before the Congress today is to determine and apply the rate that will bring the most revenue to the Government and that will relieve capital for investment in private enterprise. All previous experience indicates that this rate should not be in excess of 25 percent.

Mr. Speaker, legitimate risk-taking business enterprises that could provide real jobs and real wages go begging for capital today. Who can blame the owners of this capital? Here is a case:

Suppose you were in the $150,000 income bracket and a resident of my State of New York. You have $100,000 in idle money to invest. If a businessman asks you to invest the $100,000, promising a return of 6 percent, would you be interested? The promised return would be $6,000. Of that, the New York State income tax—8 percent in your bracket—would take $480, leaving $5,520. Of that sum, the Federal income tax—64 percent in your bracket—would take $3,840, leaving you a net of $1,680 on your investment of $100,000. Would you risk your $100,000 on an investment of that type? Or would you buy some nice little nonrisk $100,000 bond issued by some governmental unit and wholly exempt from taxation—a bond, let us say, that paid 3 percent interest and will yield a gross, and also a net, return of $3,000? This is only one instance that might be multiplied many times.

There is still another point that would weigh very heavily in your decision. If you were advancing in years, you would naturally have in mind provisions for the payment of the estate taxes that would be levied when you passed away. This means that the estate must be kept in fairly liquid condition, otherwise your beneficiaries will be forced to throw your assets upon the market under distress and sell them for whatever they may bring. If your investments are in tax-exempt securities having a daily market quotation, it will be a comparatively simple matter to liquidate your estate and provide the funds for meeting the Federal and State death taxes.

Yet, such is the nature of our capitalist system that its functioning depends primarily upon risk taking. Every job in private industry owes its existence, and every job to be created will owe its creation, to capital taking risks. It does not make sense to perpetuate tax laws and to impose tax rates which discourage risk taking by those who have this type of capital to invest in productive enterprises.

Mr. Speaker, one more feature should be noted before leaving this phase of the subject. Government spending ultimately comes to an end, either by completion of the projects on which it is spent or the forced ending of "benefits" and "relief" or by precipitating bankruptcy. Spending by private industry and business, on the other hand, is continuous and grows because business and industry tend to expand and to launch new enterprises or to put on the market new products. If we are to raise our national income to the figure mentioned in the recent statement by our President, we have got to replace Government spending with private spending. Taxation is the great incubus upon the back of enterprise.

Our tax system still contains some of the "heads I win, tails you lose" principles of former measures. These principles must be changed to permit the free flow of "risk" capital on which industry depends for its lifeblood. Tax rates which go beyond true taxation become confiscation, and we have long since passed the point of diminishing returns in many of our levies. A clear intimation of the realization of this fact is contained in recent utterances ascribed to Treasury officials who are in a better position to know the real facts than any of us.

Mr. Speaker, article V of the Constitution provides two methods of amending it. The first method is the adoption by Congress by a two-thirds vote of both Houses of a joint resolution proposing an amendment; the ratification of such amendment by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States, or by conventions in three-fourths of the States as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress. A second method is the adoption by the legislatures of two-thirds of the States of a resolution requesting Congress to call a convention for the purpose of proposing an amendment to the Constitution. The calling of such a convention by Congress is mandatory.

Since the introduction of my joint resolution in the Congress on January 3, many members of State legislatures that are now in session have introduced similar joint resolutions in their respective legislative bodies. The purpose of this action, of course, is to amend the Constitution by the second method which I have just described.

The legislatures of three States—Wyoming, Iowa, and New Jersey—have passed these resolutions. I am informed that at least several additional State legislatures will take similar action in the course of the next 2 or 3 weeks. My attention has also been called to the fact that many State legislatures will not permit the introduction of such a resolution except within a specified period of time, and that because of the expiration of that period it will be impossible to introduce such resolutions at the present session of their legislatures. They state, however, that at the next meeting such a resolution is sure to be introduced, and they are certain of its adoption.

I am citing these instances of action to show the sentiments throughout the country on this question. Probably the most outstanding indication of how the public feels about this question was shown in the survey recently completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion under the direction of Dr. Gallup. That survey showed that most of our people were under the impression that those in the intermediate and higher brackets were paying much lower taxes today than they actually are. In spite of this fact, they declared that in their opinion the Federal Government should collect only approximately one-fourth of the present taxes levied. This would indicate that the public generally has no sympathy for what has so frequently been called the "soak the rich" policy in our tax system. It must also be borne in mind that these surveys have been remarkably accurate for the past 2 years or more.

Mr. Speaker, there is also another angle to this question which deserves consideration. Too little emphasis has been placed upon the effects of our Federal taxing system upon State revenue and the precarious condition in which many State governments find themselves today. Conflicts of Federal and State tax laws have become so numerous and have offended the citizens' sense of justice in so many instances, that the States can no longer ignore the fact that the Federal Government has preempted most of the sources of revenue upon which States depend for their maintenance. Probably the greatest offense lies in the Federal attack upon State sovereignty contained in the rising Federal income-tax rates with successively larger amounts deducted from incomes subject to State tax.

Conflicts of this sort between taxing agencies of State, Federal, and municipal governments continue to arise more frequently in recent years. The effects of these difficulties upon State revenue are becoming more apparent. Solutions must be sought that are beneficial to State governments if they are not to be destroyed in the zeal for monopoly of modern tax sources.

The report of the Delaware State tax commissioner for 1938, recently published, shows that in 1938 the yield from the income tax shrunk more than $600,000 in that small State through deduction of Federal income taxes from State tax returns. The report of the State tax commissioner shows clearly the greater the Federal tax, the less the State derives from its income-tax laws. The reduction in the amount of income remaining to its owner after Federal taxes are taken by the Government is pictured in a very forceful and convincing manner. The factual data show clearly that the ratio of income remaining for State tax purposes recedes as the size of the original income increases, because of the deduction of Federal income tax. The Commissioner, in his report, declared:

The reduction in the amount of State income taxes through the increasing. Federal rates, with the consequent conversion of the intended progressive rates of Delaware law into what amounts to regressive rates leads to diminution of taxable income.

I am convinced that the action taken by certain State legislatures, to which I have previously referred, was based largely upon these grounds. I am also of the opinion that when these facts are thoroughly understood action of the two-thirds of the States necessary to bring about the adoption of my amendment will be forthcoming without much delay.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to repeat that our problem is to get business going again. When business is prosperous, working men are employed with steady jobs and at high wages. The farmer, too, is better off because there is a wider demand, and consequently better prices for farm products. We must give business assurance of a reasonable profit and freedom from unnecessary Government interfer-The risks of new enterprises have remained, the profit possibilities have been severely limited by our tax system. Business is not asking for any special privileges or subsidies. It is willing to take its chances with the ordinary risks and vicissitudes of life that come to every business enterprise. What it does ask is that it be relieved from punitive and discriminatory taxes and excessive regimentation; that it be permitted to function under the American enterprise system—a system that gave the American people the highest living standard in the history of the world and which is still the best that can be found anywhere. [Applause.1

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Sparkman (at the request of Mr. Starnes), for remainder of week, on account of important business in his district.

To Mr. Crowe, for today, on account of official business.

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 876. An act to authorize the purchase of certain lands for the Apache Tribe of the Mescalero Reservation, N. Mex.;

S. 877. An act to add certain public-domain land in Montana to the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation;

S. 1098. An act to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance;

S.1104. An act to provide for conveying to the United States the land, buildings, and improvements comprising the Choctaw and Chickasaw Sanatorium and General Hospital; and

S.1477. An act to repeal section 9 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L. 450), as amended.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 44 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue on Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 10 a.m., on social-security legislation in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Thursday, March 23, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation—H. R. 2531.

COMMITTEE ON COINAGE, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures at 10:30 a. m. Thursday, March 23, 1939, for the further consideration of H. R. 3325, stabilization-fund bill.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 10 a.m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3759, to authorize a National Mississippi River Parkway, and matters relating thereto.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a.m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Thursday, March 23, 1939:

H. R. 141, H. R. 142, H. R. 1819, miscellaneous Panama Canal bills.

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries; H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels.

Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators; H. R. 1010, intercoastal subsidy bill (Welch).

Thursday, April 6, 1939:

H. R. 1011, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission on San Francisco Bay (Welch); H. R. 2870, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Thomas F. Ford); H. R. 3040, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Gever of California).

Tuesday, April 11, 1939:

H. R. 1783, inspection of hulls of sail vessels and barges (Bland); H. R. 1785, motorboat bill (Bland); H. R. 1795, motorboat bill (Hendricks); H. R. 1809, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (Magnuson); H. R. 2398, regarding pilots on yachts (Angell); H. R. 3837, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (Connery).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 4220, load-line bill for seagoing vessels (Bland).

Tuesday, April 18, 1939:

H. R. 2404, surgeon and hospital on vessels (Sirovich); H. R. 2660, limitation of liability (Sirovich); House Joint Resolution 153 and House Joint Resolution 194, investigate conditions pertaining to lascar seamen (Sirovich).

COMMITTEE ON WORLD WAR VETERANS' LEGISLATION

There will be an executive session of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation on Friday morning at 10:30, March 24, 1939.

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

A subcommittee of the Committee on Patents, House of Representatives, will hold hearings in the caucus room of the House Office Building beginning Tuesday, March 28, 1939, at 10 a.m. H. R. 4744, a bill to provide for the registration of trade-marks used in commerce, to carry out the provisions of certain international conventions, and for other purposes. Hon. Fritz G. Lanham is chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. Lanham announces that the procedure at these hearings will be the same as that he initiated at the hearings on trade-marks in the Seventy-fifth Congress, 1938; that is, the bill will be taken up section by section, so all testimony on a given section will be found at one place in the printed record.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Committee on Appropriations. H. R. 5219. A bill making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 260). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ANDREWS: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1301. An act to create the office of Military Secretary to the General of the Armies of the United States of America, with the rank of colonel, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 261). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H. R. 3065. A bill to amend Public Law No. 370, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935 (49 Stat. 906); with amendment (Rept. No. 274). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. WINTER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 1301. A bill for the relief of John J. Trimble; with amendment (Rept. No. 262). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ELLIS: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2056. A bill for the relief of the Shipowners & Merchants Towboat Co., Ltd.; with amendment (Rept. No. 263). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ELLIS: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2074. A bill for the relief of Junius Alexander; with amendment (Rept. No. 264). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ELLIS: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2529. A bill for the relief of W. F. Towson; with amendment (Rept. No. 265). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4084. A bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain personnel or former personnel of the United States Navy and United States Marine Corps for the value of personal effects destroyed as a result of a fire at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., on October 27, 1938; without amendment (Rept. No. 266). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ELLIS: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4133. A bill for the relief of Joseph N. Thiele; without amendment (Rept. No. 267). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KEEFE: Committee on Claims. S. 10. An act for the relief of the Fred Harvey Transportation Department; with amendment (Rept. No. 268). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FENTON: Committee on Claims. S. 128. An act for the relief of Fred H. Beauregard; without amendment (Rept. No. 269). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. POAGE: Committee on Claims. S. 511. An act for the relief of Dolores P. de Williamson; with amendment (Rept. No. 270). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KEEFE: Committee on Claims. S. 745. An act for the relief of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 271). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. S. 766. An act for the relief of the Missoula Brewing Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 272). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. S. 1117. An act to provide for the reimbursement of certain enlisted men or former enlisted men of the United States Navy for the value of personal effects lost in the hurricane at the submarine base, New London, Conn., on September 21, 1938; with amendment (Rept. No. 273). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1740) granting a pension to Juna Vista Murphy; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

A bill (H. R. 661) granting a pension to Cleston E. Slusher; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5153) granting an increase of pension to Gail E. Plunkett; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5175) granting an increase of pension to William M. Davis; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado:

H. R. 5219. A bill making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. COLE of Maryland:

H. R. 5220. A bill to provide for the regulation of the sale of certain securities in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, and the regulation of the trust indentures under which the same are issued, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BOLLES:

H.R. 5221. A bill to amend section 583 of title 20 of the Code of the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HENNINGS:

H.R. 5222. A bill requesting the President to proclaim May 12 as Steuben Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 5223. A bill, Peace Act of 1939; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts:

H.R. 5224. A bill to permit warehousing of reasonable amounts of loan cotton in or near certain manufacturing centers; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. NICHOLS:

H.R. 5225. A bill to amend subsection H of section 344 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mrs. NORTON:

H.R. 5226. A bill to authorize the Department of Labor to continue to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. D'ALESANDRO:

H. R. 5227. A bill authorizing the restoration of the U. S. frigate Constellation to Baltimore, Md., and to provide a permanent berth for it at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, Md.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

H. R. 5228. A bill for the admission to citizenship of aliens who came into this country prior to November 11, 1918; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DITTER:

H.R. 5229. A bill for the purpose of reorganizing the administrative branch of the Federal Government to promote efficiency, and for other purposes; to the Special Committee on Government Organization.

By Mr. COFFEE of Washington:

H. R. 5230. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HARTLEY:

H. R. 5231. A bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act (Public Law No. 198, 74th Cong., approved July 5, 1935); to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. IZAC:

H. R. 5232. A bill to establish uniform procedure relative to proof of age and place of birth; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEAVY:

H.R. 5233. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

H. R. 5234. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MARCANTONIO:

H. R. 5235. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to provide for the inclusion of domestic servants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MURDOCK of Utah:

H. R. 5236. A bill to provide for the establishment of a reservoir on Bear River, Utah, for the maintenance of water levels in the Bear River Migratory Bird Refuge, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SHAFER of Michigan:

H.R. 5237. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1920; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. NICHOLS:

H. R. 5238. A bill to regulate the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CANNON of Florida:

H.R. 5239. A bill providing for an examination and survey of channel from the Intracoastal Waterway to, and a turning basin at, Fort Pierce, Fla.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RAMSPECK:

H. J. Res. 223. Joint resolution to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SECREST:

H. J. Res. 224. Joint resolution to authorize the painting of the Signing of the Constitution for placement in the Capitol Building; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. KELLER:

H. J. Res. 225. Joint resolution amending the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art," approved March 24, 1937; to the Committee on the Library.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate Joint Resolution No. 24, with reference to legislation to rehabilitate the Great Lakes cut-over area; to the Committee on Agriculture.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ALEXANDER:

H. R. 5240. A bill for the relief of Robert Wade; to the Committee on Claims.

H.R. 5241. A bill granting a pension to Effie G. Mallon; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania:

H. R. 5242. A bill for the relief of Neil McGilloway; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BROWN of Ohio:

H. R. 5243. A bill granting a pension to Anna Edgar Pollitt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BYRNE of New York:

H. R. 5244. A bill awarding the Distinguished Service Cross to Capt. Alexander H. McLanahan; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLEVENGER:

H. R. 5245. A bill granting a pension to Hazel Kline; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. D'ALESANDRO:

H. R. 5246. A bill for the relief of the James Baily & Son Co., of Baltimore, Md.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LELAND M. FORD:

H. R. 5247. A bill granting a pension to Julia C. Messamore; to the Committee on Pensions.

H. R. 5248. A bill for the relief of Cecil Ray Murphy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. GAMBLE:

H. R. 5249. A bill for the relief of Francesco Garuffi; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GRISWOLD:

H. R. 5250. A bill granting an increase of pension to Edith Pullen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HEALEY:

H. R. 5251. A bill for the relief of Frederick Harold Carnes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

H. R. 5252. A bill for the relief of Niels Edmund Nielsen; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. IZAC:

H. R. 5253. A bill for the relief of Lt. Leslie A. Williams, United States Navy, retired; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

H. R. 5254. A bill for the relief of the captain and crew of the fishing boat Unione No. 1; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KRAMER:

H. R. 5255. A bill to correct the naval record of Frank R. Pauley; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. McLAUGHLIN:

H. R. 5256. A bill for the relief of Naomi Straley and Bonnie Straley; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MILLS of Arkansas:

H. R. 5257. A bill for the relief of R. D. Torian; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5258. A bill for the relief of W. L. Frady; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PATMAN:

H. R. 5259. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Layer Taylor; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida:

H. R. 5260. A bill for the relief of Harold Price; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5261. A bill for the relief of Henry T. Vest; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PLUMLEY:

H. R. 5262. A bill granting an increase of pension to Euretta E. Betts; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REECE of Tennessee:

H. R. 5263. A bill granting a pension to Alva A. Anderson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SANDAGER:

H. R. 5264. A bill for the relief of Maj. Clarence H. Greene, United States Army, retired; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SCHIFFLER:

H. R. 5265. A bill for the relief of Clair C. Batson; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SPRINGER:

H. R. 5266. A bill for the relief of Mina Keil; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SOMERS of New York:

H. R. 5267. A bill for the relief of Celia Gladstone; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. THOMAS of Texas:

H. R. 5268. A bill to correct the naval record of Bernard W. Donnelly; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1940. By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petition of 209 citizens of Coshocton, Ohio, favoring $150,000,000 additional for the

W. P. A.; to the Committee on Appropriations. 1941. By Mr. COFFEE of Washington: Resolution of the 1941. By Mr. COFFEE of Washington: Resolution of the City Council of Tacoma, Wash., pointing out that the State of Washington produces a major portion of fir and cedar grown in the United States, but that the supply of such timber for peeler-log purposes is limited and is fast being depleted; asserting that such timber should be preserved and protected for domestic use and that conservation thereof is urgently desirable; and, therefore, expressing hearty support of House bill 3579, introduced by Mr. Coffee of Washington, and urging the Congress to give early consideration to such measure and to pass it promptly for reasons aforesaid; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1942. By Mr. CORBETT: Petition of Joseph W. Schwartz and eight citizens of North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Congress to adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, to retain on our statute books the further and corollary act to include civil as well as international conflicts, and requesting Congress to launch an investigation of those leftist groups which are sponsoring propaganda favoring the lifting of the embargo on arms to "red" Spain; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1943. Also, petition of Helen Stahman and 24 citizens of North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Congress to adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, to retain on our statute books the further and corollary act to include civil as well as international conflicts, and requesting Congress to launch an investigation of those leftist groups which are sponsoring propaganda favoring the lifting of the embargo on arms to "red" Spain; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1944. Also, petition of Alice Vollmer and seven citizens of North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Congress to adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, to retain on our statute books the further and corollary act to include civil as well as international conflicts, and requesting Congress to launch an investigation of those leftists groups which are sponsoring propaganda favoring the lifting of the embargo on arms to "red" Spain; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1945. Also, petition of Elizabeth Grady and 63 citizens of North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Congress to launch an investigation of those leftist groups which are sponsoring propaganda favoring the lifting of the embargo to "red" Spain; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1946. Also, petition of R. A. Good and 24 citizens of Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Congress to launch an investigation of those leftist groups which are sponsoring propaganda favoring the lifting of the embargo to "red" Spain; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1947. Also, petition of Catharine R. Miller, president, Mrs. Joseph D. Drury, vice president, Mrs. Lester H. Conway, recording secretary, and Mrs. William S. Montgomery, corresponding secretary, of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church of Sewickley, Pa., urging Congress to provide legislation which will prevent the sale of war materials of all kinds by our American people to the country of Japan or any other belligerent nation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1948. Also, petition of Joseph Wachim and nine citizens of North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Congress to vote against the lifting of the embargo to any country, and particularly Spain, and that America remain neutral according to the act of 1935; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1949. By Mr. CURLEY: Letter of Harmon-Hodge-Hammond, Inc., Bronx, New York City, urging adequate appropriation for river and harbor improvement during the fiscal year 1939-40; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

1950. By Mr. ELSTON: Petition signed by 43 members of Lodge No. 1728, Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, Cincinnati, Ohio, urging opposition to proposed amendment contained in Senate bill 1000 to the National Labor Relations Act, and petition of the Hamilton County Federal Teachers Union, Local No. 588, American Federation of Teachers, Cincinnati, Ohio, urging support of the $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation for the continuation of Works Progress Administration and defeat of the Byrnes bill, which would eliminate all white-collar projects; to the Committee on Labor.

1951. By Mr. HULL: Joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to rehabilitate the Great Lakes cut-over area; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1952. By Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois: Petition of 10 citizens of Illinois, desiring the passage of House bill 1; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1953. By Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON: Petition of C. N. Williford, of Fairfield, and 21 citizens of Freestone County, Tex., favoring the Smith bill for relief of agriculture (S. 1303); to the Committee on Agriculture.

1954. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Petition of the Bay State Lodge, No. 73, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Worcester, Mass., urging passage of the Transportation Act of 1939; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1955. Also, petition of Standard Lodge, No. 158, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Detroit, Mich., urging passage of House bill 4862, the Transportation Act of 1939; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1956. Also, petition of Oil Workers International Union, Forth Worth, Tex., opposing House Joint Resolution 176, concerning submerged lands adjacent to and along the coast of the State of California, below the low-water mark and under the territorial waters of the United States of America; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

1957. Also, petition of the Hudson River Conservation Society, Inc., New York City, concerning appropriation for Dutch elm disease eradication; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1958. Also, petition of the American Communications Association, New York City, expressing opposition to any change in the National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1959. Also, petition of the National Association of Manufacturers of New York City, opposing the Barkley labor contract amendment to House bill 3791, the national defense bill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1960. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Gertrude Edgell, of Fairmont, W. Va., president of the Young People of the First Baptist Church, urging that church employees be excluded from the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1961. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of Eppinger & Russell Co., New York, concerning river and harbor work appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1962. Also, petition of the Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc., New York City, concerning post exchanges in Army encampments; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1963. By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution of the Automotive Lodge, No. 1186, International Association of Machinists, Los Angeles, relating to the reinstatement of Dr. Towne Nylander on the National Labor Relations Board; to the Committee on Labor.

1964. By Mr. LESINSKI: Senate concurrent resolution, respectfully memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to consider proposed legislation relative to the Townsend plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1965. Also, House Concurrent Resolution 8, of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing for a tax of 10 cents per acre on land held by the Federal Government, especially as national forests; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1966. Also, resolution of the Ladies Legion, Chapter No. 2, Woodrow Wilson Post, No. 2, Polish Legion of American Veterans, Detroit, Mich., opposing any change in the Wagner Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1967. By Mr. MICHENER: Petition signed by Claire M. Wechsler, of Ann Arbor, Mich., and 121 other petitioners, urging stoppage of war supplies to Japan; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1968. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the American Committee for Nonparticipation in Japanese Aggression, New York City, concerning the Neutrality Act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1969. Also, petition of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, of Washington, D. C., favoring the additional $150,-000,000 appropriation for the Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1970. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Fourth District Education Association, of Elizabethtown, Ky., concerning Federal aid for education; to the Committee on Education.

1971. Also, petition of the Nelson County schools, Bardstown, Ky., concerning the Federal-aid bill (S. 1305); to the Committee on Education.

1972. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Puritan Lighting Fixture Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing any restriction of Louisiana sugar production; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1973. Also, petition of the Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc., New York City, urging retention of post exchanges in Army encampments; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1974. By Mr. SANDAGER: Memorial of Little Compton Post, No. 37, American Legion, Department of Rhode Island, favoring the retention of the United States Employment Service and the Veterans' Placement Service as now constituted; to the Committee on Labor.

1975. By Mr. SCHAEFER of Illinois: Petition of the Alton, Ill., Local No. 306, Alton Typographical Union, H. R. Sober, secretary, favoring amendment of the National Labor Relations Act as proposed by the American Federation of Labor; to the Committee on Labor.

1976. Also, petition of the Chicago, Ill., Building Trades Council, urging passage of H. R. 4576, a bill authorizing appropriation of $500,000,000 for expenditure by the Public Works Administrator; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1977. Also, petition of the Alton, Ill., Local No. 525, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen, and Helpers of America, Elmer Howard, secretary, favoring amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act as proposed by the American Federation of Labor; to the Committee on Labor.

· 1978. By Mr. SHAFER of Michigan: Memorial of the Michigan State Legislature, requesting consideration of the principles of the Townsend plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1979. By Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey: Resolution adopted by the Bergen County (N. J.) Real Estate Board, Inc., at its regular meeting held on February 28, 1939, wholeheartedly and unreservedly endorsing amendments to the National Housing Act which will insure a continuance of the said act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

1980. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Pacific Forensic League, John W. Ackley, of Whitman College, and Brooks Crabtree, of Pomona College, assembled at Pomona, Calif., urging consideration of their resolution with reference to national and international affairs; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SENATE

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. Z@Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Everlasting Father, Thou who alone canst strengthen our wills and fulfill our fondest hopes: Give to us the glory of the lighted mind, that, with a penetrative understanding of the lives of others and an ever-widening sympathy with their trials and temptations, we may count no sacrifice too grievous, no burden too heavy to be borne, if thereby we can serve the humblest of Thy children.

Make this a day provoking unto valor by its challenge, for our times demand no cloistered virtue but a robust spirit, keen with the eye of interest and quick with the pulse of power, to meet the large designs of a new and glorious day. Remove from life's horizon these lengthening shadows and once more flood our world with the glory that Thou sharedst with Thy blessed Son before the world was. We ask it in His name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, March 22, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT-APPROVAL OF BILLS

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts:

On March 13, 1939:

S. 660. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, to provide for the reapportionment of cotton acreage allotments not planted by farmers entitled thereto.

On March 20, 1939:

S. 218. An act for the relief of Manuel D. A. Otero, as administrator of the estate of Teresita S. Otero, deceased; and

S. 219. An act for the relief of Emma Gomez.

On March 21, 1939:

S. 539. An act for the relief of Charles E. Naghel, special disbursing agent, Department of the Interior, and Kammeyer & Medack, contractors, from disallowance of charges for additional work under a construction contract.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Donahey	Lewis	Schwartz
Andrews	Downey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Ashurst	Ellender	Logan	Sheppard
Austin	Frazier	Lucas	Shipstead
Bailey	George	Lundeen	Smathers
Bankhead	Gerry	McCarran	Smith
Barkley	Gibson	McKellar	Stewart
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Taft
	Glass	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Green	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Guffey	Miller	Tobey
Bridges		Minton	Townsend
Brown	Gurney		Truman
Bulow	Harrison	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hatch	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Hayden	Norris-	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Herring	Nye
Capper	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Caraway	Holman	Overton	Walsh
Chavez	Hughes	Pepper	Wheeler
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman	White
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe	Wiley
Connally	King	Reed
Danaher	La Follette	Reynolds	A series and the series were
Davis	Lee	Russell

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holf] is absent because of illness in his family.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE—LEGISLATIVE ESTABLISHMENT (S. DOC. NO. 42)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the legislative establishment, United States Senate, for the fiscal year 1939, in the amount of $75,000, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE—DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE (S. DOC. NO. 44)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Department of Agriculture, for administration of the Sugar Act of 1937, involving a new appropriation of $5,000,000, plus reappropriation of a 1938 unobligated balance in the sum of $1,500,000, for the fiscal year 1939, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

ESTIMATES-DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA (S. DOC. NO. 43)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a deficiency and supplemental estimate of appropriation for the District of Columbia—assessor, equipment, 1939, in amount $28,640; buildings and grounds, public schools, 1939, $75,000; fees of jurors and witnesses, District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, in amount $130.70, and department of vehicles and traffic, inspection of motor vehicles, highway fund, 1939, in amount $22,330—in total amount $126,100.70, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REIMBURSEMENT OF MEMBERS OF COAST GUARD

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to provide for the reimbursement of certain members or former members of the United States Coast Guard for the value of personal effects lost in the hurricane of September 21, 1938, at several Coast Guard stations on the coasts of New York, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

AUTHORITY OF CERTAIN INDIAN SERVICE OFFICERS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to define the authority and power of certain Indian Service officers appointed by the Secretary of the Interior or the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to protect Indians and to maintain law and order among Indians and on Indian reservations, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

IRRIGATION OF TONGUE RIVER INDIAN RESERVATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to enter into a contract with the State Water Conservation Board of the State of Montana and the Tongue River Water Users' Association to use water to irrigate lands on the Tongue River Indian Reservation, Mont., which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Assembly joint resolution memorializing Congress to adopt a strong policy of neutrality as regards foreign powers, and to continue the strong policy regarding national defense

Whereas there is a growing condition of strife among the foreign nations, involving a number of them in a state of warfare; and Whereas those foreign nations which are not at the present time

Whereas those foreign nations which are not at the present time in war are threatened with grave probabilities of becoming involved therein in the immediate future; and

Whereas many of these foreign nations are continually courting the favor of the United States, looking toward support in case of involvement in war; and

Whereas it has been the policy of the United States to remain out of the quarrels of foreign countries unless compelled by our own national rights to enter therein; and

Whereas it is believed that the best defense of the United States

Whereas it is believed that the best defense of the United States against entanglement in foreign wars is the perfection of our national defense. Now therefore be it against entanglement in foreign wars is the perfection of our national defense; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly and the Senate of the State of Nevada,
That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to adopt and adhere to a strong, determined policy of neutrality regarding involvement in the affairs of foreign nations, and the perfection of our national defense; and be it further

Resolved, That properly certified copies of this resolution be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Nevada to our Senators in the United States Senate and to our Representative in Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Council of the City of Cleveland, Ohio, and the Board of Supervisors of Milwaukee County, Wis., favoring an additional appropriation of $150,000,000 for continuation of the Works Progress Administration program, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Board of Supervisors of Milwaukee County, Wis., protesting against the enactment of the bill (S. 1265) to establish a Department of Public Works, to amend certain sections of the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of sundry citizens of Northampton, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation to prevent the shipment of arms and munitions of war to Japan for use in China, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CAPPER presented petitions of sundry members of the American Association of University Women, of Winfield, Kans., praying for revision of the Neutrality Act so as to enable the President to distinguish between victim and aggressor on the basis of violation of a treaty to which the United States is a party, to give the President discretion in the application of the act, and to permit him to include embargoes on raw materials for war purposes the same as munitions, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WILEY presented a resolution of the Common Council of the City of Milwaukee, Wis., which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved by the Common Council of the City of Milwaukee, That it hereby goes on record as opposed to the Parsons Chicago diversion bill, and hereby requests the Wisconsin Representatives in the United States Senate and House of Representatives to use their best endeavors to defeat said bill.

Mr. McCARRAN presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

Assembly joint resolution memorializing Congress to enact legislation authorizing the payment of all old-age assistance to Indians out of Federal funds.

Whereas approximately 500 Indians in Nevada are eligible for old-age assistance under the terms of the Social Security Act; and Whereas relatively few of these Indians reside on property sub-

Whereas relatively few of these Indians reside on property subject to local taxation; and
Whereas a very considerable number of these aged Indians live in counties that are least able to finance their share of the oldage assistance grants: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved by the Assembly and the Senate of the State of Nevada,
That Congress be memorialized to enact legislation authorizing the payment of old-age assistance to Indians entirely out of Federal funds; and be it further
Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Nevada be directed to transmit duly certified copies of this resolution to our Senators and our Representative in Congress.

Mr. McCARRAN also presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

Whereas Senator Key Pittman, on the 4th day of January 1939, introduced in the United States Senate S. 2, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land to the State of Nevada to be used for the purposes of a public park and recreational site and other public

Purposes; and
Whereas the State of Nevada requires such area for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a public park and recreational site: and

Whereas the State of Nevada, under the Boulder Canyon Project Act, and contracts relating thereto, is allotted 18 percent of the firm horsepower developed at the Federal powerhouse at Boulder Dam for use in the State of Nevada; and

Whereas it will be essential for the State of Nevada to make avail-whereas it will be essential for the State of Nevada of make available an ample water supply for industries desiring to contract for the use of such State power in the State of Nevada; and

Whereas the subsurface and the artesian water in the vicinity where such power would be used is inadequate for such industries, and it will therefore be necessary to pump water from Lake Mead;

Whereas the only economical and suitable area on the margin of Lake Mead from which to pump said water from Las Vegas area is within the area described in said Senate bill No. 2; and Whereas there is a wash extending from the Las Vegas area down to and into Lake Mead, formerly extending into the Colorado

River; and

River; and

Whereas the proposed pipe line for the supply of such water has been surveyed by this State down this wash to the waters of Lake Mead that are backed up into the Las Vegas wash, the water backed up into the wash forming a narrow inlet extending several miles in a northerly direction from the main body of Lake Mead; and

Whereas the State desires, at its own expense, to develop a park and recreational site on the banks of this inlet for the benefit and pleasure, in particular, of the citizens of the State of Nevada; and

Whereas the National Park Service is now actively developing an area on the westerly end of said Lake Mead, some 10 or 15 miles distant from the Las Vegas Inlet, for the general accommodation, benefit, and pleasure of tourists and all who may visit Boulder, adjacent to such development; and

Whereas a general burden is thrown upon the National Park Service to develop an enormous area surrounding Lake Mead, which services will require many years for even partial consummation; and

Whereas the State of Nevada has surveyed a road down said wash to the proposed park and recreational site and is prepared and is desirous of undertaking the development of such area immediately:

desirous of undertaking the development of such area immediately: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Assembly and Senate of the State of Nevada,
That the State of Nevada, acting through its Governor and its legislature unqualifiedly endorses said Senate bill No. 2 herein referred to and respectfully petitions the Congress of the United States to enact such bill as expeditiously as possible; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Nevada be directed to transmit duly certified copies of this resolution to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to each of our Senators, and to our Congressman in Washington. in Washington.

CONTINUANCE OF INVESTIGATION OF VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL LIBERTIES, ETC.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH presented a resolution of the executive council, American Federation of Labor, which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and ordered to be printed in the Record, without the names attached thereto, as follows:

Because of the unjust and unlawful persecution of officials of legitimate labor unions in the States of California, Oregon, and Washington, where the enemies of labor are willfully and deliberately plotting to destroy labor organizations, and because we believe that the civil rights of citizens of the United States have been trampled upon and ignored, and that labor officials have been persecuted and prosecuted and their liberties as American citizens destroyed, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in meeting assembled in Washington, D. C., this 23d day of March 1939, do hereby resolve that the executive officers of the American Federation of Labor request the Senate of the United States to appropriate sufficient money to the subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor, otherwise known as the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, for the purpose of continuing their investigation in the above-mentioned States to the end that the rights of the workers and the citizens of those States be protected against the unlawful acts of combinations of employers, detective agencies, and other enemies of the workers. believe that the civil rights of citizens of the United States have

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was recommitted the bill (S. 840) to amend and clarify the provisions of the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1507), and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 210) thereon.

Mr. NEELY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1681) to amend section 107 of the Judicial Code to create a mountain district in the State of Tennessee, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 211) thereon.

Mr. MILLER, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was recommitted the bill (S. 197) to amend the Judicial Code in respect to claims against the United States for just compensation, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 212) thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 1909. A bill to prohibit military drilling by individuals wearing uniforms or insignia of, or similar to those of, foreign countries; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri:

S. 1910. A bill to extend the time within which applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended, may be filed; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. DAVIS:

S. 1911 (by request). A bill for the relief of Daumit Tannaus Saleah (Dave Thomas) (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. JOHNSON of California:

S. 1912. A bill for the relief of the K. E. Parker Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1913. A bill for the relief of George Lloyd Laraway; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1914. A bill granting an increase of pension to Harriet L. Liggett: to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. REED:

S. 1915. A bill relating to the transportation by railroad of persons and property for or on behalf of the United States; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. FRAZIER:

S. 1916. A bill to prohibit Federal court officials from accepting or retaining membership on committees of political parties; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 1917. A bill providing for Congress to coin and issue money and regulate the value thereof by establishing the Bank of the United States, owned, operated, and controlled by the Government of the United States; setting forth the scope and manner of the bank's operations; creating a Board of Control and defining the powers and duties of the Board and other persons charged with the bank's management; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 1918. A bill relating to the retired pay of certain retired Army officers; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GLASS:

S. 1919. A bill to provide for the acquisition by the United States of the estate of Patrick Henry in Charlotte County, Va., known as Red Hill; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah:

S. 1920. A bill to amend the immigration and naturalization laws with respect to the naturalization of native-born Filipinos; to the Committee on Immigration.

S. 1921. A bill to authorize the purchase of certain interests in lands within the boundaries of the Uinta and Wasatch National Forests, Utah; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. BYRD:

S. 1922. A bill to extend the time for filing claims for refunds of amounts collected under the Agricultural Adjustment Act: to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. PEPPER:

S. 1923. A bill for the relief of Evanell Durrance; and

S. 1924. A bill for the relief of the Growers Fertilizer Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. VAN NUYS:

S. 1925. A bill for the relief of Meta De Rene McLoskey; to the Committee on Finance.

S. 1926 (by request). A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims, with right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment in all claims which the Miami Indians of Indiana who are organized and incorporated as the Miami Nation of Indians of Indiana may have against the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. 1927. A bill for the relief of Peter S. Kaminski; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1928. A bill granting a pension to Lottie Denny;

S. 1929. A bill granting an increase of pension to Jacob

S. 1930. A bill granting a pension to Clara B. Wright Hooper: and

S. 1931. A bill granting a pension to Mary M. Osborn; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CONNALLY:

S. 1932. A bill to forbid calling of loans and deductions from price-adjustment payments with respect to cotton on account of deficiencies in grade or staple if the warranty thereof was made in good faith; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mrs. CARAWAY:

S. 1933. A bill to amend the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 to provide additional safety for passengers in aircraft; to the Committee on Commerce.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

VIOLET M'DEVITT

Mr. OVERTON submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 110), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Violet McDevitt, widow of Daniel L. McDevitt, late a private of United States Capitol Police, a sum equal to one year's compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

INVESTIGATION RELATIVE TO NEW TYPE OF AERIAL BOMB

Mr. LUNDEEN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 111), which was referred to the Committee on Military

Whereas it has been widely reported that there has been developed and tested in Europe, under actual war conditions, a new type of aerial bomb of super-destructive power and supposedly liquid oxygen character; and

Whereas the officials of the United States War Department have, before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, admitted that such a super-aerial bomb was tested in Spain, but that they did not yet know the secret of that bomb or how to equal its power in aerial bombs of American design; and

Whereas it has been reported in the press that Lester P. Barlow, George B. Holderer, and Herbert Bugbird, of Baltimore and New York, all United States citizens and explosives experts and authorities on liquid oxygen-carbon explosive and aerial bombs, have made public certain information tending to reveal an extenhave made public certain information tending to reveal an extensive war hazard in the placement of large gas and oil tanks, exposed to aerial bomb attack, within the large cities of the United States, and that such tanks, if war is declared upon the United States, may be detonated by liquid oxygen bombs dropped from enemy bombing planes, and thereby cause widespread loss of life and destruction of vast sections of city property; and Whereas there is grave danger of a major war in Europe; and Whereas the United States may become involved in any such war, and it is essential that any war hazards that may exist, due to large gas and oil tanks being located in the heavily populated districts, be determined at once and the proper safeguards established: Therefore be it

Resolved. That the Committee on Military Affairs, or any duly lished: Therefore be it Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation with respect to (1) the extent of the war hazards to the lives and properties of residents of the United States resulting from the location of large gas and oil tanks within heavily populated districts of the United States, and (2) the means of eliminating or decreasing such hazards for the purpose of more adequately insuring the safety of such lives and properties. The committee shall report to the Senate as soon as practicable the results of its investigations, together with its recommendations.

RUSSELL CREEK, S. C. (S. DOC. NO. 41) AND HENDRICKS HARBOR, SOUTHPORT, MAINE (S. DOC. NO. 40)

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Commerce I present two reports from the Secretary of War on river and harbor matters and ask that they may be printed as public documents, each with an illustration. One of the reports is on a reexamination of Russell Creek, S. C.; the other report is on a reexamination of Hendricks Harbor. Southport, Maine.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the reports will be printed, with the illustrations.

BLOCK-BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING OF MOTION-PICTURE FILMS

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the eminent and always reliable majority leader [Mr. BARKLEY] has assured me that the subcommittee of which he is a member will next week conduct hearings on Senate bill 280. Under the circumstances, I ask that my motion relative to that bill go over without prejudice for a period of 10 days.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

OFFICERS AND MEN WHO LOST THEIR LIVES ON BATTLESHIP "MAINE"

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Hon. CHARLES F. Risk, together with a list of the officers, sailors, and marines on board the U.S.S. Maine who were killed or drowned when that vessel was wrecked in the harbor of Habana February 15, 1898, or who subsequently died of their injuries. The Nation will ever remember these Americans who made the supreme sacrifice.

There being no objection, the letter and list were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Washington, D. C., March 16, 1939.

Hon. James J. Davis,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR DAVIS: Following our conversation today I am pleased to enclose a list of those who were killed and also the survivors of the U. S. S. Maine at the time this battleship was blown up in the Habana Harbor on February 15, 1898.

With kindest personal regards, I am, Sincerely yours,

CHARLES F. RISK.

U. S. S. "MAINE," FIRST RATE, BLOWN UP IN HABANA HARBOR FEBRUARY 15, 1898

LIST OF OFFICERS, SAILORS, AND MARINES ON BOARD OF THE U. S. S. "MAINE" WHO WERE KILLED OR DROWNED WHEN THAT VESSEL WAS WRECKED IN THE HARBOR OF HABANA FEBRUARY 15, 1898, OR WHO SUBSEQUENTLY DIED OF THEIR INJURIES

(The men marked with an asterisk (*) died subsequently of injuries received when the U. S. S. Maine was destroyed)

Officers: Jenkins, Friend W., lieutenant; Merritt, Darwin R., assistant engineer.

Sailors: Adams, John T., coal passer; Aitken, James P., boat-swain's mate (1st cl.); Anderson, John, boatswain's mate (2d cl.);

Andersen, Holm A., coal passer; Anderson, Charles, landsman; Anderson, Gustav A., seaman; Anderson, John, seaman; Anderson, Abraham, coawani, Anglund, Bernhard, Blacksmith, Auchenbach, Harry, fireman (2d cl.); Barry, John P., apprentice (1st cl.); Barry, John P., apprentice (1st cl.); Barry, Lewis L., coal passer; Baum, Henry S., landsman; Becker, Jakob, chief machinist; Bell, John R., cabin steward; Blomberg, Fred, landsman; Beockbridger, John, apprentice (2d cl.); Buller, Edwid, Arthur, chief gunner's mate; Brums, Adolph C., quartermaster (3d cl.); Burss, Edward, coal passer; Burkhardt, Robert, quartermaster (2d cl.); Burler, Frederick F., machinist (2d cl.); Burss, Edward, coal passer, Burkhardt, Robert, quartermaster (3t cl.); Clarks, James C., ship-wright; Caine, Thomas, blacksmith; Cameron, Walter, seaman; Chingi, Suke, mess attendant; Christiansen, Charles A., fireman (1st cl.); Clark, Thomas, coal passer; Cochrane, Michael, freman (1st cl.); Clark, Thomas, Coal passer; Cochrane, Michael, freman (1st cl.); Clark, Thomas, Walter, Seaman; Coleman, William, fireman (2d cl.); Curry, Charles, seaman; Donoughy, William, gramma (2d cl.); Curry, Charles, seaman; Donoughy, William, ordinary seaman; Drury, James, fireman (1st cl.); Edier, George, seaman; Eleman, 1st cl.); Edier, George, seaman; Eleman, 1st cl., spermenties, J., Seaman; Faller, Seaman; France, Seaman; J., Paller, Seaman; Propertice, F. W., gunner's mate (1st cl.); "Erickson, Andrew V., seaman; Flynch, Truble, apprentice (1st cl.); "Pisher, Frank, ordinary seaman; Pisher, Alfred J., olier, Flaherty, Michael, fireman (1st cl.); Toppermice, 1st cl., spermenties, 1st cl., spermenties, Pinkney, James, mess attendant; Porter, John, coal passer; Powers, John, oiler; Price, Daniel, fireman (1st cl.); Quigley, Thomas J., plumber and fitter; Quinn, Charles P., oiler; Reilly, Joseph, fireman (1st cl.); Rieger, William A., gunner's mate (1st cl.); Rising, Newell, coal passer; Robinson, William, landsman; Roos, Peter, sailmaker; Rushworth, William, chief machinist; Safford, Clarence E., gunner's mate (1st cl.); Salmin, Michael E., ordinary seaman; Schroeder, August, ordinary seaman; Scott, Charles A., carpenter's mate (2d cl.); Scully, Joseph, boilermaker; Seery, Joseph, fireman (1st cl.); Sellers, Walter S., apothecary; Shea, Patrick J., fireman (1st cl.); Shea, Thomas, landsman; Shea, John J., coal passer; Sheridan, Owen, fireman (2d cl.); Shillington, John H., yeoman (3d cl.); Simmons, Alfred, coal passer; *Smith, Carl A., seaman; Smith, Nicholas J., apprentice (1st cl.); Stevenson, Nicholas, seaman; Walsh, Joseph F., coxswain; Wallace, John, ordinary seaman; Warren, John, fireman (2d cl.); White, Charles O., chief master at arms; Whiten, George, seaman; White, Robert, mess attendant; Wickstrom, Johan E., seaman; Wilson, Albert, seaman; Ziegler, John H., coal passer; Wilson, Robert, chief quartermaster; Wilbur, George W., apprentice (1st cl.).

Marines: Wagner, Henry, first sergeant; Bennet, John, private; Botting, Vincent H., private; Brosnan, George, private; Burns, James R., private; Brown, James T., sergeant; Dierking, John H., drummer; Downing, Michael J., private; Johnson, Charles E., private; Jordan, William J., private; Kean, Edward F., private; Kelly, Frank, private; Lauriette, George M., private; Losko, Peter A., private; Jordan, William J., private; Kean, Edward F., private; Roberts, James H., private; Schoen, Joseph, corporal; Stock, H. E., private; Strongman, James, private; Suman, E. B., private; Timpany, E. B., private; Van Horn, H. A., private; Warren, Asa V., private; Wills, A. O., private.

LIST OF OFFICERS, SAILORS, AND MARINES ON BOARD THE U. S. S. "MAINE" WHO WERE SAVED

Capt. Charles D. Sigsbee, commanding.
Lt. Comdr. Richard Wainwright.
Lts. George F. W. Holman, John Hood, and Carl W. Jungen.
Lts. (Jr. Gr.) George P. Blow and John J. Blandin.
Naval Cadets Jonas H. Holden, Watt T. Cluverius, Amon Bronson, Naval Cadets Jonas H. Holden, Watt T. Cluverius, Amon Bronson, and David F. Boyd, Jr.

Surg. Lucien G. Heneberger.
Paymaster Charles M. Ray.
Chief Engineer Charles P. Howell.
Passed Assistant Engineer Frederic C. Bowers.
Assistant Engineer John R. Morris.
Naval Cadets (engineer division) Pope Washington and Arthur

Chaplain John P. Chidwick. First Lt. of Marines Albertus W. Catlin. Boatswain Francis E. Larkin.

Boatswain Francis E. Larkin.

Gunner Joseph Hill.

Carpenter George Helms.
Pay Clerk B. McCarty.

Sailors: Allen, James W., mess attendant; Anderson, Oskar, coxswain; Awo, Firsanion, steerage cook; Bergman, Charles, boatswains mate (1st cl.); Bloomer, John H., landsman; Bullock, Charles H., gunner's mate (2d cl.); Cahill, Francis D., landsman; Christiansen, Karl, fireman (1st cl.); Cronin, Daniel, landsman; David, George, ordinary seaman; Dolan, John, seaman; Dressler, Gustav J., apprentice (1st cl.); Durckin, Thomas J., ordinary seaman; Flynn, Michael, seaman; Foley, Patrick J., apprentice (1st cl.); Fox, George, landsman; Gartell, William M., fireman (1st cl.); Hallberg, Alfred, coxswain; Ham, Ambrose, apprentice (1st cl.); Harris, Westmore, mess attendant; Heffron, John, ordinary seaman; Herbert, John, landsman; Herness, Alfred B., gunner's mate (3d cl.); Hutchings, Robert, landsman; Johnson, Alfred, seaman; Kane, Joseph H., landsman; Kushida, Katsusaburo, warrant officers' steward; Lanahan, Michael, landsman; Larsen, Peder, seaman; Larsen, Martin, seaman; Load, John B., master at arms (3d cl.); Lohman, Charles A., coal passer; Mack, Thomas, landsman; Mattsen, Edward, ordinary seamas, Mattselle, Thomas, coal Michael, landsman; Larsen, Peder, seaman; Larsen, Martin, seaman; Load, John B., master at arms (3d cl.); Lohman, Charles A., coal passer; Mack, Thomas, landsman; Mattsen, Edward, ordinary seaman; Mattisen, William, ordinary seaman; Melville, Thomas, coal passer; Mikkelsen, Peter, seaman; McNair, William, ordinary seaman; Moriniere, Louis, seaman; McCann, Harry, seaman; Panck, John H., fireman (1st cl.); Pilcher, Charles F., ordinary seaman; Rau, Arthur, seaman; Reden, Martin, seaman; Richards, Walter E., apprentice (2d cl.); Rowe, James, ship's cook (4th cl.); Rusch, Frank, ordinary seaman; Schwartz, George, ship's cook (1st cl.); Shea, Jeremiah, coal passer; Teackle, Harry, seaman; Thompson, William H., landsman; Toppin, Daniel G., wardroom cook; Turpin, John H., mess attendant; Waters, Thomas J., landsman; Webber, Martin V., landsman; White, John E., landsman; Williams, James, gunner's mate (3d cl.); Williams, Henry, cabin cook; Willis, Alonzo, apprentice (2d cl.); and Wilbur, Benjamin R., coxswain.

Marines: Anthony, William, private; Coffey, John, private; Galpin, C. P., private; Germond, C. V., private; Lutz, Joseph, private; Loftus, Paul, private; McDevitt, William, private; McGuinness, William, private; McKay, Edward, private; Meehan, Michael, sergeant; and Thompson, T. G., corporal.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned yesterday it was understood that following the conclusion of the routine morning business today the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] would move to take up his cotton bill, Senate bill 1303. In that connection the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] had indicated his desire to take up his resolution, which lies on the table.

Since that time, after conferring with the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from Georgia, it has been decided that in view of conferences which are now in progress between the members of the conference committee on the part of the Senate and the members of the conference committee on the part of the House, and also representatives of the Department of Agriculture, including the Secretary, these matters will not be brought up today but will go over until next week, in the hope that a plan may be agreed upon and worked out that will be feasible and will satisfy all parties. I think I am authorized by the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to make that statement.

Mr. SMITH. Yes, Mr. President. Certain matters are being considered by the committee in the House which, if they materialize, will greatly aid the situation. Therefore, I prefer to have the bill lie over until all parties can be reconciled, or until it is demonstrated that that cannot be

Mr. BARKLEY. I also wish to say to both the Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from Georgia that I am authorized to state that so far as the Secretary of Agriculture is concerned the matter will be left in statu quo until he can determine whether the conferences can work out a feasible and agreeable solution of the very distressing cotton

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I so understood from the distinguished leader of the majority. On the statement and assurance that no further action is contemplated until full opportunity for conference is had, I am content to let my resolution stand over until next week.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Georgia and to all others interested that I shall attempt to arrange such a conference early next week, so that the matter may be thoroughly discussed.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I desire to make an inquiry of the able leader on the Democratic side. Am I to infer that if these negotiations do not mature the Senate will take up the resolution and the bill on Monday?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; not necessarily on Monday. It probably will be impracticable to do so, because, in all probability, the conferences will not be concluded by that time; and, in my judgment, it will not be known on Monday whether or not it will be possible to work out the matter.

Mr. McNARY. Then, in the interest of orderly procedure, why would it not be well for the Senator from South Carolina to withdraw his motion? Otherwise it will block any other motion.

Mr. SMITH. I thought that was understood.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina has not made a motion.

Mr. BARKLEY. He has not made a motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator only gave notice that he would do so.

Mr. SMITH. I did not make the motion yesterday.

Mr. McNARY. It was my recollection that the Senator made the motion on yesterday.

Mr. BARKLEY. He was on the verge of making it, but decided not to do so.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Cochran, Mr. Warren, Mr. Robinson of Utah, Mr. Beam, Mr. Cox, Mr. Schulte, Mr. Taber, Mr. GIFFORD, and Mr. DIRKSEN were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker has affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 1476) to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

REORGANIZATION OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. BYRNES. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Byrd, Mr. O'Mahoney, Mr. Bark-LEY, Mr. HARRISON, Mr. LUCAS, Mr. McNary, Mr. LaFollette, and Mr. Townsend conferees on the part of the Senate.

WHERE STANDS AMERICA IN THIS HOUR?-ADDRESS BY SENATOR LEWIS

[Mr. Barkley asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record extracts from a radio address delivered by Senator Lewis on March 22, 1939, on the subject, "Where Stands America in This Hour?"; which appears in the Appendix.]

ST. PATRICK'S DAY ADDRESS BY POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY

[Mr. Green asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a St. Patrick's Day address delivered by Post-master General Farley before the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Providence, R. I., on March 17, 1939; which appears in the Appendix.]

THE HOUSING ISSUE—EDITORIAL FROM WASHINGTON EVENING STAR

[Mr. Pepper asked and obtained leave to have published in the RECORD an editorial from the Washington Evening Star of March 23, 1939, entitled "Threat to Housing"; which appears in the Appendix.]

THE GOVERNMENT'S MONETARY POLICY—ARTICLE FROM WALL STREET JOURNAL

[Mr. PITTMAN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an article dealing with the Government's monetary policy, published in the Wall Street Journal of March 22, 1939; which appears in the Appendix.]

"A NAPOLEONIC PARALLEL?"-EDITORIAL FROM WASHINGTON EVENING STAR

[Mr. McCarran asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Washington Evening Star of March 22, 1939, entitled "A Napoleonic Parallel?"; which appears in the Appendix.]

CONTROL AND ERADICATION OF NOXIOUS WEEDS

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I have received from the Legislature of South Dakota Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 12, requesting that Congress take some action looking toward the control and eradication of noxious weeds. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be printed in the RECORD and that the original be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry for its consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to pass proper legislation for the control and eradication of noxious weeds.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of South Dakota (the house of rapresentatives concurring):

whereas according to figures prepared by the national weed committee of the National Plant Board the farmers of the United States lose $3,000,000,000 a year through weed damage, which is 12 times the loss occasioned by livestock diseases; and Whereas the weed menace constitutes an enormous tax upon the productivity of the soil, and the area infested with obnoxious weeds has been doubling every 5 years despite all efforts of control; and Whereas billions have and are being spent for national defense, while little has been done to stop this insidious enemy that has been laying waste our lands; and that

Whereas the importation of certain chemicals which are essential for use in the eradication of noxious weeds are now subjected to heavy tariff import taxes: Now, therefore, be it hereby Resolved, That we urge upon the Congress of the United States and executive agencies of the Federal Government the following corrective measures:

I. We ask the complete removal of all tariff duties on chlorates and other chemicals which are necessary or may be useful in the eradication of noxious weeds.

II. We favor the manufacture of sodium chlorate and other II. We favor the manufacture of sodium chlorate and other chemical agents suitable for weed eradication at one or more of the federally financed hydroelectric plants in the Northwest, the products therefrom to be distributed without profit and with preference to farmers and cooperative organizations.

III. We request the creation of a division within the Department of Agriculture to deal specifically with the weed problem provided with sufficient funds for the purpose of:

1. Correlating a weed control and eradication program of the various States on a uniform, scientific, and practical basis.

2. To conduct research, experiment, and demonstration as to the various States on a uniform, scientific, and practical basis.

2. To conduct research, experiment, and demonstration as to the best methods of control and eradication.

3. To investigate the use of chemicals or mixtures thereof and an appraisal of all their economic values in weed eradication.

4. To bring about the cooperation of regions and agencies in the solution of the weed problem, to foster educational work on the weed control, to bring about the development of uniform laws and regulations in the various States governing the distribution of seeds, giving particular attention to the independent truck operator buying seeds in one community and selling in another.

PRODUCTION OF MOTOR FILEI, FROM AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I wish to make some brief remarks in reference to an amendment I intend to offer to House hill 3790

In my opinion, the resolution which I have presented for the RECORD notifies the Senate that the people of my State are much interested in maintaining a productive and profitable farm business. We all know that there have been in the Middle West droughts and years of grasshopper plagues with which the farmer has to contend, but even under all these hazards he is somehow making a living for his family. These, however, are not all his difficulties. Even when a crop is produced he must be content with prices on the crops he has to sell which are regulated, not by allowing the old law of supply and demand to govern, but regulated by the importations from foreign lands of food products of all kinds, against which our farmers must compete.

In addition to all this, industry has sold the farmer-and he has accepted—a new farm power, the tractor. As Senators all know, the tractor has now taken the place of horse and mule power, which used to consume a great portion of the crop that was produced on each individual farm. A question before us, then, is: Is it possible for the farmer to produce on his own land something that can be converted into motor fuel, and in that way raise at least a portion of his own power? And if he can, what effect will it have on the economics of our country?

I present at this time an amendment to the internalrevenue law which will go a long way toward accomplishing this result. This amendment I intend to propose as an addition to House bill 3790 when that bill comes before the Senate, as it opens to our constitutional reach the entire question of taxation. Therefore I ask that this amendment be printed and that it lie on the table until House bill 3790 shall be before us.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. Gurney to the bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compen-

Add a new section to read as follows:

"That effective on the 30th day after the day of enactment of this act, section 3412 (c) (2) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"(2) The term "received" to read as follows:

"'(2) The term "gasoline" means (A) all products commonly or commercially known or sold as gasoline (including casinghead and natural gasoline), benzol, benzene, or naphtha, regardless of their classification or uses; and (B) any other liquid of a kind prepared, advertised, offered for sale, or sold for use as, or used as, a fuel for the propulsion of motor vehicles, motorboats, or airplanes; except that it does not include any of the foregoing mixed with 10 percent or more of anhydrous ethyl alcohol produced from annual agricultural crops grown in the continental United States and so denatured as to exempt it from the tax imposed by law upon distilled spirits, does not include any of the foregoing (other than products commonly or commercially known or sold as gasoline) sold for use otherwise than as a fuel for the propulsion of motor vehicles, motorboats, or airplanes, and otherwise than in the manufacture or production of such fuel, and does not include kerosene, gas oil, or fuel oil."

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I should like now to make a very brief statement respecting this amendment, because I am very anxious for the Members of the Senate to have sufficient time to fully acquaint themselves with its merits. The amendment, in my opinion, is a pretty good farm bill in only 19 lines. It proposes only to exempt from the present Federal tax of 1 cent per gallon a motor fuel that contains 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent power alcohol made from domestic farm crops.

In explanation of the amendment I may say that the annual consumption of motor fuel in the United States at present is approximately 21,000,000,000 gallons. This is an enormous consumption; and the farmers of the United States, being consumers of a great percentage of this motor fuel, certainly have the right to at least a part of this market. I am sure that the processors of gasoline are not so selfish that they cannot see in the future a larger sale of their gasoline product to a prosperous country and a prosperous agricultural population, even though the motor fuel of that time should contain only 90 percent of their product. I am sure their sales to a prosperous country would be larger and on a happier basis than 100 percent of the market is at this time.

While it is true that this amendment will tend to decrease the tax revenue in graduated amounts in the years to come, still this decrease in revenue would be so small, in comparison with present governmental expenditures for the benefit of agriculture, that it could and would be lost sight of.

This plan cannot go into operation tomorrow, this year, or next year. It will be a gradual program, due to the fact that large alcohol refineries will have to be built in each State in the Union near where surplus crops are producedgrain of all kinds, sugarcane, potatoes, and fruits. As such refineries are constructed, and as the power alcohol made from domestic crops becomes available, sale of the output will be automatic under the law, and the refund of the 1 cent per gallon Federal tax will make it possible for distributors of motor fuel to handle it at a profit.

This amendment does not require an appropriation of any kind. I offer it on the basis that private capital will find it advantageous to construct the refineries and operate them at a profit. They will see not only the prospective profit but a volume outlet for all they can produce. Construction of refineries could be speeded up with Reconstruction Finance Corporation industrial loans, and as about 600 refineries of this kind would be needed to produce the necessary supply, the building program with private capital, not Federal subsidies, would go a long way toward providing a healthy business recovery.

I have been asked many questions as to how much of our surplus grains this program would consume. I answer that by saying that each bushel of grain or its equivalent in other crops produces approximately 2½ gallons of power alcohol, and figuring on our consumption of motor fuel, arithmetic tells us that it would take 840,000,000 bushels of grain off the present market. In other words, upon the completion of this program industry would use this amount of that which is produced on the farm lands of the country. With the surplus taken care of, the good old law of supply and demand would again be allowed to operate, and then our farmers would receive, not the present prices, which are much under the cost of production, but a fair price for all that which could be produced from all their acres. Limited production by decree would not be necessary.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield. Mr. NORRIS. I should like to submit to the Senator a question which has caused me a great deal of trouble in the study of the proposal which the Senator is now presenting which I think is a very interesting proposal. In considering the matter, I have found it a rather discouraging difficulty, and I am wondering whether the Senator has thought of it.

It has to do with the value of the products which would be used in making the 10 percent of alcohol, which would be mixed with 90 percent of gasoline, based on present prices of farm products, which everyone knows are away below what they ought to be.

If the increased use of these products would bring about enhancement of the price, which is part of the theory, and everyone wants to bring that about, what effect would that have upon the sale price of the finished product? I think that, based on present prices, the price of the finished product would be increased, although it is claimed-and it is probably true-that the product would be better and worth more money than it is now.

Mr. GURNEY. The idea behind the amendment is that if we can use up the surplus of grain products, fruit, potatoes, and so forth, then the going price for the entire crop would rise, and in that way agriculture would benefit immensely.

Mr. NORRIS. But would it not follow, then, that the production which is to be used in making alcohol, the 10 percent. would have to be given up?

Mr. GURNEY. The Senator wants to know whether the price of the products from which we would make this power alcohol would raise the cost of the alcohol to such an extent that it would not be possible to use it. Is that what the Senator is getting at?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes. Mr. GURNEY. As the Senator knows, there is a large surplus of grains, and of fruits of all kinds, that are of a cull grade, a second grade. For instance, in the potato section of the North a large percentage of the crop is never marketed at all, because the potatoes are under grade on account of being scabby, or small sized, and no revenue ever accrues to the producer for that percentage of his crop. The same thing is true of fruit. Fourteen percent of the fruit of the Nation never is harvested in the orchards. That could all be turned into revenue for the producer.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; and what about corn? Mr. GURNEY. As all Senators know, there is a big surplus, and consequently we are getting a low price. I am not saying that corn is the only crop which would go into the making of alcohol. Senators have studied the situation in their own States and know that all kinds of grains may be used

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, yes; but one of the things the planning has in view is to increase, for instance, the price of corn.

Mr. GURNEY. That is correct.
Mr. NORRIS. I am not asking these questions in any faultfinding sense.

Mr. GURNEY. I am glad to have the Senator ask the

Mr. NORRIS. I am in entire sympathy with the plan. I have given it a great deal of study in my limited way; but I was very much discouraged, because if such a measure as is suggested were enacted into law, and it had the desired effect-which I think it would have-namely, increasing the prices of farm products, that very increase would further increase the cost of the finished product, and inasmuch as under present prices the cost of the finished product would be increased somewhat, I was afraid that that increase might nullify the whole plan. Frankly, that is the thing which has discouraged me more than anything else in attempting to arrive at a conclusion satisfactory in my own mind as to something which would bring about an enhancement in the prices of agricultural commodities.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Dakota yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let me suggest to the Senator from Nebraska that the increased price of the ultimate product, to wit, gasoline-

Mr. GURNEY. Motor fuel.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Motor fuel-would certainly be no greater than the present tax on that fuel, and if it were possible to achieve the agricultural advantage which is claimed, we could readily dispense, as a matter of Federal economy, with the tax on the finished product, and thus perhaps offset the differential which the Senator from Nebraska has in mind.

Mr. GURNEY. I think the Senator from Nebraska had in mind that there would still be a surplus of corn.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. GURNEY. If the farmer had a market for all he could produce from all the surplus acres, and he knew he had a market for some other crop of grain besides corn, then he would not raise so much corn. If he had another market for part of his acres, instead of keeping them all in corn, then he could grow other things.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to say to the Senator that I have gone over the question in considerable detail with some of the manufacturers of power alcohol. There is in operation now, or has been until recently, a plant in Kansas producing such a product.

Mr. GURNEY. It is located at Atchison, Kans. Mr. NORRIS. That plant was operated on a large scale at Atchison, Kans. The officials were very frank in admitting to me that what I was afraid of would take place: that if we obtained an increase in price for farm products, which after all is the object of the proposal, that increase in price would go a great way toward making it impossible to carry the program further. I will say to the Senator that I understand it is admitted by those who have studied the question most closely, and who have invested a large amount of money in developing power alcohol, that even at the present low prices of farm crops the cost of the completed product, of motor fuel, would be increased somewhat by the addition of power alcohol. It is claimed by them, however, and so far as I know, it is undisputed, that such increased price of the finished product is offset by the superior qualities of the motor fuel itself.

Mr. GURNEY. I feel that it is. The increased cost would be offset also by the increased return the farmer would get for the full 100 percent of his crop. I may say to the Senator from Nebraska that I have lived with this proposition for more than 8 years. I have sold motor fuel that contains a percentage of alcohol. I have visited the plant at Atchison, Kans. I know intimately the men who have been connected with operating that plant and others all over the United States. At the present cost of power alcohol produced at Atchison, Kans., if the 1 cent per gallon Federal tax were taken off then we would have an increased cost of four-tenths of a cent a gallon for the motor fuel at the present time. In other words, it would cost the inshipper four-tenths of a cent per gallon more than a motor fuel which contained 100 percent gasoline would cost.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, that was precisely the point I was trying to make, that the differential in the ultimate cost may be offset by the tax which the Federal Government collects on the finished product, and certainly the Federal Government could afford to forego that source of tax revenue if at the same time it was relieved of an agricultural problem on the expenditure end of the equation.

Mr. GURNEY. And the inshipper of gasoline could well afford to pay four-tenths of a cent more per gallon in order to help secure for his customer a larger revenue on the entire crop he could raise on all the acres inside of his own

Mr. VANDENBERG. Will the Senator again yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Further, in addition to the Federal tax on motor fuel which the Senator is discussing, of course, every State has an additional heavy tax on motor fuel.

Mr. GURNEY. That is true. The State of Nebraska now has a law which provides that the part of the motor fuel which is alcohol does not have to pay the Nebraska motor fuel tax. At the present time a refund is made in Nebraska for that part of the motor fuel.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I imagine that in every State of the Union the final ultimate tax on motor fuel is from 3 to 6 cents a gallon?

Mr. GURNEY. Yes; from 3 to 8 or 9 cents a gallon.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Very well. Then there is certainly that great factor through which can be absorbed all increased cost of the final product, if the scheme will produce agricultural relief, because government in all its branches can afford to forego a degree of revenue if in return it is immunized against the necessity for Federal subsidy to make agriculture survive.

Mr. GURNEY. And also the States can in that way increase the return to the people in their own States by getting rid of the surplus crops of all kinds at fair prices.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield. Mr. FRAZIER. The Senator from South Dakota spoke of the use of inferior grades of potatoes and other farm products for making power alcohol. The products used for that purpose would be largely waste products that would not be of any financial value to the farmer at all.

Mr. GURNEY. On which he is not now receiving any

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; and they could be turned into revenue-producing products for him, and at the same time he could get rid of the surplus of these products.

Mr. GURNEY. Yes.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The able Senator from South Dakota advises the Senate that he has interviewed the officials of the plant now in existence in-did he say Kansas City, Mo.?

Mr. GURNEY. At Atchison, Kans.

Mr. LUCAS. Can the Senator give any facts and figures in the way of a break-down as to the different commodities which are used in that factory for the purpose of making alcohol and other products?

Mr. GURNEY. I could do that very handily. I should like to refer the Senator to the Department of Agriculture bulletin on motor fuels, a booklet containing about 100 pages put out in December 1938, in which the Department presents a complete study and report of the entire project; and in that booklet are given break-downs of costs of making power alcohol out of grain and fruits of all kinds at their present market values.

Mr. LUCAS. What commodity is used most widely in producing that product?

Mr. GURNEY. With corn at 50 cents a bushel, power alcohol can now be made from it at close to 21 cents a gallon.

Mr. LUCAS. The point I am trying to determine is whether or not corn is the basic commodity used in that

Mr. GURNEY. Corn is the basic grain, the best grain we grow from which to make power alcohol. Power alcohol can be produced most cheaply from blackstrap molasses. Next in line comes corn. Then barley, wheat, potatoes, and fruits.

Mr. LUCAS. Since the able Senator has spoken of blackstrap molasses, will he not agree with me that in order for the amendment he has in mind to be effective in the manner he desires, it would also be necessary for the Congress to pass a law placing an excise tax upon all blackstrap molasses which is shipped into this country from tropical countries, which comes in at the present time duty-free?

Mr. GURNEY. My amendment seeks to give the refund only on the power alcohol that is produced from domestic crops; not on power alcohol produced from imported crops.

Mr. LUCAS. Yes; but in order to give the domestic crops the right-of-way, and to do what the Senator wants done, it strikes me it would be absolutely indispensable for the solution of the problem that we place an excise tax on blackstrap molasses which comes from the tropical countries by the steamship load. Cargo after cargo is shipped into my own section of Illinois, to Peoria and other industrial centers, and that blackstrap molasses comes into the State of Illinois duty-free. I will say to the Senator that as a Member of the House of Representatives I was instrumental in having a law passed by the House which placed blackstrap molasses, so far as the manufacturers' and importation taxes are concerned, upon the same basis with edible sugars which come into this country, but the measure was defeated in the Senate. The bill was never passed.

As one Member of the Senate who is vitally interested in the corn section of Illinois, being a corn producer myself, I should be very glad to join with the Senator from South Dakota along the lines I have suggested, and I am confident that something can be worked out in the Senate which will be of tremendous benefit to the great corn producers in the Middle West.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield.

Mr. REED. I am sure the Senator from South Dakota wants his facts straight. It so happens that reference has been made to a plant producing power alcohol at Atchison, Kans. Very recently the operators of the Atchison, Kans., plant have been in Washington, and in their aid I have gone to the Department of Agriculture, to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, and to the Reconstruction Finance Coporation, and I have had a good deal of discussion with those who operate that Atchison plant. My recollection of their statements to me, as confirmed by the Department of Agriculture, is that with corn at 40 cents a bushel instead of 50 cents, the price referred to by the Senator from South Dakota, they could produce alcohol for approximately 21 or 22 cents a gallon. I know the Senator from South Dakota desires to be accurate in his statement concerning the relationship between the price of corn and the cost of producing alcohol, and it so happens that I have had a very recent and direct contact with the officials of the Atchison plant which is producing power alcohol.

Mr. GURNEY. I will say to the Senator from Kansas that the plant at Atchison, Kans., is not one which was built in the first place to produce power alcohol from farm crops. It is a made-over brewery which used to produce beer, and it is not efficient in any way to produce power alcohol. plant I have in mind, and as described in the Department of Agriculture handbook, is a complete plant for producing power alcohol and using all the byproducts from the production of power alcohol, and the plant at Atchison, Kans., not being equipped to take care of their byproducts, cannot produce the power alcohol at the figure I quoted to the Senate. They would have to produce dry ice and byproducts of fermented grain. By using all those byproducts alcohol can be produced at the figure I quoted with 50-cent corn.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. As I understand the mechanics of the matter, one-tenth of a gallon of alcohol would be added to ninetenths of a gallon of gasoline, and the increased cost would be about 2 cents. That would make the product under discussion

Mr. GURNEY. That is correct.

Mr. WILEY. I can make this contribution to the discussion: I was reading lately a book on how Norway is handling some of her problems. In Norway they even got rid of a surplus of butter by providing by law that a certain percentage of butter shall be put into oleomargarine, and they are working in that way to get rid of the surplus of butter. I understand the Senator feels that if we got rid of some of our surplus crops in this direction we would raise the general level of prices and better the farming industry.

Mr. GURNEY. That is correct. I thank the Senator very

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under what order are we proceeding? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning hour has not expired and the presentation of morning business is still in

Mr. BARKLEY. The present discussion is out of order. I do not wish to interrupt Senators in the discussion; but inasmuch as we have the call of the calendar ahead of us, we should proceed with the regular order. The matter now under discussion is not before the Senate for decision.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I ask the Senator if I may have just a little more time? I am almost through with my remarks, and will conclude in a few moments, if not interrupted.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator object if I interrupt for just one more question?

Mr. BARKLEY. Not at all. I am glad to have the Sena-

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is it not a fact that the power-alcohol enterprise has demonstrated complete success in many foreign

Mr. GURNEY. At the present time most foreign countries are using power alcohol, of their own domestic production, in their motor fuels. In some foreign countries up to as high as 35 percent of their motor fuel is alcohol made from farm products. So this is not a new idea, but is an idea which has been tried out in as many as 23 foreign countries.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Will the Senator name some of the countries?

Mr. GURNEY. In England all the major oil companies, some of which have their head offices in this country, are now selling a motor fuel which contains a large percentage of power alcohol, and they say in their advertisements that such motor fuel is the best in the land. A similar situation exists in France, Germany, Italy, and Argentina. Most of the European countries now have laws making it mandatory to have a large percentage of power alcohol in motor fuel.

It seems a very appropriate time for me to call this matter to the attention of the Senate for the reason that we are now all national defense-minded, and certainly it is true that one of our greatest natural resources is the crude petroleum that we have in reserve. Certainly we should do everything we can to keep this strategic material for any time in the future when there is a national emergency. Therefore, it is good business logic at this time to conserve our supply of petroleum and at the same time help the farmers raise a portion of their own motor fuel.

I hope the Senate will remember that this type of farm relief does not require an appropriation. Keep in mind the national-defense angle, and remember that using up the surplus farm crops will automatically bring the farmer a fair price for all that he can raise. When the farmer receives that fair income he will then be prosperous. Farm prosperity means national prosperity. National prosperity means larger consumption of motor fuel. The gasoline industry would be selling a larger volume of its product to a prosperous country, even though motor fuel then would be only 90 percent gasoline. This bill would provide private capital a sound investment possibility. It would allow the farmers to produce a part of their own power. In that way the farmer's oats would feed the iron horse, which has replaced the horse and mule as farm power.

THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next order of business is the consideration of the calendar under rule VIII.

The Senate will now proceed to the consideration of unobjected-to blils on the calendar; and the clerk will state in order the bills on the calendar.

BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 326) for the payment of awards and appraisals heretofore made in favor of citizens of the United States in claims presented under the General Claims Convention of September 8, 1923, United States and Mexico, was announced as first in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I ask that the bill go over. I wish to make it plain that I am making the objection because of the absence from the Chamber of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over

The resolution (S. Res. 58) providing that a calendar day's notice shall suffice in connection with suspension of a rule was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 74) providing for a Committee on Civil Aviation was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let the resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 685) to create a Division of Water Pollution Control in the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 45) to amend the act of July 3, 1926, entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in claims which the Crow Tribe of Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes" was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, upon two occasions I have objected to the consideration during the morning hour, when time is limited, of a number of bills which we have denominated Indian bills. I have communicated with the Interior Department, and it has promised full reports concerning those bills. As soon as the reports are received, I shall have no objection to the consideration of the bills.

For the reasons just stated, I shall object to the present consideration of Calendar Nos. 83, 88, 100, 101, 102, 104, 105, 103, 114, and 116.

The following bills and joint resolution, on objection of Mr. King, were ordered to be passed over:

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 45) to amend the act of July 3, 1926, entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in claims which the Crow Tribe of Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes."

The bill (S. 863) to provide for the payment of attorney's fees from Osage tribal funds.

The bill (S. 783) to amend the act, as amended, entitled "An act to refer the claims of the Delaware Indians to the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States," approved February 7, 1925.

The bill (S. 784) for the relief of certain Indians of the Winnebago Agency, Nebr.

The bill (S. 790) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of the Prairie Band or Tribe of Pottawatomie Indians of Kansas and Wisconsin against the United States.

The bill (S. 1222) authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Osage Tribe of Indians on account of lands sold by the United States.

The bill (S. 767) conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment in any claims which the Assiniboine Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes.

The bill (S. 864) authorizing the Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indians to submit claims to the Court of Claims, and for other purposes.

The bill (S. 962) to define the status of certain lands purchased for the Choctaw Indians, Mississippi.

The bill (S. 498) authorizing an appropriation to carry out the provisions of section 26 of the agreement with the Muskogee or Creek Tribe of Indians, approved March 1, 1901.

The bill (H. R. 3790) relating to taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY, Mr. VANDENBERG, Mr. FRAZIER (and other Senators). Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown], I asked that Calendar No. 118, House bill 3790, go over, because a Member who is absent asked me to do so unless a full explanation should be offered.

Mr. BROWN. I have not the slightest objection to the bill's going over.

MERITORIOUS SERVICE MEDAL FOR UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES

The bill (S. 1582) to authorize the President to bestow a Meritorious Service Medal upon civil-service officers and employees of the United States, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized, in his discretion, and upon the recommendation of a board to be created by him composed of civil officers of the United States, and in accordance with such regulations as he may prescribe, to bestow upon any civil officer or employee of the United States, including commissioned officers of the Public Health Service and of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, or his personal representative in case he is deceased, a medal suitably inscribed which shall be known as the Meritorious Service Medal for the performance of an outstanding act or service involving great physical bravery or heroism, or for the performance of a service to the Government or to humanity characterized by exceptional merit and involving a high degree of labor or effort above and beyond the ordinary and usual requirements of his office.

SEC. 2. The appropriation available to meet the expenses of the activity with which the officer or employee was connected at the time of the service rendered shall be available for any expenses made necessary by the award of the medal herein authorized.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1464) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States was announced as next in

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This bill is identical with House bill 3537, Calendar No. 151.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair asks that the bill be passed over until the end of the calendar. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 902) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the temporary detail of United States employees, possessing special qualifications, to governments of American republics and the Philippines, and for other purposes," approved May 25, 1938, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair asks that that bill go over until the end of the calendar. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREEN subsequently said: Mr. President, what happened to Senate bill 1464 and Senate bill 902?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] asked for an explanation of Senate bill 1464, which is identical with House bill 3537. The present occupant of the chair, not being on the floor, asked that Senate bills 1464 and 902 go to the end of the calendar. However, the Senator from Rhode Island is at liberty to ask to recur to them.

Mr. GREEN. I shall be glad to explain the bills if there are any doubtful points that need explanation.

Mr. DANAHER. I ask that they stand at the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They will be passed to the foot of the calendar.

SETTLEMENT OF AMERICAN CLAIMS RESULTING FROM EXPROPRIA-TIONS BY MEXICO OF AGRARIAN PROPERTIES

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) authorizing appropriation for expenses of a representative of the United States and of his assistants, and for one-half of the joint expenses of this Government and the Government of Mexico, in giving effect to the agreement of November 9-12, 1938, between the two Governments providing for the settlement of American claims for damages resulting from expropriations of agrarian properties since August 30, 1927, which was read, as follows:

erties since August 30, 1927, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to provide for the expenses of participation by the United States in the settlement, in pursuance of the agreement of November 9-12, 1938, of claims of citizens of the United States against the Government of Mexico on account of expropriations of agrarian properties since August 30, 1927, including personal services in the District of Columbia or elsewhere without reference to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; rent of offices, electric service, drinking water, rooms and rent, and purchase of equipment for the use of the representative of the United States and his assistants, in addition, if deemed necessary by the Secretary of State, to the lawful per diem; stenographic, reporting, and translating services by contract if deemed necessary, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5); traveling expenses; communication service; purchase of lawbooks and books of reference; transportation of things; printing and binding; office supplies; official cards; entertainment; expenses and honorarium of a neutral umpire in the event such an appointment is found necessary; and such other expenses as may be authorized by the Secretary of State, including the reimbursement of other appropriations from which payments may have been made for any of the purposes herein specified: Provided, That any expenditures from the amount herein authorized to be appropriated shall become a first charge upon any moneys received from the Government by the Mexican Government and deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts: And provided further, That the representative of the United States shall, upon the completion of his work, submit a report to the Secretary of State, attaching thereto (a) a statement of the expenses of himself, his assistants, and of t Resolved, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated,

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the joint resolution?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] is chairman of the subcommittee on the

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I will state to the Senator from Oregon and others that the joint resolution relates to the agreement between the United States and Mexico with regard to the settlement of American claims against Mexico for the expropriation of farm and ranch lands. An agreement has been reached to submit the matter to a commission. The joint resolution merely provides authority for the former clerks and others of the American section to aid and facilitate the work of the commission. The compensation is to come out of the funds which may be collected from Mexico in settlement of the claims.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 95) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 22, 1920, as amended, to extend retirement to certain employees of certain Indian schools was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

The bill (S. 1706) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

The bill (H. R. 3537) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF OPENING OF PANAMA CANAL

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 70) providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Panama Canal, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. House Joint Resolution 163, No. 206 on the calendar, is a bill of the same character.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I ask unanimous consent to substitute the House joint resolution for the Senate joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 163) providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Panama Canal, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate Joint Resolution 70 will be indefinitely postponed.

EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN VESSELS FROM PROVISIONS OF OFFICERS' COMPETENCY CERTIFICATES CONVENTION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 950) to exempt all vessels of the United States of less than 200 tons gross registered tonnage from the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936 (being International Labor Conference Treaty, Convention No. 53, adopted by the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1936), which was read.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine [Mr. White] can probably explain the bill.

Mr. WHITE. I shall be glad to explain the bill, or have it go to the end of the calendar.

The bill proposes to exempt from the provisions of the treaty ratified by the Senate in the last session of Congress all vessels of the United States under 200 gross tons register. The bill passed the House of Representatives after exhaustive hearings by the appropriate committee of that body. While the bill was not directly before the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, a subcommittee of the Committee on Commerce gave consideration to the subject matter of the bill during this session of the Congress and indicated its complete approval of the bill. I think the departments of the Government approved the bill. I understand that the labor organizations approved the bill. I know of no interest anywhere objecting to the passage of the bill. Unless it is passed, the terms of the convention will apply to all vessels of the United States over 5 tons. The convention itself recognized that its terms should not apply in all circumstances to the smaller vessels, and the convention carried a provision expressly permitting nations signatory to the treaty to exempt by their own legislation vessels up to 200 tons.

As I say, I think there is complete agreement by all parties in interest that the proposed legislation should be passed. At the time the treaty was before the Senate, no hearing was afforded to the maritime, commercial, and fishing interests of the United States. Since then an insistent demand or a very urgent request has arisen upon the Great Lakes, the Gulf, and along both coasts that legislation of this sort be enacted and that vessels of such small tonnage be exempted from the provisions of the treaty.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1162) to provide for the recognition of the services of the civilian officials and employees, citizens of the United States, engaged in and about the construction of the Panama Canal was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. PEPPER subsequently said: Mr. President, with respect to Senate bill 1162, I should like to have the bill go to the foot of the calendar, so that it may be taken up later.

Mr. KING. I have objected to its consideration during the morning hour.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 86) for the relief of International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN and Mr. KING. Let the joint resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 43) to authorize the erection within the Canal Zone of a suitable memorial to the builders of the Panama Canal and others whose distinguished services merit recognition by the Congress was announced as next in order.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1155) to provide for probationary appointments of officers in the Regular Army was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

APPORTIONMENT OF SUGAR CROP

The bill (S. 69) relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940 was announced as next in order.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask for an explanation of this bill, please.

Mr. ELLENDER obtained the floor.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I wish to find out whether the Senator and I are in agreement on the amendment I am offering to this bill. I have heretofore objected to the bill. I am willing to withdraw my objection if the words "sugar beets or," in line 7, may be deleted.

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes, Mr. President; I have the amendment ready to offer.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Louisiana to allow the matter to go over until the end of the calendar, because some of us who are interested in the subject may have an amendment to suggest.

Mr. ELLENDER. That is perfectly agreeable to me.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, before the bill is passed over I enter a motion to amend the bill by striking out the words "sugar beets or," in line 7, so that the amendment may be pending if and when the bill comes before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. When the bill is taken up, the amendment will be received. The bill will go to the end of the calendar.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1303) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, with respect to cotton was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1209) to extend the time for retirement of cotton-pool participation trust certificates was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BRIDGES OVER CROSS BAYOU, TWELVE MILE BAYOU, AND CADDO LAKE, LA.

The bill (S. 461) to extend the time for commencing and completing bridges across Cross Bayou, Twelve Mile Bayou, and Caddo Lake in Caddo Parish, La., was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. House bill 2192, Calendar No. 200, is an identical bill. Without objection, the House bill will be substituted for the Senate bill.

AND PROPERTY OF THE PERSON AND THE P

The bill (H. R. 2192) to extend the time for commencing and completing bridges across Cross Bayou, Twelve Mile Bayou, and Caddo Lake in Caddo Parish, La., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 461 will be indefinitely postponed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE, FRIAR POINT, MISS., AND HELENA, ARK.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 964) creating the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark., and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, with amendments.

The amendments were, in section 1, line 7, after the word "and", to strike out "is" and insert "its"; in section 2, page 2, line 12, after the word "Mississippi", to strike out "including real estate and other property acquired for or devoted to a public use or other purposes by the State of Arkansas or the State of Mississippi, or any governmental or political subdivisions thereof"; on the same page, line 23, after the word "respectively", to insert "The commission, its successors, and assigns is further authorized to enter into agreements with the States of Arkansas and Mississippi, and any political subdivision thereof, for the acquisition, lease, or use of any lands or property owned by such State or political subdivision"; and in section 4, page 3, line 23, after the word "bridge", to strike out "In like manner, bonds may be issued to pay the cost of improvements and permanent repairs to any bridge so constructed hereunder"; so as to make the

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission (hereinafter created, and hereinafter referred to as the "Commission"), and its successors and assigns, be, and are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto, across the Mississippi River at or near the cities of Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark., at a point suitable to the interest of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

gation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

Sec. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the Commission and its successors and assigns the right and power to enter upon such lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use such real estate and other property in the State of Arkansas and the State of Mississippi, as may be needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of any such bridge and its approaches, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation of private property for public purposes in said State, respectively. The Commission, its successors, and assigns is further authorized to enter into agreements with the States of Arkansas and Mississippi, and any political subdivision thereof, for the acquisition, lease, or use of any lands or property owned by such State or political subdivision.

Sec. 3. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge in accordance with the provisions of this act, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, as provided by the act of Congress approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 4. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of such bridge as may be constructed, as provided herein, and approaches (including the approach highways which, in the judgment of the Commission, it is necessary or advisable to construct or cause to be constructed to provide suitable and adequate connection with existing improved highways) and the necessary lands, easements, and appurtenances thereto, by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the Commission, bearing interest at the rate or rate may be fixed by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. The Commission, when it deems it to be to the best interest of the Commission, may issue refunding bonds to repurchase and redeem any outstanding bonds before the maturity thereof: Provided, That the refunding bonds shall mature at such time or times, not exceeding 50 years from the date of approval of this act, as the Commission may determine. The Commission may enter into any agreement with any bank or trust company in the United States as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the Commission in respect to the purchase, construction, maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of the bridge, the conservation and application of all funds, the security for payment of the bonds, the safeguarding of money on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of the bonds, restricting the individual right of action of the bondholders as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust agreement may contain such provisions for protecting and enforcing the rights and remedies of the trustee and the bondholders may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law.

as may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law.

Said bonds shall be sold in such manner and at such time or times and at such price as the Commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a*price so low as to require the payment of interest at the rate of more than 6 percent per annum on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values, and the face amount thereof shall be so calculated as to produce, at the price of their sale, the cost of the bridge constructed, and approaches and the lands, easements, and appurtenances, used in connection therewith when added to any other funds made available to the Commission for the use of said purposes. The cost of the bridge to be constructed as provided herein, together with approaches and approach highways, shall be deemed to include interest during construction of said bridge, and for 12 months thereafter, and all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic surveying, and other expense incident to the construction of the bridge and the acquisition of the necessary property, incident to the financing thereof, including cost of acquiring lands. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided. Prior to the preparation of definite bonds the Commission may, under like restrictions, issue temporary bonds or interim certificates, with or without coupons, of any denomination whatsoever, exchangeable for definite bonds when such bonds that have been executed are available for delivery.

Sec. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use delivery.

delivery.

SEC. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge, in accordance with the act of Congress approved March 23, 1906, the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds as the same shall fall due, and the redemption or repurchase price of all or any thereof redeemed or repurchased before maturity as herein provided. All tolls and other revenues from said bridge are hereby pledged to such uses and to the application thereof as hereinafter in this section required. After payment or provision for payment therefrom of all such cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating, and the reservation of an amount of money estimated to be sufficient for the same purpose during an ensuing period of not more than 6 months, the remainder of tolls collected shall be placed in the sinking fund, at intervals to be determined by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested. The Commission shall classify in a reasonable way all traffic over the bridge so that the tolls shall be so fixed and adjusted by it as to be uniform in the application thereof to all traffic falling within reasonable classes, regardless of the status or character of any person, firm, or corporation participating in such traffic, and shall prevent all use of such bridge for traffic except upon payment of tolls so fixed and adjusted. No toll shall be charged officials or employees of the Commission, nor shall toll be charged officials or the Government of the United States while in the discharge of duties incident to their office or employment, nor shall to SEC. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use

Within a reasonable time after the construction of the bridge the Commission shall file with the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture a sworn itemized statement, showing the cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the cost of acquiring any interest in real or other property necessary therefor, and the amount of bonds, debentures, or other evidences of indeptedness issued in connection with the construction. evidence of indebtedness issued in connection with the construc-tion of said bridge.

SEC. 6. After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the Commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the Commission in and to the bridge extending between the State of Arkansas and the State of Mississippi, that part of said bridge within Arkansas to the State of Arkansas, or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Arkansas interest") and that part of said bridge within Mississippi to the State of Mississippi, or part of said bridge within Mississippi to the State of Mississippi, or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Mississippi interest"), under the condition that the bridge shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired, by the Arkansas interest and the Mississippi interest as may be agreed upon; but if the Arkansas interest or the Mississippi interest, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned, shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the Commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and approaches under economical management, until such time as the Arkansas interest and the Mississippi interest, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned, shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions. Notwithstanding any restriction or limitation imposed by the act to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions. Notwithstanding any restriction or limitation imposed by the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, or by the Federal Highway Act, or by an act amendatory of, or supplemental to either thereof, the Secretary of Agriculture, or any other Federal department or agency of the United States Government may extend Federal aid under such acts for the construction of said bridge out of any money allocated to the State of Arkansas with the consent of the State highway commission of said State, and out of money allocated to the State of Mississippi with the consent of the highway department of said State. of said State

SEC. 7. For the purpose of carrying into effect the objects stated in this act, there is hereby created the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission, and by that name, style, and title said body shall have perpetual succession, may contract, and be contracted with, sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain and defend in all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property. May account and receive departions on effect of the contract of the contract and receive departions on effect and sealers.

all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property; may accept and receive donations or gifts of money or property and apply the same to the purposes of this act; and shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act.

The Commission shall consist of six members to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture, three of whom are to be residents and citizens of the State of Mississippi and the other three to be residents and citizens of the State of Arkansas. Such Commission shall be a public body corporate and politic. Each member of the Commission shall qualify within 30 days after his appointment by filing in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture an oath that he will faithfully perform the duties imposed upon him by this act, and each person appointed to fill a vacancy shall file in like manner within 30 days after his appointment. Any vacancy occurring in said Commission by reason of failure to qualify as above provided, or by reason of death or resignation, shall be filled by the Secretary of Agriculture, and in filling such vacancy the Secretary of Agriculture shall at all times make the appointment so that the respective States shall at all times have equal representation on said Commission. Before the issuance of bonds, as hereinabove provided, each member of the Commission shall give such bond as may be fixed by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, conditioned upon the faithful performance of all duties required by this act. The cost of such surety prior to and during the construction of the bridge shall be paid or reimbursed from the bond proceeds and thereafter such cost shall be deemed an operating expense. The Commission shall elect a chairman and vice chairman from its members, and shall establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. A majority of the members shal

SEC. 8. The Commission shall have no capital stock or shares of interest or participation, and all revenues and receipts thereof shall be applied to the purposes specified in this act. The members of the Commission shall be entitled to a per diem compensation for their services of $10 for each day actually spent in the business of the Commission but the maximum compensation of the chairman in any year shall not exceed $1,200, and of each other member shall not exceed $600. The members of the Commission shall also be entitled to receive traveling-expense allowance of 10 cents a mile for each mile actually traveled on the business of the Commission. The Commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and such other experts, assistants, and employees as they may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the Commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided SEC. 8. The Commission shall have no capital stock or shares of receive such compensation as the Commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act. After all bonds and interest thereon shall have been paid and all other obligations of the Commission paid or discharged, or provision for all such payment shall have been made as hereinbefore provided, and after the bridge shall have been conveyed to the Arkansas interest and the Mississippi interest, as herein provided, or otherwise disposed of, as provided herein, the Commission shall be dissolved and shall cease to have further existence by an order of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, made upon his own intitative or upon emplication of the Commission cany members or members thereof. application of the Commission or any member or members thereof, but only after a public hearing in the city of Helena, Ark., notice of time and place of which hearing and the purpose thereof shall have been published once, at least 30 days before the date thereof, in a newspaper published in the cities of Helena, Ark., and Clarksdale, Miss. At the time of such dissolution all moneys in the hands of or to the credit of the Commission shall be divided and distribution made between the interests of the States as may be determined by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the determined by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States.

SEC. 9. Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this act, the Commission shall have full power and authority to negotiate and enter into a contract or contracts with the State Highway Commission of Arkansas, and the State Highway Commission of Mississippi, the cities of Helena, Ark., and Clarksdale, Miss., or any county or municipality in the State of Arkansas and State of Mississippi, whereby the Commission may receive financial aid in the construction or maintenance of the bridge and approaches thereto, and said Commission, in its discretion, may avail itself of all of the facilities of the State Highway Commissions of the State of Arkansas and the State of Mississippi with regard to the construction of said bridge, and the Commission may make and enter into any contract or contracts which it deems expedient and proper with the State Highway Commissions of Arkansas and Mississippi, whereby said highway departments, or either of them, may construct, operate, and maintain, or participate with the Commission in the construction, operation, and maintenance of said bridge constructed hereunder, and the approaches thereto. It is hereby declared to be the purpose of Congress to facilitate the construction of a bridge and proper approaches across the Mississippi River at or near Helena, Ark., and Friar Point, Miss., and to authorize the Commission to promote said object and purpose, with full power to contract with either the State Highway Commission of Arkansas or the State Highway Commission of Mississippi, or with any agency or department of the Federal Government, or both, in relation to the construction, operation, and maintenance of said bridge and approaches. tion to the construction, operation, and maintenance of said bridge and approaches.

SEC. 10. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the Commission or any member thereof to create or obligate or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from funds contemplated to be provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be a personal obligation or liability of any member or members of the Commission but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

SEC 11. The design and construction of any bridge which may be built pursuant to this act shall be in accordance with the standard specifications for highway bridges adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials.

SEC. 12. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMMANDER HENRY COYLE, UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 75) to authorize Commander Henry Coyle, United States Coast Guard, to accept the decoration and diploma of the Marine Medal of Class 1 (gold) conferred upon him by the Government of Greece was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next measure on the calendar, House Joint Resolution 110, is an identical measure. Without objection, the House joint resolution will be substituted for the Senate joint resolution.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 110) to authorize Commander Henry Coyle, United States Coast Guard, to accept the decoration and diploma of the Marine Medal of Class 1 (gold) conferred upon him by the Government of Greece was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate Joint Resolution 75 will be indefinitely postponed.

J. VERNON PHILLIPS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1692) for the relief of J. Vernon Phillips, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the word "Treasury", to strike out "appropriated for the maintenance and operation of the Soil Conservation Service" and insert "not otherwise appropriated"; in line 9, after the words "South Carolina", to insert "the sum of $231.10"; in line 10, after the words "United States", to strike out "a sum equal to the total amount" and insert "for 25 days and 4 hours of accrued annual leave which"; and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to J. Vernon Phillips, formerly an employee of the Soil Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture, in Gaffney, S. C., the sum of $231.10, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States, for 25 days and 4 hours of accrued annual leave which he would have received had he been continued on the pay roll after July 31, 1936, until the date of the expiration of his accumulated annual leave: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1.000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1186) for the relief of Herbert M. Snapp was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

TDA MAY LENNON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1387) for the relief of Ida May Lennon, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$264.78" and insert "$179.08", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ida May Lennon, of Bedford, Ohio, the sum of $179.08, in full satisfaction of her claims against the United States for compensation for damage done to a building owned by her in St. Ignace, Mich., by blasting of the Civil Works Administration during February and March 1934: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CAPT. FRANCIS H. A. M'KEON

The bill (H. R. 3100) for the relief of Capt. Francis H. A. McKeon was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DONNA L. I. CARLISLE

The bill (S. 1502) for the relief of Donna L. I. Carlisle was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Donna L. I. Carlisle, of Orange Grove, Calif., the sum of $5,000, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for compensation on account of the death of her son, Arthur W. Lawrence, who was killed on July 22, 1929, by being crushed underneath an Army truck while a trainee at a citizens' military training camp at Fort Missoula, Mont.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with such claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with such claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

BARKMAN LUMBER CO.

The bill (S. 1385) for the relief of the Barkman Lumber Co. was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Barkman Lumber Co., of East Tawas, Mich., the sum of $310.48, in full satisfaction of its claims for the remission of liquidated damages deducted from amounts otherwise due it for lumber and building materials furnished the United States Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, under unnumbered contracts dated May 29, 1936, and under contract No. ER-A9fs-100, dated June 9, 1936, and contract No. ER-A9fs-ccc-1126, dated June 10, 1936: Provided, That no part of the amounts appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of service rendered in connection with said claims. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amounts appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claims, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

DOROTHY ELIZABETH SISSON, A MINOR

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1430) for the relief of Dorothy Elizabeth Sisson, a minor, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 7, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$3,000" and insert "$1,230"; in line 8, after the word "claims", to insert "or judgments"; and in line 9, after the words "United States", to insert "or J. H. Rochester, of Memphis, Tenn.", so as to make the bill read:

Tenn.", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the legal guardian of Dorothy Elizabeth Sisson, a minor, of Memphis, Tenn., the sum of $1,230. The payment of such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims or judgments against the United States, or J. H. Rochester, of Memphis, Tenn., on account of personal injuries received by said Dorothy Elizabeth Sisson, when struck, on March 19, 1935, in Memphis, Tenn., by a United States mail truck: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of the legal guardian of Dorothy Elizabeth Sisson, a minor.'

THIRD INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS FOR MICROBIOLOGY

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 150) to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to provide that the United States extend to foreign governments invitations to participate in the Third International Congress for Microbiology to be held in the United States during the calendar year 1939," was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROHIBITION OF SHIPMENT OF PETROLEUM IN VIOLATION OF STATE LAW

The bill (S. 1302) to make permanently effective the act entitled "An act to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in petroleum and its products by prohibiting the shipment in such commerce of petroleum and its products produced in violation of State law and for other purposes", approved February 22, 1935, as amended, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 13 of the act entitled "An act to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in petroleum and its products by prohibiting the shipment in such commerce of petroleum and its products produced in violation of State law, and for other purposes," approved February 22, 1935, as amended, is hereby represented. repealed.

repealed.

Sec. 2. (a) No action or prosecution for the enforcement or collection of any penalty, forfeiture, or liability for any violation of such act, before or after the date of enactment of this act, shall be deemed to be barred or prevented by reason of the expiration, after the date of such violation, of (1) the period to which the effectiveness of such act of February 22, 1935, would have been limited under such section 13, as originally enacted, (2) the period to which the effectiveness of such act would have been limited under such section 13, as amended by the act of June 14, 1937, or (3) the effective period of any State law, regulation, or order, with respect to contraband oil.

(b) If any provision of this section, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance or with respect to any period of time, shall be held invalid, the remainder of the section, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances or with respect to other periods of time, shall not be affected thereby.

RILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1096) to amend section 8c of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended, to make its provisions applicable to Pacific Northwest boxed apples was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

MARIA BARTOLO

The bill (S. 139) for the relief of Maria Bartolo was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration laws Maria Bartolo (nee Mariannina D'Amore), wife of Carmine Bartolo, a citizen of the United States, shall not be denied an immigration visa, nor denied admission to the United States for permanent residence, because of the fact that she entered the United States in December 1924 by the use of an immigration visa issued to Carmela Savelli.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Labor is authorized and directed to cancel any warrants of arrest or orders of deportation which may have been issued in the case of the said Maria Bartolo upon the ground of unlawful residence in the United States and to permit her to permanently remain in the United States.

MARY COHEN BIENVENU

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 72) readmitting Mary Cohen Bienvenu to citizenship was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, Resolved, etc., That Mary Cohen Bienvenu, a native citizen of the United States, born in Atlanta, Ga., the daughter of John Sanford Cohen, a former Senator of the United States from the State of Georgia, who is alleged to have forfeited her citizenship by marriage with an alien in 1934, be, and she is hereby, on her own application unconditionally readmitted to the character and privileges of a citizen of the United States of America.

WILLIAM CARL LAUDE

The bill (S. 1291) for the relief of William Carl Laude was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, William Carl Laude, brother of the religious order of St. Benedict, Atchison, Kans., shall be considered to have been lawfully admitted at Buffalo, N. Y., on August 29, 1936, to the United States for permanent residence.

JOHANNES KOSTIUK AND OTHERS

The bill (S. 1394) for the relief of Johannes or John, Julia, Michael, William, and Anna Kostiuk was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to cancel the warrant of arrest and the order of deportation heretofore issued against Johannes or John, Julia, Michael, William, and Anna Kostiuk. Hereafter, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, such aliens shall be deemed to have been lawfully admitted for all purposes to the United States for permanent residence on April 15, 1925.

MRS. HENRY FRANCIS PARKS

The bill (S. 837) to admit Mrs. Henry Francis Parks permanently to the United States was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 13 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1924 (43 Stat. 153; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 213c) relating to the exclusion from the United States of aliens ineligible to citizenship, Mrs. Henry Francis Parks shall be granted an immigration visa and admitted into the United States if she applies for such visa and admission within 6 months from the date of the enactment of this act and is found to be otherwise admissible under the immigration laws.

EMIL FRIEDRICH DISCHLEIT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1269) for the relief of Emil Friedrich Dischleit, which had been reported from the Committee on Immigration with an amendment, on page 1, after line 7, to strike out:

SEC. 2. Any proceedings heretofore or hereafter instituted for the deportation of the said Emil Friedrich Dischleit on the ground of unlawful residence in the United States shall be null and void.

And insert:

SEC. 2. From and after the date of the approval of this act Emil Friedrich Dischleit shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which the outstanding proceedings

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws Emil Friedrich Dischleit, of Meriden, Conn., shall be held and considered to have been legally admitted to the United States for permanent residence on August 21, 1931.

SEC. 2. From and after the date of the approval of this act, Emil Friedrich Dischleit shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which the outstanding proceedings rest.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CALLIOPE MINACA PILAVAKIS

The bill (S. 808) for the relief of Calliope Minaca Pilavakis was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws Calliope Minaca Pilavakis, of Newark, N. J., the wife of Xenophon Pilavakis and the mother of two children born in the United States, shall be held and considered to have been legally admitted to the United States for permanent residence on February 7, 1936.

Sec. 2 Any receedings beretafore or bereafter instituted for the SEC. 2. Any proceedings heretofore or hereafter instituted for the deportation of the said Calliope Minaca Pilavakis on the ground of unlawful residence in the United States shall be null and void.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The resolution (S. Res. 83), submitted by Mr. King on February 20, 1939, authorizing the Committee on the District of Columbia to hold hearings during the Seventy-sixth Congress, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized during the Seventy-sixth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during any session or recess of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY ACT, 1933

The bill (S. 1796) to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, that is a very important bill. It cannot be discussed in the limited time available under the present procedure. Let it be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if the Senator has examined the bill he will find that, so far as I know, no one interested anywhere objects. All the parties are in favor of it. It simply carries out an agreement made between the Tennessee Electric Power Co. or the Commonwealth & Southern Co. and the Tennessee Valley Authority by which certain properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co. are to be sold, and authorizes the issuance of bonds to make the sale to the Tennessee Valley Authority. It requires no appropriation. In fact, it will lessen appropriations, because in the future, as the report points out, if the plan of the Tennessee Valley Authority is carried out, the one dam that is included in the transfer of properties will be paid for by the sale of power, and it will be unnecessary to make any appropriations for it. That is true also of all the transmission lines included in the property.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have examined the bill. I am opposed to the entire policy of the measure. I desire to submit some observations regarding the bill, and to offer one amendment. I should not feel like having it taken up in the limited time available under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator submit his amendment so that it may be examined?

Mr. KING. I shall do so tomorrow.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the amendment be printed, so that we may all have a view of it?

Mr. KING. I will submit it for the RECORD.

Mr. McCARRAN. I ask that it may be printed and lie on the table, so that we may view it, and so that the committee may consider it. Otherwise, I shall object.

APPORTIONMENT OF SUGAR CROP

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I ask now that the Senate revert to Senate bill 69.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana asks that the Senate revert to Senate bill 69, the title of which will be read by the clerk.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 69) relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let the bill go over.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I desire to submit two amendments to the bill. I have discussed them with the Senator from Louisiana and with some other Senators who are interested in the sugar-beet situation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to recurring to the bill for the purpose of receiving the amendments? Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, reserving for a moment the right to object. I desire to make a brief statement.

This is a bill in connection with which the other day I called attention to the fact that I thought it should have been referred to the Finance Committee. Upon looking into the matter I find that no tax is involved; but the question is one which was heretofore considered by the Finance Committee, and when the bill was before the committee at that time a tax was involved.

I am not going to raise any objection to the bill; but I call attention to the fact that I think it is a bad way to legislate, to settle these quotas by amendment on the floor of the Senate, especially in view of the fact that the Secretary of Agriculture has made an unfavorable report on the bill. The bill came from the Agricultural Committee.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, let me add, in reference to the amendments submitted, that they are submitted on behalf of the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney], and myself in an effort to protect the beet-sugar situation in the West. That is, we felt that the bill as submitted would be all right with these amendments. The Senator from Louisiana can and will explain the emergency which necessitates the presentation of the bill on behalf of the cane-sugar areas.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to make an inquiry of the Senator from Mississippi. If the amendment submitted by the Senator from Colorado is agreed to, will it not do away with the only objections that were made to the original bill by the Secretary of Agriculture or otherwise?

Mr. HARRISON. I will say to the Senator that I was one of those who tried to help in the study of the quota matter with reference to sugar, both for sugarcane and for sugar beets. The amendments will increase the quotas of sugar from sugar beets, as the bill does as to sugar from sugarcane. I think the bill of the Senator from Louisiana is a very meritorious one as offered; but I merely call attention to the fact that the question is a most delicate question and hard to solve.

We took a good many weeks in the consideration of this question before the Finance Committee, so I wanted to call it to the attention of the Senate. I do not know what the amendments are, except that they increase the quota of sugar that may come in.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me say to the Senator from Mississippi that I do not think a delay would be objected to so much by the beet-sugar men; but I was very much impressed by the statement made before the committee by the Senator from Louisiana. If this bill is not passed within the next few days, it will leave the producers of cane sugar in Louisiana in such a position that they will be bound to lose a good deal of money and will have to plow up some land now planted to sugarcane. I think that is a fair statement. I should like to ask the Senator from Louisiana about it.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me at that point?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. In connection with the Senator's statement about plowing up sugarcane, I wish to inform the Senate that orders have already been issued by the Department of Agriculture to the effect that cane farmers must signify their intention to take acreage cuts on April 1 so as to be entitled to their benefit payments. Thousands of them must agree to plow up much of their acreage so as to obtain their payment. It is because of that situation that I am anxious to have the Senate consider the bill without delay.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go over, and that the amendments be printed, so that those who are interested in the subject may have an opportunity to view the situation.

the situation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

COMMISSARY PRIVILEGES AT FOREIGN NAVAL STATIONS

The bill (S. 499) to amend the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1909, as amended, so as to extend commissary privileges to civilian officers and employees of the United States at naval stations beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, what was the action on Senate bill 499?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was objected to.

Mr. HATCH. I wonder if the Senator who made the objection would like to have the bill explained.

Mr. KING. I objected to it. I will withhold the objection to hear an explanation.

Mr. HATCH. A similar bill passed the Senate at the last session, and a similar bill passed the House. Since that time the pending bill was introduced at the request of the Department. It has the recommendation of the Budget Director and also of the Secretary of the Navy. It merely extends to certain civilian employees of the United States Government the right to purchase at the naval stores, particularly in China, a right which is already enjoyed by nearly all the military, naval, and civilian workers stationed in China; but there are a few who are not covered by the existing law.

Mr. KING. Does it relate merely to China?

Mr. HATCH. No; it relates to all such places. But the Secretary points out that the naval stores in China are about the only ones which would be affected. If in the other places a certain portion of the civilian employees have a right to purchase at these stores, as they do now, is it not obvious that the right should be extended to others of the same class; and that if that is not done the right should be taken away from the others?

Mr. KING. There is a great deal of logic in the last part of the Senator's statement. I have objected heretofore to the Federal Government permitting all of its employees to have the opportunity of obtaining these services. Of course, we have permitted the personnel and officers of the Army and the Navy to obtain supplies at these stores, but to take care of all the employees of the Government, nearly 2,000,000 of them now, including those in the various camps, and have the naval stores take on the responsibility of enlarging their storehouses and their staffs to purchase and handle and dispose of goods to the thousands and hundreds of thousands of Federal employees is something which I do not think the Federal Government should assume, and I do not think it is just that it should.

Mr. HATCH. I might agree with the Senator from Utah if the matter he is submitting now were an original proposition, but the Government is already doing it. The privilege has been extended, and absolute discrimination now exists as to a small group of employees who do not come under the present law.

Mr. KING. Of course, a bad precedent is always resorted to as a basis to justify another evil. I shall not object, but I give notice that I shall present a bill-I prepared one at the last session—to repeal other measures which resulted in the Federal Government taking over the responsibility of distributing goods to an enormous number of Federal employees, which increases the costs of the Federal Government.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the Senator for his stand in withdrawing his objection at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That such part of the act of March 3, 1909 (ch. 255, 35 Stat. 768; U. S. C., title 34, sec. 533), as amended by the act of April 14, 1937 (50 Stat. 63), which provides—
"That hereafter such stores as the Secretary of the Navy may designate may be procured and sold to officers and enlisted men of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard; to the widows of such officers and enlisted men; to civilian employees of the Navy Department and to officers of the Foreign Service of the United States at naval stations beyond the continental limits of the United States and in Alaska, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe." tary of the Navy may prescribe," is further amended to read as follows:

"That hereafter such stores as the Secretary of the Navy may designate may be procured and sold to officers and enlisted men of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard; to the widows of such officers and enlisted men; and to civilian officers and employees of the United States at naval stations and post exchanges beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may

POST-OFFICE BUILDING AT POPLARVILLE, MISS.

The bill (S. 1725) relating to the acquisition of the site for the post-office building to be constructed in Poplarville, Miss., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of section 3741 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 41, sec. 22) and sections 114 and 115 of the Criminal Code of the United States (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 18, secs. 204 and 205) shall not be applicable with respect to any contract or agreement entered into by or on behalf of the United States for the acquisition of any part of the site for the post-office building to be constructed in Poplarville, Miss.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2971) for the relief of certain Indians of the Winnebago Agency was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 3134) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the temporary detail of United States employees, possessing special qualifications, to governments of American republics and the Philippines, and for other purposes," approved May 25, 1938, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, under a former objection.

The bill (H. R. 3367) to define the status of certain lands purchased for the Choctaw Indians, Mississippi, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 3801) to extend the time for retirement of cotton-pool participation trust certificates was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let us have an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

The bill (H. R. 4117) to provide for the payment of attorney's fees from Osage tribal funds was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

NAOMI STRALEY AND BONNIE STRALEY

The bill (S. 1847) for the relief of Naomi Straley and Bonnie Straley was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Naomi Straley, of Omaha, Nebr., the sum of $500, in full satisfaction of her claims against the United States for damages for personal injuries sustained by her, and to Bonnie Straley, of Omaha, Nebr., the sum of $4,500 in full satisfaction of all her claims against the United States for damages for personal injuries received by her and for the death of her mother, said injuries and death having resulted from a collision for personal injuries received by her and for the death of her mother, said injuries and death having resulted from a collision on the night of December 11, 1935, near Tacoma, Wash., on the Tacoma-Vancouver Highway, between the automobile Bonnie Straley was driving and a truck in the use of the Works Progress Administration standing crosswise on said highway and left improperly lighted and guarded: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

JOINT RESOLUTION, CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, AND BILLS PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 11) directing the Comptroller General to readjust the account between the United States and the State of Vermont was announced as next in

Mr. BURKE. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 5) continuing the authority of the Joint Committee on Forestry, established by Senate Concurrent Resolution 31, Seventy-fifth Congress, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The concurrent resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1554) to provide that the district judge for the western district of Washington, authorized to be appointed under the act of May 31, 1938, shall be a district judge for the eastern and western districts of Washington was announced as next in order.

Mr. BURKE. Let that go over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

HEIRS OF T. J. KINSER

The bill (S. 39) for the relief of the heirs of T. J. Kinser was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Veterans' Administration is hereby Be it enacted, etc., That the Veterans' Administration is hereby authorized and directed to reopen the case of T. J. Kinser, late of Troop I, Eighth Regiment United States Cavalry, and consider the facts as submitted and now on file in the record, and receive such additional evidence as may be presented, and, in the event it should be held that the Bureau of Pensions was in error in depriving the said T. J. Kinser of the rights and benefits which had been granted him as a disabled soldier, it shall determine and make provisions for the payment of any sum of which the said Kinser was deprived by reason of the order of the Pension Bureau to the heirs of the said T. J. Kinser upon application and proof of heirsbip. said T. J. Kinser upon application and proof of heirship.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1016) to authorize reimbursement of appropriations on account of expenditures in connection with disposition of old material, condemned stores, etc., was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. May we have an explanation of this bill? In the absence of an explanation, let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

GRADES AND RATINGS OF ENLISTED MEN OF THE ARMY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 841) to authorize the Secretary of War to prescribe the number of grades and ratings of enlisted men of the Army, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4b of the National Defense Act, as amended, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:
"Sec. 4b. Enlisted men: Commencing July 1, 1939, the grades and ratings of enlisted men shall be such as the Secretary of War may from time to time direct, with monthly base pay in each grade and pay for each rating as prescribed by law. The numbers in grades and/or ratings of enlisted men shall be such as are authorized from time to time by the Secretary of War: Provided, That nothing in this section shall operate to reduce the pay which any enlisted man is now receiving, during his current enlistment and while he holds his present grade and rating, nor to change the present rate of pay of any enlisted man now on the retired list, nor to change existing provisions of law relating to flying cadets: Provided further, That the transportation privileges authorized by section 12 of the act of Congress approved May 18, 1920, shall apply only to enlisted men of the first three grades: Provided further, That nothing herein shall be construed to authorize any increase in the number of the enlisted personnel of the Regular Army."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will ask my colleague, who is a member of the Committee on Military Affairs, for an explanation of the bill.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, this is rather a complicated matter, and it would be necessary for the Senator to consider the report and some of the hearings. I do not think it should be passed without everyone considering it.

Mr. KING. Then let it go over, if my colleague will assent to that

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

PARTICIPATION IN TWELFTH OLYMPIC GAMES

The bill (S. 1019) to authorize the Secretary of War to pay certain expenses incident to the training, attendance, and participation of the equestrian and modern pentathlon teams in the Twelfth Olympic Games was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to direct the training and attendance of personnel and animals of the Regular Army as participants in the Twelfth Olympic Games: Provided, That all expenses incident to training, attendance, and participation in the Twelfth Olympic Games, including the use of such supplies, material, and equipment as in the opinion of the Secretary of War may be necessary, may be charged to the appropriations for the support of the Army: Provided further, That applicable allowances which are or may be fixed by law or regulations for participation in other military activities shall not be exceeded.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1462) to amend an act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, so as to confer on the commanding general, General Headquarters Air Force, the same retirement privileges now enjoyed by chiefs of branches, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let us have an explanation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

RENT-A-CAR CO.

The bill (S. 1258) for the relief of the Rent-A-Car Co. was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Rent-A-Car Co., of Memphis, Tenn., the sum of $144.80, in full satisfaction of its claim against the United States for reimbursement of expenses incurred in repairing an automobile rented on November 14, 1933, by a special agent of the Department of Justice and damaged while being used by such person on official business: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

ALBERT PINA AFONSO Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is author-

ALBERT PINA AFONSO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1001) for the relief of Albert Pina Afonso, a minor, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, before the word "Massachusetts", to strike out "Doburn" and insert "Woburn", and on line 7 to strike out '$5,000" and insert "$3,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the legal guardian of Albert Pina Afonso, a minor, of Woburn, Mass., the sum of $3,000, in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States for damages sustained by the said Albert Pina Afonso as a result of being struck and injured by a United States mail truck in Woburn, Mass., on January 28, 1932: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HYMAN GINSBERG

The bill (H. R. 1430) for the relief of Hyman Ginsberg was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACK NELSON

The bill (H. R. 1836) for the relief of Jack Nelson, a minor, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

C. R. HENDERSON

The bill (H. R. 3090) for the relief of C. R. Henderson, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

A. C. WILLIAMS. ADMINISTRATOR OF ESTATE OF JULIA F. WILLIAMS.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 216) for the relief of A. C. Williams, administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 7, to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$1,000", so as to make the bill read:

make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to A. C. Williams, of Sentinel, Okla., administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams, the sum of $1,000 in full settlement of any and all claims against the Government on account of the death of his wife, Julia F. Williams, who died as a result of injuries received in an automobile collision with a truck owned by the Government and driven by Charles Cordell, agent and employee of the Government, in the service of the Works Progress Administration, near Socorro, N. Mex., on July 31, 1936: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstandsame shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES T. WISE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2079) for the relief of Charles T. Wise, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Charles T. Wise, former owner of three farms consisting of 304 acres of land, more or less, near Camp Knox in Hardin County, Ky., is, as such former owner, hereby authorized to bring such suit or suits as he may respectively desire to so do against the United States of America to recover damages, if any, for loss or losses which he may have sustained or suffered, as such owner, by reason of establishment, construction, or maintenance of Camp Knox in the State of Kentucky. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to hear consider determine and render judge. ferred upon the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to hear, consider, determine, and render judgments for the respective amounts of such damages, if any, as may be found to have been sustained or suffered by the said owner of said farms, with the same right of appeal as in other cases, and notwithstanding any lapse of time or statute of limitation: Provided, That such action will be brought within 1 year from the date that this act shall become effective.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. BROWN. I can explain the bill.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I should like to explain the bill.

Fort Knox was established in Kentucky and took in quite an expanse of territory. There were a number of landowners who were damaged very materially, as has been established in the courts. Nearly all of the landowners-I believe all, perhaps, except the particular individual here involved-had a bill passed authorizing them to institute suit in the Federal court at Louisville, so that the question of damages might be determined. That is all there is in the bill; it merely bestows the same right upon this man that has been bestowed upon 17 others. I think, some of whom have had their claims already tried.

In this case it is almost impossible for the Committee on Claims of the Senate to determine what the amount of damage is. It is pretty considerable, I know. So the policy heretofore adopted has been followed, of referring the case to the United States district court, and the United States district attorney will represent the Government. This property, an easement, I believe, rather than real estate, was taken without any condemnation proceedings at all. The bill merely gives this man a right to go to court, and the law department of the Government says he ought to have the right.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERBERT M. SNAPP

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we return to Calendar No. 180, Senate bill 1186, and I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1186) for the relief of Herbert M. Snapp, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 2, line 1, after the word "disability", to insert "to his left eye", so as to make the bill

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of sections 15 to 20, both inclusive, of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended and as limited by the act of February 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 351), the United States Employees' Compensation Commission be, and the same is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and consider, when filed, the claim of Herbert M. Snapp, of Desha Route, Batesville, Ark., for disability to his left eye alleged to have been incurred by him on April 3, 1937, while employed as a foreman at Sylamore Camp F-8, Ozark National Forest, Calico Rock, Ark.: Provided, That claim hereunder shall be filed within 6 months after the approval of this act: Provided further, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the enactment of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN WEISENBERG

The bill (H. R. 767) for the relief of Benjamin Weisenberg was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE FRANCIS BURKE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 473) for the relief of George Francis Burke, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the

That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs be, and he is hereby, That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to consider, and authorized to grant, the application of George Francis Burke (Army serial No. 763094), formerly a second lieutenant, United States Army, for such of the benefits under the act approved May 24, 1928, as amended, entitled "An act making eligible for retirement, under certain conditions, officers and former officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States, other than officers of the Regular Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in the service of the United States during the World War," as the said George Francis Burke may be entitled to: Provided, That the application of the said George Francis Burke shall be filed with the Veterans' Administration within 6 months from the date of the approval of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 795) to provide for the education of all types of physically handicapped children, to make an appropriation of money therefor, and to regulate its expenditure was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I merely wish to make the statement that the report was just filed yesterday and is not yet in the files of Senators.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over. That completes the calendar.

EXTENSION OF FACILITIES OF UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first bill passed over was Order of Business 128, which was passed to the end of the calendar. The bill will be stated by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. Senate bill 1464, to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States, an identical bill being Order of Business 151, with the same title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the distinguished occupant of the chair if this bill came from his committee?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green] was on the subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations having the bill in charge.

Mr. GREEN. What is the question? Mr. KING. I was asking the Presiding Officer whether the bill came from his committee. I should be glad to hear an explanation of the bill by the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, the bill extends the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to a limited extent to active officers in the Foreign Service of the United States, and to members of their families. The reason for the change in the existing law is that because of climatic conditions it often happens that our foreign diplomats, or members of their families, go to stations which are un-healthful, and because of the altitude, or because of the temperature, or because of the degree of moisture, they contract ailments, which it seems fair for the United States Government to heal or remedy. It is for that purpose, in rather carefully guarded phraseology, the services of the United States Public Health Service are made available for these persons. It is in line with similar services which are rendered some dozen other classes of employees of the United States Government.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GREEN. I yield. Mr. KING. Would the bill, if it became a law, compel the Federal Government to furnish public health service in every part of the world where it has representatives?

Mr. GREEN. No; it does not require any additional public health service. They can only avail themselves of the public health service where it is otherwise established.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

BILL PASSED OVER

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 163, Senate bill 43.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the Chair state the present situation. Three bills were passed over and placed at the foot of the calendar. One has just been taken up and disposed of. Two other bills remain at the foot of the calendar. The clerk will state the first of those two bills.

The CHIEF CLERK. Calendar No. 133, Senate bill 902, to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the temporary detail of United States employees, possessing special qualifications, to governments of American republics and the Philippines, and for other purposes," approved May 25, 1938. Calendar No. 202, House bill 3134, is a similar bill.

Mr. GREEN. I may state for information, Mr. President, that the Senate bill is substantially the same as the House bill, there being only changes in phraseology. The committee thought it would be better to pass the Senate bill rather than try to amend the House bill, because in the 31/2-page House bill there are some 13 amendments which would have to be enumerated. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the substitution of the Senate bill for the House bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. I ask that the bill be passed over. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed

MEMORIAL TO THE BUILDERS OF THE PANAMA CANAL

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is one other bill at the foot of the calendar, which was previously passed over, being Calendar No. 163, Senate bill 43.

Mr. DANAHER rose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Connecticut wish to address the Chair?

Mr. DANAHER. I am interested in Calendar No. 133. Calendar 163, Senate bill 43, is the next bill for consideration. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of Senate bill 43?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 43) to authorize the erection within the Canal Zone of a suitable memorial to the builders of the Panama Canal and others whose distinguished services merit recognition by the Congress, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first committee amendment, on page 2, line 2, has heretofore been agreed to. The next amendment will be stated.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 10, after the words "by the", to strike out "Congress." and to insert "Congress:".

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 10, to insert a new subsection, as follows:

(b) A hall to be used as a historical museum in which to display documents, books, pictures, and articles of historical interest in connection with the Canal.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized, through such person or persons as he may designate, to select an appropriate site within the Canal Zone and to cause to be erected thereon a suitable memorial auditorium in commemoration of the services rendered to the United States by all those who aided in the successful completion of the Panama Canal.

SEC. 2. The memorial auditorium shall be designated as the Panama Canal Memorial Auditorium. It shall contain—

(a) A suitable hall of honor as a repository of portraits, tablets, busts, and similar individual memorials to those who rendered signally distinguished service in the construction of the Canal on the Canal Zone prior to July 12, 1920: Provided, That no person shall be honored by an individual memorial in such hall except pursuant to authorization by the Congress;

(b) A hall to be used as a historical museum in which to display documents, books, pictures, and articles of historical interest in connection with the Canal.

SEC. 3. The design and location of such memorial and the plan for the display and the plan for the display

SEC. 3. The design and location of such memorial and the plan for the development of the site shall be submitted to the Commission of Fine Arts for advisory assistance.

SEC. 4. An individual memorial to Maj. Gen. William L. Sibert is hereby authorized to be installed in the hall of honor of the Panama Canal Memorial Auditorium in recognition by the Congress of his signally distinguished services rendered to the United States in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the President is authorized to provide a suitable memorial as a part of the completion of the auditorium

SEC. 5. The sum of $800,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the design and construction of the memorial auditorium herein authorized

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, does that complete the the calendar?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The calendar is now completed.

APPORTIONMENT OF SUGAR CROP

Mr. ELLENDER. I now move that the Senate proceed to consider Senate bill 69, relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is a debatable question, is it not? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question of taking up the bill is not debatable in the morning hour.

Mr. McCARRAN. Is the discussion limited to 5 minutes under the rule?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the bill is taken up on motion, the 5-minute limitation does not apply.

Mr. McCARRAN. Then I understand the pending motion is to take up the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Louisiana is that the Senate proceed to consider the bill. That motion is not debatable. If the bill is taken up the subject of the bill is debatable, of course.

Mr. McCARRAN. The motion to take up is not debatable. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is not debatable.

The question is on the motion of the Senator from Louisiana to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 69.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, after the morning hour, after the arrival of 2 o'clock, the question would be debatable? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion to take up the bill would be debatable after 2 o'clock.

Mr. McCARRAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Donahey	Lewis	Schwartz
Andrews	Downey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Ashurst	Ellender	Logan	Sheppard
Austin	Frazier	Lucas	Shipstead
Bailey	George	Lundeen	Smathers
Bankhead	Gerry	McCarran	Smith
Barkley	Gibson	McKellar	Stewart
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Taft
Bone	Glass	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Green	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Bridges	Guffey	Miller	Tobey
Brown	Gurney	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Burke	Hatch	Neely	Tydings
Byrd	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Capper	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Caraway	Holman	Overton	Walsh
Chavez	Hughes	Pepper	Wheeler
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman	White
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe	Wiley
Connally	King	Reed	and the firm section
Danaher	La Follette	Reynolds
Davis	Lee	Russell

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). Ninety-three Senators have answered to their names. quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the motion of the junior. Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 69. The question is not debatable.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I move that the motion of the junior Senator from Louisana be laid on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER].

The motion was rejected.

Mr. McCARRAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. VANDENBERG. Has any business intervened to justify another quorum call?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; there was a vote on the motion to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER]. The clerk will call the roll,

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Donahey	Lewis	Schwartz
Andrews	Downey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Ashurst	Ellender	Logan	Sheppard
Austin	Frazier	Lucas	Shipstead
Bailey	George	Lundeen	Smathers
Bankhead	Gerry	McCarran	Smith
Barkley	Gibson	McKellar	Stewart
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Taft
Bone	Glass	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Green	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Bridges	Guffey	Miller	Tobey
Brown	Gurney	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Burke	Hatch	Neely	Tydings
Byrd	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Herring	Nye	Van Nuys
Capper	Hill	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Caraway	Holman	Overton	Walsh
Chavez	Hughes	Pepper	Wheeler
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman	White
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe	Wiley
Connally	King	Reed
Danaher	La Follette	Reynolds
Davis	Lee	Russell

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EL-LENDER] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 69.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I do not intend to debate the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Parliamentarian advises the Chair, and the Chair thinks the Senate ought to understand the fact, that this motion was made prior to 2 o'clock, and therefore it is not debatable. The Chair is not familiar with the rule concerning a situation of that kind.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, much as I should like to do so, I cannot yield to the judgment of the Chair in that

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is only repeating the statement made to him by the Parliamentarian, who has called the Chair's attention to the rule on the subject.

Mr. McNARY. Yes; I am familiar with the rule.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Senator will permit the Chair to do so, he will read the rule.

Mr. McNARY. I thank the Chair. I have read it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The second paragraph of rule VIII reads:

All motions made before 2 o'clock to proceed to the consideration of any matter shall be determined without debate.

Mr. McNARY. Yes, Mr. President; but that is the point I want to make. The rule has been construed at various times to mean that before 2 o'clock a motion made is not debatable; but if the motion is made before 2 o'clock, and a roll call intervenes, as it has today, and in the meantime the hour of 2 o'clock arrives, the motion is debatable. There is a difference between the two situations.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, for the benefit of the Senate in the future I desire to state that I am inclined to agree that the spirit of the rule intended that up to 2 o'clock a motion of this sort made before 2 o'clock could not be debated; but if it is not disposed of by 2 o'clock I see no logical reason why it would not be as much debatable after that time as if it had been made after 2 o'clock.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, that is the view I take. That is the statement I have made, and it has been so ruled by some Presiding Officers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to say that this is the first time he has had occasion to rule on the matter. The Parliamentarian tells the Chair that the precedents are the other way. The Chair would be disposed to rule as the Senator from Oregon and the Senator from Kentucky have stated, but the Parliamentarian says the precedents are the other way.

The Senate makes many precedents. As the Senator from Oregon knows, if the Senate wants to do something today, it does it. If it wants to reverse its action next week, it does so. So it is for the Senate now to say whether or not it will consider the bill; and the first question is, Will the Senate take up the bill for consideration? The next question is. Is the motion debatable? Since it is now after 2 o'clock, the Chair thinks it is.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think the Chair is correct in his ruling; but I am not going to debate the motion. I am very glad to have the Chair's ruling. As I stated, it is quite in accord with my own view. I will state to the Senator who has moved to take up the bill that I realize that some action must be taken shortly to satisfy the cane growers of Mississippi and Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. Of Louisiana and Florida.

Mr. McNARY. I also realize that both the senior Senator and the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN and Mr. McCarran] are entitled to a little time for a study of this proposal. It meets a situation in their State, in which there has been no program of allotment. Consequently, they must adjust themselves to meet the situation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point so that I may interrupt him? In view of the fact that a number of amendments have been offered to the

Mr. McNARY. In view of these two situations, and the fact that we have no business regularly set for Monday, I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 69 be made the special order for Monday next at 12 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in that connection I desire to say that it is proposed to adjourn, not to recess, until Monday; and the proposal of the Senator from Oregon will interfere with the morning hour.

Mr. McNARY. Then, Mr. President, I modify the unanimous-consent request, and request that the bill be made a special order for 2 o'clock on Monday, so that we may have the privilege of the routine morning business and hour.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if I may interrupt the able Senator from Oregon, I believe some arrangement may be made as a result of conferences that have been going on for some time on the floor of the Senate. I believe that the two Senators from Nevada will offer an amendment that will solve the problem which is now before us; at least, we hope so. We hope the amendment may be adopted by the Senate, and may go forward.

In that connection, I ask the Senator to yield to me for just a moment longer in order that I may say that the State represented by the senior Senator from Nevada and the junior Senator from Nevada is confronted with an unusual condition. For many years—nearly half a century, if I may say so—we have been entirely dependent upon one predominant crop. That predominant crop has been what the westerner knows as alfalfa. We now find ourselves confronted with what is known as an alfalfa blight, as a result of which the crop is completely wiped out. I may say that the Federal Government is involved in this matter. I apologize for taking the time of the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. That is perfectly all right.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Federal Government has invested large sums of money in reclamation projects. The Newlands reclamation project, which the junior Senator from Nevada visited only a few weeks ago, finds itself confronted with the prospect of its entire alfalfa crop being wiped out. The alfalfa blight has taken it. The reclamationists there are no longer able to carry the burden of the pro rata of the debt they owe from year to year. So we are now confronted with this situation, that we must convert the land that was heretofore adapted for alfalfa into beet culture.

With that in mind, the two Senators from Nevada, in cooperation with the Senator from Louisiana and other Senators, have tried to work out an amendment which we believe will solve the entire problem if the Senate will accept it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. McCARRAN. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. Is the amendment ready to be offered, if the bill shall be taken up for consideration, so that it may be disposed of?

Mr. McCARRAN. That is our view. We are working toward that end, and we hope we may get it through.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is there any need for delay on a vote to take up the bill for consideration now?

Mr. McCARRAN. I should like to have the senior Senator from Nevada, who is a parliamentarian, handle that part of the matter.

Mr. BARKLEY. The motion pending is a motion to proceed to consider the bill.

Mr. McNARY. No, Mr. President; the pending question is the request of the Senator from Oregon for a unanimousconsent agreement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the Senator from Oregon has asked unanimous consent that on Monday next at 2 o'clock the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 69.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, with reference to the particular bill before us, I do not know the relative merits as between the various sections producing sugar; but I am informed that if any action is to be taken which will be effective it ought to be taken now, and not next week.

Because of certain limitations which have been referred to, if it is possible that the same consideration can be given to the measure now, and if there is an emergency which demands immediate consideration of the measure, the bill should not go over until next Monday.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield for just a question?

Mr. McNARY. Just a moment, Mr. President. I have conferred with the Senator from Mississippi and the Senator from Louisiana and they are satisfied that the bill go over until Monday. I am merely proposing this in order to get some definite understanding. If the Senators have come to an agreement, I am very happy to withdraw my request.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, it is my understanding that an agreement has been reached, and the Senators from Nevada are about to offer a modification of the pending amendment, which I understand will solve the problem.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have accomplished my purpose in rising and making my proposal. In view of the statement of the Senator, I withdraw the proposal.

Mr. NORRIS. A parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. NORRIS. Has the Chair held that a motion made prior to 2 o'clock and which is not disposed of by 2 o'clock then becomes debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair's understanding is that it is debatable.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I did not hear the Chair when that ruling was made-although the question was raised by the Senator from Oregon-and, of course, it is too late now to take the question up; but I did not want the decision to pass unchallenged. I wish briefly to state that in my opinion the decision of the Chair completely nullifies the rule. No parliamentarian hereafter, if that rule is to be followed, will ever be prevented from making a motion to take up a certain bill or resolution and have it debatable, even if the motion be made before 2 o'clock. All he will have to do will be to make points of order, appeal from the decision of the Chair, and suggest the absence of a quorum, and he can easily, alone and unassisted, carry the matter over until 2 o'clock, and then the debate will be unlimited. I merely want to enter my protest against the decision, so that anyone looking the question up in the future may see that at least one Senator did not agree with the decision.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Senator from Nebraska moved during the morning hour that the Senate consider a bill, it certainly would be the philosophy of the rules, as the Chair understands them, that when the morning hour closed at 2 o'clock the Senator could immediately move to take up the same bill. He certainly would have that right. That is the only thing the Chair has decided. The Senator who had the floor, who was discussing the matter at the hour of 2 o'clock, then made a motion to take up Senate bill 69. The Senator from Oregon asked unanimous consent that it go over until Monday. That is the Chair's understanding of the parliamentary situation.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me again submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. NORRIS. Was the motion to proceed to consider the bill made prior to 2 o'clock?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It was made prior to 2 o'clock, and when the hour of 2 o'clock arrived, the Senator discussing the bill still had the floor and had a right to renew the motion. He had just as much right to make the motion then as any other Senator would have a right to move to take up another bill. Whoever gets the floor now, under the parliamentary situation, is entitled to move to take up a bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may make a statement on behalf of the junior Senator from Nevada and myself, since this matter has been discussed ad libitum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, for 4 or 5 months the junior Senator from Nevada and myself have been discussing the law relating to this matter with the department of the Government concerned in the administration of the law. While the act, we concluded, might have permitted an allocation of a part of the 30,000 acres of unallocated land in Nevada, the administration decided that it could not do so. Recently they agreed with us that it was quite necessary that the farmers in Nevada should plant some of the alfalfa land, particularly on the Government project there, to sugar beets, but they could not do it. Unless an amendment such as I intend to present on behalf of the junior Senator from Nevada and myself shall be agreed to, the situation in Nevada will be hopeless, because our people are not producers of sugar beets. They are forced to become producers of sugar beets by reason of the alfalfa blight, and are ordered to plow the alfalfa under for 3 years. I understand the amendment will be agreeable to the Senator from Colorado, and I understand also that the amendment of the Senator from Colorado, as amended by this amendment, will be agreeable to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. That is correct.

Mr. PITTMAN. I therefore offer the amendment.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President-

Mr. McNARY. A point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator from Nevada has offered an amendment. The proper course would be to have it reported by the clerk before any other Senator is recognized.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The parliamentarian advises the Chair that the motion of the Senator from Louisiana is pending. It was made before the hour of 2 o'clock arrived. If it passes over, the Chair understands the Senator from Nebraska to contend that it would not be pending. If it was not pending after 2 o'clock, then any Senator rising in his place would have a right to make a motion.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a motion to take up a bill during the morning hour, up to 2 o'clock, is not debatable.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the motion is not disposed of by the hour of 2 o'clock, I do not understand that it automatically dies unless there is a special order pending in the Senate which would take precedence over it. The question the Chair passed on a while ago was whether a motion made during the 2-hour morning period becomes debatable if not disposed of at 2 o'clock, and the Chair held that it would be debatable after 2 o'clock. So my contention is that the motion made prior to 2 o'clock, which was not then debatable, is still pending at the hour of 2 o'clock unless there is some prior order which would substitute itself for it in precedence.

The VICE PRESIDENT. According to the Senator from Nebraska, and according to the parliamentarian, that is not the rule of the Senate.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Nebraska merely made an objection to a previous ruling of the Chair, that after 2 o'clock it becomes debatable, on the ground that anyone could postpone action on a motion made prior to 2 o'clock and thereby defeat the philosophy of the rule. That may be debatable.

But the point now is, regardless of whether it is debatable or not debatable, whether a motion made prior to 2 o'clock is the pending business when the hour of 2 o'clock arrives.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair passed on that. The Senator from Nebraska contends that it does not go over and become the pending business. If it does go over and becomes the pending business, it certainly is debatable.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, let me say just a few words reinforcing what has been said by the Senator from Kentucky. It is the view of the Senator from Texas that under the rule if a motion is made prior to 2 o'clock, it is not debatable at that time, but if the hour of 2 o'clock arrives before the Senate has taken any action to displace the matter, it continues to pend. If the Senate entertains jurisdiction at any time of a motion to take up a bill, or anything else, the philosophy of all parliamentary rules is that the Senate continues to consider that matter until under the rules it is displaced.

What happened to the motion? It was pending at 2 o'clock. The hour of 2 o'clock arrived and we passed over into the following period; no other business was taken up; there was no motion to take up any other business. Then why, under the philosophy of the rule, is not the motion to take up the bill still pending, and if it is pending, why is it not debatable just as any other matter pending before the Senate?

I have not consulted the precedents; I have not read all the rulings; but it seems to me that basically the philosophy of parliamentary procedure would suggest that the motion pending at 2 o'clock and not being displaced would be debatable. I agree that under the rules, if there is a special order when the hour of 2 o'clock is reached, or if the leader gets the floor and moves to proceed to some other matter, the proceedings under way at 2 o'clock would be displaced; but that has not occurred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair say just a word with reference to the parliamentary situation. If a motion is under consideration during the morning hour and the hour of 2 o'clock arrives and the Senate still has before it that motion which is not debatable, the query arises, when the hour of 2 o'clock arrives, is that motion still pending? The Senator from Nebraska claims it is not; but it appears to the Chair that the sound reasoning would be that the motion would be pending, especially if the Senator is recognized and moves that the bill be taken up for consideration.

In the ordinary control of the Senate it might be said that the Chair would not recognize the Senator from Louisiana, but would recognize the leader, because the leader might want to have another bill taken up. That would be the procedure in ordinary control. It is the theory of a parliamentary body that those in charge, the leadership, should have the right of control. If the rule should be that the Chair was obliged to recognize a Senator whose bill was pending at 2 o'clock, that would, as the Senator from Nebraska has stated, take away from the leadership the right to guide and control with respect to what particular legislation should be considered. But the Chair has now recognized the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President-

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. ELLENDER. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 69.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana has moved that the Senate proceed to consider Senate bill 69. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I could take time on the motion itself, because it is now debatable.

Mr. President, I do not think the Chair quite correctly stated my position with respect to the parliamentary situation. I am not so particularly interested in the motion now under discussion. I am interested only because the decision and action of the Senate and the Presiding Officer may have a very important bearing at some time when it is of importance. I care nothing about this particular case; but my position is that a motion made before 2 o'clock to take up a bill is not debatable. If the motion is carried and the question raised extends beyond 2 o'clock, it can be debated, and it becomes then the unfinished business of the Senate, and discussion of it may continue for weeks.

There was only one point with respect to which I think the Chair was wrong. When the motion was made, and properly made, before 2 o'clock, under the rules of the Senate, it was not debatable; but suggestions of no quorum were made, and appeals from rulings could have been made-none were made, but they could have been made-appeals from the decision of the Chair, or motions to adjourn could have been made: all sorts of dilatory tactics could have been indulged in. It would be a very easy matter, for an ordinary parliamentarian to take up the time until after 2 o'clock.

It seems to me that, if he can, the Chair ought to give effect to the rule, rather than to destroy it by his ruling. The decision of the Chair for practical purposes nullifies the rule entirely, and it is no longer of any importance. If any Senator wants to take advantage of the ordinary procedure under parliamentary law and delay action until 2 o'clock, he accomplishes his purpose, and thereby practically nullifies the rule.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may I make an observa-tion at that point? The philosophy of the rule against the debatability of a motion to take up a bill during the 2-hour period does not relate particularly to that bill, but is for the purpose of protecting other legislation which might be taken up during the 2-hour period. That is also the philosophy of the 5-minute rule of debate, so that the whole 2-hour period may not be taken up in interminable debate on one measure or on a number of measures.

If a bill is the unfinished order of the Senate, such as the bill we disposed of yesterday, the reorganization measure was the unfinished business of the Senate, when the hour of 2 o'clock arrives any day during the discussion, automatically that bill is the unfinished business, and is continued as the unfinished business.

But if there is no unfinished business on the calendar of the Senate, if there is no special order, if there is nothing which takes priority at the hour of 2 o'clock, an undisposedof motion to take up a bill during the 2-hour period goes over into the remaining period for that session, and is still subject to consideration. The 5-minute rule does not apply in the consideration of the bill after 2 o'clock. It is subject to the ordinary rules of debate of the Senate. So it seems to me that in the consideration of a bill taken up during the 2-hour period, and which goes over into the next period, the 5-minute rule does not apply, but the bill is subject to unlimited debate. The same philosophy would apply to the debatability of a motion to take it up after 2 o'clock, in the same relation as the limitation of debate during the 2-hour period and its unlimited condition after 2 o'clock.

The object of all these limitations during the 2-hour period is to protect other legislation and make it possible to consider other bills. It has no relationship particularly to the bill under consideration, except that the 2-hour period may be devoted to other bills besides the one that is up for consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. May the Chair ask the Senator from Kentucky a question? The Chair understands the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] to claim, and it seems that the Chair with good philosophy can say, that at the end of the 2 hours the bill under consideration has no right of preference. The Senator made the argument that it would come up with a right of preference.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would not come up automatically if there were something pending.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair means if there is nothing pending before the Senate.

Mr. BARKLEY. If there is nothing pending before the Senate when the hour of 2 o'clock arrives, if there is not anything that would be entitled to priority or preference, the bill might be taken up at the hour of 2 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is nothing with a right of priority.

Mr. BARKLEY. If there is nothing with a right of priority it seems to me that the motion made during the 2-hour period extends beyond 2 o'clock. The only question raised by the Senator from Nebraska was whether, the motion so continuing, it is subject to debate. He did not make the point that originally it went over for action at 2 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky says that when a motion is made during the morning hour and continues until 2 o'clock it then automatically comes up. The Senator from Nebraska says it does not. There is a difference of viewpoint.

Mr. NORRIS. I conceive that if there is unfinished business pending—

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is no unfinished business pending.

Mr. NORRIS. In the present instance there is no unfinished business. At the hour of 2 o'clock, if the motion is voted on, and the bill is taken up, it comes on just like any other bill. I call the attention of the present Presiding Officer to the fact that this very question was raised a year or two ago on a motion made by me, and although the motion was voted on prior to 2 o'clock—there being no unfinished business, however—we paid no attention to the hour of 2 o'clock being reached. There is nothing to interfere at 2 o'clock. It is just the same as if there were no hour of 2 o'clock because there is no order that supersedes what the Senate is doing.

Mr. BARKLEY. In a situation such as that, when there is debate on a bill, if it has been taken up during the 2-hour period, debate is limited to 5 minutes.

Mr. NORRIS. No, it is not limited.

Mr. BARKLEY. Within the 2-hour period.

Mr. NORRIS. No; there is no limitation on the time of speaking. We are not calling the calendar.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that; but we do have a 5-minute limitation.

Mr. NORRIS. We do have a 5-minute limitation when we are proceeding with a call of the calendar.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; when we are considering the cal-

Mr. NORRIS. But that has no application, as I see it, to a question of this kind. If a bill were taken up during the morning hour on motion, a limitation of debate would not apply at all.

Mr. BARKLEY. The same 2 hours might be consumed in debate on the bill itself as would be consumed, under the interpretation of the Chair, on the motion to take it up.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; we might continue the debate until 2 o'clock, and then the bill would be laid aside. But here is a case where nothing else is pending. The morning business has been completed. Two o'clock has not yet arrived. A motion is made to take up a bill for consideration. It is conceded that that motion is not debatable.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true. If a bill is taken up on the call of the calendar during the 2-hour period, which is a part of the morning hour business, then the debate on the bill taken up on the call of the calendar before the morning hour ends would be limited to 5 minutes.

Mr. NORRIS. Suppose someone objects after a motion is made to take up a bill and it is taken up on that motion; then the 5-minute limitation of debate does not apply at all.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; it does not apply at all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair make known his views and what he is going to rule in the future when he is in the chair.

When the morning hour is ended no Senator, by virtue of his action during the preceding 2 hours, should have an advantage of any other Senator in the Chamber. That means that the leadership of the Senate will be recognized at the end of the 2 hours to make a motion to take up whatever they want to take up, and that no Senator, by virtue of having made a motion during the morning hour, shall have an advantage, such as we find now exists with reference to the Senator from Louisiana.

The Chair has recognized the Senator from Louisiana, and is going to do so now, but in the future there will be no advantage taken by any Senator by virtue of the fact that he was recognized 5 minutes prior or 2 minutes prior to 2 o'clock, and then, as a result of action on his motion, his bill would be pending. That, it seems to the Chair, would be taking advantage of the other Senators, and especially of the leadership of the Senate.

The Chair recognizes the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I suggest that my motion to take up the bill be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the motion of the Senator from Louisiana.

The Legislative Clerk. It is moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 169, Senate bill 69, relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Louisiana to take up the bill for consideration.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 69) relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, it is not my purpose to speak at length on the pending bill. That is not necessary for the reason that the bill contains but one sentence, which reads as follows:

That in the administration of the Sugar Act of 1937, the proportionate share (expressed in terms of planted acreage) for any farm, as determined by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of section 302 of such act, of the quantity of the crop of sugar beets or sugarcane for the calendar years 1939 and 1940 required to be processed to enable the area in which such crop of sugar beets or sugarcane is grown to meet the quota (and provide a normal carry-over inventory) shall be so fixed or adjusted that the share of such crop for such farm shall be an amount not less than the amount of the share of the 1938 crop for such farm.

It will be observed that the object of the bill is simply to fix the minimum acreage for each sugar farm for 1939 and 1940 at not less than the amount allocated to such farm for the 1938 crops. With the Senate's kind indulgence, I am going to read the report of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry on the pending bill, for I believe it expresses in a few words the conditions that led me to introduce the bill. I quote:

When the bill was called up for discussion there was not available to the members of the committee a report from the Department of Agriculture, although the bill was submitted to the Department by the Committee on January 9, with the request that a report be furnished.

The author of the bill submitted to the committee that he understood that an adverse report would be filed by the Agriculture Department, but that he felt the said Department was sympathetic with the conditions that presently exist in the sugar-producing States. It was explained to the committee that the purpose of the bill is simply to have the Department of Agriculture fix or adjust the share of sugar acreage for each farm for the crop years 1939 and 1940 in an amount of not less than the amount that was allotted each farm for the 1938 crop.

each farm for the 1938 crop.

The author of the bill stated to the committee that in October 1937 a few months after the 1937 Sugar Act became law, the Department of Agriculture, acting through Mr. Hutson, came to Louisiana and discussed the sugar problem with the farmers of Louisiana at a called meeting, in order to determine the procedure to be followed in allocating sufficient acreage to all sugarcane farmers, in accord with the law. A formula was proposed, which met with some objection, but was finally accepted by those interested in growing sugarcane, and adopted by the Department. Under said formula a certain number of acres was allocated to each Louisiana sugarcane farm for producing its pro rata share of the sugar quota provided for under the bill. This same procedure was followed with reference to the Florida sugar producers.

reference to the Florida sugar producers.

Again, on October 6, 1938, the Department of Agriculture instructed Mr. Hutson to come to Louisiana and fix the sugarcane quota for 1939. At the meeting of Louisiana sugarcane farmers that was held it was represented to Mr. Hutson that over 90 percent of the sugarcane land for the crop year of 1939 had already been planted. All cane farmers had felt at the time that they would receive an acreage for 1939 equal to at least what was allotted to each of them in 1937 for the crop year of 1938. However, a new formula was drafted by the Department, which would necessitate a considerable reduction in acreage to all cane farmers except those having 30 acres of land or less adaptable to the cultivation of sugarcane. The new formula that was finally issued and that would affect the sugarcane farmers for the crop years of 1939 and 1940 calls for a reduction in sugarcane acreage ranging from 25 to 47 percent, with the possibility that the acreage cut might even be in excess of said 47 percent. The same regulations were prescribed excess of said 47 percent. The same regulations were prescribed by the Department for the Florida producers.

In view of the fact that sugarcane is usually planted in Louisiana and Florida once every 3 years, and since the life of the Sugar Act of 1937 is for a period of 3 years, it is felt that any acreage fixed for any farm for the first year of the existence of said act should be no less than that amount for the 2 succeeding years. In other words, cane farmers always plan on having about one-third of their allotted acreage each year in plant cane, one-third in first-year stubble, and the remaining one-third in second-year stubble. In fact, that crop balance is recommended by the Department of Agriculture officials who have made an intensive study of sugarcane fact, that crop balance is recommended by the Department of Agri-culture officials who have made an intensive study of sugarcane farming over the past few years and have contributed to a large extent to the present stability of the industry. Under the most recent regulations of the Department, a sugarcane farmer must take for 1939 a cut of not less than 25 percent of his 1938 allotted acreage, in order not to be penalized further in 1940. A farmer who takes no cut in 1939 will have to take a cut of at least 47 percent in 1940, and in all probability a greater amount than said 47 percent

The present bill, if enacted into law, will mean that all sugar farmers whose acreage allotment for the 1938 crop was fixed by the Department at a certain amount shall receive for each of the succeeding crop years of 1939 and 1940 an amount of acreage which shall be not less than that allotted them for the 1938 crop. The present bill does not provide for increases in sugarcane acreage over the 1938 crop—it merely provides that there shall be no decreases below the 1938 crop. It is felt that such a proposal is just and equitable, and therefore the committee recommends the passage of equitable, and therefore the committee recommends the passage of the bill. In view of the lateness of the season, it is the committee's opinion that the present bill should be enacted by the Congress within the next several weeks.

Mr. President, that is the story, and I do hope that the Senate will act favorably on the bill without further delay.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD in connection with my remarks an excerpt from a memorandum that I submitted some time ago to the President on the subject of sugar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?
There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

It was thought by all of us who fostered the 1937 Sugar Act that sufficient sugar would be permitted to enter this country so as to supply the demand and thereby cause the prices thereof to remain constant. The Sugar Division is empowered not only to care for the welfare of the consumer but also for that of the producer. Notwithstanding the fact that we had a surplus at the end of the last year of over 400,000 tons of sugar over and above consumption, the Department established a quota for the next year far in excess of our consumptive requirements, and in so doing caused the price of our consumptive requirements, and in so doing caused the price of raws to decline to the lowest figure in the history of sugar. As the result of such a policy Colonel Batista, of Cuba, visited 'his country in an effort to obtain a further differential for Cuba. His country in an effort to obtain a further differential for Cuba. His visit, together with statements attributed to him later, wherein he stated that an accord had been reached between his country and ours whereby the tariff on sugar would be reduced 15 points, resulted in a further decline of the sugar market.

What Colonel Batista, and what the sugar people of Louisiana and other sugar-producing States desire, is a fair price for sugar. When I say fair price I refer principally to raws. A comparison of the differential between raws and refined sugar over the past few years will show that the American consumers have benefited very little from the reduction in the price of raw sugar; what has happened is that the decline in raw-sugar prices has taken away from the American sugar producers the differential, and the refiners have pocketed most of the difference.

I took the Cuban tariff reduction matter up with Secretary of the American sugar producers the differential, and the refiners have pocketed most of the difference.

I took the Cuban tariff reduction matter up with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and his Sugar Division on several occasions, and later with Secretary of State Hull, and I pointed out to both of these officials that what Cuba desires and what the sugar producers of continental United States desire, as well as our insular possessions, is a little better price for their sugar, and that could be easily done by simply having the Department of Agriculture lower its sugar-requirements estimate so as to meet the actual demand of the trade. There is a provision in the law to the effect that if the Secretary should make the quota too low, and thereby cause the sugar price to go too high, he can immediately let the bars down and permit more sugar to enter the ccuntry. Why not have the Secretary of Agriculture exercise the authority granted him under the Sugar Act of 1937, and protect the producers of sugar? I am sure that there is ample authority in the law for him to do so. It is my honest conviction that if the State Department further tinkers with Cuba in respect to the sugar tariff, and attempts to further help Cuba and thereby further demoralize the sugar market of continental United States, the whole scheme of trade agreements may be severely attacked and probably defeated when it comes up for renewal next year. I hesitate to attempt to discuss this through memorandum, but I would like the opportunity of going over the proposition in person with you Mr. President.

In connection with the Cuban Trade Agreement that is now being considered should Cuba insist upon a further 15-cent

In connection with the Cuban Trade Agreement that is now eing considered, should Cuba insist upon a further 15-cent differential, why not have the Department to suggest a reduction of Cuba's quota, in an amount of say 200,000 tons, and let that quota be distributed among the continental producers. It strikes me very forcibly that continental United States should be permitted to produce a least 40 percent of our consumptive requirements, and, as far as I am concerned, I propose to work to that end as long as I am in the Senate. In the near future I would like to further discuss this phase of the question with with particular reference to Louisiana, I have introduced in the Senate a resolution and a bill, copies of which are hereto attached. Soon after the Sugar Act of 1937 became effective, the Department of Agriculture, acting through Mr. Hutson, came to Louisiana and established farm-acreage quotas for 1938. When those quotas were fixed the producers of sugarcane felt that they were being fixed for a period of 3 years, because, as you may know, sugarcane is generally planted once every 3 years in Louisiana. The acreage was agreed upon, and I may say that there was a decided cut in acreage to what was planted in the past as among a large number of growers. It was agreed that no farm should plant in excess of 60 percent of its available land that was suitable for cane culture, and a formula was written out for small and new growers. The majority of the producers were well satisfied with the determination made for 1938. On October 6, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture, acting through the same official, again came to Louisiana to fix the determination of acreage for the crop year of 1939. At the meeting it was pointed out that over 90 percent of to Louisiana to fix the determination of acreage for the crop year of 1939. At the meeting it was pointed out that over 90 percent of the sugarcane had already been planted for 1939; but notwithstanding that fact the Department decided that there should be a cut in Louisiana acreage from what was planted in 1938. That determination has caused considerable dissatisfaction among the growers and resulted in mass meetings being held throughout the sugarcane district. They are striving all they can to make both ends meet at this time, even in the face of much lower prices. The prices for raw sugar are the lowest in history, and the cost of producing sugar has increased 25 percent because of better wages and living quarters being extended to employees under Government regulations. Under such conditions as I have enumerated above an industry is being made to suffer unduly.

producing sugar has increased 25 percent because of better wages and living quarters being extended to employees under Government regulations. Under such conditions as I have enumerated above an industry is being made to suffer unduly.

My proposal, as will be noted in the attached bill, is simply to let matters remain as they are; that is, let the first determination made in 1937 for 1938 prevail and be the minimum quotas for 1939 and 1940, and not force the plowing up of many acres of sugarcane. If any farmer has produced more than the acreage allotted in 1937 for 1938, he of course should be penalized, but as to those farmers who in good faith planted their allotted acreage for 1938 and again for 1939 in accord with what they thought was allotted them, I do not believe they should be forced to destroy any of their sugarcane. I am hopeful that the Department will work out some plan, and I think it is feasible under the law, whereby no sugarcane acreage already planted, as well as the first- and second-year stools, will be destroyed.

I am informed that because of certain conditions such as drought, and so forth, the beet producers of the United States have been afforded a substantial increase in acreage. Notwithstanding the fact that on 931,000 acres of sugar beets, there was produced in 1938 a bumper crop of sugar, which yielded almost 200,000 tons of sugar in excess of the quota provided for the beet area, the Department increased the acreage to 1,030,000. By the same token, it seems to me that the Department could raise the estimated acreage needs of the Louisiana sugar producers so as not to disturb present acreage. True, we have exceeded our quota for 1938, but the Lord was good to us in that our sugar yields were beyond expectations. We have not had a storm in 11 years, nor a severe freeze, but either or both could strike us next year and reduce our yield to half of what it should be.

I believe the Department should take the above facts into consideration in establishing our 1939 quotas. We have had ou

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment previously proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG].

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 7, it is proposed to strike out the words "sugar beets or."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, in view of the amendments to be submitted by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], I should think that amendment ought to be withdrawn. Am I not correct in that assumption?

Mr. VANDENBERG. No: I think not, Mr. President. I think that amendment still maintains its right in that portion of the bill, and I think we are agreed on it.

Mr. ELLENDER. Very well. I desire to assure the Senator from Michigan that it is not my desire to change the status of the sugar-beet producers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill is still open to amend-

Mr. ADAMS. I send forward two amendments to the bill, which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the first amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. After line 13, it is proposed to insert:

SEC. 2. That section 201 of the Sugar Act of 1937 is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 201. The Secretary shall determine for each calendar year the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers in the continental United States; such determinations shall be made during the month of December in each year for the succeeding calendar year and at such other times during such calendar year as the Secretary may deem necessary to meet such requirements. In making such determinations the Secretary shall use as a basis the quantity of direct-consumption sugar distributed for consumption, as indicated by official statistics of the Department of Agriculture, during the 12-month period ending October 31 next preceding the calendar year for which the determination is being made, and shall make allowances for a deficiency or surplus in inventories of sugar, and changes in consumption, as computed from statistics published by agencies of the Federal Government with respect to inventories of sugar, population, and demand conditions."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President-

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I may suggest to the Senator from Nevada that his proposed amendment fits in with the other amendment I have sent to the desk, rather than the one which was just read.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will wait and offer my amendment to the Senator's amendment when it is stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado yield for a question?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. As the Senator from Colorado knows, during the past few years we have built up the sugarbeet industry in the Pacific Northwest to a much greater extent than ever before. At the time of the original act the industry in the State of Washington, for example, was not of particular importance. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Colorado whether or not there is anything in his amendment which would be detrimental to the sugarbeet industry in the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. ADAMS. In answer to the inquiry, I will say that the reverse is the situation. The occasion for the second amendment which I shall offer is in order that there may be an additional quota to cover the increased production of all sugar in Washington, Oregon, and the Northwest. So the amendments will be beneficial and not detrimental.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the first amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The second amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

SEC. 3. That section 202 of said act shall be amended to read as

"Sec. 202. Whenever a determination is made, pursuant to section 201, of the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers, the Secretary shall establish quotas or revise existing

"(a) For domestic sugar-producing areas by prorating among such areas 60 percent of such amount of sugar (but not less than 3,715,000 short tons) on the following basis:

Area and percent 44. 72 12. 31 23. 25 Mainland cane sugar____ Hawaii Puerto Rico _ 19.48 Virgin Islands _____

"(b) For foreign countries, and the commonwealth of the Philippine Islands, by prorating 40 percent of such amount of sugar (except, if such amount of sugar is less than 6,682,670 short tons, the excess of such amount over 3,715,000 short tons) on the following

Area and percent

Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands_____ -- 64.41 Foreign countries other than Cuba. . 89

"In no case shall the quota for the commonwealth of the Philip-pine Islands be less than the duty-free quota now established by pine Islands be less than the duty-free quota now established by the provisions of the Philippine Independence Act.

"The quota for foreign countries other than Cuba shall be prorated among such countries on the basis of the division of the quota for such countries made in General Sugar Quota Regulations, series 4, No. 1, issued December 12, 1936, pursuant to the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, on behalf of my colleague [Mr. McCarran] and myself, I offer the following amendment to the second amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado. After "Virgin Islands, 0.24" insert:

Provided, That of the increased acreage of sugar production provided for by increased domestic-produced sugar, 6,000 acres shall be allotted to the State of Nevada.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I accept the amendment to my amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada, on behalf of himself and his colleague [Mr. McCarran], to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado. jection-

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I wish to be heard on that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. On the amendment to the amendment?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes. That is the pending question. Mr. President, I have no objection whatever to the increase of production allowed to Nevada. I realize that there ought to be one. It makes no difference whether one is driven into the production of sugar because his alfalfa crop fails, or because his corn crop, or wheat crop, or any other crop has failed year after year by reason of dry weather. So the people of Nevada are in exactly the same position and condition as the people of other parts of the West, where they are unable to produce what they formerly producedmostly corn-because of the drought which has afflicted that particular locality for 5 or 6 years in succession.

I call attention to two streams in the State of Nebraska, the North Loup and the Middle Loup, the valleys of which are as beautiful as any valleys anywhere in the United States. Those streams have a reputation, even in Europe, as steady streams. They are not large. They are quite small. The volume of water going down those streams is practically the same the year around. So there is no lack of water coming from the streams themselves.

During the past 2 or 3 years each of those streams had an irrigation project under the P. W. A.; and on each of them the irrigation project has been practically completed. In the case of one it has been entirely completed, and in the case of the other it is very nearly completed. The irrigation systems were put in by the P. W. A. with Government money. They are exceptionally well designed for the production of sugar beets. That fact was one of the main arguments advanced when the two projects were under consideration. They have now been allowed, but under the law they cannot obtain any quota of sugar beets.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. I think the Senator is in error in that statement. As a matter of fact, in my State there are areas similar to those described in the Senator's State. In my State a reclamation project is being constructed to cover land where beets are not now raised. There are other such areas; and I am quite convinced that increasing the quota to be supplied by the American production will make available a quota for the Senator's project, and for the projects which will be established in my State. I should not have offered the amendments if I had felt that those areas would not be included.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator misunderstands me. I am talking about the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada to the second amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. I understand. Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Am I to understand that the Senator feels that the new projects in Nebraska would not benefit from the amendments which are now pending?

Mr. NORRIS. No. Mr. ADAMS. The amendment of the Senator from Nevada to my second amendment was accepted by me because of the fact that the Senator from Nevada seemed to feel that the situation in Nevada was somewhat different. Personally I do not see the difference. I have the same basic feeling which I think the Senator from Nebraska has, that the correct approach to the whole problem is to find out how much sugar the American farmers can produce and give the remainder to the offshore or foreign producers. However, we have been compelled to accept the other theory as a matter of necessity and to work out quotas for all production sources. An effort is now being made to increase very modestly the existing quotas in order to take care of areas such as those being developed in Nebraska, those in Nevada, those in the Northwest, and some areas in Michigan. I have felt very confident that the increased tonnage, which amounts to some 300,000 tons, will be equitably distributed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, in making the list I hope the Senator will not omit the States of Colorado and

Mr. ADAMS. Of course, the Senator and I are not concerned about that matter!

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator from Colorado is through with his statement, I shall now proceed to answer it. The Senator, in saying that I am in error as to the quota-

Mr. ADAMS. I probably was in error in my understanding. I thought the Senator was saying that the Nebraska area would not benefit.

Mr. NORRIS. I am speaking of two particular projects. They will not be benefited. I think they are on all fours with Nevada. I am not objecting to Nevada's receiving an exemption. I am not objecting to the amendment which the Senator from Colorado has offered. I conferred with him before he offered the amendment. I am in entire harmony with it. What I am trying to convince the Senator is that the two projects which I have mentioned are on all fours with Nevada, and that they ought to be exempted. They ought to receive a new quota in the same way that Nevada would receive a new quota under the amendment to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. The Senator from Colorado, as I have tried to say before, thinks I am in error as to obtaining quotas for the two areas to which I have referred. I hope I am.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President-

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator again interrupts me, let me finish my statement and tell him why I feel that I

I have had the question up in writing. I have tried to obtain a quota. I have met with absolute refusal to give a quota for the two valleys in Nebraska which were made irrigable by Federal money. Yet the Federal Governmentat least, the sugar authorities of the Federal Governmentrefuse to allot a quota for those two valleys. The producers in the valleys would not be able to sell beets if they raised them under the irrigation provided. That is the point I am trying to make. I should like to see Nebraska come in under the shelter under which Nevada is coming in, which I think is all right. I agree with the Senator that the quota ought to be larger for the entire country.

Fundamentally, Mr. President, I think it is wrong to have a quota on an agricultural product of which we cannot produce enough to supply home consumption. That is true of all sugar, both cane and beet sugar. We cannot produce enough sugar to satisfy the American people. Why should we have a quota in a case of that kind which prevents the production in America of that agricultural product, in order that we may take in the quota of some foreign country? I understand that we have quotas for Ecuador, Brazil, and Cuba, and that we are not permitted to produce sugar in the United States if our production conflicts with the production of sugar from those other countries.

Mr. President, I cannot see any justice in that theory. Fundamentally, it seems to me it is absolutely wrong to deny to our people the right to produce a product when the consumption of such product is always greater than the amount we can possibly produce. It seems to me that that theory cannot be defended on any fundamental ground of reason or logic. I have stated how the theory applies in two instances, both of them small. The farmers in those two valleys desire to produce on at least 10,000 acres, but the quota could not be allowed them unless the quota in other parts of Nebraska were decreased. Of course, nobody could justly ask that that be done. That would not be fair.

Nevada has been producing alfalfa. On account of the blight she cannot now produce alfalfa, and she wants to produce sugar beets. That is all right. I am in entire agreement with that. I am not finding fault with that. Fundamentally, as I see it, there is no objection and can be no objection to that desire. But the two valleys in Nebraska to which I have referred formerly produced corn, just as Nevada formerly produced alfalfa. They cannot now produce corn. They have produced no corn to amount to anything for 5 years in succession. These valleys are as beautiful valleys as can be found outdoors. They were absolutely burned up every year. We now have irrigation in each of them. During the coming year we could produce enough beets, if we were allowed to do so, to make necessary the construction of another sugar factory. The men who know about the amount of sugar beets which can be processed in a beet-sugar factory have told me that there would be no question about the construction of another sugar factory if the farmers were allowed to produce beets. a product preeminently adapted to those valleys, on their own land.

I want to have those valleys taken in under the amendment which the Senator from Nevada has offered. I cannot offer an amendment to his amendment, because in a parliamentary sense it would be an amendment in the third degree; but I should like to have the amendment modified so that it would not only exempt Nevada but perhaps would be put in general language, so that it would exempt any locality, and permit it to produce beets and have a quota if it were prevented from producing other crops, no matter what might be the cause.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If I understand the act which is being amended, the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] on behalf of three or four of us who have been studying this problem, and the perfected amendment which has now been offered by the Senator from Nevada, the question which the Senator from Nebraska raises is actually not involved. The amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado increases the total quota for domestic sugarproducing areas. Under the law as it now stands, that increase may be apportioned among all sugar-producing areas upon the basis of their present production. The difficulty with respect to Nevada is that it has no production of sugar.

Mr. NORRIS. That is exactly the difficulty that exists in these two valleys. They have no production, and if a quota should be based on their former production, they would get nothing.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But that is not true with respect to Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; it is true with respect to these particular valleys.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. With respect to the valleys, but not with respect to the State of Nebraska, nor the State of Wyoming, nor the State of Colorado; and, if I understand the operation of this act, is it not a fact that the increase could be prorated among States like Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, and the other States of the Northwest, but Nevada probably would not be included, because it does not have a quota?

Mr. ADAMS. If I may answer the inquiry of the Senator, the situation, as I understand it, is this: The valleys in Nebraska in which the Senator is interested were denied a quota under the existing law for a very definite reason—that the purpose of the Sugar Act of 1937 was to maintain and preserve the situation as it was, and there were more acres devoted to sugar beets than the quota permitted, so that a new area could not be devoted to beet raising without denying to an existing sugar-beet field the right to produce. It was not by reason of the law, but was by reason of the fact. We are now trying to meet that very situation by increasing by some 200,000 acres the acreage which may be devoted to this purpose, which will take care of existing beet acreages and leave an adequate amount to take care of the new areas in Nebraska. In my judgment, it would have taken care of Nevada without the amendment.

A section of the Sugar Act itself, subsection (b) of section 301, says:

In determining the proportionate shares with respect to a farm, the Secretary may take into consideration the past production on the farm of sugar beets and sugarcane marketed (or processed) for the extraction of sugar or liquid sugar and the ability to produce such sugar beets or sugarcane, and the Secretary shall, insofar as practicable, protect the interests of new producers.

There is a specific direction in the existing law to protect the interests of new producers. The Secretary was unable to do it by reason of the limited quota. Now that we are increasing the quota, there will be available acreage and tonnage to cover the farms and the areas in which the Senator from Nebraska is interested.

Mr. NORRIS. Perhaps there will be, and perhaps there will not be. I am not finding fault with the refusal of the Sugar Bureau of the Agriculture Department to give a quota to these two valleys, because, as the Senator from Colorado says, in carrying out the quota there was not anything to do but to turn down their applications, which has been done; but the proposed amendment gives no assurance about an increase that will be sufficient to take care of places that do not have a quota because they have not produced beets in the

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. NORRIS. In just a moment. In my judgment, the small increase provided for by the amendment of the Senator from Colorado will not be sufficient to take care of new localities where no beets have been produced in the past.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, why may not the Senator from Colorado modify his own amendment by increasing the quota roundly?

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, I should be glad to have that done; and I think the Senator from Colorado would, too.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I am perfectly willing to accept an amendment that 10,000 acres shall be allotted to new areas in Nebraska, if that will make the Senator happier.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; it will.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state to the Senator from Nebraska that the Senator from Colorado has accepted the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada. Therefore an amendment by the Senator from Nebraska would be in order.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not know the Senator had accepted the amendment. I shall be very glad, if that is agreeable to the Senator from Colorado, to offer the amendment he has suggested, or to have him offer it. Will the Senator offer the amendment he has suggested as part of his amendment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado desire to offer the amendment?

Mr. ADAMS. I do.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, we have had a drought in North Dakota for the past 10 years. We raise a few sugar beets. We have only one beet-sugar factory. I have had letters from businessmen there who say there is no question, if our quota is raised, that we can produce enough sugar for three factories, at least, in the Red River Valley of North Dakota and Minnesota. If the quota is to be raised, we want it raised so that we may get in on it, too. We need a quota of 10,000 acres in North Dakota.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President-

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana. Mr. OVERTON. I have listened to the philosophy relating to this subject expressed by the Senator from Nebraska, and I find myself in thorough accord with his views.

Let me say to the Senator that what is being parcelled out under the quota system is the continental market of the United States. It is the sugar that is consumed here continentally. We take this continental market and place a restriction on production in the Senator's State, on production in my State, on production in Colorado, and in all other beet-producing or cane-producing States, in order that more sugar may be imported from foreign countries, or additional sugar produced in our Territories and insular possessions.

I think the solution is-and I invite the Senator's attention to it-to have a continental quota; not simply a beet quota for the continental production and a sugarcane quota for the continental production, but a continental quota; and that continental quota should be adequate to take care of all the production in the continental United States. Then, when we have taken care of the American farmer and American production, we can undertake to quota amongst foreign countries what we cannot produce domestically.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. OVERTON. Pardon me just one moment.

Sugar is an import crop. We are today restricted in our production to less than one-third of what we consume here continentally, in order that we may subserve the interests of foreign production. The philosophy underlying this whole legislation ought to be to permit the American farmer-and by "the American farmer" I mean the continental producer-to produce all that he can of this import crop for continental consumption, and then quota the residue in other sugar-producing areas.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska permit me to ask the Senator from Louisiana a question?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. KING. I am very much in sympathy with much of what the Senator from Louisiana has said; but in the consideration of this question I do not think we should exclude the rights of the people of Hawaii and Puerto Rico. They are a part of the United States-not continental United States, but they are under the flag. They are Territories; and it seems to me we should not discriminate against them.

Mr. OVERTON. I am in sympathy with what the Senator suggests. There is, however, this difference, to which I wish to call his attention: Of course Hawaii is a part of the United States, but Hawaii may produce for her own consumption all the sugar that she wishes to produce. There is no limitation upon her in that regard. Then she is given a quota of sugar for continental consumption.

What is being parceled out under existing sugar legislation is not the sugar that is consumed in Hawaii and Puerto Rico and in the Philippine Islands; it is not the Hawaiian market and the Puerto Rican market and the Philippine market; but what is being parceled out under this quota system is solely and exclusively the continental market for sugar here in the United States.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield? Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. KING. It seems to me that Hawaii and Puerto Rico ought to stand in the same situation as the State of Louisiana; they are under the flag and a part of the United States. Though Louisiana produces more sugar than she consumes, I have no right to urge that the production of Louisiana shall be reduced so that it may not flood beyond the State limits and be sold in other parts of the United States; and the same thing is true of Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Mr. OVERTON. That is very true.

Mr. KING. I am simply applying to Louisiana the same rule that I am applying to Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Mr. OVERTON. But the Senator realizes that under the Sugar Act Hawaii may consume what she produces, and what she consumes is not counted against her quota; but what Louisiana consumes is counted against her quota, and what the Senator's own State of Utah consumes of her own production is counted against her quota. So I think the satisfactory arrangement and proper readjustment of the whole sugar program would be first to authorize an adequate continental quota. We have to have a quota, because we have entered into a reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba which requires us, in effect, to have a quota in the United States; but that continental quota can be increased and ought to be increased so as to allow a proper expansion in Nevada, in Nebraska, in Utah, in Louisiana, and in Florida.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska yield for a moment?

Mr. NORRIS. I think I will yield the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I desire to ask a question of the Senator from Louisiana, or the Senator from Colorado, or the Senator from Nevada, or some other Senator.

Ordinarily, this character of legislation has been considered and reported upon by the Committee on Finance, of which I happen to be a member. For that reason, I may not know as much about this particular bill as I ought to know: but I am interested to inquire whether the bill is limited altogether in its effect to the readjustment of the domestic production of sugar among the various regions, or whether it has any effect upon any existing trade agreement which we have with Cuba or with any other country. Can the Senator from Louisiana answer that question?

Mr. OVERTON. It does not affect the trade agreement with Cuha

Mr. BARKLEY. Or any existing trade agreement?
Mr. OVERTON. Or any existing trade agreement; and if I am in error, some other Senator will correct me.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is a readjustment of the quotas which may be produced in the United States among the various types of sugar?

Mr. OVERTON. It is a readjustment of the quotas, both domestic and foreign.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am trying to find out whether it affects any foreign quotas which are subject to existing trade agreements.

Mr. OVERTON. This measure would not be in violation of any reciprocal-trade agreement.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, the amendment materially affects the sugar industry in Florida. As we all know, and as has just been stated, the sugar producers in the continental area of the United States are not allowed to produce a third of the sugar which the people in continental United States consume.

The Senate will recall that about a year ago, when a similar bill was before us, one of the Senators from Florida-I think it was the junior Senator [Mr. Pepper]-submitted an amendment providing that each State should be allowed to produce at least as much as its own people consumed. In the case of Florida, we are not allowed to produce one-half as much as the people of the State of Florida themselves

The State of Florida some 20 years ago began a process of draining the Everglades. The people of Florida, out of their own pockets, have paid in the neighborhood of twelve or 15 million dollars to drain that land for the production of sugarcane and winter vegetables. The land has been drained and made ready for the production of sugarcane and vegetables. The soil there which has been drained is anywhere from 2 to 8 feet deep. The Valley of the Nile is no comparison at all.

We are now asking that we be allowed to produce the cane for the production of which the Everglades were drained. Recently an order was issued which would in substance require the sugar producers in the Everglades to plow up about every fifth row of cane that has already been planted. The producers were operating under the quota for 3 years planting, which was provided for in 1937. Nineteen hundred and thirty-eight has passed, and we complied with the quota, but in order to do it we planted additional cane, and now, after it is planted, we are asked to plow it up.

The truth is that Cuba sends to this country 2,000,000 tons of sugar a year. We consume only 6,500,000 tons. The desire was to establish a reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba. If we examine the records of exports and imports we find that Cuba has exported to the United States about $176,000,000 worth of cane sugar and other exports, and the United States has exported to Cuba about half that amount. In sugar we find at least one agricultural product in this country which is "nonsurplus," at least one, and we are not allowed to raise it. It is the most ridiculous situation in which the American people could ever place themselves.

An American working on a cane-sugar plantation in the Everglades earns something like $2 a day. In Cuba the wage is 56 cents a day. The American who earns the $2 a day spends every cent of it in the United States, for American products. He spends more in 1 year than a hundred of those employed in Cuba producing sugar would spend.

There is no use attempting to explain this matter to our people in the Everglades. It cannot be explained to them. It cannot be explained to anyone. I think the time has come when America should look after her own people, and I hope that this measure is a start. But this is not the last bill that will be introduced on the subject.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a moment ago I made an inquiry of the senior Senator from Louisiana and other Senators interested in the bill as to whether the pending measure in any way affected any existing trade agreement between the United States and Cuba, or any other country. The Senator from Wyoming has been frank and kind enough to call my attention to the fact that it does. I do not know that it will make any difference in the vote of the Senate on the subject, but I do feel it my duty to correct an impression I received a while ago in response to my inquiry.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRISON in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. It is my understanding that the provision of the reciprocal-trade agreement between the United States and Cuba is that we cannot impose a quota on the importation of sugar from Cuba unless we also impose a quota on the production of sugar in the United States; but there is no provision in the treaty that the quota either on the importation of sugar from Cuba into the United States or the quota on the production in the United States shall be of any particular quantity. Therefore these quotas can be changed from time to time without a violation of the reciprocal-trade agreement.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish to call attention to the law. Section 202 provides:

Whenever a determination is made, pursuant to section 201 of the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers, the Secretary shall establish quotas, or revise existing quotas,

(a) For domestic sugar-producing areas by prorating among such eas 55.59 percent of such amount of sugar (but not less than 3,715,000 tons).

It allocates that 55.59 percent among domestic beet sugar, mainland cane sugar, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Mr. OVERTON. That is the Federal statute? Mr. BARKLEY. That is the Federal statute. Then in subdivision (b):

For foreign countries, and the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands, by prorating 44.41 percent.

In other words, under this law 55.59 percent are prorated among domestic producers, 44.41 percent among foreign pro-

The pending bill readjusts that ratio by substituting 60 for 55.59, as I understand it, and for foreign producers by substituting 40 for 44.41. So that it would, whether directly or indirectly, affect the amount of sugar which could be imported into the United States, and that, it seems to me, would affect our existing trade agreement with Cuba.

If the law itself is so flexible and adjustable that this could be done without in any way affecting it, I think that should be made plain.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, prior to the enactment of the Sugar Act of 1937, and while the same reciprocal-trade agreement between the United States and Cuba obtained as it does today, there was a somewhat different system of quotas than presently provided by the 1937 act. In 1937 we made some modifications in our quotas, and the purpose of this bill is to make other modifications.

The Cuban treaty does not specify any particular percentage of continental consumption to be produced in the United States and provides for no specific quantity of sugar to be imported from Cuba into our country.

imported from Cuba into our country.

Mr. BARKLEY. That was what I asked awhile ago—whether the bill really provided for a readjustment of these quotas among domestic producers, or whether it affected our trade agreement with Cuba especially.

I have no legislative interest in sugar; we do not produce it in my section of the country. I want all sugar producers in all parts of the United States to receive fair treatment. I have in no sense any prejudice against a fair distribution of the ability of the American people in the way of producing sugar or anything else. But we have authorized the President to enter into agreements through the State Department. Pursuant to the law which we have passed we have entered into such agreements, and I could not consistently support or vote for a measure which violated an agreement which we have authorized the President to make over a period of years by merely passing a law.

I feel that the Secretary of State has in good faith attempted to carry out the provisions of the law. He has attempted to do it in the interest of American business as a whole and American agriculture as a whole, and I think the results of these agreements, it can be demonstrated, have been on the whole beneficial to the American people.

I realize that different conditions may exist in some particular industry or some particular branch of agriculture; but, on the whole, I think these treaties have been wholesome and have been justified by results. I am not one who desires, by any indirection, to break down the effect of the treaties and the effect of the fine spirit which has been brought about in international trade by the attitude and the accomplishments of the Secretary of State.

If we do not any longer approve that policy, Congress ought in broad, open daylight, frankly, to repeal the law and pursue another course; but so long as we are following that course I myself do not feel—and I speak only in my individual capacity, I do not, of course, know that it will have any effect, and I am not expecting it to have any effect on the attitude of other Senators—that I can consistently support a measure which, through the back door or in any indirect way, undertakes to break down or, whether it undertakes deliberately to do it or not, whose effect would be to break down the continuity of this policy, so long as it is our policy, and so long as it is carried out in response to a mandate of the Congress of the United States.

As I stated, I would like to have the matter made clear, because the pending bill, which ordinarily would have come from the Finance Committee, was sidetracked or detoured around through the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, which is, of course, a committee very active and naturally interested in all agricultural matters. But we have had this matter up and hearings have been in progress at this session on the very subject of sugar, and we are trying to ascertain what effect the various bills and hearings will have on the subject.

If I am in error in my apprehension as to the effect of the bill. I should like to be set right.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I think I may assure the Senator that the bill does not violate any provision of the trade agreement between the United States and Cuba.

The extent of the provision of the reciprocal-trade agreement is that we cannot impose a quota on importations of sugar from Cuba into the United States so long as we do not impose quotas on the production of sugar in continental United States, so long as we have domestically a sugar regime analogous to the quota restrictions imposed on Cuba.

The Cuban reciprocal-trade agreement, as I interpret it, goes no further than to require a quota system for the United States as a prerequisite to imposing a quota upon Cuban importation.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Is it not true that these quotas are based on an act of Congress which by its own terms will expire shortly—I think in 1 year?

Mr. OVERTON. The expiration date is December 31, 1940. Mr. NORRIS. The act will then expire by its own terms. In other words, the act is limited to that time.

I wish to ask the Senator another question. I think the Senator from Louisiana had some participation in the negotiations with the Senators representing beet-sugar States which resulted in the act in question. The whole thing to a great extent was based upon production which existed at that time. Since that time various things have happened, such as some I have mentioned, and others which have been mentioned by the Senator from Nevada in his State, which caused the total quotas of that day to be exceeded. In other words, the sugar business has expanded, it has been growing, and the law that was passed at that time fixing a quota standard does not have a fair application to the conditions which now exist.

Mr. OVERTON. The Senator from Nebraska is correct in making that statement. I am in thorough sympathy with all the views he has expressed.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator is correct. As I understand, nothing in the pending measure will in any way conflict with the lawful agreements which have been made, even though we might want to get out from under them. There is no attempt to do so. No one has any idea of trying to disregard any lawful contract which our Government has made with any other government.

Mr. OVERTON. The Senator is a better lawyer than am I, and so is the Senator from Kentucky, but if the proposed statute would result in violating the reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba, it is possible that the agreement would prevail over the statute.

Mr. NORRIS. We have given Cuba a preferential right ever since she obtained her independence. I think that preferential right is fundamentally wrong. I do not believe it can be sustained by any logic. Years and years have passed since it was first urged that because the United States had been instrumental in Cuba obtaining her freedom we owed it to her to give her preferential treatment with respect to her principal product in order that she might get on her feet and start off right as a nation. I think all sympathized with that idea, even if they did not believe it was the right thing to do at the time. But as I see it, the time for that has long passed, and we are not now under any obligation to injure those of our people who are trying to produce this agricultural product by giving a preferential right of any kind to a foreign government. That is especially applicable to Cuba, which we have assisted in many ways for a number

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no desire to prolong this matter, and I agree in the main with the Senator from Nebraska. We have a right to do as we think best in behalf of our own country in respect to quotas and all the tariff questions which we are constantly discussing. The point I made was that I myself did not wish to support a bill which violated an agreement we had made with some other nation, especially with Cuba.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that if the Senator supports the bill he will not support a measure which violates a previous agreement. I would not want to do such a thing.

Mr. BARKLEY. No. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I wish to say, in conclusion, that after the debate which took place between myself and the Senator from Colorado about the amendment, it would have been entirely satisfactory to me, but after conferences with other Senators from the western part of the country, particularly those interested in beet production, I have decided not to offer any amendment. It would simply lead to other amendments applying perhaps to other States in the same degree that my amendment would apply to my own State. So I am not going to offer any amendment. I understand that the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado would, if enacted into law, increase the production of beet sugar and the beet-sugar quotas, and of course that would include my own State, and would result very likely in some quotas being given to those parts of the State where no beet sugar had been produced before, and where now farmers are exceptionally well qualified to produce beet sugar. Even though it should not result in what I think ought to come to those localities, I am going to content myself by not offering the amendment, and, so far as I am concerned, I shall not object to the bill.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I wish to ask the Senator from Nebraska if the committee amendment he referred to would have set aside the specific acreage in Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. That is all I desire to ask. I merely desire to add a word along the same line the Senator from Nebraska has just been discussing. We have in the State of New Mexico a situation which is similar to that which exists in Nebraska, except that in certain parts of New Mexico in years past the raising of sugar beets was a considerable industry, and a considerable acreage was devoted to that industry. For various reasons and at different times that acreage was abandoned, until now there is very little acreage planted to sugar beets in the State of New Mexico.

Since the present program has been in effect there has been a desire in several localities to go back, at least in part, to the acreage formerly planted in sugar beets. We have had a great deal of difficulty in obtaining the necessary allotment. It had been my intention also to offer an amendment setting aside specific acreage to my State. I am also assured by the Senator from Colorado that the bill as it is now offered will increase the acreage generally, and that probably the best opportunity we have in New Mexico to secure added acreage is by not resisting this bill or insisting on amendments, but to let the measure go through as it is at this time. The Senator from Colorado assures me that is correct. For that reason, Mr. President, I shall not urge a specific amendment now.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT-AUTHORIZATION FOR REPORTING AND SIGNING BILLS, ETC.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its business today it stand in adjournment until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next, and that in the meantime committees may report bills, resolutions, and nominations, that the Vice President may sign bills ready for his signature, and the Secretary of the Senate may receive messages from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PROHIBITION OF SALE OF AMERICAN COTTON TO FOREIGN PURCHASERS BELOW COST OF PRODUCTION

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I rise not to address myself to the particular piece of legislation under discussion, but to supplement a statement I made this morning when during the morning hour it was announced that Senate bill 1303 would go over until Monday, or some other day early next week, because of negotiations and conferences between the Secretary of Agriculture and the committees, or representatives of the committees of the two Houses of Congress. In view of that fact, and the suggestion which came to me from the leader of the Senate that he would like to leave the Senate early today and have the Senate adjourn until Monday, I agreed to postpone consideration, or at least to make no effort to bring up for immediate consideration a resolution which I submitted in this body on the 20th day of March, the legislative day of the 16th of March, a resolution based upon the arrangements then in progress, as I was advised, and had every reason to believe, and as I am now advised and now believe to be true and know to be true, involving the sale by our Government of American cotton to the foreign trade at considerably below the actual price advanced by the Government on some 11,000,000 bales of American cotton. I need not say also, Mr. President, that the Government contemplated a sale to the foreign trade at a price quite considerably below the actual cost of producing the cotton.

I therefore submitted the resolution, and asked that, pending the world crisis, no American cotton be sold to foreign buyers below the figure of the actual investment of the Government in that cotton, and that the Secretary of Agriculture be directed to negotiate no sale of American cotton below the actual cost of the cotton to the Government without first bringing that matter to the attention of the Congress.

The majority leader conferred with the Secretary of Agriculture before I would consent not to bring my resolution up for immediate consideration. I am quite confident that in the utmost good faith he reported to me precisely and exactly what has already been said in the Senate, to wit, that the Secretary of Agriculture would take no steps whatever to subsidize the sale of any American cotton to foreign purchasers that is to be used or manufactured outside the United States until further conference was had and until the opportunity to present the resolution was afforded early next week.

Mr. President, I know full well that we cannot rely upon all statements which reach us in Washington, but in my place I now say that I have received information which seems to me reliable that while the Secretary of Agriculture has apparently abandoned the idea of subsidizing the foreign users of American cotton in order to stimulate export of cotton from this country, other agencies of the Government are at work to conclude an arrangement which would have identically and precisely the same effect. According to my information, it is proposed to induce the American farmers who have placed their cotton in Government loans to accept a small subsidy or pittance of $1.25 a bale, and take their cotton out of the loan, thereby enabling the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, or some other agency under the control of the executive branch of the Government, to do precisely what I ask the Senate in the resolution, to express itself as opposing; that is, to sell the cotton, when taken out of the loan by the farmer and the producer under the inducement of a $1.25 per bale bonus to him, for export, with a subsidy to the export buyer, the foreign consumer, of approximately 2 cents a pound, or $10 per bale.

Mr. President, in the absence of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] I would not ask for consideration of the resolution, but inasmuch as the Senator has just returned to the Chamber I shall be glad to ask for consideration of the resolution as soon as the pending bill is disposed of. I wish to make it perfectly plain that I have acted in the utmost good faith, as I am sure the majority leader has done. I do not charge the Secretary of Agriculture with not acting in good faith. However, if the information which I have received is correct, it is obvious that somebody in the Government is willing to play hide-and-seek with the American Congress and the American people.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. I was out of the Chamber when the Senator started his remarks. I do not know what has happened, since the colloquy earlier in the day, to call forth his remarks. Will the Senator advise me of any new information which has come to him?

Mr. GEORGE. I had stated what occurred earlier in the day, and that I was satisfied that the Senator from Kentucky had correctly understood the matter, and had correctly stated to me that the Department of Agriculture would take no steps until further conferences could be had upon the matter of disposing of American cotton, and until the opportunity should arise to present the resolution if it was desired to do so. I also stated that subsequently I had been informed, upon what I believed to be responsible information, that other agencies of the Government are now perfecting a scheme by which American cotton would be taken out of the Commodity Credit Corporation and sold abroad under substantially an export subsidy plan.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, I do not know who has provided the Senator with the information, and I would not ask the Senator to divulge the name of his informant unless he is willing to do so. The statements which I made this morning were based upon a conversation which I had with the Secretary of Agriculture, in which he stated that under present circumstances he could not sell the cotton, and that he had no plan to sell it, and that certainly nothing would be done in that direction until we could have an opportunity early next week to have a conference of members of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the Senate, including the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the chairman, who. I understand, is at present constantly in conference with the Committee on Agriculture in the House, in which conferences the Secretary of Agriculture has participated.

Mr. GEORGE. I so understood.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know what other agency, unless it be some subordinate agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, or some other such organization, could be undertaking to perfect a scheme to carry out a plan which is not in harmony with what the Secretary of Agriculture told me. I do not know what the Senator has learned, or how reliable is the information which has come to him, but it would be surprising to me if the two agencies of the Government which have until now worked together with regard to cotton should suddenly find themselves separated in their purposes and designs.

Based upon the conferences we had earlier in the day and the assurances given me by the Secretary, I still feel that it would be unwise to press the resolution until we can get together, if possible. I will say to the Senator that I applanning to try to get the conferences in progress as early as possible in the week, so that we may find out what can be done. If nothing can be done, of course, Congress can then pursue its own remedy.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish the Senator from Kentucky to know that nothing I have said has in any wise conflicted with anything he is now saying. I specifically stated that I did not know whether or not the information which had reached me was correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. It seems to me it would be impossible for any such plan as has been described to be carried out between now and next Tuesday or Wednesday, or even Monday, even if it were in contemplation. Before taking action I should like to have the opportunity to check the information and have the Senator check the reliability of the information. I will say to the Senator that I had planned to leave the city at 4:30 o'clock.

Mr. GEORGE. I knew of the Senator's plan. I shall not press the motion this afternoon. However, I wish to make this statement so that, if the precise scheme which those of us interested in this matter are seeking to circumvent, or the same scheme in substance is actually under way and about to be consummated through any other agency of government, it will be done with full notice of my position on the subject.

I will say frankly to the Senator that I accept the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture in the utmost good faith. If such a scheme is contemplated through any other agency of government, I shall offer and press daily for consideration a resolution to investigate the agency of the Government which would undertake to circumvent the wishes of Congress.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to endorse what the Senator has said. I have not the slightest doubt about the good faith of the Secretary of Agriculture. I presume only the future can tell whether or not he is pursuing or in recent weeks has pursued the course that may ultimately work out the solution of this problem. The Secretary has been diligent in his efforts to do so; and it was at the suggestion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Smith] himself, earlier in the day, that it was agreed that the whole matter should go over until next week, to allow the two committees and the Secretary an opportunity to see what could be done to work out the problem.

We all want legislation which will work. It is of no value to pass a bill through the Senate unless it finally becomes a law. Although not very much cotton is produced in Kentucky, I am familiar with the cotton situation, and I am very sympathetic toward what is being attempted and the objectives to be attained.

In view of the imminence of the efforts to cooperate and work out a plan, I feel that we are justified in not acting in haste or precipitately, at least until those concerned have been given a further opportunity to work out the matter. I do not for a moment believe that the Secretary of Agriculture would connive with any other agency of the Government to do the thing which he says he does not contemplate doing, or that he would approve of such an effort. I think it may serve a good purpose to bring this matter up publicly and discuss it this afternoon, so that if any other agency is contemplating such a course, in view of what the Secretary of Agriculture has stated to us, it will desist until we find out whether or not the efforts now in progress will be successful.

APPORTIONMENT OF SUGAR CROP

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 69) relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams], as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still before the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I merely wish to make one observation.

I did not object to the consideration of the bill. I anticipated that these amendments would be offered. They present a difficult problem. If I should find that the amendments violate the agreement with Cuba, and if the opportunity is still ripe for me to move to reconsider the bill, I shall do so. After the bill goes to the House, if the House should agree to the amendments, when the report comes back to the Senate I can then oppose it if it does violate a trade agreement, and I shall do so.

However, for the present I shall raise no question, because I have not had time to study the matter. Other Members have not had time to study the amendments in connection with the agreements, so as to come to any definite conclusion.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before the bill is passed, I should like to be assured that there are no provisions in the bill which will in any way affect disadvantageously Hawaii or Puerto Rico, or change their status or relation to continental United States. If the bill in any way changes the quotas to which they are now entitled, except to their advantage, which advantage would be shared by the residents of the United States, or in any way interferes with the quota privileges which they now enjoy, with relation to the quota privileges enjoyed by continental United States, I would seek to amend it. May I ask the Senator from Colorado to enlighten me?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the intention was to leave Hawaii and Puerto Rico with the same quotas they now have. The domestic quota was increased with the idea of increasing the productive quota of the continental area. There was no intention of increasing the quota of Hawaii or Puerto Rico. The excess which was to be created was to be distributed within the continental area. The figures were adjusted on that basis. They may not be accurate to the sixth point, but the effort was made to maintain the present situation. I am sure that if there should be a slight mathematical error one way or the other, the House would maintain the present basis.

Mr. KING. Then, as I understand the Senator, Puerto Rico and Hawaii would come within the category of continental United States?

Mr. ADAMS. No; they would not. The effort was made to see that Hawaii and Puerto Rico continued with the quota in tons which they now have, and that there should be no reduction. The bill should not be to their advantage or disadvantage.

Mr. KING. But they do not obtain any advantage if there is an increase of 200,000 or 300,000 tons.

 Mr. ADAMS. That is correct. The purpose was to meet the greatly increased production of beet sugar and cane sugar in continental United States.

Mr. KING. The Senator is a very fair man. In view of the fact that Hawaii and Puerto Rico are now a part of the United States, that American citizens reside there, and American capital is invested there, does the Senator think it is quite moral or just that we should discriminate against them or enact a measure which would be wholly of advantage to continental United States?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that I do not see that Hawaii or Puerto Rico is particularly concerned when new areas are opened in Oregon or in Washington or in Idaho and those areas acquire the right to increase their production. The quotas allotted to Hawaii and Puerto Rico are right up to their maximum production at any time.

Mr. KING. I do not quite agree with my friend with respect to the last statement he has made. The only point I am trying to make is that I should not like to see any legislation enacted which would indicate that American citizens residing in Puerto Rico and Hawaii are denied the same privileges and rights that are enjoyed by American citizens residing in continental United States.

We have taken over Puerto Rico—I may say that we took it over by force of arms—and we have given the people there American citizenship. I would not look with favor upon any measure which might be construed or interpreted as a discrimination against American citizens residing in Puerto Rico or Hawaii, or in any other Territory that is under the American flag. It seems to me that the same privileges that are given to the people of Colorado or Utah or any other State of the Union ought to be given to Puerto Rico and Hawaii in the allocation of these additional 300,000 tons. I understand, however, that that will not be done under the terms of this bill.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator is correct. There will be no discrimination against them based on any fair measure of justice.

Mr. KING. I suppose it is justified upon the assumption that this increase is to be devoted exclusively to the cultivation of lands which heretofore have been denied cultivation.

Mr. ADAMS. That is not entirely the case. There is some increase due to drought. We have drought conditions, and in the cane area there has been an increased production due to the development of new canes. As a matter of fact, in the formulation of the 1937 Sugar Act the quota of the cane areas was increased, as I recollect, from some 260,000 tons up to the neighborhood of 400,000 tons. Then there was an effort to meet a situation in one portion of the United States which was justly entitled to consideration. A proportionate increase was not given to the beet areas. A proportionate increase was not given to Puerto Rico. The effort has been to be fair, and also to stimulate the production of sugar for American consumption on American soil.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, just one other word.

I agree with very much of what was stated by the Senator from Florida [Mr. Andrews]. We are producing in the United States only about 24 or 25 percent, possibly 27 percent, of our consumptive needs. We have millions of acres of fine agricultural land that may not be cultivated because of the restrictions, I believe, in part, of the Agricultural Department, and because of other reasons not necessary to indicate. Much of that land could be utilized for the production of beets. Sugar beets may be raised in many of the States. They are one of the few profitable agricultural crops. I should say, however, that they are not always profitable, and for many years the beet-sugar growers have been "in the red." They have had many hazards, and have passed through many vicissitudes; and it is only recently that there has been a little emancipation from the dark clouds which have hung over them for so many years.

I should be glad to see a policy which would encourage a larger production of sugar beets and of cane sugar in continental United States. I wish the time might come when we would produce in the United States and in Puerto Rico and in Hawaii at least 60 percent of the consumptive needs in sugar of the American people. Though I am opposed to the theory of bounties and subsidies, I would be willing to support a policy that would encourage the production of sugar beets and sugarcane in continental United States and our Territorial possessions.

A policy to accomplish that end might require a modification of some of the treaties or trade agreements which our Government has with other countries, but in view of the condition of agriculture today, I would be glad to see a sound and proper policy adopted which would increase agricultural production and the utilization of fertile lands which would yield profitable and valuable crops.

I shall not delay the Senate, but hope that when the bill reaches the House there will be taken into account the rights, moral as well as legal, of the inhabitants of the Territories referred to, and that the bill when finally perfected shall meet every just requirement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RETIREMENT OF COTTON POOL PARTICIPATION TRUST CERTIFICATES

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, earlier in the day, during the call of the calendar, I was necessarily absent; and House bill 3801, Calendar No. 204, was reached and passed over. I have since spoken to the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg] about the bill and explained it to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 3801) to extend the time for retirement of cotton pool participation trust certificates. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I desire to propose two amendments with reference to date in the bill as passed by amendments with reference to date in the bill as passed by the House. On page 1, line 9, and also on page 2, line 1, I move to strike out "June 30, 1939," and substitute "September 30, 1939." That will give a little more time in which to file the claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 9, after the words "day of", to strike out "June" and insert "September"; and on page 2, line 1, after the word "before", to strike out "June" and insert "September", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the appropriation of $1,800,000 made in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act, 1939, under the item entitled "Retirement of cotton pool participation trust certificates" shall remain available until December 31, 1939, and the authority of the manager, cotton pool, to purchase and pay for participation trust certificates, Form C-5-I, shall extend to and include the 30th day of September 1939, but after the expiration of said limit the purchase may be consummated of any such certificate tendered to the manager, cotton pool, on or before September 30, 1939, but where for any reason the purchase price shall not have been paid by the manager, cotton pool.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the companion Senate bill (S. 1209) will be indefinitely postponed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, if there is no further legislative business. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations of postmasters. which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters in the State of Pennsylvania, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nomination on the calendar.

POSTMASTER

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Haden H. Phares to be postmaster at Clinton, La.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That completes the calendar.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY

Mr. PITTMAN. Under the order previously entered, I move that the Senate adjourn until Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the Senate, under the order previously entered, adjourned until Monday, March 27, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 23, 1939

POSTMASTERS

Eva D. Reid to be postmaster at Vina, Ala., in place of D. G. Pearce, transferred.

Wayne S. Ross to be postmaster at Gillham, Ark., in place of E. H. Bonds, resigned.

Herbert A. Wegmann to be postmaster at Avalon, Calif., in place of J. B. Ogden, removed.

Louis C. De Armond to be postmaster at Blairsden, Calif. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

Margaret S. Dewhurst to be postmaster at Brisbane, Calif. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

Mary B. Buswell to be postmaster at Delhi, Calif. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

Felix G. Young to be postmaster at Desert Center, Calif.,

in place of L. F. Young, resigned.

Irene Crane Jones to be postmaster at Nubieber, Calif. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

George A. Chapman to be postmaster at Seaside, Calif. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

COLORADO

William D. McIntyre to be postmaster at Oak Creek, Colo., in place of P. V. DeWitt, removed.

DELAWARE

Walton Owens to be postmaster at Bridgeville, Del., in place of B. P. Jones, removed.

Mary C. O'Connor to be postmaster at Greenville, Del.

Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

FLORIDA

Kirby L. Sandlin to be postmaster at Jasper, Fla., in place of Myrtis Lawson, resigned.

Carey C. Earnest to be postmaster at Blairsville. Ga., in place of C. W. Hill, resigned.

George H. Busha to be postmaster at Toccoa, Ga., in place of G. H. Busha. Incumbent's commission expired June 6.

ILLINOIS

Raymond J. Kelley to be postmaster at Huntley, Ill., in place of R. J. Kelley. Incumbent's commission expired June 6, 1938.

Lenora B. Dickerson to be postmaster at La Fayette, Ill. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

Herman C. Thiemann to be postmaster at Roselle, Ill., in place of H. C. Thiemann. Incumbent's commission expired June 18, 1938.

Lillian R. M. Yerke to be postmaster at Union, Ill., in place of L. R. M. Yerke. Incumbent's commission expired June 18.

August Grewe to be postmaster at Wheeling, Ill., in place of E. J. Welflin, resigned.

Albert Rea Petscher to be postmaster at Aurora, Ind., in place of J. A. Petscher, deceased.

James N. Hileman to be postmaster at Mount Pleasant. Iowa, in place of R. C. Campbell, deceased.

Ada Mildred Whistler to be postmaster at Havana, Kans. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

James F. Ellis to be postmaster at Sulphur, La., in place of T. L. Ellis, resigned.

MARYLAND

Thomas M. Simpson to be postmaster at Hagerstown, Md., in place of J. T. Hartle, deceased.

MICHIGAN

Flossie A. Brown to be postmaster at Williamston, Mich., in place of F. A. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired May 22, 1938.

MISSISSIPPI

William E. Mitchell to be postmaster at Stewart, Miss. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

MONTANA

Edward F. O'Neil to be postmaster at Glendive, Mont., in place of E. F. O'Neil. Incumbent's commission expired May 22, 1938.

NEBRASKA

Silas J. Anderson to be postmaster at Rosalie, Nebr. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

NEW JERSEY

Mary R. Warren to be postmaster at Tuckahoe, N. J. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

NEW MEXICO

George T. Meyers to be postmaster at Hillsboro, N. Mex., in place of G. T. Meyers. Incumbent's commission expired June Eugene Montague to be postmaster at Lordsburg, N. Mex., in place of Eugene Montague. Incumbent's commission expired June 7, 1938.

NEW YORK

Charles Hogan to be postmaster at Harrisville, N. Y., in place of Charles Hogan. Incumbent's commission expired June 18, 1938.

James M. Hall to be postmaster at Roseboro, N. C., in place of J. M. Hall. Incumbent's commission expired June 18, 1938.

Carl A. Rickard to be postmaster at Alliance, Ohio, in place of F. D. Miller, deceased.

OKLAHOMA

Delbert H. Rounsaville to be postmaster at Atoka, Okla., in place of D. H. Rounsaville. Incumbent's commission expired May 29, 1938.

PENNSYLVANIA

Frank J. Studeny to be postmaster at Johnstown, Pa., in place of F. J. Studeny. Incumbent's commission expired June

W. Fred Williams to be postmaster at Shippenville, Pa., in place of W. F. Williams. Incumbent's commission expired June 6, 1938.

TEXAS

Tom Calhoon to be postmaster at Liberty, Tex., in place of Tom Calhoon. Incumbent's commission expired June 1, 1938.

James F. Trainer to be postmaster at Lyndon Station, Wis., in place of J. F. Trainer. Incumbent's commission expired June 18, 1938.

Dan F. Vicker to be postmaster at Park Falls, Wis., in place of D. F. Vicker. Incumbent's commission expired June 12, 1938.

CONFIRMATION

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate March 23, 1939

POSTMASTER

LOUISIANA

Haden H. Phares, Clinton.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Dear Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the love that keeps us through the night and for that renewed strength that through our being flows. Conscious of our needs, we rejoice in the assurance of the divine Fatherhood. We are thankful for the infinite compassion of the Christ, for His conquest of evil, and for His rise to moral grandeur. We beseech Thee that His holy hand may touch our energies, converting them into deep resolution, growing self-restraint, affection, and devotion. We pray that the Sun of Righteousness may rise until His full-orbed glory shall stand midheaven above our homeland; our hope and faith are in Thee and in mankind.

In Him were all things created, in the heavens and upon the earth, things visible and things invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers; all things have been created through Him and unto Him; and He is before all things, and in Him all things hold together.

We pray in His holy name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 4425. An act to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a concurrent resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 6. A concurrent resolution providing for the printing of additional copies of the hearings held before the Special Committee on Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1476. An act to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. GIRSON members of the Joint Select Committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments," for the disposition of executive papers in the following Department:

Department of War.

EXCLUSION AND DEPORTATION OF ALIENS

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 4860) to amend existing law so as to provide for the exclusion and deportation of aliens who advocate the making of fundamental changes in the American form of government.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has agreed to recognize the gentleman to submit a unanimous consent to consider this bill, with the understanding it will not be controversial and will not consume any time.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (c) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act to exclude and expel from the United States aliens who are members of the anarchistic and similar classes," approved October 16, 1918, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 8, sec. 137 (c)), is amended by striking out "or (4) sabotage" and inserting in lieu thereof "(4) sabotage, or (5) the making of fundamental changes in the American form of government."

SEC. 2. Paragraph (d) of such section 1, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 8, sec. 137 (d)), is amended by striking out "or (4) sabotage" and inserting in lieu thereof "(4) sabotage, or (5) the making of fundamental changes in the American form of government."

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 9, after the word "of", strike out the word "fundamental" and insert the word "any."

On page 2, in line 4, strike out the word "fundamental" and insert the word "any."

In line 6 insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Sec. 3. The Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act." this act.'

Amend the title.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend existing law so as to provide for the exclusion and deportation of aliens who advocate the making of any changes in the American form of government."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a concluding address at a memorable tercentenary in the city of New Haven.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a resolution of the Labor Federation of Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the ! gentleman from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

CRITICAL MATERIALS BILL

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have until midnight tonight to file separate minority views covering the bill H. R. 5191, the so-called critical materials bill of the War Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Burdick asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE ON FORESTRY

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Con. Res. 11), which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed:

House Concurrent Resolution 11

House Concurrent Resolution 11

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the special joint committee which was authorized and directed to study and make investigation of the present and prospective situation with respect to the forest land of the United States, its condition, ownership, and management, as it affects a balanced timber budget, watershed protection, flood control, and the other commodities and social economic benefits which may be derived from such land, be authorized to continue the investigation begun under Senate Concurrent Resolution 31 of the Seventy-fifth Congress, and for such purposes said committee shall have the same power and authority as were conferred upon it by Senate Concurrent Resolution 31 of the Seventy-fifth Congress, and shall report to the House as soon as practicable, and not later than April 1, 1940, the results of its investigation, together with its recommendation for necessary legislation. necessary legislation.

GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION BILL

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. COCHRAN, WARREN, ROBINSON of Utah, BEAM, COX, SCHULTE, TABER, GIFFORD, and DIRKSEN.

VETERANS' LEGISLATION

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Pensions, I ask unanimous consent that that committee be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 1008) to confer to certain persons who served in the Quartermaster Corps or under the jurisdiction of the Quartermaster General during the War with Spain, the Philippine Insurrection, or the China Relief Expedition the benefits of hospitalization and the privileges of the soldiers' homes, and that it be referred to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

EXEMPTION OF RESIDENT INMATES OF UNITED STATES SOLDIERS' HOMES AND THE NAVAL HOME, PHILADELPHIA

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Pensions, I ask unanimous consent that the committee be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 901) to exempt resident inmates of the United States Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C., and the Naval Home, Philadelphia, Pa., from pension reduction as prescribed by Veterans Regulation No. 6-Series, and that it be re-referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. CANNON of Missouri, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 5269) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, which was read a first and second time and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered printed.

Mr. LAMBERTSON reserved all points of order.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee on the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5269) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; and, pending that motion, I would like to reach some agreement with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] as to general debate. I have had some conference with gentlemen on the other side, and, in keeping with that conference, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate extend until 4 o'clock this afternoon, the time to be equally divided between the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Lambertson] and myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5269, the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill, and, pending that motion, asks unanimous consent that general debate on the bill be concluded not later than 4 o'clock this afternoon, the time to be equally divided between himself and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr.

LAMBERTSON]. Is there objection?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have requests on this side for 6 hours' time. I do not see how I can accept that agreement.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Is that time to be confined to the bill?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I do not think so.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We have always concluded consideration of this bill in 2 days. We have never taken more than 2 days to pass the Agriculture appropriation bill. What is the gentleman's suggestion?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I suggest we let the general debate run throughout the day, divided equally, and make some decision later.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That would, of course, mean that we might not be able to complete the bill this week. I am certain the gentleman would rather have an agreement under which the time would be equally divided.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. In view of the fact that there were so many days spent last week on the Department of the Interior appropriation bill, there seem to be many subjects about which the Members want to talk, and I think it would be advisable to have 2 full days of general debate on this bill. I have requests for over half of that time myself on this side.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman did not mention that when we discussed it yesterday.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I will say to the gentleman that the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] had requests for 2 or 3 hours' time that he had not told me about when I talked with the gentleman yesterday. I had requests for 3 hours myself, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] had requests for 3 hours made to him, which he transferred to me last night.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5269, the Department of Agriculture appropriation

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state the point of Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York makes the point of order that a quorum is not present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twentyseven Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 401

Arnold	Doughton	McGehee	Seger
Barden	Duncan	McKeough	Shannon
Bates, Mass.	Evans	McReynolds	Short
Blackney	Folger	Maas	Sparkman
Boland	Leland M. Ford	Magnuson	Sumners, Tex.
Buckley, N. Y.	Gathings	Mansfield	Sweeney
Burdick	Goldsborough	Martin, Ill.	Taylor, Colo.
Byrne, N. Y.	Hartley	Norton	Thomas, N. J.
Byron	Jeffries	Osmers	Thomas, Tex.
Creal	Knutson	O'Toole	White, Idaho
Crosser	Lea	Reece, Tenn.
Curley	LeCompte	Risk
Dies	McArdle	Sasscer

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 383 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5269) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; and pending that—in a spirit of generous cooperation with my friends on the other side of the aisle—I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the day be devoted to general debate, the time to be equally divided and to be controlled by myself and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, that is satisfactory. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H. R. 5269, the agricultural appropriation bill, 1940, with Mr. Patman in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, we are reporting the largest agricultural appropriation bill ever reported in the history of the United States Congress. And for the first time this session we are reporting one of the general supply bills above the Budget estimate—a greater increase over the Budget estimate than any agricultural appropriation bill that I recall since I have been a member of the Appropriations Committee-to be exact, $244,357,507 above the Budget estimate; and yet, Mr. Chairman, there are men who want to increase it. Large as it is, huge as is the amount the bill appropriates, it still is not large enough, it still does not appropriate money enough to satisfy a great many Members, who propose to offer amendments to increase the size of this already top-heavy bill. But, Mr. Chairman, I do not recall in recent years an agricultural appropriation bill which has been so heavily pared, so far as the establishment is concerned, so far as the Department of Agriculture appropriation is concerned, as this bill. This is an anomaly. This bill is more heavily pruned than any bill we have offered in recent years, still it appropriates a larger amount and is further above the estimate than any bill in the history of Congress for this purpose.

The difference, Mr. Chairman, is in two items only: The item for soil conservation, which has been increased $15,000,-000 above the Budget estimate to give the same amount we gave for that purpose last year; and $250,000,000 for parity payments, providing the same percentage of parity to the farmers of the country that was provided in the bill for the current year. With the exception of these two items, soil conservation and parity payments, we have cut this bill so heavily throughout that, notwithstanding increases in response to bills enacted by the Congress since the last agricultural appropriation bill was reported, we report a bill otherwise far below the Budget estimate.

It is not necessary to discuss soil conservation. No appropriation has been made in recent years which meets with such general approval as the appropriation for soil conservation. The other proposition, that of parity payments, is to carry out a policy which has been adopted by the Congress after many years of experimentation, after years of debate on innumerable measures proposed to bring back farm prosperity, to give the farmers economic equality with industry and labor. Every political party in its national platform has resolved that the farmer is entitled to parity, and the Congress itself by solemn enactment has provided that the farmer should have parity. This appropriation is to implement that law.

What is parity? Parity provides that the farmer shall have for his labor, for his product, and for his service as fair a wage, as fair a price, as fair a return as he pays industry and labor for their products, their labor, and their services. It provides that the farmer shall receive as fair a price for what he sells as he pays for what he buys.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to my friend the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. I wish the gentleman would explain a little more in detail this parity payment. What would be the parity on cotton?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Parity is the price that the farmer received during the years 1909 to 1914, inclusive. That is taken as the basis. It was presumed that in those years the farmer was on a plane of equality with industry and labor. The truth about the matter is that the farmer did not receive parity even during those years. The fact is that during those years the price of farm lands was increasing steadily so that the farmer having served a lifetime producing food and fiber for the Nation could retire, not on the profits made in farming, but on the increment of his land. So really what we call parity today is not complete parity, but it is the nearest approach to a fair base we can adopt.

Mr. FISH. What would that mean for cotton? What would the parity price on cotton be?

Mr. FULMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. FULMER. I would say to the gentleman that at this time it is 15.6 cents.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman says it will be 15.6 cents and I believe that to be correct. I want the gentleman who knows a great deal about this subject to explain to the House that if the cotton parity price is 15.6, under this appropriation of $250,000,000 they will not get that parity price, they probably will not get more than 12 cents; therefore, it is not a parity price at all under this bill. Is that not correct?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am glad the gentleman has called attention to that fact. This appropriation of $250,-000,000 will give the farmer not to exceed 75 percent of parity.

Mr. FISH. Is it not a fact it will not give him 75 percent of parity price on cotton?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It is calculated to give him 75 percent. This fund operates until the price reaches 75 percent of parity and does not operate thereafter. For this reason it will not apply at present prices to either tobacco or rice which are today quoted at more than 75 percent of the parity price. It will apply to the other three basic agricultural products—cotton, wheat, and corn. Mr. PACE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. PACE. Is it not true that the 75-percent provision is a limitation that no community shall exceed that amount, but the $250,000,000 will not pay 75 percent of the parity price to all of the five commodities? When a commodity reaches 75 percent it does not receive any more of the fund and the balance, if any, will be transferred to a commodity that is not up to 75 percent parity?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Of course, no categorical statement can be made on that because prices continually fluctuate. We have increased the amount this time from $212,-000,000 provided in the last bill to $250,000,000, with the hope that the price of agricultural products will be such as to permit us to give at least 75 percent or as close to that percentage as possible. To give him 100 percent would require, as the Secretary of Agriculture testified, more than $1,000,000,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. NELSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. NELSON. Further referring to the definition of parity price, am I right in my understanding that parity price means in effect that what the farmer has to sell will buy as much of what he has to buy as during the years used as a base, and it is dependent upon this rather than merely upon the price that the farmer receives?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is the technical definition.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. I wonder if the gentleman has any memoranda indicating how the $212,000,000 that was appropriated during the last session of the Congress is being spent and for what purpose and to what extent?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. TABER. There is nothing in the hearings that I can find on that matter

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The Department of Agriculture, as well as a representative of the Farm Bureau, appeared before the committee and gave those figures. The gentleman will find them on page 1689.

Mr. TARVER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. TARVER. I may say to the gentleman that cotton received $84,000,000 out of the $212,000,000, and cotton will receive $88,000,000 out of this appropriation. In the record appears statistics showing exactly how much each crop will get out of the $212,000,000 and how much it is estimated they will receive out of the $250,000,000, if allowed.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The exact amounts appear in the hearings at the page indicated.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. DOWELL. The gentleman did not state how much would be allowed out of the $250,000,000 for corn.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The amount as given in the hearings is $61,613,000.

Mr. DOWELL. Is it intended that this bill shall carry the same proportion?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Exactly the same proportion and approximately the same percentage of parity.

Mr. FERGUSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. FERGUSON. I want to be sure of the mechanics of this parity-payment proposition. As I understand it, the $212,000,000 will be paid on the 1938 crop provided the man complies in 1939 and the $250,000,000 provided in this bill will be paid on the 1939 crop if the man complies in 1940? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is right.

Mr. FERGUSON. If that is so, every year the payment, although made on the basis of the allotments, hinges on his compliance the following year?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. POAGE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. POAGE. Do I understand then that we have the situation that if there was a payment made last year, 1938, on the 1937 crop that this year there will be a payment made on the 1938 crop?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is correct.

Mr. POAGE. And in 1940 there will be a payment made on the 1939 crop, which is the crop we are now planting?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Payment will be made just as soon as the basis of the crop and the compliance can be ascertained under the $212,000,000 for the current-year payments are ready now for winter wheat and for cotton the payments will not be ready until August, or possibly September. The information from the Department is that payments under the $250,000,000 appropriation will be at approximately the corresponding dates in 1940.

Mr. POAGE. That is presumed to be this fall, in 1939, which, if we actually have a situation of paying on each of these crops, would require two payments in the calendar year of 1939 because we have not received a payment for the 1938 crop as yet. It is presumed that we will be able to calculate compliance in 1939 very promptly because we know the allotment at the very beginning of the year and we do not have to have the delay we had last year, so that would require that two payments be made during the calendar year of 1939.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Of course, we cannot predict the exact date on which these payments will be made, but there is this difference in the provision carried in the bill and the provision carried in the bill last year.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

For the current year we based the payments upon the 1939 crop and the 1939 compliance, which of course delayed the ascertainment. This year, instead of basing it on the 1940 crop and the 1940 compliance, which we would have done had we followed this year's bill, we have based it on the 1939 crop and the 1940 compliance.

Mr. POAGE. I can understand about the 1940 crop but I am still troubled about this situation. The Department of Agriculture has circulated throughout my section of the country, at least, questions and answers, and one of the questions is, "Will payment be made on the 1938 or 1939 crop, or both?" The answer given is "The 1939 crop." There never has been a payment made on the 1938 crop. What I want to get straight is, what is going to happen with the 1938 crop? There are 3 years involved; 1937, 1938, and 1939 have come, and all but 1939 have gone. During these 3 years we know we are going to get two payments, but are we ever going to get three payments for the three crop years?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Payment for the 1938 crop will be made this year.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. TARVER. Payments under the $212,000,000 appropriation made last year allocated to cotton will, I am informed, not begin until September of the present year. It is not anticipated that if this appropriation is made cottonparity payments will begin until September or perhaps October of 1940. There is no proposal of having two payments in 1 year and that contingency could not possibly come about.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. FERGUSON. In reality, there is no 1938 payment? Mr. TARVER. In reality, it was the intention of Congress to provide for a payment on the 1938 crop, and the regulations adopted by the Department of Agriculture providing for payment on the basis of the acreage allotment for the 1939 program in effect carry out the intent of Congress, so there will be this year out of the $212,000,000 parity payments based on the 1938 crop in fact. The proposal here is to provide $250,000,000 in parity payments to be based on the 1939 crop, to be paid after compliance with the 1940 program is determined.

Mr. FERGUSON. So, in reality, there are just two payments, in 1939 and 1940.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. MASSINGALE. I understood the chairman to state that any hope of receiving parity for the 1939 crop will depend upon compliance with the 1940 program.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I should like to ask the gentleman just this simple question: Suppose there is no 1940 program? Suppose this act should be repealed or some new act substituted in its stead? There would be no 1939 parity payments, would there?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is a hypothetical question which falls under the province of the legislative com-

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. As I understand, there is provided $500,000,000, approximately, for soil conservation, $250,000,000 for additional parity payments, and an additional sum provided under section 32 of $130,000,000.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is in no way connected with this proposition. Does the gentleman refer to the section 32 under which we take a portion of the funds collected as duties?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Yes. That is not in this

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is not in this item.

Mr. Chairman, the farm problem is the key to every problem before the Nation today. On its solution depends the alleviation of unemployment, the development of an adequate national income and recovery from the depression. Unless the farmer receives a price for his products which will provide buying power to enable him to buy the products of labor and industry, unemployment will continue, the national income will remain in the lower brackets, and the depression will be aggravated rather than lessened. The only items in this bill which will affect farm prices are the two in excess of the Budget estimates-soil conservation and parity payments. They are not sufficient to provide full parity. They do not begin to solve the problem. But on the theory that half a loaf is better than no bread at all, we offer them as the only contribution toward farm equality available at this time. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, we are considering here a bill calling for an appropriation of $1,067,274,427. This is the largest bill for agricultural purposes that has ever been presented to the House. Two items were carried in the 1938 so-called relief bill last year, one amounting to $175,000,000 for loans and rural relief through the Farm Security Administration, and the other amounting to $212,000,000 for parity payments that were carried in other than the agricultural bill last year. These items in the report make it appear erroneously that the amount carried was larger last year than now.

Perhaps the most interesting and astounding statement that has ever been made to the House of Representatives was that made by the chairman of the subcommittee when he presented the bill. I am not going to attempt to quote him exactly, but as I understood him, he said he had never known a bill to be presented to the House that had so much padding in it as this bill, insofar as departmental activities were concerned.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I trust the gentleman will not make any mistake in attempting to quote me. I have the highest respect for the gentleman's memory and his accuracy.

Mr. TABER. If I have made a mistake, I shall be pleased to let the gentleman correct it.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I said there were still several millions of dollars in this bill that I thought ought to be taken out, but I did not say it contained more for this purpose than any other bill because as I have said, we have cut it more than any bill I recall in several years for the expenses of the establishment.

Mr. TABER. If I have made a mistake, I accept the gentleman's correction, nevertheless that leaves the bill, insofar as its administrative activities are concerned and insofar as a large number of other appropriations are concerned, where it will stand, in the interest of efficiency and economy, substantial cuts without any impairment of efficiency.

I am now going to call attention to one or two items. The Appropriations Committee has recommended one amendment which provides for cutting out an item of $240,000 above the Budget for the National Arboretum. I hope the committee will make this cut.

There is an increase in the amount of the direct appropriation for soil conservation and use of agricultural land resources, including payments, from $345,000,000 direct appropriation, to $429,000,000. This represents practically the same amount that was available for this year; and this year, as near as I can figure, they are estimating that $70,000,000 will not be used. It would seem that this item could be placed upon the basis of the use that is anticipated for this year and that $70,000,000 could be cut from it.

Then there is this price adjustment item of $250,000,000, and I am going to discuss that in a moment.

Then there is, further down, an item of farm tenancy of over $24,000,000 plus unobligated balances that might be carried over. How much that will be I do not know. In my own mind this farm tenancy item, providing approximately two set-ups in each county in the United States, is terrible scourge upon the Government of the United States, the idea of taking two tenant farmers in one county and setting them up as farmers, as near as I can figure it, on the basis of a cost of at least $5,000 each and putting them in the farming business and picking them out of a whole group of farmers. Frankly, I do not think we will ever get anywhere in helping to solve the farm-tenancy problem in that way, and I think we would be much better off if we abandoned the program.

Now, with reference to this parity payment of $250,000,000, let me tell you what the situation is in the United States. Our agricultural situation is bad for a great many reasons. It is bad because we have the competition of foreign agricultural products and the price of our agricultural products has been forced down as a result of the reciprocal-trade agreements to a level with the foreign price all the way through. Now we are advised that there are very few agricultural imports.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TABER. Not at this point; when I have completed my statement, if I have an opportunity I shall be pleased to yield, but I want this question made clear.

We are told that these reciprocal-trade agreements do not result in large imports. Let me say to you that they result in putting down the price of agricultural products to the level of the foreign products. We cannot, of course, bring about large imports in agricultural products by these agreements, but we do get the result of cutting the price down and this has been the situation with reference to large items. It is estimated that if we have proper protection for our farmers that the agricultural imports would result in the operation of 85,000,000 acres of land in the United States that is now idle. Under these circumstances we cannot expect anything like a parity price for our farmers. This applies to wheat, it applies to corn, it applies to cotton, it applies to tobacco, it applies to milk and dairy products, and unless we have some sort of basis for parity prices in the line of a tariff that has been almost destroyed or has never been imposed, such as cotton, we are in a situation where no matter what we do we cannot establish anything like a parity for the farmer.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman insert in the RECORD, as a part of his remarks, the amount of these products that have been received in the United States?

Mr. TABER. I will do the best I can and I know that tremendous volumes of other agricultural products have had their price scuttled by reason of the absence of adequate protection for the farmer.

In 1935 agricultural imports exceeded $2,500,000,000. 1936 agricultural imports exceeded $2,200,000,000. In 1937 agricultural imports exceeded $3,400,000,000. They have become over 60 percent of our total imports.

I have not available the 1938 figures.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield. Mr. COOLEY. What reciprocal-trade agreement has adversely affected cotton?

Mr. TABER. None. We do not have any tariff upon cotton, but farm production has affected the price of cotton.

Mr. COOLEY. But the gentleman made the statement that reciprocal-trade treaties had adversely affected these commodities and put them in such position that they could not receive proper prices.

Mr. TABER. Oh, the gentleman did not understand what I said. I said that the price of farm products in general had been very largely affected by reciprocal-trade agreements and by the failure of having any adequate tariff. There is no tariff on cotton. There have been very substantial imports of cotton. I know that consumers of cotton in my territory have had foreign cotton offered to them in the New York City market below the price at which they could buy domestic cotton.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. COOLEY. Would the gentleman be kind enough to explain to the House in what manner and in what reciprocal trade agreements these commodities have been adversely affected?

Mr. TABER. Why, the gentleman knows that the reciprocal trade agreements with Holland and with Canada and a great many of the other countries have seriously, adversely affected the price of agricultural products. It is well known.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CARLSON. If the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] will permit, I would like to call his attention to the importation of cattle as the result of the Canadian reciprocal trade treaty. The quota arrangement carries the provision that a total of not more than 60,000 head of low-duty cattle, weighing over 700 pounds, may be imported in any one calendar quarter. The Canada low-duty imports are limited to 51,720 head and Mexico cannot exceed 8,280 head per quarter. Canada and Mexico shipped 23,762 head of cattle into the United States the first 2 weeks of this year and the quota was completely filled the first part of February. The next quarterly quota begins on April 1. The population of cattle on Canadian farms on June 1, 1938, totaled 8,511,300 head, according to a statement by the Minister of Agriculture. January imports of live cattle were the highest ever recorded and more than five times as large as those of January 1938. The imports amounted to 11.7 percent of the total inspected cattle slaughtered in our yards.

This should be positive proof that we are importing competitive farm products.

Mr. TABER. And scuttle the price of American cattle.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. TABER. I yield. LXXXIV-201

Mr. REED of New York. There is one idea that they overlook when they ask these questions, and that is that when we enter into these agreements with one country under the most-favored-nation clause, those rates go on to all of the other countries.

Mr. TABER. That is true.

Mr. REED of New York. So it is the same as writing trade agreements with each of them.

Mr. TABER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. TABER. I yield for a question.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. How do our exports compare with imports on the questions you have just been discussing?

Would you put both in the RECORD?

Mr. TABER. There are comparatively small agricultural exports. I am going to tell the gentleman something about the import question and something about the opportunity that the folks in foreign countries have to sell us things when we have a protective tariff. I would like to have some of these folks understand this. When we have a protective tariff, this is the situation: We have generally had higher prices for our farmers. We have generally had more employment for our people in our factories. We have had larger purchasing power in America, and our imports of noncompetitive items have almost always, under those circumstances, been much larger than they have been when we have scuttled our tariff and destroyed our market for agricultural products, destroyed our market for manufactured products. The result of these things does not promote good will, and it does not promote imports. It does not provide a market for their products, such as they would have when we were buying things that were not competitive to our own people.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield for a question. Mr. KERR. The gentleman will admit, will he not, that the poor price of cotton is due to the overproduction of cotton in the South, largely?

Mr. TABER. I do not think it is entirely due to that, but it is due largely, and I think the gentleman would find that, to the loss of the export market for cotton.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has again expired.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. TABER. It is due very largely to that fact, and the fact that we have gone ahead and bought up a great lot of cotton. As I remember the figures, the bales of cotton on hand run something like ten million. I am told it is eleven and one-half million bales. That is more than a full year's consumption in the United States. No effort has been made to solve the export problem. No effort has been made to retain the American market for cotton. With that situation we are just piling up that cotton in warehouses, and it is a continuous menace to the price of cotton just so long as it stays there. I am going to let you folks discuss that in your own time, but unless you get rid of that practice of piling up cotton in warehouses and destroying your own markets, you will never help solve your agricultural problem.

In addition to that we have had a policy in this country for 6 years of destroying the farm-tenancy situation in the South and the opportunity of your farm tenants to earn a living through the W. P. A. operations and through the relief build-up that has been going on there. You have gone ahead and absolutely destroyed your own situation by unsound, uneconomic procedure. I wish, instead of something like this so-called parity payment, there could be some sound program to get rid of these destructive features that have destroyed your market for cotton, destroyed your agricultural situation through the country, and prevented any possibility of a comeback.

I do not see how any friend of the cotton farmer can come into the Well of the House and support these measures that have continuously destroyed and prevented any possible recovery of their situation. I hope that as these items are reached in the bill the gentleman from Missouri, who understands a great deal about this situation, will offer amendments which will cut down amounts appropriated for the department which are excessive and which are unnecessary, and which he complains about, and that we will support those amendments and save some money.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I was very glad to hear my friend from New York bring up a fallacy which has been consistently preached from every political platform in the country, to the effect that the amount of agricultural imports entering this country from abroad has brought down the price of farm products. The testimony before our committee last year was that even in the drought years when importations were heaviest the total importations were 2.8, so small in amount as to be negligible; and that in normal years the amount of meat, for example, imported into this country was less than 1 percent of the amount consumed and could not materially affect the price of American products.

But I was especially astonished to hear my friend say that when the tariff was high farmers prospered and received a high price for their products. Mr. Chairman, we gave here, and it is in the Congressional Record, figures covering a period of more than 2 years showing that with a tariff of 42 cents a bushel on wheat, every single day of the 2 years, as reported by the Chicago Tribune, the price of wheat in Winnipeg, where there was no tariff, was higher than the price of wheat in Minneapolis, just a few miles away, for the same grade of wheat on which there was a tariff of 42 cents. On the face of the daily market reports it is conclusively demonstrated that the tariff on wheat has had no effect whatever on the price.

One more significant statement, my friends, and I trust you will put this down in your notebooks: The imports today of all farm commodities is less than it was for the average of the period 1920 to 1929. We heard nothing back in those days about the effect upon the farmers' prices of imports from abroad; yet from 1920 to 1929, as shown by the statistical reports of the United States Department of Agriculture, there was brought into this country under Republican administrations more farm products than we are importing

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Was not the reason for the larger imports in those years because the prices of farm products were better, and we had a better market at that

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Every year, beginning in 1929, down to 1932 the price of every agricultural product declined; and all that time every agricultural product carried the highest tariff that could be levied.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, will not the gentleman take 1 more minute to let me ask a question?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself one-half minute to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. KERR. The gentleman from Missouri has been a Member of this Congress for a great number of years. Has he ever known the Republican Party to offer any remedy for anything that involved the Government's welfare except that of raising the tariff?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I have never known them to bring in any legislative proposition which resulted in the increase of the price of any agricultural product. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I did not take this time to discuss the subject last mentioned by the gentleman from Missouri, but a thing that must not be overlooked in this connection is that while imports have increased or held their own, exports have materially decreased out of all proportion to former years.

What I want to emphasize in the brief time I have allowed myself is to point out very clearly that there are two large items in this bill making up three-quarters of its total: $250,000,000 for parity payments, and $500,000,000 for soil conservation. This is three-quarters of a billion dollars. Now, this is in your lap. You will take care of the committee's recommendation in this regard one way or another and will do it without any influence from the committee.

The less than $300,000,000 left represents items for the regular agricultural establishment, and on these the committee has done a fine job. If any of you have brought any powder here to shoot, you can help us by shooting it to hold down this bill to its present figure. The thing we fear, and the thing we face, is an increase in this bill. It has been suggested that perhaps there is some more that we could cut out. Yes. In the committee I favored cutting out several things. I favored raising others. We have, however, done a fine job on the regular department, and I do not want you to get the impression that this committee has been extravagant. We need your help to hold it even to the figure we have recommended.

The other thing I want to emphasize is the parity payment item. The administration forced the farm bill on us. I voted against it from the beginning. I do not think my farm people wanted it. The administration, however, has gone ahead with their plan. I think the administration is most unfair, almost cowardly in that they did not in their Budget bring this item in here. They forced this farm bill on the farmers of the United States. I think it is reprehensible that the administration in charge of the Budget did not follow up with a Budget estimate.

They wanted to hold the Budget estimate down and at the same time promised the farmers this money without asking for the taxes to raise it or the appropriation.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield to the gentleman from North

Mr. COOLEY. Do I understand that the committee was not furnished with proper estimates of the amount needed to pay parity prices to the producers of surplus commodities? Mr. LAMBERTSON. The committee was furnished very substantial estimates.

Mr. COOLEY. And the gentleman did have the benefit of those estimates?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. We had no Budget estimates.

Mr. COOLEY. That is what I mean.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. We had no Budget estimates. What I am criticizing is the administration forcing on the farmers of the United States this proposition when they were reasonably well satisfied with the soil-conservation program. If on top of what they had added cheaper interest rates and curtailed importations, the farmers would have been reasonably well satisfied. The Secretary of Agriculture, however, went out and on his own initiative forced this thing on the farmers. He forced it through the House and Senate like they forced the reorganization bill through the other day; yet they do not provide any way of paying the farmers who will go out and meet the requirements.

Mr. COOLEY. Does the gentleman mean to state he believes that the farmers of the Nation would be pretty well satisfied without parity payments?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. They would have been pretty well satisfied, yes, without parity prices, with soil conservation and curtailed importations and cheaper interest rates. That is what I said. The farmers would have been satisfied. farmers never asked for the last farm bill.

Mr. COOLEY. Does the gentleman believe that the farmers of America should be satisfied with anything less than parity prices?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I am telling the gentleman the situation as it existed.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman answer that question? [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway].

TRADE TREATIES AND THE FARMER

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, on two different occasions during this session of Congress I have addressed the House on the question of reciprocal treaties. I have endeavored to look at the picture from a general viewpoint. But today, in view of the fact that we are discussing the agricultural appropriation bill, I want particularly to discuss the subject from the agricultural standpoint.

We were told that it was the farmer who was going to get all the benefits, or practically all the benefits, from the reciprocal treaties, but it is a very strange thing that up to date none of that improvement in farm conditions has been realized in any appreciable degree as the result of reciprocal treaties. Five years ago this promise was made, and negotiations have been carried on with 19 different countries, resulting in 20 agreements.

The American farmer has seen his foreign market disappear and his home market gradually surrendered to the foreign producer. There are the concrete results of your reciprocal treaties as applied to the farm industry.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I wonder if the gentleman has compared the figures at the beginning of the decrease of our foreign market with those after the enactment of the tariff act, which was the real cause of the decline?

Mr. TREADWAY. There is no question in my mind, answering the distinguished gentleman from Missouri, that the adverse results of the reciprocal treaties are very apparent to everybody interested in the well-being of the farmer.

Our tariff rates on foreign products have been drastically reduced under the treaty program and the reduced rates extended gratuitously to the whole world, notwithstanding President Roosevelt's very definite promise to the farmers in the 1932 campaign that agricultural tariffs would not be cut.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Is it not a fact that the very necessity for such payments as these parity payments and other appropriations of a similar sort are themselves evidence of the failure of the New Deal program to accomplish anything substantial for the farmers?

Mr. TREADWAY. There is no question about it. Moreover, if the rates of duty had been maintained on agricultural products, I do not think the gentleman would claim we would need any parity payments.

Mr. Chairman, the administration has turned a deaf ear to pleas to exempt farm products from reductions under the treaty program, as we Republicans have more than once proposed. If the Members of the House will look over the debates of 1934 and 1937, when the reciprocal tariff and its extension were brought up, it will be found there were no end of amendments offered by the Republican side of the House favorable to the farmer that were voted down by the Democratic side.

If the Tariff Commission were attending to its duty in accordance with the law in recommending adjustment of rates in accordance with the cost-of-production formula, instead of helping the State Department to tear down farm tariffs, we might make some definite progress toward alleviating the distressed condition of agriculture. But the Tariff Commission today is entirely under the dictation of the Secretary of State, and is simply checking up for him and various committees in an effort to reduce all tariffs under their supervision. I claim that the Tariff Commission today is not performing its true functions as laid down by Congress.

It is hardly necessary for me to point out that the Republican flexible-tariff provisions are still the law of the land, although they have been nullified insofar as items covered by trade treaties are concerned. However, with respect to other products the President has power to increase the agricultural rates where they do not at present equalize competitive conditions at home and abroad, but he has refused to use this power for the farmers' benefit.

If the administration cannot find foreign markets for our farm surpluses, it might at least give our farmers the first chance to supply the needs of the domestic market. [Applause.] The home market is the birthright of American producers, and following the elections in 1940 the Republican Party is going to restore it to them. [Applause.]

The trade-treaty program is not only impoverishing our farm population by direct reductions in agricultural tariffs but it is doing so indirectly by reductions on products that compete with American industry and the workers engaged therein. Take for example the reduction made on woolen goods under the British trade treaty. The other day I called attention to the active campaign a British tailoring concern is making in this country to interest our people in placing orders for British clothing. Following that announcement of solicitation of orders in this country, action was taken in the State of Rhode Island by the tailoring organization, and letters were sent both to the Representatives from Rhode Island in this House and to other Members. They boast in their advertisements that under the trade-treaty program there has been a reduction of 15 percent in the cost of a suit. Now, what is the result of even such a reduction as that? In the first place, it takes jobs away from the American workers, who are the farmers' greatest and richest market.

Mr. SANDAGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. SANDAGER. I may say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that this is hitting the little fellow, the small journeyman tailor.

Mr. TREADWAY. Certainly. Mr. SANDAGER. They advertise that their suits can be purchased $15 cheaper apiece. This is not hurting big business; it is hurting the small men.

Mr. TREADWAY. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the trade-treaty program hurts everybody.

Mr. SANDAGER. May I interject that the new dealers apparently have no sympathy for big business, but they might open their hearts a little bit to the small-business man?

Mr. TREADWAY. That is true. It is also true that the new dealers who are responsible for the trade treaties have no heart or consideration for the American farmer, and he is the man we are talking about at this time. [Applause.]

Here is another angle to this foreign clothing proposition. It means that the wool which goes into that suit is also furnished from abroad. Thus the farmer not only loses a market for his wool but he loses a market for his foodstuffs which would ordinarily be sold to the weavers and the tailors who make the cloth and the clothing. The adverse effect has very wide ramifications.

On March 10 the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Brown] placed in the Record a very illuminating statement showing the tremendous increase in wool and woolen imports the first month the British treaty was in operation. For example, imports of noils increased from 278,000 pounds in 1938 to over 1,000,000 pounds in January 1939. Imports of wool rags increased from 99,000 pounds to nearly 1,120,000 pounds in the same period. Increases of 100 percent or more were shown in imports of woolen goods. There is a concrete example of the adverse effect of trade treaties on our own producers.

Is there not a great deal of wool raised in this country? You western Members know the wool situation a great deal better than I do; nevertheless, it is apparent that by these importations American products of the farm are being displaced.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Mon-

Mr. THORKELSON. I can say this about wool, because we have wool in Montana, that wool is now selling for about 14 to 12 cents a pound, the cheapest it has ever been. If you take 40 percent off that you can readily see what wool is sold for right now.

Mr. TREADWAY. In other words, the gentleman illustrates very clearly the very matter I am discussing at this time, that the trade treaty has ruined your wool market.

Mr. THORKELSON. It absolutely has.

Mr. TREADWAY. In addition to the gentleman who has just spoken, I wish to compliment the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Griswold], who made a speech on this floor on Tuesday last. There was a dairyman from the State of Wisconsin telling definitely, from his own first-hand knowledge, the experience of the dairy people in his State. I venture to say, and I should like corroboration from other gentlemen from Wisconsin sitting in this audience, that the reciprocal-treaty program was a very great factor in the election of so many Republicans to this House.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. It was one of the biggest factors.

Mr. TREADWAY. I thank the gentleman; and it will be next year, too.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In 1940 we will have more Republicans here and in the other body.

Mr. TREADWAY. Certainly.

I have already said that the trade-treaty program will be an important factor in the 1940 election, and the gentleman from Wisconsin and other gentlemen from that State confirm that statement.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CULKIN. Did the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts note that Secretary Wallace in a recent hearing before the Monopoly Committee said the trade-agreement program was not working out as well as was expected?

Mr. TREADWAY. I am surprised at even that admission from the Secretary of Agriculture, that there was anything about the New Deal program that did not suit him.

Mr. CULKIN. Despite the propaganda financed at great cost by the international bankers, the people are beginning to find out about the effect of these trade agreements.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, last evening the Assistant Secretary of State, Dr. Sayre, a very eloquent and highly educated gentleman, made an address, according to this morning's press, in which he attempted to present the alleged value of the trade-treaty program along the lines of peace and in other directions. I would a great deal rather have the evidence from this floor of a practical dairyman, such as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Griswold], than the hifalutin' words of the Assistant Secretary of State on the effects of this trade-treaty program. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.
Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I receive each day many letters from Louisiana, Florida, and other States in the southern section of the country violently protesting against the New Deal tariff treaties and indicating that these treaties are destroying the markets for their sugar and vegetable products in the South as well as destroying the market for their cotton products.

Mr. TREADWAY. There is no question but that in theory the trade-treaty program is probably a good one, but in its practical benefits to the American farmer and the American people it is a joke. By reason of the reductions made on competitive foreign imports, it harms much more than it helps, if any.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In fact, instead of fighting the Republican protective tariff, the people in the New Deal States in the South had better put a little heat behind their rubber-stamp Senators and Congressmen to support it.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman expresses my own thought in different language. I should like to have this message go back to the people in the districts that are represented now by some of these Democratic Members.

I hope that other Members will follow the example of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Griswold] and point out the adverse effects of the treaty program on their own sections. Only in this way can we offset the one-sided and frequently misleading propaganda which the administration is putting out in reference to the treaty program. The farmers are entitled to know what the administration is doing to them, and when they become fully aware of what is going on, the Republicans will no longer be the minority party in this House.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I observe also in connection with the British trade agreement that a depreciation in value of the British pound sterling of 10 percent would wipe out all the advantage which the United States gets from that trade agreement; either that or compel us to depreciate our currency along with the pound sterling.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman is absolutely correct. If they cannot find one way to do it, they are going to do it in another way. There is little advantage for this country under the British treaty, in any event. In many cases all we got was the binding of existing tariff treatment of our products.

Mr. LEWIS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. Yes; but may I solicit a little more time?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. LEWIS of Ohio. Is it not a fact also that because of these trade agreements you cannot buy a pound of canned beef that was canned in America in any grocery store in the land?

Mr. TREADWAY. The administration has refused to take any steps to protect the American farmer from these importations.

The Members of this House doubtless have seen the pamphlet recently issued setting forth the reduction in the various items under the trade-treaty program. I have previously called the attention of the House to the fact that these reductions number over a thousand. It requires 21 pages in this document just to list the reductions in the agricultural schedule. Of course there are many agricultural products which are listed in other schedules, such as sugar, tobacco, wool, and so on. It would take a considerable time to enumerate the items on which reductions were made. However, they affect agriculture in almost all of its branches, including cattle raising, grain production, dairying, fruits and vegetables, poultry, and, as I have indicated, tobacco and sugar.

Let me refer at this point to a table which I have prepared, showing the rates of duty on certain major farm products under the Democratic Tariff Act of 1913, the Republican act of 1930, and the present rates under the trade-treaty program.

You will recall that the 1913 Tariff Act was the so-called Underwood bill, wherein practically all agricultural products were on the free list. When the Republican act of 1922 was passed we restored farm products to the protected list and in 1930 we raised those rates quite considerably. The Democratic treaty program has reduced practically every one of those items to the total amount of 50 percent allowed under the law. There is no telling how much further the administration would have gone in the direction of free trade if the limitation had not been imposed. I want to insert those items.

Comparative tariff rates on certain farm products

Article	Democratic act of 1913	Republican act of 1930	Democratic trade treaty program
Cattle: Less than 200 pounds each 700 pounds or more:	Free	2½ cents per pound.	1½ cents per pound.
Dairy cows	do	3 cents per	Do.
Swine	do	2 cents per	Do. 1 cent per pound.
Pork, fresh or chilled	do	2½ cents per pound.	1¼ cents per
Bacon, ham, shoulders	do	3¼ cents per pound.	2 cents per
Whole milk		6½ cents per	3¼ cents per
Cream	do	56.6 cents per gallon.	28.3 cents per gallon.2
Cheese: Cheddar	20 percent		4 cents per pound but not less than 25 percent.
Swiss.	do	do	5 cents per pound but not less than 20 percent.
Poultry (live)	1 cent per pound.	8 cents per pound.	4 cents per pound.
Eggs	Free	10 cents per dozen.	5 cents per dozen.
Honey	10 cents per gallon.	3 cents per pound.	11/2 cents per pound.
Barley (unhulled)	15 cents per bushel.	20 cents per bushel.	15 cents per bushel.
Oats (unhulled)	6 cents per bushel.	16 cents per bushel.	8 cents per bushel.
Rye	Free	15 cents per bushel.	12 cents per bushel.
Apples	10 cents per bushel.	25 cents per bushel.	15 cents per bushel.
Cherries	do	2 cents per pound.	1 cent per
Potatoes	Free	75 cents per hundred- weight.	37½ cents per hundred- weight.3

1 Treaty rate applicable to first 3,000,000 gallons imported annually; balance of imports pay regular rate.

Treaty rate applicable to first 1,500,000 gallons imported annually; balance of imports pay regular rate.
Treaty rate applicable to imports from Mar. 1 to Nov. 30 each year; treaty rate for imports between Dec. 1 and last day of February is 60 cents per hundredweight.

This only refers to a few selected items. This injury to the farmer goes right down through almost every single product that can be produced on the farm.

As I have indicated, nearly all agricultural products under the Democratic Tariff Act of 1913 were on the free list. The only thing that saved the country following the passage of the 1913 act was the outbreak of the World War, which gave us a large foreign market and eliminated competition in the home market.

We are all familiar with what happened after the war was over and foreign nations got back on a more normal production basis. Our markets began to be flooded with the cheap products of the whole world, which came in without hindrance under the free-trade Democratic Tariff Act of 1913, of which the present Secretary of State—who is in direct charge of the trade-treaty program—was one of the principal authors. The Underwood tariff of 1913 expresses his tariff philosophy-free trade. Under the trade-treaty program he is carrying this country as far in that direction as the Reciprocal Tariff Act permits, namely, by reducing our tariffs by as much as 50 percent.

When the Republican Party came into control of the House and Senate in 1920-21, it promptly passed a farmers' emergency tariff to stem the tide of ruinous foreign imports which were displacing American products and depressing the price structure. President Wilson vetoed this measure the day before he went out of office. However, President Harding called a special session which again passed the measure and it became a law. It was superseded by the Fordney-McCumber Act of 1922, which restored the protective tariff for agriculture, industry, and labor.

When the act of 1922 was passed, our Democratic friends predicted that it would absolutely stifle our foreign trade and cause us to lose our export markets. Their dire predictions failed to materialize. Our foreign trade, both imports and exports, grew by leaps and bounds. Instead of our exports declining they increased as follows between 1922 and 1929:

United States export trade
1922	$3, 832, 000, 000
1923	4, 167, 000, 000
1924	4, 591, 000, 000
1925	4, 910, 000, 000
1926	4, 809, 000, 000
1927	4, 865, 000, 000
1928	5, 128, 000, 000
1929	5. 241. 000. 000

And instead of the protective tariff act of 1922 shutting out our imports, they increased as follows:

United States import trad	le
1922	$3, 113, 000, 000
1923	3, 792, 000, 000
1924	3, 610, 000, 000
1925	4, 227, 000, 000
1926
1927
1928
1929	4 399 000 000

In the light of these official figures, trade-treaty proponents cannot possibly argue that the Republican tariff policy of the twenties shut off our foreign trade. "But what about the Tariff Act of 1930?", they will say. The Tariff Act of 1930 was not passed until 9 months after the 1929 depression began. Our foreign trade from 1929 to 1932 declined just as did our internal trade. It was a world-wide condition. We bought less from abroad because we had less purchasing power. We sold less abroad because other countries had less purchasing power.

The proof of this fact is the recent Roosevelt depression. In spite of reduced tariffs under trade treaties, the Roosevelt depression came upon us. Our imports declined during this depression not because of increased tariffs but because of decreased purchasing power at home. Our exports held up fairly well because in other countries more progress has been made toward recovery than in the United States.

Another proof that the Tariff Act of 1930 had nothing to do with the 1929 depression is that our imports of items on the free list fell off in exactly the same percentage as our imports of items on which the tariff was collected. This shows without a doubt that our imports are based upon our prosperity at home.

If the act of 1930 is blamed for our decline in foreign trade from 1929 to 1932, then to be fair, trade-treaty proponents must also give it credit for the rise in our foreign trade from 1932 until the time the trade-treaty program came into effect.

Also it must be given credit for the increase in trade from 1932 to date with countries with which we do not have trade treaties. As a matter of fact, there is every reason to believe that our trade with treaty countries would have increased to a large extent even without the treaties, as was the case before the treaties were entered into.

Another argument we hear is that it was financed by foreign loans. Some of it was; that is true. But practically 100 percent of our foreign trade during the war years was financed by foreign loans which have never been repaid. And under the present administration our foreign trade is again being financed by loans, as, for example, the Export-Import Bank.

The only difference between the financing of foreign trade under Republican and Democratic administrations is that under the former the financing was done by private interests while under the present and previous Democratic administrations the taxpayers' money was used.

I have cited the great increase of our foreign trade under the 1922 Tariff Act as definitely proving that tariff protection and the expansion of foreign trade are not inconsistent with each other. Neither are protection and true reciprocity, because under true reciprocity we trade our exportable surpluses for the things we need but do not produce

That is the kind of reciprocity which the Republican Party put into effect under McKinley. The present administration, however, is laboring under the mistaken theory that only by surrendering our home market to competitive foreign products can we expand our export trade. Even if that were the only way—which I do not for a moment concede—it would be a costly price to pay, since it involves the trading off of the greatest and richest market on earth for relatively lean and illusory foreign markets.

The trade-treaty program is not the only method by which the American market is being surrendered. Under the sugar-control program, American cane- and beet-sugar producers are put on a strict production quota in order that a large share of the home market may be given to the non-Cuban capitalists who own the Cuban sugar industry. Not only has a quota on domestic production been imposed, but the tariff has been reduced, both under the flexible tariff and under the treaty program, first from 2 cents per pound to $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents, and then down to nine-tenths of 1 cent. When the Cuban dictator, Colonel Batista, was recently in this country, we heard rumors that a still further reduction might be made.

During the social-security hearings now going on before the Ways and Means Committee, several witnesses appeared to ask for social-security benefits for Puerto Rico and pointed out the deplorable conditions now prevailing there. Among these witnesses was Dr. Gruening, Director of the Division of Territories and Insular Possessions of the Interior Department. He was asked what caused the deplorable conditions in Puerto Rico, and among other things pointed to the sugarquota law and the trade treaties.

Under the sugar-quota law Puerto Rico lost employment for 20,000 people because of restricted production.

Under the trade treaties the pineapple industry was almost completely wiped out because of the tariff reductions granted to Cuba. The tariff on coconuts was cut in two under the British treaty, giving the British possessions in the Caribbean a competitive advantage in the American market over Puerto Rican coconuts. Under the Swiss treaty the reduction in the tariff on needlework, along with the 25-cent minimum wage law, has wiped out the previously flourishing needlework industry in the island. Here we have an administration witness testifying as to the adverse effects of the treaty program. What applies to Puerto Rico applies even more to the continental United States with its higher living standards, higher production costs, and higher wage levels.

No proponent of the trade-treaty program can dispute the fact that the only logical and sensible purpose of foreign trade is to sell what we do not need and buy what we do need but do not produce ourselves. If this premise is accepted as sound—and I submit that it is sound—then the present trade-treaty methods just do not make sense.

Here we are, with factories running at part time, or wholly closed down, and with millions of men out of jobs, encouraging and inviting the importation of the competitive products of the whole world under the treaty program. We cannot put men back to work if we let foreign workingmen produce the things we need.

Here we are with controlled agricultural production and huge exportable surpluses of farm products, inviting and encouraging the importation of competitive farm products from abroad under the trade-treaty program. We cannot solve the agricultural problem by letting foreign farmers produce the products our people consume. We have never in the past had to take things we do not need in order to sell our surpluses, and we do not have to do so now.

In the most prosperous days of our foreign trade, under Republican protective-tariff laws, two-thirds of our imports came in free of duty. We should use this free market in America for noncompetitive foreign products as a lever for securing foreign markets for our own products. If that were done, everyone would benefit and no one would be injured.

But when, as at present, the administration strikes down one group of farmers or one industry in order to increase the export trade of another group or industry, not only is one American group injured to help another, but there is no net gain. And where the foreign markets fail to materialize, as is usually the case, there may be a net loss. For example, many of our concessions on industrial products have been made with a view to securing foreign concessions on American farm products. But when these foreign markets are not developed, the farmer not only is not helped, but his home market is diminished to the extent that American workingmen are sacrificed in an effort to secure these illusory foreign markets for him.

We have heard a good deal of talk of late by trade-treaty proponents about the recent pick-up in exports of grains, and they are trying to give credit for this to the treaty program. As a matter of fact, the treaties have very little to do with it. Two factors not connected with the treaty program have more to do with it than anything else; namely, large domestic crops and competitive world prices. If we look over the trade treaties negotiated to date, we will find very little in the way of foreign concessions on American grains. Only two countries, Canada and Britain, have reduced the duty on wheat, and only one country, Cuba, has reduced the duty on corn.

The other day I pointed out that the State Department was giving credit to the treaty program for the increased exports of tobacco, whereas 90 percent of the increase went to nontreaty countries. This is just an example of the type of exaggerations being made.

If the trade-treaty program is of such great benefit to farmers, it is strange we are hearing so much complaint from them. Perhaps it is because they know their own business better than the gentlemen farmers with silk hats, cutaway coats, and spats, who are running the treaty program.

The reason farm organizations are clamoring for congressional ratification of the treaties is that they feel they are in many instances inimical to their interests. They know also that more treaties are under consideration which may involve further reductions on farm products which have not yet been affected by the treaty program.

Reports are current that treaties with Argentina and Australia are being considered. Of course, the chief export products of these countries are farm products. The only basis on which we could enter into treaties with these countries is by making concessions on their chief exports to this country, which already offer serious competition to our own farmers in their home market.

A reduction in the duty on wool is a very likely possibility in any treaty with Australia. The lifting of our embargo and a reduction in rates on Argentine meat products would undoubtedly be a concession in any treaty with Argentina. A reduction in the duty on butter would probably be involved in any treaty with New Zealand.

The farmers of America are not going to permit this to go on much longer, in my opinion. The farmers of the country do not want another free-trade tariff act, such as we are rapidly approaching under the present treaty program. With their foreign markets fast disappearing, it is all the more reason why they should at least have the first chance at supplying the needs of the domestic market.

The gentleman from California [Mr. Gearhart] inserted in the Appendix of the Record, page 329, a very informative table which everyone interested in agriculture should carefully examine. It shows the tremendous acreage now being displaced in this country by imports of foreign farm products. The latest figures are for 1937, and they show that it would have required over 87,000,000 acres to produce the foreign crops which were imported in that year and which displaced like or competitive American farm products.

Think of that—87,000,000 acres of land displaced by foreign imports in 1937.

Not only is there urgent need for retaining our present level of protection on farm products, but in many cases increased duties would be justified on the basis of differences in foreign and domestic production costs. Yet every time the suggestion is made about increasing agricultural duties, whether directly or through the medium of import excises, the State Department throws up its hands in horror and says that it would be inconsistent with the treaty program.

I say, What of it? The welfare of our own citizens should be considered ahead of the welfare of foreign nations.

It is time we had a show-down on this proposition. We should not sacrifice the interests of American farmers, American workingmen, and those who are dependent upon them, just to carry out a whimsical, fallacious, and dangerous pet theory of the Secretary of State regarding foreign trade.

Do not mistake me—I am not arguing against reciprocity as such. I am simply arguing against the proposition that the present trade-treaty methods are in the interest of our Nation as a whole. I say they are not; they are in the interest of the other nations of the world, not our own.

The only reciprocity that can possibly be of benefit to this Nation is that which is based upon the proposition that foreign trade is carried on to exchange our surpluses for the things we need but do not produce. I offer this proposition as a basis upon which the Republican Party can go before the people in 1940. The tariff, as I have indicated, will be one of the chief issues in that campaign.

In view of what I have said, Mr. Chairman, is it not fair to say that the Republican Party for many, many years, or indefinitely, has been the real friend of the American farmer, and there has been no genuine interest shown in him by the Democratic Party, irrespective of the pledges that may have been given by candidates for office? [Applause.]

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. My time is so limited.

Mr. LEAVY. I think they will give the gentleman another minute.

Mr. TREADWAY. No; they have already extended my time 5 minutes.

Mr. LEAVY. I am willing for the chairman of the subcommittee to grant the gentleman an additional minute, so he may answer my question.

The gentleman speaks of the prosperity of the American farmer under a Republican protective tariff from 1920 on or until the Democrats came in. I want to ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that in the crop season of 1932 and 1933, when the American farmer was enjoying the protection of a Republican tariff, cotton was selling for 5 cents a pound and wheat for 30 cents a bushel?

Mr. TREADWAY. The price of cotton was low because of the world-wide decline of purchasing power and not because of tariffs, either here or abroad. I will say to the gentleman that while there was a discussion here with the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] relative to raw cotton, and your side was claiming there was no detriment under the trade-treaty program to raw cotton, there also has been no benefit, and let me tell the gentleman also that the spindles manufacturing cotton into cloth in New England are not operating, and that is largely because a reduction has been made in the tariff act.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, let me say that the present treaty program contributes to the fear and uncertainty which is holding back recovery. It has aggravated our farm problem and helped to swell the ranks of the unemployed. It is undermining the protective-tariff rock upon which our American wage and living standards have been built. And it is a part and parcel of the earlier program of the New Deal in which the effort was made to centralize all authority in the Executive.

In 1940 the people are going to place the responsibility for tariff legislation back in the hands of their elected representatives, where it constitutionally belongs, and the Republican Seventy-seventh Congress will restore the protectivetariff policy under which this Nation has grown so great.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself

Mr. Chairman, it is a treat and a privilege to listen to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway]. His long and distinguished service here mark him as one of the greatest authorities on the tariff question in this body. Of course 15 minutes is a short time. I realize the gentleman could not discuss every phase of the question in that limited time, so I supplement what the gentleman has said by calling attention to the fact that the reduction in the foreign market for American farm products began in 1922 with the passage of the Fordney-McCumber Act. It did not become so immediately effective, because during all that time we were loaning money to Europe and they were using that money with which to buy our farm products; but with the passage of the Smoot-Hawley Act in 1928 the debacle began. From that time on the market for American products was all but closed by retaliatory tariff acts passed by foreign nations who had been our good customers for years in rensentment against the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act; that amounted to an embargo. Here are the actual figures showing the effect of this ill-advised tariff:

Exports before and after retaliatory tariffs of foreign countries invoked by the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act

	Average for period over 1926-29	Average for period over 1930-33
Index number of volume of all agricultural exports	118	92
Wheatbushels	123, 000, 000 8, 500, 000	58, 000, 000 7, 600, 000

And while political medicine is being brewed, I also noted the gentleman's reference to the number of Republicans elected to this House in place of Democrats, and his statement that some incident or other was the reason "so many Republicans were elected" to Congress. Do you know how many Republicans were elected to Congress this time? Only 169 Republicans elected to the House. The gentleman ought not to parade the weakness of his party. It is a sensitive subject. Why back in the Sixty-sixth Congress there were 237 Republicans, in the Sixty-seventh Congress there were 300 Republicans, and so on down to the Seventy-first Congress when there were 267 Republicans. And now the gentleman calls embarrassing attention that today there are only 169 Republicans. Why call that up? The gentleman should be more considerate.

I was also both interested and edified to hear the gentleman acclaim the Republican Party as the friend of the farmer. Oh, yes. The Republican Party the friend of the farmer! When the Republican Party came into power in 1922 wheat was selling at $2.40 a bushel. When they went out of power in 1932 wheat was selling at 30 cents a bushel. When they came into power in 1920 corn was selling at $1.50 a bushel. And after 12 years of uninterrupted control of every branch of the Government corn was selling at 15 cents a bushel; cotton fell from 40 cents per pound to 5 cents per pound. Hogs dropped from $24 per hundred pounds to $2; and everything else in proportion.

Oh, yes, my friends, the Republican Party is the "friend of the farmer," but if that is true, God save us from our friends. [Applause and laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes. Mr. Chairman, you know it is small comfort to read the market page. It is very thin and tenuous comfort to turn to the last page of the newspaper day after day and observe the price of corn, wheat, hogs, cotton, lard, tobacco, and so forth. I have been examining the Journal of Commerce of New York about an hour ago, and I have been examining the market pages right along to see how agriculture fared. Wheat closed yesterday at 67% cents a bushel. Corn closed at 47%. Oats closed at 29½. Rye closed at 42½. Now, you must deduct commissions, transportation costs, and so forth.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I will be glad if the gentleman would include the quotations for the same items on this day of the year in 1932.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I shall try to get them and insert them.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. To save time, I might say wheat was 30 cents, cotton was a nickel, corn 15 cents, hogs $2, eggs 6 cents, and other products in proportion.

Mr. DIRKSEN. From those quotations you must deduct, manifestly, the transportation costs, brokerage, and commission charges. Let us assume that that is 7 cents in the case of a bushel of corn, so that corn today to the farmer stands about 39 or 40 cents a bushel. I see my friend from Illinois [Mr. Arends], who is a practical farmer, nod his head in the affirmative. Thirty-nine to forty cents a bushel, gentlemen, is less than 50 percent of this golden goal of parity that we have been seeking for the last 6 years. There is not much comfort in that answer, is there? For our friends on the other side of the aisle who have an abiding interest in cotton, and who have been pecking at the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] and others, may I say to you that April cotton closed yesterday at $8.17. Not so good, is it? December cotton closed at $7.51. Not so good, is it? That is on the basis of the 59-cent dollar. Translate that into terms of a dollar that is on a 59-cent basis and you are down to the 1932 level.

But that is not the tragic aspect of this farm problem. It is a fact that, first of all, we see eye to eye in the matter. We see with an eye of single purpose to the objective of achieving prosperity for the farmer, and then we proceed on so many parallel tracks, as it were, and never quite get into the destination. You know it always moves me to go back to the day when Abraham Lincoln signed the bill by which the Department of Agriculture was created in 1862. The first appropriation in 1864 was only $119,700. They did all their business in one building, with a very small personnel, and the building only cost $140,000. Now, they have 12 acres of stone down here that they own; they rent sundry millions of square feet of space in Washington and elsewhere, and we bring you a bill here that is in excess of $1,000,000,000 for the Department of Agriculture. It is a far cry from that first regular appropriation of $119,000 to more than $1,100,000,000.

What intrigues me even more is that this vast increase of expenditure for agriculture has brought such meager and negligible results. If we go back to 1909 when the agricultural income was approximately $6,250,000,000-mind you, that is 1909, that is 30 years ago-we spent only $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 for the whole Department of Agriculture; so that the expenditure was only one-tenth of 1 percent of the gross farm income. But now let us see what the picture is for other years. If we take 1939, or if we take 1940 as represented by this bill and exclude those items that are not essentially agricultural, such as the Biological Survey, Forestry, Weather Bureau, and Food and Drug Administration, and stick to the action programs, experimentation, research, administrative, and so forth, almost 11 percent of the gross agricultural income is extended in the amount carried by this bill. It is an astonishing percentage when you stop to think of it, and yet when we look at the market page morning after morning we see the real story told, and I am wondering what the answer to this whole thing is.

Divers functions have crept in since the time when Abraham Lincoln signed the original bill setting up the Department. That original act provided for the acquisition and diffusion of useful information in the domain of agriculture. We have gone a long way since then. We not only go in for the acquisition and diffusion of useful agricultural information, but we build roads, we trap and shoot coyotes and bobcats and mountain lions; and we export wheat to China and to Australia; we have a tremendous Bureau of Biological Survey; we build forest roads and trails; we chase cattle ticks and Japanese beetles and the pink boll worm; and we do a lot of things that probably were not in contemplation at that time. This is an indication of why the Department of Agriculture's appropriations have grown to such astronomical proportions. But I want to bring it down to a more contemporary period, and that is 1932 and 1933, to see just how this thing stacks up. We all remember 1932 when the agricultural income dropped to $4,300,000,000; and, of course, you know what happened. Herbert Hoover lost every State in the Farm Belt. That is the way they rewarded him. That is the natural reaction. There is no criticism to make about it, because the farmer, after all, translates the efficacy of the national administration in terms of farm prosperity, and if it does not materialize, out comes the ax; and it is possible that the ax will come out again before very long.

In 1933 we first began to hear about action programs, about benefits to the farmers, and subsidies which helped the farmers in 1933 to the extent of $162,000,000. His income went up to $5,980,000,000. That is an increase over the year before of about $1,600,000. In 1934 the benefits, however, increased from $162,000,000 to $556,000,000, and then farm income went up to $6,836,000,000. In 1935 subsidies and benefits had gone to $583,000,000. Income was going up then, and everybody was rather happy about it, including Mr. Wallace, because farm income had gone to $7,800,000,000. In 1936 the Agricultural Adjustment Act was invalidated by the Supreme Court. In that year only $287,000,000 was expended in benefits to agriculture. Farm income, oddly enough, after we had cut the benefits half in two, had gone up to a little over $9,000,000,000. That is the highest it had ever been for many years. In 1937 we increased the subsidies a little more. That year it was $367,000,000, and farm income was coming right along, everybody was happy, and said, "Well, isn't everything hunky-dory?" Farm income had gone to $9,636,000,000

Finally, weather conditions became normal, the grass-hoppers learned to behave, and the effect of the drought was spent.

Then what happened in 1938? General benefits to farmers had jumped to $550,000,000, but the farm income had dropped to $8,400,000,000. This is a drop of 12 percent following 1937. You know, what is worrying the administration right now is fear of the old ax which was taken out in 1932, and rightly so, since the picture is none too bright in 1939. This year, considering $212,000,000 price-adjustment payments, $500,000,000 soil-conservation payments, and the funds that are used under section 32 to provide for the export of surpluses and for the purchase of surpluses to be given over to relief, we are making available benefits in the aggregate of almost $770,000,000 in 1939. The answer, of course, measured by the yardstick of results as reflected in the daily market page can be determined by any Member of this House, by any farmer, whether he is raising cotton in Texas, producing milk in Wisconsin, corn in Illinois, fruit in Washington, or tobacco in North Carolina. These people can measure the results, and I have just read you the results as indicated in the closing figures for last night's market.

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. JOHNS. As I have been sitting here listening to what the gentleman has to say I have been wondering why the older Members of the Republican Party here did not think of this idea of borrowing money from yourself and taxing yourself to pay it back again that you might pay yourself benefits and raise the price of your own products. [Laughter.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. I suppose each in his own individual way has thought of it and seen that those who have tried it have fallen into a great, big, deep, dark pit, and did not try it again thereafter.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I shall be pleased to yield later, if the gentleman does not mind.

We are facing another crop year and we are making available in this bill $250,000,000 of adjusted payments, $500,000,000 for soil-conservation payments, and $90,000,000 out of section 32 funds with which to carry on exports.

In addition thereto, look at what other things we have undertaken that were not undertaken before 1932 in order to repair the farm situation. Here is this inane, asinine silver bill that was put on the books, whereby we bought silver in the world market and bought domestic silver. What did they tell us about that on the floor in 1934? They said, "Gentlemen, China is on a silver basis; Bolivia is on a silver basis; Mexico is on a silver basis. Give us this bill and it will stimulate the exportation of farm products to these countries." Instead of stimulating exports it has enriched the smugglers, it has impoverished the Treasury of the United States, and it has run most of these countries off of their metal base and onto a basis of managed currency. The farmer never secured one jota of good.

Secondly, you came along with the trade-agreement program. Much has been said about the trade-agreement program, but I prefer to let the Secretary of Agriculture speak, even as he spoke to our subcommittee. Mr. Chairman, you will find this on page 33 of the hearings. I asked him:

You still believe that it will be a long time before we can regain

Referring to the foreign markets, and he said:

I still believe it is impossible by any type of tariff adjustment or trade agreements to regain the market for agricultural products that we enjoyed in the early 1920's.

I will put the rest of it in. While he goes along with Secretary Hull, he has not too much confidence in the matter.

Then with respect to the expanding of the culture of products that we raise and those raised in foreign countries, turn to page 37 of the hearings, at the bottom of the page. I asked him this question the year before and I thought I would ask it all over again, especially with reference to cotton:

Assuming that could be done with wheat, is it likely it can be done with cotton, and if it were done with cotton, would other nations recede from the 9,000,000 acres of expansion in cotton culture that has taken place?

Read his answer. He said that the probability is they will not recede.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional

Mr. Chairman, you see therefore we have handed other nations some 9,000,000 acres with which to expand their cotton and that is gone as far as we are concerned. Meanwhile Uncle Sam owns 12,000,000 bales of cotton. We are the owners of 12,000,000 bales of cotton in which we have a frightful investment and on which we stand to lose $500,000,-000 before we get through, and, of course, the loss will be borne by all of the taxpayers of the Nation.

Mr. Chairman, it is not a very promising or rosy picture. In this respect I want to refer to the gentleman from Missouri who spoke a moment ago about the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act of 1930. I have been sitting here year after year with a kind of quiet glow of expectant and hopeful confidence, waiting for one of our distinguished brethren on that side of the aisle to drop a bill in the hopper to this effect: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled, That the Tariff Act of 1930 is hereby repealed."

I have never seen such a bill introduced as yet. It has not been done. I have heard it indicted in statements out in my country, but I have heard none of my brethren over here ever undertake to repeal this thing known as the Tariff Act of 1930.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. I rise to ask this question: Would the gentleman vote to repeal the Tariff Act of 1930?

Mr. DIRKSEN. If you gentlemen will vote with us, we will be glad to.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. The gentleman has too many conditions attached. Will the gentleman vote for its

Mr. DIRKSEN. First, the gentleman must give me assurances that he can get a majority on that side to go along with that viewpoint, then I shall share that pleasure and go along with you.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am glad to hear the gentleman concede it was a great mistake to pass the bill.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I did not concede that.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Well, he would not agree to repeal it unless it was a mistake. But it is too late to lock the stable now; the horse has been stolen. The Secretary of Agriculture said we cannot regain the foreign market which the passage of that bill took away from us.

Mr. DIRKSEN. O Mr. Chairman, that is not what the Secretary of Agriculture said. He was referring very specifically to this host of very singular and anomalous trade agreements that the Secretary of State was seeking to promulgate with other nations. He very specifically referred to that and said nothing about the Tariff Act of 1930.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.
Mr. DONDERO. A great and beloved former Speaker of this House, Mr. Rainey, said on this floor in regard to the tariff act:

You Republicans won't repeal it, and we Democrats don't dare

Mr. THORKELSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. THORKELSON. Before 1933 the farmers were paid at the rate of 100 cents of gold to the dollar for their farm products, is that correct?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think that is correct.

Mr. THORKELSON. What is the value of that today in relation to gold?

Mr. DIRKSEN. May I say to the gentleman that under the abstruse monetary policies carried on today nobody seems to know.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Does the gentleman feel that if we had an effective tariff it would be a solution to the agricultural problem in America?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Does the gentleman mean an entire solution or a part'al solution?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I have been listening to the gentleman with great interest. I am one Member who feels we have not found the solution to this problem. I would like to have the gentleman give us some suggestion as to what he thinks that solution would be?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think the gentleman from Massachusetts struck the keynote in that respect when he said the American market after all is the birthright of the American farmer.

Why should we permit the foreign farmer to preempt the American market? While it is not an entire solution, it is at least a step in the direction of a resolution to let him sell in the American market first.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Let me say this also: If you will look at the table of gross income for agriculture in the years 1913 to 1917 you will find that it ranged from $13,000,000,000 to $17,000,000,000 in a single year. Some will say, "Oh, of course, those were the war years." Very well; then let us look at the figures from Those were not war years. The income then 1923 to 1929. ranged from $10,000,000,000 to $12,500,000,000, and that is the goal we have been seeking to achieve, a sort of 1926 average or a 1909-14 base, the prices that were in effect when the Republicans were in power.

One should not discuss the future of agriculture or the present welfare of agriculture in terms of politics. farmer is not by instinct nor is he essentially one who thinks in terms of politics. He is thinking in terms of the price he gets for cotton, for wheat, for lard, for hogs, for beef, and for everything else that he produces. We all have a single objective in mind, irrespective of the side on which we sit. We want to bring prosperity to the farmer. Is it not rather strange, is it not astonishing, that the best minds in the country have been devoted to this problem for the last 6 or 7 years and we have spent hundreds of millions of dollars, and then when you look at the market page you find we are receding rather than moving in the direction of the objective and that we are 12 percent further away from it in 1939 than we were in 1938, although we have spent more It reminds me of the Chinaman who was very ill. He called in Dr. Carver, and it did not do him any good. After the doctor left his condition became worse. Then he called in Dr. Jones, and Dr. Jones left, and it did not do him any good. Then he called in still another doctor, but he kept getting progressively worse. Finally he did not call any doctor, and he got better. He made this statement: "Me callee first one doctor, then another. Me callee no doctor, me gettee better." Sometimes I think if agriculture did not call any doctor maybe it would get better. We have called all these doctors and spent all this money, and here we are receding from the goal that has been set down on paper.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon] asked the gentleman to incorporate in his remarks the 1932 figures indicating the price of farm commodities. Perhaps he wanted the gentleman to incorporate in the Record that low price. If you do incorporate it in the Record, also place in the Record the facts and indicate that the Republicans did not have control of the Government in 1932, that at the 1930 election our New Deal brethern had control of the House and the Senate. They are responsible for the low prices in 1932, not the Republicans.

Mr. DIRKSEN. No, I will do better than that. I will have to call up the Government Printing Office and tell them to tear off two-fifths of every page those figures appear on, to show they are based on a 59-cent dollar.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. This question has to do with trade for the wool growers and the cotton growers. I saw in the press that when Queen Elizabeth of England comes to this country she is to wear a dress made of woolen cloth from England. Also, Mrs. Roosevelt will wear a woolen dress made of cloth from England. I suggest that when the beautiful Queen comes to this country it will be gracious of her if she will wear a dress of woolen cloth made in the United States and also bring cotton dresses fabricated in the United States, because it will be very warm in June. When the Prince of Wales-known all over the world as England's best seller—came to the United States the last time he set the fashion for blue shirts. The manufacturers of this country did not have blue shirting in stock, so hundreds of yards of blue shirting was bought from England. It is true also that English tailors got a great deal of work. They should buy

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may say to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts we will seek to prevail upon our genial chairman to send a little note, with the endorsement of the committee, to the King and Queen asking them to wear garments that have been fabricated in the United States of America.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the Congress vote on that? [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, yes; I think it ought to be brought before this body for its approval. [Laughter and applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Every woman in America is a queen, as deep as is our reverence and affection for the mother country. We cater first to her royal majesty, the American woman.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Pace].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield briefly?

Mr. PACE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Were the farmers in the gentleman's district in a prosperous condition during the 1920's?

Mr. PACE. I will undertake to discuss that question in the course of my remarks.

Mr. Chairman, I hope for just a few minutes we can let politics adjourn. I am not concerned much with the past, except for the lessons it teaches. I know the farmers of this Nation are in rather desperate circumstances. Regardless of where the fault should be placed for the farmers' condition, this Congress has solemnly declared the farmers should be placed on a parity with other American industries and wage earners. It is to this subject, free of all politics, that I should like very much to direct your attention for the next 10 minutes.

I want to begin with the statement that fundamentally no American citizen, no American industry, and no class of American citizens is entitled to special legislation at the hands of the Congress.

Fundamentally we are all free-born American citizens, and there should be no preferences, and there should be no special favors. I want to begin my remarks, then, by a straight line, as near as I can draw it. Here [indicating on the black-board] is the American manufacturer, the American wage earner, the American farmer, and every other American citizen. They were in the beginning all on the same plane, or should now be.

Now, before I go further, there seems to be such little understanding of what parity is. Parity is that relation a pound of cotton or a bushel of wheat had during the period 1909 to 1914 to a manufactured commodity; we will say a plow point. Anyone who has followed the plow will understand what a plow point is. The Bureau of Economics found that during the period from 1909 to 1914, due to many conditions that existed during that period, there was a proper relation between a bushel of wheat and a plow point, between a pound of cotton and some other farm implement; that a pound of cotton could buy what it should buy, and that a bushel of wheat could buy what it should buy. In 1910 the cotton crop and the seed were worth $910,000,000, and they could buy $910,000,000 worth of commodities or necessities. Its purchasing power was 100 percent. In 1938 the cotton crop, the lint and the seed, was worth $600,000,000, but not only was there a reduction in the amount the crop produced but that $600,000,000 had a purchasing power of only 55 percent, or $330,000,000. Let me repeat, not only had there been a 33percent reduction in the cash returns but there had been a 45-percent reduction in the purchasing power of the reduced amount, and that is one of the troubles with the farmer today.

Let us now see what happened. Since 1909 to 1914, which is the parity period, or the period we use to establish the parity, among other things you have enacted the Smoot-Hawley tariff. I am sure the gentleman from Massachusetts and no one else will contend that the Smoot-Hawley tariff or any other tariff does not add to the cost of what the farmer must pay for his necessities. Then, first, you raised the tariff wall.

Now, what else has happened since then? You passed, among other things, and I will mention just a few, the wage and hour law. Now, what does the wage and hour law do? It increases the cost of processing the farmer's com-Therefore, when the farmer goes to purchase his raw product in a manufactured article it costs him more, in proportion to what it did before. There is one false theory, and I say it is false, notwithstanding the fact that some high authorities accept it as true, but both the Democratic and Republican administrations are acting on the presumption that if you increase the purchasing power of the wage earner that is all the farmer needs. I deny that theory, and I say that the conditions that exist at this hour dispute that theory. You increase the wages, you will say, of the wage earner, and you give him more purchasing power, but you overlook that at the same moment you also increase the cost of processing the commodity which the wage earner is to Let me give you an illustration, and these are figures just prepared by the Department of Agriculture. Today, a bale of cotton costs $40. The shirts made out of that bale of cotton—broadcloth shirts—are worth $1,000. What is the ratio? It is 25 to 1. A pound of cotton costs 8 cents, the finished product of that pound of cotton costs 25 times as much, which is $2. Therefore, when you increase solely the industrial wage earner's pay, you have not helped the farmer, you have not benefited the farmer, unless you give him something to go along with it, because every time you lift the wage scale you lift the cost of the commodity and usually the increased cost of the commodity is equal to the increased purchasing power.

Now, let me go on further. In addition to your tariff wall, in addition to the wage and hour law and, of course, the accompanying legislation—the Walsh-Healey Act, the National Labor Relations Act—we have the W. P. A. to increase your tax burden. This has not helped the farmer. The farmer, except an individual man here and there, has received no benefit from W. P. A. Then you have slum clearance. You know there is a funny thing about slum clearance. You not only have issued $800,000,000 in bonds and they are here asking for $800,000,000 more, but when you asked for the $800,000,000 in bonds, you appropriated for each year for 60 long years a $28,000,000 subsidy to go with it.

If you get the other eight hundred million in bonds, of course, you double the amount of the subsidy and there will be a continuous appropriation for 60 long years of $60,000,000 for the benefit of a small group in the large cities. Slum clearance has been of no benefit to the 30,-000,000 farmers, but has added to their burden of taxation.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PACE. Of course.

Mr. HEALEY. Does the gentleman seriously contend that the increase of living standards made possible through labor legislation does not reflect itself in increased ability of people who reside in urban centers to consume cotton and other commodities of the farmer?

Mr. PACE. I contend that there is possibly some small, indirect benefit, but there is no such benefit as can justify the attitude of those who contend that all we need to do to help the farmer is to increase the wages of the wage earner, when you and I know that when you do that you increase the cost of the manufactured product, and thereby nullify the increase in purchasing power.

Mr. HEALEY. Who buys the products of the farmer? Who buys those commodities?

Mr. PACE. Of course the wage earner buys a share of them, and I want to help in improving the standard of living and working conditions of the wage earners, but I also want to help the farmers.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. And is it not a fact that the farmers of the Nation consume largely the things they produce-overalls, shirts, and so forth?

Mr. PACE. Of course they do.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It is also a fact that no sane man will attempt to disprove that the wage-earning class, as such, sets aside more out of his earnings as savings or hoardings, which never get back into the purchase of those things which the farmer produces, as evidenced by the much higher standard of living which the wage earner enjoys than the men on the farms.

Mr. PACE. The farmers have nothing to save.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. PACE. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. Does the gentleman believe that anyone sets aside or hoards any money from W. P. A. earnings?

Mr. PACE. No; I do not.

Mr. HEALEY. Does the gentleman believe that anyone today, any wage earner, is able to set aside as savings or hoardings any amount of money at all?

Mr. PACE. Probably those in the skilled trades.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. PACE. I yield. Mr. CRAWFORD. But the standard of living of the P. W. A. worker and the W. P. A. worker is far above that of the standard of living of the farmer in the gentleman's own State and in my State.

Mr. PACE. There is no question about that. My contention is this: Of course, we should help the wage earner, and I have voted for many of the provisions to aid him, but my contention is that when we aid the wage earner we are justified, not only justified but required to do something for the farmer. Let me show you what has happened. In 1910 the national income was $27,924,000,000, and in 1938 the national income was $65,991,000,000.

In 1910 the wheat crop was worth $505,000,000. That was 1.81 percent of the total national income. In 1938 the wheat crop was worth $440,000,000, while there had been only a 15-percent reduction in the proceeds, and its part of the national income had dropped down to 0.67 percent. In 1910 the hog crop was worth $907,000,000. It represented 3.25 percent of the national income. Last year, although the hog crop had gone up to $1,090,000,000, its percentage of the national income had dropped down to 1.65. Now, how do you gentlemen explain that? My explanation is this: That up to now we have legislated the farmer almost out of business. [Applause.] My explanation is you have legislated for every class at the expense of the farmer. But if you have created that condition, if you have built up a standard of living, if you have increased the cost of the finished commodity, should you not in fairness, and have not the farmers of this Nation the right to demand, that they shall receive of the Congress, which has created this condition, at least a parity price for their commodities? [Applause.]

In 1910 the cotton crop of $880,500,000 represented 3.15 percent of the national income, while the 1938 cotton crop of $667,200,000 represented only 1.01 percent of the national income.

There has been no change in the farm population. It was 32,000,000 in 1910 and is the same today. But since 1910 the nonfarm population has increased 40 percent, or from 59,402,000 to 97,881,000. Such an increase in the number of people using farm products should ordinarily materially increase the demand and the price of farm products, but at this hour our farmers have millions of bales of cotton and millions of bushels of wheat without any buyers.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Nelson].

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Chairman, I feel that I have not in the years I have been in this House heard a more illuminating or more helpful discussion of the farm question. I am especially interested, and my sole purpose in speaking at this time is to further refer to what we understand by "parity."

My understanding of "parity" is that a given quantity of what the farmer has to sell shall purchase as much of what he must buy as it did during the base period. Parity may be arrived at in two different ways: Parity may come to the farmer in an increased price for what he has to sell or it may be realized in a lowered price for what he has to buy, or through both steps. Prosperity is measured not alone by the price the farmer receives. The prices he must pay for his purchases are equally important. In other words, it is profit-something above the cost of production-that determines purchasing power. If there is no profit in what he has to sell, the farmer has no purchasing power. So long as the farmer receives less than the cost of production, neither the farmer nor industry can profit as a result of agricultural activities. Whether we represent the city or the country, all of us are interested in bringing about a condition which will make it possible for the farmer to operate at a profit. I repeat that if there is no profit in production there is no purchasing power.

Again referring to parity, I suggest that although the farmer may receive more than the cost of production for what he has to sell, that price may be less than a parity price, and certainly so if the price of the article that he has to buy has been advanced to a point where it is higher than the corresponding advance in what he has to sell. The farmer is interested not alone in the price he receives for his product. He is equally interested in what he has to pay-what his

Again, as in the beginning, I say I merely took the floor at this time to try to develop, at least to my own satisfaction, what we mean by parity price. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman yields back 2 minutes. Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I am interested in the statement just made by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE] to the effect that in his judgment we have come to a place where we have almost legislated the farmer out of business. I am wondering if he is not about right. Especially in view of the situation as we find it today. Even with the best of intentions, we have more or less sold the farmer down the river.

We have a bill before us that provides for the expenditure of more than $1,000,000,000. I particularly want to direct your attention in a few moments to some figures I have compiled from statistics secured from the Department of Agriculture-to show that the average farmer who really needs this help and who is really entitled to help, gets a very small portion of it. I believe that after all, and fundamentally, the farmer does not want a subsidy if it can be prevented. What he really wants is a fair and reasonable price for his products, on the basis that he is required to pay for the things he needs.

I think we may as well agree that so far as soil-conservation payments are concerned—they are really subsidies. They do help the farmer to some extent to preserve his own land, but under our program we agree to pay him, if he will conserve his land, and provided he will cut down his own production. After all, what we are trying to do is to pass a little sum of money to the farmer to help take care of him while his prices are extremely low.

During the years 1937 and 1938 there were approximately 6,000,000 farmers in this country; 3,657,000 of these farmers and landowners received benefits under the soil-conservation program. About $315,500,000 was actually spent in payments to the farmers for soil conservation, and $43,500,000 for administration expenses.

If the $315,500,000 were evenly distributed to those who complied with the soil-conservation plan-the average payment would be approximately $100.

But, here are some figures to which I want to direct your particular attention: Out of 3,657,000 farmers-1,091,540 or almost one-third of them—received less than $20 each. There were 773,000 who received between $20 and $40 each; 500,000 who received between $40 and $60 each; and 556,000 who got between $60 and $100.

If the one-third of all farmers who received less than $20 annually, averaged as much as $15 each—and that is a liberal estimate-$15,000,000 would pay their bill.

If the 774,000 farmers who received between $20 and $40 each, received an average of $30-$22,000,000 would have paid their contracts.

Then, as to the 500,000 farmers who got less than $60-if they received an average of $50 each-$25,000,000 would pay

Then we have 556,000 farmers who received between $60 and $100. If their average payment was $80-and this is liberal—they would have received $44,480,000.

In other words, with $107,000,000 we paid approximately 3,000,000 farmers. Or, putting it another way, 80 percent of all the farmers received less than one-half of the funds allocated to the farmers and farm operators. Just think of itonly a comparatively few of the 3,000,000 farmers got as much as $100! As a matter of fact, they received an average of less than $50 each.

Furthermore, it took approximately $18,000,000 to pay the administration expenses in Washington and in the States, and it took $26,000,000 for county expenses, making a total of $44,000,000 for administering the fund.

This was more money than was actually paid to 1,800,000 farmers, being more than half of those who participated in the program, and who got less than $40 each. These farmers received thirty-eight and one-half million dollars, and it took $44,000,000 to administer the fund.

After deducting the $107,000,000 which was paid to the 3,000,000 farmers, we have a balance, in round figures, of $208,000,000, which was divided among the remaining onefifth of the farmers

So it would appear that the remaining one-fifth of those who took part in this program in 1937 received approximately $200,000,000, or two-thirds of the amount actually distributed in soil-conservation payments.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. REES of Kansas. I will yield for a question.

Mr. HOPE. It is the gentleman's idea that this money should be distributed only among the farmers, and that they should not be required to do anything to earn it in the way of soil-conservation activities?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I answer the gentleman from Kansas by repeating what I said a moment ago, that the soilconservation payments are subsidies in accordance with a prepared plan. The answer to the gentleman's question, of course, is implied in the mere asking of it. Certainly I think it would be better if they earned it, but I am also saying that this is not so much paid to him as earnings, as it is as a subsidy, because we want to help him out during this period of such extremely low prices. We say to him in substance that if he will permit a part of his land to be idle, we will pay him for doing so; that if he curtails production, he will be entitled to soil-conservation payments. It is my feeling that the help should go to the small or average farmer—the man who operates the family-size farm-and not so much to the great land operator in the gentleman's State and mine and in other States-where great tracts of land are tilled by machinery and hired help. We should not create a situation whereby a large proportion of these funds goes to the big operator who really does not need them. The average farmer does need this assistance, and we should find some way to help him a little more proportionately than the one who operates his thousands of acres by hired help.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield for a brief question.

Mr. HOPE. The gentleman is aware, I am sure, that there are in this country according to the 1935 farm census approximately 6,000,000 farms. Out of this number, something like 4,000,000 are under 100 acres in extent. If we are to make these payments on the basis of a farmer's doing something to earn it—then mere mathematical computation shows that the man with 10 acres or 20 acres cannot possibly do as much as the man who has 160 acres. If the man with the larger acreage does more than the man with the smaller acreage to help meet the problem, should both receive the same benefit?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I answer the gentleman's question by saying "yes," because if you are going to operate under a crop-control program the man who has a small acreage gives up more proportionately than the one with the larger acreage; and furthermore is not so much responsible for overproduction as the large operator. I have just said that in my opinion these payments are subsidies. This for the reason that the farmer receives the money for conserving his own land. Let me make it clear that I do not object to soil-conservation payments. I am only objecting to the large sum of money that goes to the large operators and for administration expenses, and the small percentage that goes to the ordinary, average farmer.

Mr. LORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from New

Mr. LORD. I want to make the statement that in my section the little 10-, 20-, or 100-acre farmer who needs help most cannot get anything.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I think that is true, generally. We hear a lot about the "forgotten man." He has been discussed a great deal here lately. The forgotten man is the one who operates the small, average, or family sized farm. I want to call your attention to some statistics. There are 2,800,000 farm tenants in this country. Forty-two percent of our farmers are tenants. We need more farm owners and fewer tenants. One of our great statesmen once said, "No man ever shouldered a musket to defend a boarding house," and he was right.

Mr. Chairman, my time is getting short, but I do want to call attention to one or two additional factors entering into

We pay these operators soil-conservation money. We talk about it being a subsidy.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. REES of Kansas. After all, they are getting a subsidy for their corn, wheat, and cotton on the basis and to the extent of the amount they raise. And they are entitled

I do not think the farmer really wants to be paid a subsidy for operating his own farm. What he really wants is a fair price for his products. He is entitled to the first right to supply the American market just as far as he can do it on a reasonable basis, just in the same manner as the laborer is entitled to the same thing. There is no question about that.

I have not the time here to put figures in the RECORD. However, I would like to make some further suggestions concerning the question of importations. You cannot convince me that imports from foreign countries do not affect our home market. Neither can you convince me that bringing in some 60,000 cattle from Canada in January of this year did not affect our cattle market. And there will be more in April.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Inasmuch as Federal taxation is now consuming almost 30 percent of the farm income, does not the gentleman think lower taxes would also be of benefit to the farmer?

Mr. REES of Kansas. There is no question about that.

In 1937, among other things, there was brought into this country one item of tapioca flour, duty free. It is estimated that the importation of this product alone took the place of cornstarch that could have been produced from 150,000 acres of our own land. This tapioca flour was produced by people of Asia who work 12 to 16 hours per day and get 14 cents to 18 cents for it. Why, Swift, Armour, and Cudahy have their own packing plants in South America. They are processing South American meat and bringing it here in competition with our American product. You cannot tell me that it does not affect the American farmer's market. There is no question about it.

Let us help the farmers. Certainly, but let us try to help the farmer help himself. Since we are going to pay subsidies, then let us take care of the fellow who actually needs it. That is what you are doing in other respects, as far as subsidies are concerned. Let us take care of the man who needs a subsidy in times of trouble.

Furthermore, just the other day we appropriated millions of dollars for the purpose of bringing great tracts of arid land into production in the Northwest, to compete with the small, average farmer. We used taxpayers' money, if you please. Then we tell the farmer out in the Middle West, the East and South, that he must cut down his production; that he is raising too much. On the one hand, you talk about the abundant life and on the other hand about planned scarcity.

We talk about overproduction on one side, and then say that one-third of our people are ill-fed, ill-housed, and illclad. The important question is that of maldistribution, and with it we have the great problem of underconsumption.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Would the gentleman say that the greater percentage of farmers who reside in his district have a cash income in excess of $500 per year per family, and that their standard of living with reference to sanitary conditions, entertainment, culture, and development is higher than the W. P. A. and P. W. A. workers who reside in the city?

Mr. REES of Kansas. Not generally speaking. May I call attention to something else? My farmers live in ordinary homes valued at from $1,000 to $1,500.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Many of them do not have bathrooms or running water?

Mr. REES of Kansas. No.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Do all of them have radios?

Mr. REES of Kansas. Certainly not.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Do all of them attend movie shows?

Mr. REES of Kansas. No; they cannot afford it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. So they live on a lower standard than the man in the city?

Mr. REES of Kansas. The other day we passed a bill providing for the building of homes in the slum areas. I am for clearing up the slums, but the bill we passed provided that those homes must not cost less than five or six thousand dollars per unit. The people out in my country would be glad to have homes worth $2,000.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The same in my district.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from New

Mr. MARCANTONIO. That does not justify efforts to tear down the standards of living of the people who live in the cities, does it? I agree that the standard of living of the farmers should be raised.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I understand that, Mr. MARCANTONIO. You do not raise their standard of living by tearing down the standard of living of the people who reside in the cities.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Certainly not. No one has suggested tearing down such standards. It does seem that we are a little out of line when in the name of "emergency" we ask our Government to provide millions to build and help maintain big, modern apartment houses in large cities like New York at a cost of $6,000 per family unit. To me it appears extravagant.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PITTENGER].

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the courtesy of the gentleman from Kansas in yielding me time this afternoon. I have enjoyed the solution of the farm problem this afternoon as it has come from both sides of the House. I want to make one brief contribution to the matter which is probably a little away from the line of debate in which you have indulged.

The farmer among other things is interested in the cost of getting his products to market, so I want to talk about the transportation angle so far as it concerns the farmer.

RIVERS AND HARBORS CONGRESS MEETING IN WASHINGTON

My purpose in asking the House for indulgence at this time is just this: I have before me a letter inviting Members of Congress to attend the Thirty-fourth National Rivers and Harbors Congress, an organization which is meeting at this time, in Washington, D. C. This organization is composed of a group of very distinguished persons. A former Member of Congress, William J. Driver, is its president. The chairman of the board is Senator Overton, of Louisiana, and Senator MILLER, of Arkansas, also a former Member of the House, is a member of that body, as is former Congressman Reid, of Illinois. Two of our distinguished colleagues are members, DEWEY SHORT and JACK NICHOLS. They, together with many other civic-minded people, make up the personnel of that

In the call for this meeting it is stated that their purpose and their excuse for existence is to have everyone interested in navigation, flood control, irrigation, reclamation, hydroelectric power, reforestation, the prevention of shore and soil erosion, water pollution, the protection of life and property from floods and drought, and the development of the American merchant marine, attend their meetings and become interested in the different projects. This is an ambitious program.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY PROJECT WILL REDUCE TRANSPORTATION RATES FOR THE FARMERS AND PRODUCERS

My purpose in rising today is to direct the attention of the members of the committee to this meeting and to call the attention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress to the St. Lawrence seaway project, which is one of the great projects in which the farmers of the Northwest, a landlocked empire of some 40,000,000 people, are interested. They are interested because it will help to solve to a degree the farm problem by reducing the freight rates on the products of the farm and also on other products in that great territory.

A former Member of this House, J. Adam Bede, who now resides in my district and who is an expert on transportation matters, in an article many years ago stated the very essence of this problem of transportation. He said that in 1854-

One man with a horse and cart transferred all the commerce be-One man with a horse and cart transferred all the commerce between Lake Superior and Lake Huron, more than a mile and a half, around the rapids of the Ste. Marie River, now popularly known as the Soo. One day some men with vision decided it would facilitate transportation to channel the rapids and let the ships go through without unloading at this halfway point. But the owner of the horse and cart opposed the movement and declared its advocates had hysteria. However, the dream came true; the horse and cart and their obstreperous owner, long in restraint of trade, have returned to dust, and a hundred million tons of freight pass through the Soo in a single season.

This quotation from Mr. Bede's article on the transportation question shows how vital it is to the farmer that there be a reduction in the rates that are charged for getting his products to the market and how indispensable such a reduction is to any recovery program.

NATIONAL VIEWPOINT REGARDING ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY NEEDED

The National Rivers and Harbors Congress of the United States is one of the most important civic bodies in the United States and it has for its main objective the improvement of all rivers and harbors in this country so that transportation of products can be made cheaper and the public benefited thereby. This organization, national so far as its membership is concerned, is supposed to consider all projects which will help the people of the United States in securing cheap waterway transportation and in removing the burden of freight rates and other handicaps to cheap transportation of commodities throughout this country.

I want to commend the purpose for which the National Rivers and Harbors Congress was created. It should be national and not sectional in its approach to the problems of navigation, flood control, water pollution, and other matters in which the people of this country with a national aim in view are interested.

It is my hope, as a Member of the Congress of the United States, that I may approach all legislation providing for improvements of rivers and harbors with a national viewpoint in mind and with the question of sectionalism left in the background. Waterway transportation is still the cheapest and most economical that has been devised. Other great methods of transportation have their place in our economic scheme and program. I have in mind, for instance, the railroads, and I recognize the great value that they are to the United States. However, in all fairness, I think it proper for me to say that over long distances they cannot compete with water transportation which has this field to itself. If we look at the transportation problem in its broader aspects. and in view of the fact that freight rates are based upon distance, so far as railroads are concerned, then we will see that there is no competition in the waterway transportation matter so far as long distance transportation is concerned, with waterway transportation. For short distances and for geographic sections which cannot be served by the waterways, you must depend upon the highly developed railroad transportation system in this country.

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM NATIONAL IN SCOPE

Now the problem of waterway transportation is, in my opinion, national in scope. Cheap waterway transportation which helps one section of the country is also of advantage to every section of the country. I base this statement upon the philosophy that when we help the other fellow, we indirectly help ourselves, and that when we harm the other fellow, we indirectly harm ourselves. In other words, no program or project is worthy of consideration that believes in tearing down another one in order to build itself.

So, with this thought in mind, I want to commend the purpose and object of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. I am not unmindful of the fact that in the past this great organization has not supported the St. Lawrence Waterway project, which is one of the greatest transportation waterway propositions of modern times. So far as this project is concerned, and so far as opposition to it from individuals connected with the National Rivers and Harbors Congress is concerned, it is my opinion that such opposition is of a sectional character. In other words, the viewpoint of those individuals is sectional and not national and falls short of what is best for this great country of ours.

SECTIONALISM BENEFITS NO ONE

In this connection, I have before me a bulletin of the Mississippi Valley Association which, under date of January 1939, undertakes to say that the St. Lawrence Waterway project will benefit Canada and by implication gives the impression that the economic interests of the United States will not be served if such treaty with Canada is ratified. I regret that my good friends in the Mississippi Valley have lended themselves to such a wrong viewpoint. Of course, the St. Lawrence project will benefit Canada, or else Canada would have no interest therein. But every time that it benefits Canada by lower freight rates and by power development, to that extent and probably more, the St. Lawrence Seaway project benefits the United States. The history of this project is a long one over a great period of years. People interested in transportation have consistently advocated the St. Lawrence Waterway project. Now, what is the St. Lawrence Waterway project? This much can be said—it is a project which will not be approved by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, unless I am sadly mistaken, or by the Mississippi Valley Association, because those organizations are primarily interested in another section of the United States and for some mistaken reason believe that what will help the great Midwest, will harm the Mississippi Valley. This is a sad and a mistaken viewpoint. It is the sectional viewpoint.

BENEFITS OF ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY PROJECT

The St. Lawrence Waterway project, in brief, is sponsored by civic organizations and civic-minded people who advocate the deepening of the St. Lawrence River, the building of locks therein, and power developments. All of this is in accordance with the recommendations of the Army engineers of the United States of America.

This waterway, when improved in accordance with plans now considered, will permit ocean-going vessels to make the harbor at Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., their objective and will add to the seacoast of the United States something like 3,000 additional miles. It has been estimated that some 40,000,000 people would benefit from cheap transportation rates if this project could be realized. These people live in what is known as the Middle West. I do not here discuss the opposition to the St. Lawrence waterway, but wellinformed people know that this opposition is selfish and sectional. I realize that objections have been raised as to the cost of this project, but those objections can be discounted because they are without merit.

The St. Lawrence Waterway project, were it undertaken now, would contribute to the solution of the unemployment problem because it would give work to many thousands of people. Incidentally, it would create great power developments and in the future electric energy will become more and more important to the people of the United States, as well as to the people of Canada. It is estimated that 5,000,000 hydroelectric horsepower would be made available as an incident to the improvement of this navigation project. In time of war, speaking from the standpoint of national defense, the completion of this project would be of great help both to the United States and to Canada. Several years ago the manufacturing interests in New England realized the great value of this canal, and one of the organizations in New England prepared a booklet showing how New England could send its manufactured products through the canal to the great Midwest and receive in exchange commodities which the great Midwest of this continent had to offer. This same attitude will apply with respect to other seaboard cities of the United States. From the standpoint of this country alone and from the standpoint of industry and manufacturers on both seaboards, the St. Lawrence waterway project would help with its cheap water transportation in opening up new markets, when, at a time like this, European markets are not available. I earnestly urge upon the National Rivers and Harbors Congress this national viewpoint in connection with waterway transportation.

PROJECT AWAITS TREATY WITH CANADA

I realize that there are difficulties ahead; that two countries are involved, Canada and the United States; that the United States, through its President, in November 1938, forwarded to the Canadian Government a proposed treaty ratifying the St. Lawrence waterway project and which treaty would be agreeable to the United States. This, of course, was the beginning of a series of negotiations between two great governments. Such negotiations are of a diplomatic character, and I do not deviate from the rule that our State Department should conduct the same. I do not here discuss the present status of the waterway treaty, so far as Canada is concerned. I do know that Mr. Roosevelt, as well as his predecessor in office, favors the St. Lawrence waterway project for the reason that it will provide cheap waterway transportation and contribute directly to the economic welfare of millions of people in Canada and the United States.

Let me say, Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, that it is my hope that the Congress of the United States will look with favor upon this great river project which will permit oceangoing boats to traverse the Great Lakes of the United States and make Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., their destination. I feel confident that in time broad-minded and patriotic people of this country will recognize the great advantages of this waterway-transportation improvement, and that to the East and West and to the South and to the North our people will recognize the doctrine that when you help another section of the country you help your own. In due time this broadminded attitude will be reflected in the ratification of a treaty with Canada bringing to a successful completion the so-called St. Lawrence waterway project. When this occurs, another great step will be taken for the economic betterment of all the people of two great countries. And if eventually, why not now? [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Massingale].

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, I want to discuss for a brief time the bill H. R. 2371, known as the cost of production bill, which has been introduced under that number in this session of Congress. My reason for wanting to discuss it at this time is that I believe if there is anything on which the Members of this House are in accord it is that the present Agricultural Adjustment Act is a colossal failure, and that instead of benefiting the American farmer it is pauperizing him. The Congress and the country, including the farmers, are looking to this body to relieve them from the disastrous effects of the further continuance of this Agricultural Adjustment Act.

The cost of production bill provides for several things, and I will run over the mechanics of them as speedily as I can. I call your attention to the fact that hearings have been had on this bill in both the Senate and the House. These hearings have been concluded, and there has been filed with the Speaker motion No. 5 to withdraw this bill from the consideration of the Rules Committee and have it available when the proper time comes for submission to the House. This may not be necessary, but we want to take that precaution so the American farmer will not be disappointed in the failure of this House to pass some kind of worth-while farm legislation.

Forty-nine or fifty of the seventy agricultural products are recognized in this bill. These 49 or 50 products constitute 99 percent plus of all agricultural production. In respect of most of these products there is no surplus, all we produce of those items being consumed domestically. In the case of a few of them, particularly cotton, tobacco, wheat, and some other items, there is a vast quantity for export. The total export last year of farm commodities was $453,000,000. Cotton accounted for $338,000,000 of these exports.

Now let us consider cotton. I am more familiar with cotton than I am with any other item of farm production. Cotton is the sixth most important crop in the Union.

It is the largest export crop, the largest surplus crop, and, of course, it is the most difficult to handle and dispose of.

Under the terms of this bill any farm product is a subject of interstate commerce where there is in excess of $10,000,000 worth of that product entering into interstate commerce in one year.

The Secretary of Agriculture will ascertain the average cost of producing a pound of lint cotton, say, and that is not a difficult or abstruse thing to do. He can sit in his office down here in the Department building and from census data and from the yearbooks, he has everything necessary to enable him and his force to determine what the cost of production of any farm product on an average is in the United States.

He will determine under this bill the beginning and the ending of marketing years and he will estimate the volume of current crops. I am dealing now with cotton, but the same thing applies to wheat and corn or any other commodity coming within the provisions of the bill. Then he will estimate the percentage of the crop needed for the domestic market. For instance, we know, as growers of cotton, this general thing to be true—that the domestic consumption of cotton in the United States in the last 5 years, based upon a 5-year average, is something like six or seven million bales. We know that on an average about 80 or 90 percent of the wheat of the country is consumed here at home. The Secretary will find when he determines how much cotton is going to be grown in the United States what it costs on an average to grow a pound of cotton. Let me pause here just for a moment to digress and say that recently or within the year the Secretary of Agriculture has caused to be made a survey in the cotton States of the average cost of producing a pound of lint cotton; and, probably to the surprise of some of you, the average cost of producing a pound of lint cotton in North Carolina or in Oklahoma or in Texas or in Louisiana does not vary as much as a cent per pound. So it is with the cost of wheat or any other kind of crop that is grown.

Let us say that the Secretary finds that the crop estimate of cotton for 1940 will be 12,000,000 bales, and he also finds that the amount required for domestic needs of the United States will be 6,000,000 bales, and he finds the average cost of producing a pound of lint cotton to be 27 cents. That is about what the cost of production is now, as I understand it. If 50 percent of the cotton is allotted for domestic consumption and 50 percent is allowed for export trade or for reserves, then it is an easy matter, mathematically, to determine how this cotton will be disposed of. The law provides that if we consume 50 percent of our cotton here, domestically, and we have 50 percent of it left for the export trade and a man grows 10 bales of cotton, he will receive for the 5 bales of cotton that is required for domestic consumption the domestic price or the cost-of-production price of 27 cents a pound.

He will sell the other half of his crop at the world price or on the world market; and he gets, say, 8 cents a pound for that, as he is getting now, except he will not handle it directly. The Secretary of Agriculture will handle it by taking that cotton and selling it in a methodical, orderly kind of way, so it will bring the best price. The cotton will be freed of any kind of Government control or ownership, because you and I and every other man that handles cotton or any other crop knows that as long as you have more loaned against a bale of cotton than the world price of that cotton will bring you you cannot sell it abroad, and that is the trouble. The cotton market is glutted; the farmer cannot sell it; nobody can sell it; and we have now probably 12,000,000 or 14,000,000 bales of cotton, for which there is no market.

Now, let us see what this will do to the American farmer. There are 2,700,000 cotton farmers in the United States. It will astound you to know that 2,400,000 of these cotton farmers own an average of 15 acres of land each-get thatof which 5 acres, on the average, is what each one of these 2,400,000 Americans plants to cotton. The average acre of cotton produces 187 pounds, or the 5 acres produce 935 pounds, or just short of 2 bales. The other 300,000 farmers, of course, are larger and grow more cotton. They will get more money out of their operations under this bill, but the way it is now these 2,400,000, the most destitute and more neglected and less cared for of any part of our population in the United States, get now at the most what 935 pounds of lint cotton will bring at 8 cents a pound, which is the

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MASSINGALE. Yes.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. I do not believe there is any doubt that you have the ideal bill. I introduced a companion measure, but the thing that troubles me is the question of control and I wish the gentleman would talk more about the mechanics of the bill and how you are going to control it. How are you going to control production? That is what worries me.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Governor, there is no such thing as control of production in this bill. We are getting away from control of production. Control of production has been a failure. The Secretary of Agriculture in testifying before the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives yesterday admitted that the farmer of America could not hope even for parity under the further operation of his bill, and that the only method he knew of by which the farmer could get anything like approximate parity would be through the cost-of-production bill. Since we had these hearings before your committee there has been a committee printing of the bill in which certain suggested amendments have been incorporated that will take care of every objection that was made before the committee. But the object is to make it possible for the farmer to have more purchasing power so he can make a living on his farm, and this is so imperative that Congress cannot afford to overlook it.

Because the bill may not be in all respects perfect, and it is not perfect, is no reason not to do the right thing by him; but what are you going to do when you have a population of thirty-five or thirty-six million cotton farmers? You talk about abject poverty. Do you know what the average income of the cotton family in the United States is? It is $173 a year. You talk about standards of living!

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MASSINGALE. Would the gentleman wait until I finish this, please?

You talk about the standards of living for the American citizen. The cotton farmer gets $173, on the average, per year, and next above him in the scale of standards of living in America is the industrial worker, who earns, on an average, $908 a year, and then tell me that the Congress of the United States shall sit supinely by and try to satisfy the farmer and give him security by doling out at each session of Congress $250,000,000, $500,000,000, $1,000,000,000, in order to help him attain parity.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MASSINGALE. I yield.

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman was referring to the average income of the cotton farmer and the gentleman said it was something like $173 a year.

Mr. MASSINGALE. One hundred and seventy-three dollars a year.

Mr. MAHON. Is it not true that in many States W. P. A. workers get a great deal more than that?

Mr. MASSINGALE. The American farmer, the cotton grower of the South, has the lowest standard of living of any person in America.

Mr. MAHON. Is it not true that if the farm problem is not at least partially solved it will increase the relief burden and therefore raise the expenses of Government? The farmer is entitled to at least the so-called parity price for his products. I feel that an adequate increase of the income of the cotton farmer—the farmer generally—is positively necessary if our farm population is to survive.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I think the gentleman is correct about that. I make this further statement as a prediction, that if this Congress does not do something to relieve the intolerable situation that exists, just among the cotton farmersand, of course, it exists in other sections of the countrythere is going to be a Congress come here next time that will do it; and there ought to be one that will do it.

Now, let me get along a little further. Under this bill, as small as the items are, do you know what it will do to the 2,400,000 cotton farmers that grow 2 bales of cotton? Can you think of it in America? Two million four hundred thousand American men limited to a gross income of $173 a year, and the Congress of the United States will not take any notice of them? It is a most serious thing. It is a tragic thing. Just let me say this to you gentlemen: I wish I had time to discuss this bill; but I do not have time, and I just wanted to touch on the mechanics of it. I just want to say to you that the greatest tragedy in America that has ever been enacted in America is being enacted right now. It is a serious thing. In every cotton home in the South that is, the small ones, the 2,400,000 two-bale fellows-every day in the year there is being enacted a phase of this great American tragedy that ought to put the men of the Nation to shame for tolerating that kind of a condition. You have to get away from it.

Now, somebody said this morning in the debate they wanted to make a test to find out who is the friend of the farmer. I will tell you a good test. You go up there and sign No. 5 if you are a friend of the farmer. That is a petition to force this bill out of committee and for consideration of this House, and then follow it up and vote the enactment of this bill into law. Secretary Wallace, testifying yesterday before the House Committee on Agriculture, admitted that his bill would not do the work. What are you going to do about it?

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MASSINGALE. I yield. Mr. KEEFE. Here are two gentlemen from Wisconsin going up to sign your petition right now.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I am very glad I converted you. Thank you.

This is not a Democratic bill. It is not a Republican bill. God knows the farmers have a bill against the Democrats as well as against the Republicans.

I saw a little statement not long ago that pictured to my mind the real situation that all of us ought to look into. That was this: A wall was drawn in America around the manufacturing establishments of the country. That was the tariff wall. The farmer cannot get inside to get what he needs on his farm and for his family, unless he pays the price of those things plus the duty that is imposed upon them when they are brought in here from foreign countries. Butand here is where the Democrats catch it—the Democrats are continuing this kind of program by letting the fellow that is behind the tariff wall go out under reciprocal agree-

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. MASSINGALE. The man inside the tariff walls, the man who is protected by the tariff-and I do not care to discuss that-has his protection and has had it for 150 years. The farmer has not any, he never has had any, and you have driven him now to despair. What is going to become of America if we continue this kind of program? I want to say to you men that it does not make any difference about politics, I do not give a darn whether you are a Democrat or a Republican if you will do the American thing by voting either for this bill or some other American program that will enable this great class of our citizenship to get to that point in our economy where they can make a living, where they can go to the farm instead of the W. P. A. and the dole, and keep their families upon an American farmstead.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MASSINGALE. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. (After counting.) One hundred and one Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MASSINGALE. I yield.

Mr. KEEFE. The gentleman suggested a few moments ago that he was glad he had converted me to his position.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I knew where the gentleman stood. Mr. KEEFE. I may say to the gentleman from Oklahoma that the Republican platform in Wisconsin calls for cost of production for the farmer. I was elected on that platform and I stand with other Members from Wisconsin for cost of production for the farmer. [Applause.] Mr. MASSINGALE. I congratulate the gentleman. I knew where the gentleman stood.

Mr. KEEFE. If the gentleman will permit, I direct his attention to the fact that in the pending bill nothing is done for the dairy farmer of Wisconsin. We get nothing except soil-conservation checks, that is all.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I do not know how it operates in Wisconsin. I may say to the gentleman that I do not care anything about politics. I appreciate the gentleman's Americanism. He has just as much right to belong to the minority party as I have to belong to the majority party in this Congress, and I do not believe it makes any more difference to the gentleman, from what I have observed as to how he votes, than if he did not belong to any party. I know something about the history of politics, however. I know that in 1932 my own party nationally had a cost-of-production plank in its platform, and the Republican Party in that year had the program in view that Mr. Wallace is now operating under. When we were elected we stole it from you. Which party is more at fault? [Laughter.]

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MASSINGALE. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. I observe an item in this appropriation bill of $250,000,000 for the maintenance of parity prices. I know the gentleman from Oklahoma has a liberal attitude not only toward the farmer but toward the industrial worker. In view of this largesse to the farmer, does not the gentleman think we ought to recognize the plight of the unemployed in the industrial centers and that we ought to vote the full $150,000,000 that has been requested for W. P. A. appropriations?

Mr. MASSINGALE. I am about the same kind of Democrat that my colleague from Massachusetts is, and I agree with him very largely on nearly every policy that has come before this Congress since I have been a Member of it. Speaking of the $150,000,000, I am going to vote for it.

I hope every Member will sign discharge petition No. 5 and the companion bill which gives Congress the power to rehabilitate and save for the farmer his premises. It is worth more to the Government, worth far more to the Government of the United States than it is to start out on a new program of buying a farm and a mule for a fellow

I shall further discuss cost of production before the House within the next few days.

[Here the gavel fell.] LXXXIV--202

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I vield 12 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Johnson].

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, it is indeed with the most profound respect and appreciation that gentlemen from both sides of the aisle have in the past hour listened to the practically united sentiment expressed in behalf of perhaps the greatest problem confronting the Nation today, the distressed plight of the American farmer.

Mr. Chairman, about 25 years ago the United States was endeavoring to feed not only her own people but many European nations then engaged in the World War.

Wheat sold up to $3 per bushel, hogs $25 per hundredweight, with nearly all agricultural commodities proportionately high. It was then that the people of the United States became alarmed lest our cities would suffer the pangs of hunger through inability of our farmers to grow food for all.

It was then Congress enacted legislation creating Federal subsidized county agents for the sole purpose of providing trained agriculturists to serve as county agents in extending education information concerning scientific crop rotation, selective breeding in animal husbandry, and other information to our farmers for the purpose of increasing agricultural production through better farming methods. Theoretically, to produce two blades of grass where one grew before.

What a change in a short 25 years. From a grave fear of food shortage to present-day alleged food surpluses which have become our agricultural economic problem since the Civil War. Along with our distressed agriculture we have between ten and eleven million unemployed wage earners unable to provide their families with shelter, food, or clothing.

That the present A. A. A. has relieved the despair of our farmers to some extent no one can deny. After 6 years of experimentation with benefit payments and loans our agriculture is still looking to Congress for a sound farm program that involves no semblance of crop control. The American farmer does not want crop restriction of any kind, but he does want a fair price based upon the cost of production for his cotton, his wheat, his corn, his tobacco, his hogs, his beef. The farmer was promised parity; he expected it; but he has not received it and his patience is almost exhausted.

My colleague from North Dakota, Mr. Lemke, recently said, "every county courthouse has become a poorhouse," and I want to add that every county agent's office has become a dole dispensary, with an administration pay roll of more than 88,000 Federal employees to dispense this dole under the deceptive but charitable name of "earned-benefit payments.

We are paying part of these benefit checks to farmers to not grow some soil-depleting crops, while part of it is paid for enriching the soil to grow bigger crops in succeeding

No nation is rich enough to pay a great mass of people for not producing the necessities of life while one-third of our people are underfed, underhoused, and underclothed in our cities and on our farms.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. After I have completed my statement. My time is very limited.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Get down to the facts. What are the facts?

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, true prosperity comes from the soil. Whenever our farmers are able to realize the cost of production for their commodities on that portion used for domestic consumption they will start the greatest wave of buying this country has ever seen. Our implement factories will again run full blast, our cotton will move into the clothing trade, the farmer will repair his house, refurnish his home, and renew wornout fences. It is very easy to visualize the reemployment that would automatically follow throughout the Nation.

As a co-sponsor of the Massingale-Lemke "cost-of-production bill," I am firm in my opinion that it is sound, workable, and the mechanics of its operation are simple and positive, requiring an administrative force insignificant as compared with cost of our present 88,600 A. A. A. employees.

Briefly, the cost-of-production measure provides not less than cost of production for that portion of farm commodities sold for domestic consumption. The average cost of production for the various commodities is determined on the same basis as the formula industry uses, giving due consideration to labor, depreciation, and so forth.

If a farmer delivers 1,000 bushels of corn to the elevator and the Secretary of Agriculture estimates that 90 percent of the visible crop is needed for domestic consumption, for instance, then the farmer receives the cost of production on 900 bushels of corn and the remainder, 100 bushels, is turned over to the Secretary of Agriculture for disposition in export or otherwise, but not to be in competition in domestic channels with American agricultural products.

Herein lies the importance of Agrol as the possible solution of the alleged farm-commodities surpluses. Agrol is simply anhydrous alcohol, which means that the normal 6 percent of water has been removed. A 10-percent blend of Agrol with a cheap grade of gasoline makes a motor fuel comparable with the regular lead-processed gasoline. A 10-percent blend with the regular grades gives a motor fuel superior to the premium grades.

The reason the manufacture and use of Agrol presents the most immediate and greatest opportunity for the relief of agriculture is because, first, the processing plants are most easily constructed and established; second, they would be small community plants scattered throughout the Nation; third, the blending process is a simple one and presents no obstacles; fourth, no change in internal-combustion motors or carburetor is necessary to use the blend; fifth, the distributing system is already established.

The one obstacle which thus far has stood in the way has been the hostility of gasoline manufacturers themselves to the plan. There is no reason why this should be so.

I have not time to go into these details now, but I do say that measures can be worked out that would enable the oil companies not to make less money or sell less gasoline, but to sell more gasoline and make more money on the gasoline consumed.

ADVANTAGES

Alcohol is a solvent of carbon and when used in a 10-percent blend renders a motor practically carbon free. Its antiknock qualities are pronounced. Agrol blend motor fuel gives greater mileage. I personally used an alcohol blend continuously for 15,000 miles last summer and fall. I found it highly satisfactory as a motor fuel.

COSTS

We know from authoritative sources, as determined by certified public accountants, under actual plant distillation, using 40-cent corn and including the Government regulation of denaturing at a cost of 2.58 cents per gallon that Agrol can be produced for 18 cents per gallon. With simple and improved methods of denaturing, the cost of denaturing for motor fuel uses, should be about one-half cent per gallon. It is reasonable to assume that 40-cent corn should produce Agrol at a cost of 14 cents per gallon.

Agrol can be produced in practically every agricultural section of the United States. Experiments have proved that Agrol can be produced from corn, wheat, rye, barley, potatoes—sweet or Irish—artichokes, beets, blackstrap molasses, rice, and grain sorghums. As is well known, damaged or moldy grains, heated or dirty grains, ordinarily unmarketable for food, find a ready market at distilling plants.

A bushel of corn will produce approximately 2.5 gallons of Agrol. At 40 bushels per acre, an acre of corn will produce 100 gallons of Agrol.

Our annual consumption of gasoline is about 20,000,-000,000 gallons. A 10-percent blend would require 2,000,-000,000 gallons of Agrol, requiring 800,000,000 bushels of corn or the equivalent in the other agricultural products.

PRACTICAL USES

The development that has so far been made in the United States has been through private initiative and private capital. The National Motor Fuel Association, the Illinois Oil Co. of Rock Island, Ill., as well as others are deserving of credit for pioneering the regular distribution and use of Agrol blended motor fuel against intense and unfair competition of regular oil companies. J. R. Heiple, president of the Alcohol Motor Fuel Association of Gridley, III., estimates his 1939 distribution of Alcohol blend will be 20,000,000 gallons, based on his distribution for the first 60 days of this year, and assuming a total of 8 months of distribution. Mr. Heiple informs me that a large oil company has just been added to his distributor list. Twenty-one nations of the world are using alcohol blend motor fuel today.

FOREIGN USERS

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey joined hands with the English Distillers Co. in England and announced through extensive advertisements "the most perfect motor fuel the world has ever known—Cleveland Discol 33½ percent British alcohol." They have widely advertised the many virtues of alcohol-blend motor fuel, that is, in England, but not the United States.

In Sugar News, a trade journal in the Philippines, International Harvester Co. advertises McCormick-Deering tractors which will burn 100-percent farm alcohol in the Philippines and which will also operate economically and efficiently on gasoline or kerosene without any change in the motor. There are a few well-known United States manufacturers of trucks who also advertise their trucks to operate on 100-percent alcohol in the Philippines. When the automotive and tractor industries replaced the farmers' hay- and grain-consuming horse power they also destroyed markets for millions of acres of power-producing crops.

The farmer is entitled to recover at least a fair portion of that market which the petroleum industry took from him. The farmer has become poorer while the oil industry has richly prospered. The farmer, through the universal use of alcohol-blend motor fuel, could again enjoy the comforts of life and the oil industry could enjoy a greater prosperity through regained purchasing power of both the farmer and the city dweller.

A few weeks ago I heard a nationally known scientist make the statement that the United States have but a 3 months' supply of gasoline. Known petroleum fields are estimated to last but 10 or 15 years. As each known oil structure is developed, the probability of new producing fields dimnishes. In the interest of conservation of our national resources we should proceed in an orderly manner to conserve a portion of our limited supply of petroleum and gradually replace it with our wealth of unlimited motor-fuel alcohol.

I offer these observations for the most serious consideration by the Members of Congress as a ready means of returning American farmers to a normal state of contentment and prosperity so that we as a nation may again enjoy a full and abundant life. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners].

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I am going to touch on a few high points, and I hope you excuse my method of presentation.

I have not had the opportunity to examine this bill in detail. That is one of the most serious results of this great concentration of governmental power and responsibility in Washington. So much time must be given to other matters there is not time properly to attend to the Federal business. In the midst of our perplexing problems there is one thing which is reassuring. We are beginning to realize that economically and politically in America we are all in the same boat. We observe in the House and we observe generally now and then some evidence of partisan spirit and partisan attitude, of class spirit and class attitude. That is inevitable. Under ordinary conditions, we probably could afford to indulge in this sort of thing in America, but not now, when great interest and great dangers challenge us to a greater efficiency than division makes possible. I do not believe anybody who has average intelligence can fail to realize that the problems before us are equal in difficulty to the best contribution which a united people can make.

I have observed this House for a long time. I want to say to the American people, in compliment to the House of Representatives and in fairness to the Members thereof, that I have observed the Members of this House Democrats and Republicans, when the supreme challenge came, to turn from the bitterness of partisan struggle and respond to the call of their country. I have never seen them fail yet.

In the 26 years I have observed the House of Representatives I have never seen the time when Members have been conscious that their country required a united nonpartisan consideration of public questions that the House of Representatives was not able to respond. [Applause.] We are all in the same boat, governmentally and economically, and this boat will not stand much political rocking. The economic problems of agriculture are the problems of everybody—of every section of this country. Men and women of sober judgment are serious when they confront the question whether or not America can survive as a democracy. We almost have to pinch ourselves to realize that we in America actually have to recognize that in a definite sense that question actually confronts the American people. I think we will win, I know we will win easily. We have got a long, hard road ahead of us. Divided we fall.

Our economic fortunes and our political future are inseparably associated in this country as they have not been associated at any other time in our history. Our greatest difficulty and our greatest danger, as I see it, is that we will divide ourselves into little groups, each group concerned in getting some group advantage without regard to the general common interest upon which all groups depend for their security. I want to emphasize that.

I had occasion to study the situation in Germany in 1927, and I suggested to some of my friends at that time that Germany did not have a chance to win out. There were in Germany 13 political parties, so-called. They called them parties, but they were in reality 13 class groups, with but few exceptions, each struggling for class advantage. The line of cleavage ran through them from the top to the bottom. There was no national solidarity, no general acceptance of any fundamental principles which held them together while they fought out their many differences, no realization of interdependence. A people thus divided found themselves unable to offer to the government in the hour of the government's great need, its great crises, an instrumentality that could carry forward the business of the government. I want to emphasize this thought. It is a fact established absolutely by the history of the ages.

No people who have acquired the opportunity of self-government, except by conquest, ever had their democracies destroyed from anything that was done to them from the outside. It is all right to be concerned about what people are saying on soap boxes, but free governments, except by conquest, are destroyed from within and not from without. Whenever the problems of a government exceed the governmental capacity of its people, then there must be a change in that government. That cannot be challenged. That is the great warning of history to the American people today.

This country will not lose, it will not cease to be a democracy, so long as our people are equal to their governmental difficulties. Whenever the people cease to be equal to their governmental difficulties, we will cease to be a democracy. That is a self-evident fact, because Government must be operated, and when the people no longer afford the Government an agency through which its business can be done, then Government has to have a different sort of agency.

I hope I am not appearing presumptuous in what I am stating. I realize I state these things with a good deal of positiveness; I am positive because I have thoroughly investigated the matter from top to bottom. We are in the same boat, all classes and all parties now interdependent upon each other in the effort to reach the shore. As I said I am just touching a few high points.

I turn now to our economic organization, having in mind particularly the position of agriculture. As I am compelled to admit, and I do so with much regret, I have not examined the details of this bill, but I have examined the relationships involved. I come from a city. I said to a friend of mine not long ago who asked me if I had read some books on economics, "I do not know much about the books that have been written on economics, but I know a little something about the economics that books are being written about." It is all right to read books about things, but it is better to look at the thing itself than to go stumbling over the thing with one's face hidden in a third-rate book written by some fourth-rate theorist.

There is not an economic law in the world that one cannot observe working in a village of 2 or 3 thousand people if he has trained himself to observe things which are within his vision. God Almighty has so organized the machinery of the world that it is within the capacity of people of ordinary intelligence, with the help which others contribute, to have the opportunity for observation and to know what they ought to do about things which fall within their responsibility.

I do not want to be taken too literally about books. They are all right in their place, but their place is to inform and stimulate thinking—not substitute for either observing or thinking.

Each business in America in a sense, and to a degree that it has not heretofore been, is a part of every other business. Agriculture is our most basic business. Agriculture fell into great disadvantage under the influence of the application of steam, electricity, and gasoline, to our human activities. When the individual ceased to be the industrial unit and the community ceased to be the industrial organization, and many people who theretofore had been manufacturing and producing the raw materials ceased to produce the manufactured commodities, when the home factories moved and were concentrated in the great cities, agriculture was not able to adjust itself to that tremendous economic revolution. Others sold products and services at the cost of production plus a profit. Agriculture sold to the highest bidder regardless of cost of production or profit.

Let me see if I can get across in my time the one thought I want to leave with you. I am not trying now to thoroughly discuss anything nor to thoroughly analyze anything. I apologized in the beginning for this discussion. I am merely trying to leave a few thoughts with you.

This illustrates the relative disadvantage of agriculture which must be considered in formulating any general public policy.

Whoever can hand you a bill for goods furnished or for services rendered has a chance to pass on to you a part of whatever has been passed on to him, whether it be a tariff boost, a wage boost, or whatever it may be. The merchant figures into his selling price whatever the cost was plus profit and his overhead, so does the physician and all those who sell and serve, if they hand you a bill. They must do it or go broke. Farmers cannot do it and they go broke. When we come to the great group of agricultural producers in America they cannot pass on these boosts because they were selling to the highest bidder in competition with the cheapest producers in the world. They are at the end of the passing line.

Most of the statements I have heard indicating the disadvantage of agriculture state that the farmer pays more for what he buys than he would have to pay if he could buy in the free markets of the world where his selling prices are fixed. But that is only a part of the picture.

The protective tariff places a part of our commodities above free-trade prices, and by that result places farmers producing agricultural surpluses below free-trade prices, because he sells at world prices but buys at tariff-boosted prices. But that does not give the full picture.

When the farmer sends his daughter to school, for instance, he pays an increased price for her clothes by reason of the tariff, and in the price that he pays for his daughter's tuition he has to pay a part of the increase in the cost of the clothes the teacher's family wears, and that of the family of the man who laid the brick that built the schoolhouse, and of the physician and all the rest. He cannot pass these on. He sells to the highest bidder. He is at the end of the passing line. I shall not complete that picture. In other words, we pass these things from one to the other, and whoever, as I say, can hand you a bill representing the cost of labor services has a chance at least to pass it on. But when you get to the man who sells to the highest bidder, without regard to the cost of production, he cannot pass it on; he has to absorb it. How much can he absorb, and what happens when he can no longer absorb, when his buying power becomes paralyzed?

Those of you who have watched the economic development before our depression or crashes, or whatever we designate them, recall the fact that our economic difficulties became acute in each instance with the paralysis of the buying power of the farmers of this country. When their prices got so low that it limited the quantity of the purchase of our commodities, our commodities began to pile up in the warehouses and people began to be idle.

Then the villages that were dependent directly upon these 30,000,000 farm people got where they could not buy, and the larger towns that sold to the villages got where they could not buy, and the first thing we knew the whole economic body of this country was paralyzed. Our industries, all interrelated, make up our economic body, and that body has a circulatory system identical with that of the human body. There must be relative equality of blood flowing into all parts of the body if every part of the body is to remain healthy and the body normal.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. You understand I cannot analyze this great subject in a few minutes. We confront that definite possibility, that definite danger of recurrence of the results of the early thirties. It is not a probability; it is a certainty if agriculture again becomes paralyzed. I am suggesting to the thinkers. Democrats and Republicans alike—and I have just the interest which you have—that all our businesses are interrelated and interdependent. It is not possible in America to paralyze the buying power of 30,000,000 people living right next to the soil without that paralysis extending up through the whole economic structure. This is a fascinating subject, and sometime I am going to ask the indulgence of the House so I may discuss analytically what happened to us after the war, its causes, and so forth, and that sort of thing.

I do not criticize what is being done in fixing minimum wages and doing a lot of other things of that sort which, in part, are passed on to the end of the passing line, but it would be foolish to ignore the fact or its consequences. It increases the interest and increases the necessity to regard the economic problems of agriculture as things not apart from our own business. There is not a human being living in the biggest city in America who can continue to operate normally or profitably if these farmers who are right down next to the soil lose their purchasing power. When you examine it, in a very peculiar sense, in a sense different from that which applies with reference to any other business, the farmers are the roots of the industrial plants. That is where the sap comes from, in a sense that is not true of any other business. It is a very interesting thing.

I appreciate the fact two gentlemen have yielded to me to give me an opportunity to make this little talk, and I am very grateful to them. I have not tried to make a speech. I have taken advantage of this opportunity to advance a few ideas worth thinking about. Whatever we can do to help each other to revive the almost lost art of thinking is about as good a public service as we can render now. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I want in some respects to supplement what the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin said with reference to sugar beets. In my own State-Montana—the farm value of the sugar-beet industry in 1933 was $4,575,000; in 1934 it was $4,095,000; in 1935, $3,625,000; and in 1936 it was $4,120,000, nearly a half million dollars less than in 1933, owing to the quota curtailments. It is significant to note at this point that only 28 percent of the sugar consumed in the United States is produced in the United Notwithstanding the fact that we raise only 28 percent of the sugar consumed in the United States, under the operation of these trade agreements the sugar industry in Montana, Wyoming, and all of the West is gradually being curtailed.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. No: sorry I have not the time.

Mr. Chairman, the main thing I want to speak about is rather in aid of or supplementing the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS]. I think the people of the United States are mighty fortunate in having as a Member of this great body, and having had for the last 26 years, a man with the honest heart and brilliant mind of the gentleman from Texas. [Applause.] He reminds me of the great late Senator, Senator Walsh, of Montana, whom you all remember as one of the greatest statesmen who ever lived in the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. KEEFE. Originally from Wisconsin.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman is correct.

I was reminded, when I listened to the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Texas this afternoon, of the statement made by a great English historian something like 150 years ago, whose name, as I recall, was Macauley. He said that it was impossible for a democracy to survive, and predicted that this democracy would never survive. Mr. Chairman, with this statement I do not agree. In one of the last speeches I heard Senator Walsh make, in the campaign of 1932, he made this statement, or substantially this statement: "That this country had to be on its guard and take care of the forgotten people or else the statement made by Macauley 150 years ago might come true."

What are the facts? And I am going to direct myself now to the bill under consideration—not really the bill, but to the principles involved. I want to approach the subject as near as I can from a nonpolitical standpoint, and I want to say to the membership of the House that the present agricultural adjustment bill has served a mighty good purpose, in my mind. Were it not for the lending features of this bill that stopped the price of wheat in its downward plunge, wheat today in Montana and elsewhere over the United States would probably be selling at "two bits" or lower per bushel.

That bill has many good things in it, but it has not answered the question, it has not answered the problem of the farmer; and if the membership of the House will pardon me for speaking personally for just a moment, I want to carry forward part of the argument made by the distinguished gentleman from Texas. It reminded me of an incident that occurred when I worked for the Government as prosecuting attorney for the Federal Trade Commission during the war. I was prosecuting an action involving the harness and saddlery industry of this country. The charge was that they were violating the Sherman antitrust law and the Clayton amendment to that law. I had upon the witness stand a manufacturer of harness from the State of Wisconsin-my friend's State. I developed from him that a set of harness that cost the manufacturer at that time about $35 per set was put upon the horse's back out in States like Iowa, Illinois, and Montana at as high as $160 per set.

I saw that he was quite honest, and made the following statement to him:

Now, the farmer is required to sell in an open market and take anything he can get for his product.

In other words, he is required to accept the other fellow's price for everything he produces regardless of cost of production, and when he pays a profit to the manufacturer of the harness, a profit to the jobber, to the wholesaler, and to the retailer, including their taxes as they went along, because as that harness passed through their various hands they added their taxes, their living expenses, and their profits. I told him to bear in mind that the farmer had to pay that fixed price because you gentlemen have your fixed price. Of course, it is not fixed by contract, because that is in violation of the Sherman antitrust law, but they have a gentleman's agreement, entered into at banquets, and so forth, where the understanding is that so much will be charged for this and that. I asked him then the following "In view of the farmers having to pay fixed prices for everything they buy and taking the other fellow's prices for everything they sell, how long can the American farmer continue in the picture? Is he not an orphan in our economic set-up?" The harness is a typical case, everything he buys is on the same basis.

He answered: "Since you put it that way, I will answer the question this way"—and these words have rung in my ears ever since—"ultimately the farmer has got to join the Indian class."

I said, "By that you mean just what?" He says, "The vanishing American, because he cannot survive."

Mr. Chairman, I received a letter from what I would call a conservative, successful farmer, so far as we can find them under our present economic set-up, a success. He writes me as follows:

I have been very much interested in the farm program because I felt that the farmer's economic position was very unfavorable and very unfair, that unless something was done to equalize things and to change the economic current, we would all be eventually reduced to a state of peonage, just working for those interests who hold mortgages on our lands and our cattle. Of course, I realize that we cannot all make a success, nor all achieve wealth, but nevertheless when a man is willing to work hard, long hours, use fairly good judgment in his trades, has good land and good equipment and in spite of all he can do, sees his income fail to make his expenses year after year, his crops and cattle selling for less than cost of production, in spite of every economy, then I believe there is something fundamentally wrong.

That, Mr. Chairman, is the history of men who use good judgment and do the best they can.

The evidence of the plight of the American farmer is written in the county clerk's office of every county of every State in the Union where agriculture is one of the principal industries. Why do I say that? Because the mortgage indebtedness has gradually increased. Either that or the American farmer has had to abandon his home and leave it. We know that the finest people in the United States are the farmers and we cannot afford to lose them.

I was born and raised on a farm in Iowa and I have lived among them all my life. My district is an agricultural district. I can name on the fingers of my two hands the number of farmers who are now in my county who were farming when I came to the State of Montana in the fall of 1904. They have all gone or have been sold out.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I want to call particular attention to this. You put the farmer on the same basis as industry and we will get somewhere. In this connection may I say that we might as well face the truth. The time is going to come in this Congress when it will not vote appropriations as subsidies and that time is not far off. When the time comes what is going to happen? Why, I have seen my good friends on the Republican side vote for what they call economy measures; but God bless them, if they knew that the Democrats on this side of the House would not vote to feed the hungry, you Members would come forward and vote to do the job. [Applause.] I know you would.

I heard a statement made upon the floor of this House by the distinguished gentleman who is chairman of the Committee on Agriculture of the House which still rings in my ears. He was quoting history, but it is something that deserves to be quoted nearly every time an agricultural problem is presented to the House. He referred to the words of Alexander Hamilton. When the first tariff bill was ever presented to this Congress, Hamilton said:

If we adopt the tariff system in order to place the farmer on the basis of equality with the tariff-protected industry, we must pay him a subsidy—

Now get these words-

"not as a gift but as a restitution" in order to restore something to the farmer that has been taken away from him by the tariff system which we have permitted to grow up in this country.

Mr. Chairman, give the farmers a chance to improve their property, rebuild their buildings, fence their land, and do the things that are required to have a comfortable home in which to live and they will solve the unemployment problem in this country. The farmer is the greatest buyer there is. You know he never saves his money. He buys things for his wife, his children, and himself and to improve his home. He will buy the manufactured articles. He will put to work people in the manufacturing institutions of our country. In addition to that he will employ help to improve his farm. He will solve your problem if you will permit him to have a square deal in this economic picture.

Your President has done what he can, but the question is still unanswered. The unemployment question is still unanswered in this country. We have in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 hungry men, women, and children out of employment, and this condition will prevail until you put the farmers in a position to enter the market.

How long is this great body of unemployed going to remain peaceful? What makes Communists? Hungry bellies of men, women, and children.

How long is this Congress going to be called on to appropriate out of the Treasury of the United States in the neighborhood of a billion dollars for relief? When is Congress going to quit; and if it quits, what will happen? Every Member of this House knows that in the spring of 1933 this country was facing a civil war because of the conditions about which I am now talking to you. I say the President of the United States and this Congress saved the country then. But we have not solved the fundamental thing that is wrong. We have not put the people to work. We still have unemployment. Mr. Chairman, you are going to go a long way, you are going to take a long step toward solving this problem when you put the American farmer upon his feet so he can buy new clothes for his wife and something for his little children and still have something left over for his own employment and to make needed improvements. He is the only one today who sells at less than the cost of production. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Differ] such time as he may desire.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, economy seems to be the most elusive thing in the House of Representatives. gestures of the majority along this line are grotesque. Today the Appropriations Committee for the Department of Agriculture comes with a bill carrying the largest appropriation in the history of the country. The spenders are loose again. They are having another field day at the expense of the taxpapers. The professions of economy made by the majority have been just as prolific as the promises of the New Deal. and they have had just as much substantiality to them. But a few short weeks ago frantic efforts were made by the administration to impress upon the country that it had become economy-minded, that it had seen the error of its ways, that its eyes had been opened to the falsity and futility of its financial program, and that business could find some crumb of comfort in an assurance of appeasement. An erstwhile profligate spender overnight took on a new mantle of moderation as the transformation was made from a Works Progress Administrator to a Secretary of the Department of Commerce. A strange apparition appeared before stunned audiences. Could it be real, or was it fancy? Hope springs eternal in the human breast.

In order to supplement the profusion of promises for economy, a reorganization bill was hurriedly drafted and more hurriedly presented to the House. During the course of the debate on that bill every effort was made to impress upon the country the thought that its purpose was to save money, to eliminate extravagance, to promote efficiency, and to give to the taxpayers some little ray of hope that a new day was about to dawn. The night has been long and wearisome. Many of us were not persuaded. Still more of us sensed the surrender to the Executive of responsibilities which should be discharged by the Congress.

In the hope that the majority would assert its prerogatives and by legislative action demonstrate to the country its purpose to eliminate useless executive agencies, I have introduced a bill providing for the termination of unnecessary functions of the National Government and the merging of other activities. I am convinced it will be a step in the right direction. Others can follow. Each will effect some saving. All will be helpful. In the aggregate the taxpayer can get some long-needed and eagerly awaited relief. In the light of the tremendous expenditures of the present administration, the savings may seem insignificant, but it may be that the majority will pursue the project further after it has once been started on the road of reason.

Section 1 of the bill provides for the abolition of the Central Statistical Board. This Board was set up in 1935. It is a creation of the New Deal, one of the many new creations. It performs no useful function that could not be performed better by other agencies under existing law. The Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 confers upon the Bureau of the Budget power to carry out all work now being done by this Board; in fact, Mr. Chairman, I believe the Bureau of the Budget is equipped to do a far superior type of work than that which is now being performed by the Central Statistical Board. The coordination of statistical information is not a task apart from the general administrative work of Government establishments. Such work is not an end in itself. When the Bureau of the Budget considers appropriations or requests for appropriations it is in an excellent position to evaluate the work being done by the Government establishments and to terminate those activities which are duplications by refusing to consider any estimates for duplicating

Section 2 provides for the abolition of the National Resources Committee. This abolition should be made at once. It is imperative that its operations have the stop sign flashed on immediately. It deserves no consideration. It is merely a propaganda device for spreading socialistic doctrine throughout the country under the masquerade of impartial Government research. It does no research of its own. Its impartiality is as colored as its research is impotent. Neither exist. It merely puts out costly pamphlets, bizarre brochures, and seductive studies designed to influence the people and paid for by the innocent taxpayers. These are as impartial as a communistic tract. The whole expenditure for this Committee can be classified under no other heading than propaganda, and at that, propaganda of a very dangerous type.

The National Resources Committee is a part of that machinery of Government created during the last 6 years that seems to take a fiendish delight in spending money just for the sake of spending it. It were better had it never seen the light of day. There is no need for socialistic indoctrination. Many new dealers have come to realize the fallacy of the experiments in these fields which have cost us so much and produced next to nothing. The National Resources Committee might with profit to the country "fold its tents and silently Section 3 provides for the abolition of the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration. If it is desirable that a continued study be made of prison industries, I submit, Mr. Chairman, it can be done more effectively by the Bureau of Prisons or the Prison Industries, Inc. At all events, the additional agency is unnecessary.

Section 4 touches a sore spot. I realize that I venture on dangerous ground when I include the National Emergency Council with other useless and extravagant activities. Most people look upon the National Emergency Council as a political adjunct of the Democratic National Committee.

To some this may warrant its continuance. Some of us have come to another conclusion. The testimony of the Director in the deficiency hearings for the fiscal year 1939 are illuminating as he requested extra funds for the operation of his council. The congressional elections were to be held during that fiscal year. It is to be hoped, however, that the suggested abolition will be welcomed by the Democratic leadership of the House to aid it in its high-minded and lofty purposes. To say the least, the country would applaud the move.

Section 5 provides for the abolition of the office of the Comptroller of the Currency. The primary purpose of this office is the supervision of the national banks, and since each national bank must be a member of both the Federal Reserve System and of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, there appears to be an overlapping which could be dispensed with. I submit, Mr. Chairman, the work of the Comptroller of the Currency distinctly duplicates in every respect the supervisory work of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and therefore constitutes an unnecessary duplicating device of the Federal Government. It is suggested that all of its functions be transferred to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with the exception of the control and supervision over the issuance and retirement of national-bank notes and Federal Reserve notes. These functions can be transferred and satisfactorily carried on by the Public Debt Service in the Department of the Treasury. Since the Comptroller of the Currency is a member of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, provision is made that the present incumbent of the office of Comptroller of the Currency shall continue as a member of the board of directors.

Section 6 provides for the transfer of the United States Employment Service from the Department of Labor to the Social Security Board.

As will be recalled, section 3 of the Social Security Act requires that all benefit payments for unemployment insurance shall be made through public employment offices. This provision has encouraged the creation of cooperative employment services in all the States. It has imposed upon these public employment offices a great additional amount of work that had not been performed before by them. Their work is more closely integrated with that of the Social Security Board than with the work of the Department of Labor. As a consequence of the increment in work resulting from the administration of the unemployment insurance provisions of the Social Security Act, the Social Security Board has found it necessary to give to the States additional grants-in-aid for the administration and operation of the cooperative employment service. At the present time according to the hearings before the independent offices subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee for the fiscal year 1940, it appears that the Social Security Board is contributing 80 percent of the cost of financing the cooperative employment service, the Department of Labor through the United States Employment Service 10 percent. and the States 10 percent. Thus it would appear that it is quite anomalous for the Department of Labor to control the cooperative employment service when it only puts up 10 percent of the cost, and 80 percent of the cost comes from the Social Security Board, which has no control over it. Therefore, it appears to be desirable in light of the above conditions to transfer the United States Employment Service from the Department of Labor to the Social Security Board.

This section provides for the abolition of the office of the Director of the United States Employment Service. This is justifiable. The present statute provides that the officer shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The heads of bureaus and divisions in the Social Security Board are appointed by the Board, and many of them are under civil service. It would not appear to be logical to have the head of the Employment Service under the jurisdiction of the Social Security Board in a different position from the heads of the other bureaus or divisions. In all probability, the United States Employment Service, if placed in the Social Security Board, would not be a separate board but would be a division in the Bureau of Compensation. This provision goes on to amend section 2 of the act creating the Employment Service, and provides that all appointments made under the jurisdiction of this act shall be under civilservice laws and subject to the Classification Act of 1923. Section 2 as it now stands in the act of 1933 expressly exempts the United States Employment Service from both of these laws. This would not appear to be a very desirable situation, since we all believe in the extension of the merit system. It is thought this suggestion will appeal to the Democratic leadership in the House under present prevailing conditions.

Section 7 provides for the transfer of the Farm Security Administration and the Farmers Home Corporation from the Department of Agriculture to the Farm Credit Administration. The activities here are along the same lines. The Farm Credit Administration is engaged in the administration of similar and comparable lending operations such as those carried on by the two other agencies. Many of us are of the opinion that it has maintained a much sounder credit policy than has the office of the Secretary of Agriculture and the Farm Credit Security Administration. The similarity of operations are apparent to everyone. Sound fiscal policies suggest the advisability of such transfers which could be effected with some saving and considerable benefit in operations.

Section 8 provides for the amalgamation of the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It will be recalled that the latter outfit took mortgages on real estate where such mortgages were in default at that time. It has no power to grant mortgages at this time. It has become merely a service and liquidating agency. On the other hand, the Federal Housing Administration is insuring mortgages made by banking institutions. It is a going concern. Its activities center around real estate operations. It supervises loans and administers the liquidation of defaulted properties. Duplicating functions are present again. With the Federal Government so actively engaged in the real estate field, with Uncle Sam as a giant realtor, it appears logical to center the activities under one Sections 9, 10, and 11 have the same general purpose; the concentration of Federal activities in the field of power in one agency. The other sections are to make effective the transfers, mergers, consolidations, and terminations.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, the first move in reorganizing the agencies of the executive branch of the Government should be made by the Congress. The Congress created them. The Congress is responsible for them. The Congress owes a duty to the people to continue such creatures as it provides only so long as they can be justified. Then it owes a duty to put them out of existence.

In many instances the suggested transfers and abolitions would result in a decreased personnel with an attendant decrease in costs and a resulting decrease in the taxpayers load. Efficiency with economy is a desired objective. It can be accomplished.

Let us have less words and more action. Let us show the way to the President for economy by putting into practice the professions that have been made.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mason].

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, I have had in mind for several weeks the problems which I am going to discuss today. My purpose is to consider these questions from a wholly nonpartisan standpoint. What I shall have to say is not directed at any individual, party, section, or group, as such.

Mr. Chairman, we in this Nation are confronted with domestic problems that are dangerous to the welfare of our people and our posterity. These problems, fundamentally, are neither political nor sectional. Basically they are economic and social, and they have to do with the whole Nation and all the people, because in this country we are one people and our interests are so integrated that we cannot possibly have a durable, general prosperity so long as any great section of the Nation, or so long as any considerable group or class of our citizens, are poverty-stricken.

Critics—both Republicans and Democrats—during the past 5 years have been saying that we were pursuing wrong methods when trying to solve these problems; that instead of alleviating our troubles we have been aggravating them. Those criticisms have been confirmed by time and events.

Mr. Roosevelt and his spokesmen have recently said, in effect, to the critics of the New Deal administration, "You object to our methods, you object to our experiments, you question the results we have produced; all right, now you tell us what you propose to do with it. Tell us what your solution is to these problems."

Now, that is a fair challenge, Mr. Chairman. Whenever any individual, or group, or party is placed in a position of power; whenever that individual or that group or that party proceeds along certain lines, and whenever critics object to methods or results, we have to concede that it is only fair for those who are criticized to say to their critics, "All right, tell us what you would do."

At this point I want to impress this fact upon this House and upon the country: If we are going to find our way out of our troubles in America, we are going to have to do it with an eye single to the recovery of prosperity in this country, and with no thought of trying to gain any partisan advantage by playing politics with these grave and vital prob-

The first requirement in this situation is that we be Americans first and foremost and partisans afterward, if partisans we must be at all.

I have said that the President and his spokesmen have issued a perfectly fair challenge when they have demanded that their critics propose something better than has been done by the New Deal administration to remedy these conditions which confront us. Since that is true, it is also perfectly fair and very necessary for the critics of the administration's policies and methods to take stock of conditions as they are after 6 years of the New Deal, in order that we may intelligently and dispassionately approach the task of determining what, if anything, we will propose to do that the New Deal has not done, what different methods we would employ that the New Deal has not employed, or what we would undo that the New Deal has done.

Now, without rancor and in a wholly nonpartisan spirit, let us look squarely at the picture as it is today in this country and see, if we can, what problems confront us for solution. In other words, what is the state of the Nation after 6 years of the New Deal?

I think our situation has never been better summed up than it was recently on the floor of this House by my distinguished colleague from Kentucky [Mr. Robsion]. I cannot improve upon that summary, so for the sake of reemphasis and as a foundation for what I have to say, I use his words:

What are the net results of 6 years of the New Deal?
We have a national debt of $39,850,000,000, the highest in the history of our Nation, and it will go to $45,000,000,000, the statutory debt limit, by June 30, 1940.
We face the tenth consecutive annual deficit.

We still have an army of jobless and suffering wage earners in this country.

We have a banking system overloaded with Government bonds.

We have capital and industry fearful of investment or expansion. Industry and business are torn by labor disorders and

We have a division in the ranks of organized labor that has esulted in the bitterest interunion warfare the country has ever known

We have the highest taxation in our history.

We have the greatest number of employees on the Federal pay rolls since the Nation was founded.

We have the biggest, most powerful, most expensive political bureaucracy the Nation has ever known.

We are up to our ears in an acrimonious controversy with certain other Nations. Our Ambassador to Germany remains at home, while Germany's Ambassador to the United States does likewise.

while Germany's Ambassador to the United States does likewise. We have a failure of the good-neighbor policy in Mexico, with American property expropriated, and little or nothing yet done about it.

We have relief as an apparently permanent or semipermanent

We have a ruinously low farm income.

We have ruinously low farm prices. We have a complete failure of the administration's farm policy. Our foreign trade is falling off.

Sectional and class and racial hatreds and prejudices have been nurtured and fanned until they are bitter and dangerous.

We have had a succession of inconsistencies, contradictions, broken promises, and political experiments—all of which have left the country in the darkest doubt even as to the objectives of the administration.

Now, we have President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins all admitting as true the warnings the Republicans have been giving the country for 4 or 5 years, that these New Deal policies, practices, and experiments would retard recovery and prolong the depression. But these New Deal spokesmen do not propose any concrete amendments or modifications to the injurious experimental legislation. They do not offer to return any of the President's extraordinary emergency powers to the Congress, where they belong. They do not propose to stop wasteful spending and dent's extraordinary emergency powers to the Congress, where they belong. They do not propose to stop wasteful spending and squandering of the taxpayer's money.

We are in utter ignorance of what, if any, foreign policy the administration has, except that we know that on this sixth anniversary of the New Deal administration we are in the throes of a jingoistic campaign of saber-rattling and war talk exceedingly dangerous in the present state of the world temper.

These conditions must be remedied as quickly as possible. Congress must move along nonpartisan lines in order to achieve, or begin to achieve solutions to these problems which still face us.

begin to achieve, solutions to these problems which still face us. The Republican delegation in the Congress is ready to move along such lines, putting the welfare of the country above any partisan consideration.

I would add to the picture or summary of the gentleman from Kentucky, Congressman Robsion, these further facts:

The administration has frankly abandoned all pretense of attempting to balance the Budget.

The administration has frankly abandoned all attempts to reduce the deficits.

It appears from recent statements by administration spokesmen that the administration is now in process of abandoning its promises to appease business by "machining down" the legislation passed during the last 6 years under conditions which were not conducive to sound government, nor to safe procedure on the part of Congress; because mature deliberation, careful study, and adequate debate were denied the Congress.

In view of our national debt of nearly $40,000,000,000, in view of the fact that the administration now recognizes that we will be up to the statutory limit of $45,000,000,000 very soon, and in view of the fact that we now know that we will have a tenth successive deficit, what are we to do?

Mr. Chairman, there is no difference in principle in the methods that must be employed by a nation, a State, a county, a municipality, a corporation, or a private family, when confronted by the dangerous fact that outgo is exceeding income. So let us analyze this from a purely commonsense basis.

What does a family consisting of a father and mother and several children do when the family income is exceeded by the

We all know what any sensible family does and must do: The head of the family sits down with his wife and takes stock of the expenditures to see where a little can be saved here, and a little there, and a little some place else, until the family expenditures can be brought at least within the limits of the family income. Father cuts out 10-cent cigars and goes to a pipe, perhaps. Mother does without that new coat she was intending to buy. They decide not to take such long Sunday trips in the automobile and to buy less gasoline. Susy has to give up her dream of a new party dress. Johnny does not get the new suit he has written home from college about. Every member of the family has to bear his or her part of the general sacrifices of luxuries, and even of necessities, in order that the sum total of economies may bring the family expenses within the limits of the family income.

Is this a new idea? Let us see if it is.

At Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1932, Mr. Roosevelt, then a candidate, said:

What used to be analogous to an old-fashioned account book, that all the family could understand, has become in Washington a maze of intricate double-entry bookkeeping which only a few highly trained, technical, expert accountants could possibly understand.

If Mr. Roosevelt found this objection to Government bookkeeping in 1932, I ask you, my colleagues, what is to be said of the New Deal method of bookkeeping today?

Now at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1932, Mr. Roosevelt said something else:

The credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family The credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family is living within its income. And that is equally true of the Nation. If the Nation is living within its income, its credit is good. If, in some crises, it lives beyond its income for a year or two, it can usually borrow temporarily at reasonable rates. But if, like a spend-thrift, it throws discretion to the winds and is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending—if it extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, then it is on the road to bankruptcy.

Mr. Roosevelt never made a truer statement in his life, and his statement is just as true today as it was on the 18th day of October 1932, albeit Mr. Roosevelt has turned his back squarely upon those campaign declarations.

Now again I ask, What are we to do? Mr. Roosevelt has said to us, "You do it. You tell me where to cut." I might observe that this House told Mr. Roosevelt where to cut $150,000,000, and he has come back with request after request and demand after demand that that cut be restored; although, as someone has pointed out, it is difficult to see how an 18-percent cut in relief appropriations will necessitate a lay-off of 42 percent of the people on relief, as is now threatened by the President. It has been proposed that Mr. Roosevelt stop buying silver we do not need. Mr. Roosevelt does not want to do that. It has been suggested that Mr. Roosevelt buy less gold at $35 an ounce to bury down in Kentucky. Mr. Roosevelt does not want to do that. It has been suggested that Mr. Roosevelt reduce some of his multifarious commissions and bureaus and departments and let some of the high-priced political henchmen who infest the halls and corridors of the Government buildings in Washington, and who plague and pester the people over the country, go back home to work for a living. Mr. Roosevelt and his bureaucrats do not want to do that. It has been suggested that Mr. Roosevelt quit overloading the banking system with Government bonds. Mr. Roosevelt will not hear to that. It has been suggested that we eliminate those taxes that are deterrents to capital investment and industrial expansion. Mr. Roosevelt does not want to do that. It has been suggested that we investigate the W. P. A. for the purpose of finding out how to achieve efficiency and economy, in order that every dollar of taxes that goes into relief shall go furthest toward relieving those entitled to relief, while those not entitled to relief shall be ruthlessly separated from the rolls. Mr. Roosevelt does not want to do that.

Now, Mr. Chairman, when Mr. Roosevelt came into office he came in on a platform which declared, without qualification, that he would achieve a 25-percent reduction in the then cost of Government. Mr. Roosevelt did not do that. Instead, he started to increase the cost of Government from the day he took office, and he has continued to increase that cost of government every month he has been in office up to the present hour.

Now let us be fair. I am perfectly willing to concede that Mr. Roosevelt learned a lot more about the problems of government after he was elected President than he ever knew before. I am perfectly willing to concede, if you please, that Mr. Roosevelt's criticisms of the Hoover administration, of Government bookkeeping, of Government cost, of the national debt, of Government deficits, of the cost of national defense-criticisms which now after 6 years appear so strange as we read them—were spoken by him not in malice but rather from lack of knowledge and experience.

I am perfectly willing to concede that when Mr. Roosevelt came face to face with the necessity of dealing with these problems, he not only had the right to change his mind, but was forced by the facts to do so.

But, conceding all of that, is it not true that for 6 years under Mr. Roosevelt's administration we have been going in exactly those directions; that for 6 years we have been doing exactly the very things that Mr. Roosevelt himself and all of his supporters declared in 1932 would inevitably lead to the bankruptcy of this Nation and privation and suffering of its people? I repeat, Are those not the facts of the case?

Now, Mr. Chairman, a nonpartisan, disinterested, dispassionate, cold survey made by expert economists in the Brookings Institution and published under the title "Reorganization of the National Government" shows that-I quote:

To bring about genuinely significant savings, such as the 25 percent promised by the Democratic platform of 1932, it would be necessary to abandon or curtail functions, activities, services, grants, loans, etc. Abandonment or curtailment may operate in the entire range of national expenditures with the exception of • • • interest on the public debt.

At this point the question arises as to how we are going to begin to bring our expenditures within the limits of our income, or how we are going to increase our income to cover the limits of our expenditures.

So, then, Mr. Roosevelt's challenge to the Congress to tell him where to cut was a perfectly safe challenge from his standpoint, because he must have known then, as we know now, that under the New Deal administration the activities and functions of government have so expanded and multiplied and accelerated that there is no single answer to that challenge. In other words, in order to say where to cut, we simply have to reply, cut wherever we can as much as we can, precisely as the private family has to cut on the things that father wants, and that mother wants, and that the children want, if it is not to end up in bankruptcy and poverty.

Now, of course, Mr. Chairman, when we begin to talk about cutting here and yonder and the other place, we run squarely into sectional interests and pressure group interests; precisely as father, when he begins to recast the family budget, runs into objections from mother and the sons and the daughters of the family, who do not realize what faces the breadwinner unless he can make his outgo fit his income, or vice versa.

So, then, I am not going to attempt today to specify those activities of the Government which ought to be cut or can be cut, or how much each of them should be cut. What I do want to say is that if this Congress is going to fulfill its duty to this Nation, it will move to get a survey of all activities of government—and I mean a survey not controlled by any partisan group or by the administration—to find where these reductions and curtailments can be made with the minimum of hardship or loss of service or function and with the maximum of saving.

It was recently proposed by the President that we increase the national income to $80,000,000,000 a year or more in order that the tax revenues would provide adequate returns by which to finance these swollen and extravagant expenditures of government.

Easily said, hard to do. It was Mr. Roosevelt himself who declared at Pittsburgh in 1932:

I regard reduction in Federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign. In my opinion, it is the most direct and effective contribution that Government can make to business.

That was a fact then. That is a fact now. It still is true that a reduction in the Federal debt and Federal deficits would be the most effective contribution the Government could make to business.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we are not considering here a question of party appeal or partisan advantage. We are here today looking at this great Nation and the picture that is presented, and we are trying to face, I hope, the grave fact that we cannot go on for another 6 years, or for another 4 years, if you please, in the way we have been going for the past 6 years without facing national bankruptcy, chaos, poverty, suffering among our people, and nobody knows what worse results.

All well and good to talk about increasing the national income to $80,000,000,000 in order that we can tax that income to pay extravagant and wasteful governmental expenditures. All well and good for mother and Susie and Johnny and the rest of the children to say to father, "Dad, get a raise in salary, or get into a business where you can make more money." Of course, dad would do that if he could, and he would not have to be told to do it by mother and Susie and Johnny if he knew how to do it. Of course, we would gladly raise the national income, not to $80,000,000,000 but to $180,000,000,000 if we knew how to do it.

So many of us seem to forget that if we could get capital to reinvest, if we could get the wheels of industry turning again, unemployment would immediately begin to be reduced and the relief load would automatically diminish. With lessened demands on Government money, the necessity for the present ruinous taxes would diminish also, and we would start to spiral back upward to a balanced prosperity in this country.

In that same connection it might be observed that there are two ways in which to increase income for the average citizen. One is for him to be able to sell his goods or services at a fair profit in greater amounts. The other is to increase the purchasing value of the dollars he gets in return for his goods or services. That is just as true of the wage earner as it is of the farmer or the manufacturer. But, Mr. Chairman, when we talk about arbitrarily increasing prices to the point where the citizens cannot afford to buy, we would not increase the aggregate income of the farmer or the wage earner or the manufacturer; we would merely make it impossible for the consumers to buy their products.

We might just as well face this fixed economic fact now. All purchasing power flows out of the process of the manufacture and distribution of goods and services, including mining, of course. There is no other way in which to generate purchasing power. There is a certain amount of purchasing power extant at all times in the United States. That purchasing power will buy a certain amount of goods and services at one price level, and if you increase the price of goods and services to an exorbitant point by artificial methods, you do not increase the amount of purchasing power; you merely reduce the amount of goods and services that can be purchased by the aggregate amount of purchasing power extant in the Nation at that time.

Take the farmer, for instance. We all want the farmer to get fair profits for his products. If instead of having to plow under or refrain from planting and reaping the farmers of America today could be provided with a market which would absorb their maximum production at a fair price and a fair profit, we would not have to give the farmers a nickel out of the United States Treasury, and they would not ask it.

By the same token, if confidence were restored to capital and business, and if the idle wage earners of this country could be put back into jobs at fair wages, they would not have to have a single dollar out of the United States Treasury in the form of relief funds and they would again become customers for the American farmers.

The question now, Mr. Chairman, is whether or not we in America are ready to pull in our belts, forego some of our luxuries and unnecessary governmental activities, and begin to bring the national outgo, in some degree at least, nearer to the national income—not by taxing the people more but by spending less.

The American people, when they have been told the truth about a situation, have never in the history of this Nation failed to have the courage to meet it.

Do you think it would be useless to show the people of this country where, by curtailing some of the activities of the Government, some of the subsidies and special privileges, Government expenditures could be reduced, taxes subsequently cut, and a start made toward eliminating deficits and balancing the Budget? Do you believe, Mr. Chairman, the American people do not have the courage and intelligence to face such a situation and do the sensible thing? Why, sir, in less than two centuries the greatest nation on the face of the globe, with the finest form of government, the finest educational system, the highest level of living for its people, the greatest degree of liberty and tolerance, was carved out of the primeval forests and the unwatered plains. How? By the courage, the strength, the determination, the intelligence, the industry, and the thrift of our forefathers. Have the people of this country grown so soft that they have lost every vestige of that courage and independence which enabled their forefathers to take wives and families of children, an ox cart, an ax, and a flintlock gun, and go into the depths of the primeval forests and there not only wrest a good living for themselves and their dependents but clear the land, build their homes, and eventually establish a great civilization? I do not believe it.

What I am attempting to say is this: If this Congress will move, through some nonpartisan, disinterested agency, to get a thorough and careful survey of all our governmental activities, together with an analysis of where and how we can reduce in order to bring our outgo more nearly into balance with our income, and if those facts are laid frankly before the American people, I believe American intelligence and American courage will meet that issue and this Congress will find itself urged to make those savings.

Now, mark you, that would mean that a lot of well-fed, high-salaried bureaucrats would have to go back to work for a living. They would object. That would mean that an army of political henchmen would have to give up their sinecures and go back to making a living the hard way. They would object. That would mean that some people on relief who prefer to remain on relief as a way of life instead of working for a living would object. It would mean, in short, that every individual who under the New Deal has come to believe that he has acquired a vested right in receiving something for nothing from the Government would object.

If we are going to be deterred and intimidated by these objections, Mr. Chairman, then we will be in the position of the head of the family who cannot deny his wife and his children the luxuries they cannot afford until the operation of inexorable economic law lands them in poverty and suffering, and they have to give up the luxuries anyway.

There has been a disquieting development in the last few days. A suggestion was made recently that the President's present power to inflate the currency by some $6,000,000,000 be annulled, and what was the President's reply? It was, in effect, that he probably never would use the power, but that it was a good club to have in the closet.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I must confess that to me that attitude is illogical. That is like a man driving a team of horses saying he wants a whip in the socket which he never expects to use but which is useful to have handy. If a man driving a team of horses has in the socket a whip that he does not intend to use, that whip is useless. The only conceivable reason any man driving a team could want a whip handy in the socket is because he thinks he may want to use it and because he intends to use it if he thinks it desirable to do so.

The only conceivable reason Mr. Roosevelt could want to retain the power to inflate the currency is because he believes he may want to inflate the currency and because he intends to do it if he believes it desirable.

Now, inflation, whether used as a threat to try to compel business to greater expansion, or capital to greater investment, is a most dangerous weapon in the hands of any executive or any government.

Many a man in days gone by has overloaded his wagon, and when his team was struggling to the limit of its strength to drag the load up a hill, he has applied the whip in the mistaken belief that it was adding to the pulling power of the team, only to find before he reached the top of the hill that he had ruined his horses and made them worthless, and in some cases they dropped in the harness, dead from bursted hearts.

Any man or any group of men who believe they can by inflation, or the threat of it, force capital and industry to carry too heavy a load of taxation, limitation, and governmental competition, would be doing to this Nation exactly what the teamster did when he whipped his horses not into greater strength but into exhaustion. The surest way to rupture the heart of this Nation economically is to turn to inflation

Oh, I know, Mr. Chairman, there are those who talk glibly on the floor of this House about "controlled inflation." The trouble is that once you begin to use the economic opium of inflation it is never controlled; it never can be controlled; it always brings you to ruin.

The threat hanging over business, over industry, over capital involved in those inflationary powers possessed by the President, is one of the deterrents to business that should be removed.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it is perfectly futile and foolish for this Congress to talk about doing the necessary things in the way of curtailing or abolishing governmental activities unless the people are first given a frank, complete, and simple statement of where, how, and why this must and can be done. This is not a problem for the Congress alone. It is not something the Congress alone can do. It is not something the President alone can do. It is something that must have the approval of the country, and the entire country must be willing to undergo the sacrifices, give up the luxuries, do without services that may be very pleasant but are not essential to the people. Until the country is ready to do that, we here all know that the Congress is not going to do it. Until the country says it wants it done, we know the President is not going to do it. Until we rise above partisan consideration and party politics, neither the Congress nor the President will do it. It will not be done until the country is convinced that it ought to be done; and when the country is convinced that it ought to be done, Congress will move in a hurry to do it, and there will be no serious objection from the President.

We have reached the time when we must decide whether or not we are going to quit playing politics with this condition of affairs and get down to the business of removing these obstacles to normal prosperity. There is not a man or a woman in this House who can deny that politics have been played with absolutely every one of the problems that has faced this country, and that is largely the reason we are in the condition we are today.

It is sheer nonsense merely to criticize each other and to talk lofty platitudes and spout trite truisms. The situation calls for action. It is sheer nonsense to indulge in wishful thinking and empty political oratory when the vital need is for practical, sound performance.

The only way we can prepare this country for practical, sound action is to acquaint the people with the necessity therefor, and to convince them that we are going to proceed along the line of sound action irrespective of partisanship or party advantage.

It is sheer nonsense for the administration to challenge us to point out where we would cut and curtail, because, as I have said, to do that would be to cover the whole range of governmental activities. The job can be done only after a thorough and careful survey and a dispassionate and sound analysis of the needs and the possibilities for increased efficiency and economy has been made. Finally, growing out of all that, we will have a restored confidence on the part of capital, industry, business, agriculture, labor, and the people, which will permit us to go forward and upward to that level of normal prosperity of which this country, more than any country in the world, is capable, and which we can attain if we have the intelligence and the courage to do it. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Poage].

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, I come to you at this late hour without any statistics and without any charts, but simply to review one or two things that have been probably more ably discussed than I can discuss them. However, they are matters that I believe cannot be too often discussed.

I know every Member of this House wants to do what is necessary to be done to bring the greatest possible prosperity to the great masses of our people. I do not believe there is a man on either side of this aisle who will not agree that he is doing that very thing as far as he knows how, but there is a vast difference of opinion among many of us as to what ought to be done. Much of that difference of opinion I believe is difference of viewpoint; difference of understanding of various problems. When the gentleman discussed the cheese situation, I could not follow his remarks in their entirety because I do not know the cheese problem. I imagine the gentleman does not know the cotton problem. So it is with the various sections of the Nation. However, I believe we can all agree upon this fundamental: that until agriculture has a reasonable return there will be a great group of our people who will be deprived of any reasonable purchasing power.

I know there are those who do not represent agricultural districts who feel that that makes no particular difference. I do not mean they are callous to the needs of agriculture, but they feel that it makes no more difference from the standpoint of the Nation than it does if any other group is without purchasing power. I may be wrong, and I may be looking at it from a purely local viewpoint, but I am thoroughly convinced that it makes a great deal more difference to the prosperity of this Nation when you have idle farms, idle farmers, and a decline in farm income than it does when any other group is similarly afflicted, because no group other than the farmer, and to a very small extent the miner, can actually bring into the channels of commerce newly created wealth. There are those in many sections who work upon the products of the farm and the products of the mines to enhance their value, but from no other source do we add new units to the usable goods of the Nation.

It strikes me that when you stop the addition of new wealth to the stream of commerce you also stop the labor of the man who has been engaged in processing the newly produced materials. When you stop the stream at the source there is no water to turn the mill on the downward course of the stream. You can stop it farther down and though you do injury to the people below, but you have not stopped the whole stream as you do when you stop agriculture. So it strikes me that it is of vital importance that we see that our farm population be given at least reasonable opportunity to buy the products of the other sections of the Nation.

I have here a watch which I believe was made in Massachusetts. I am sure the man who made it drew a fairly good wage per hour, but I am sure the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Connery] will agree with me that the man who made it is not making a very large yearly income. Why? Because the man for whom he made the watch, the owner of the factory in which it was made, cannot sell many of those watches in my section or in Iowa or Georgia, or anywhere else in the great agricultural regions of the Nation.

If the owner of the factory cannot sell those watches, that artisan who makes the watches cannot work many days per month. If he does not work a reasonable number of days per month, the high wage per hour gives him no purchasing power. You have to go to the source and give the farmers a chance to buy the watches in order to turn the wheels. I would not belittle the contribution of any group to our national economy, but I cannot agree with those who feel that you can give the same impetus to recovery by adding a given amount to the purchasing power of any group. I believe that only by increasing farm income can you materially increase the income of all groups. All of the charts you have seen this afternoon show that industrial income and wages follow directly the increase and decrease of farm income. The trend in wages and industrial income always follows, it never precedes, changes in farm income. The reason is, to my mind, quite simple-everyone who has any income at all is now buying almost as much wheat, corn, and cotton as he would if his income were much greater-it is true that an increase in industrial wages would result in a slight increase in the consumption of farm products, but only a very slight portion of any such increase would go to the purchase of farm products.

By far the larger part of any wage increase or of any industrial profits are spent on the purchase of the products of other industries. The prosperity created by these expenditures bypasses the farmer to a very large degree. On the other hand, if the new money went first to the farmer as additional income, he would no less surely spend it on the products of industry and thereby bring added prosperity to all groups of our economic structure.

I know many of you in good conscience believe we have subsidized the farming sections of this country to a tremendous extent. Let me call your attention to the facts, because I know there are Members here who do not realize just what is being done or how little has been done. I turn to cotton not only because I am more familiar with cotton, but also because there is far less understanding of the cotton problem than of any of the great farm problems. Cotton is in worse shape than any of the farm crops of the Nation, probably in large measure because of that lack of understanding. Cotton is a crop grown only in one section of the Nation, and many of our people do not know anything about the growing of cotton.

They think in all good faith—and I have heard my good friends stand here and suggest—that this Government had subsidized the cotton farmers so that every cotton farmer ought to be driving at least a Buick automobile and maybe a Cadillac.

Let me call attention to the figures that we have heard this afternoon, and, as I say, I bring no statistics; but I think it is generally agreed that when the gentleman who spoke a few minutes ago said there were 2,700,000 farmers engaged in the production of cotton that is substantially correct. I know from reading the legislation heretofore passed by this Congress that there was appropriated last year only $212,000,000 for subsidy for all farm crops, and I know that the hearings on this bill show that there was only a little more than $84,000,000 allocated to cotton; and, by a little arithmetic, when I divide that I find that each cotton farmer in the United States received only $31 in the way of subsidy for a year's work.

A man whose average annual income is often less than $300 receiving a subsidy of only $31 for a whole year's work. After all, have we subsidized the farming interests of this country so far out of proportion to what we have given to other sections of this Nation?

I come here not to criticize any of the other actions. I know that there have been circumstances requiring action on other lines; sometimes things I did not understand as well as I think I understand this problem. For instance, I look to the problem of relief, and I realize, as you do, that we have subsidized and must continue to subsidize the unorganized and unemployed worker, but the subsidy to the unemployed worker in most of the States of this Union is twice as much in 1 month as the subsidy to the cotton farmer in an entire year.

Have we been unduly generous with the farming interests of this country? Can it be said that this Congress has given to the farmer the same opportunity to become a real factor in the purchasing set-up of this Nation that we have attempted to give to other sections and to other groups of our citizenship? Until we give to that farmer that same opportunity to buy, we cannot expect the wheels of our industry to mesh in gear.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POAGE. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I know the gentleman is very much interested in the farm problem and so are we who are on the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. POAGE. I know that.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. We have tried several experiments over a period of years. Congress has appropriated money for subsidy payments and we find that despite all that has been done the cotton farmer and many other farmers are just as bad off now as they were in 1932. Does not the gentleman think that we probably should forget about some of these experiments and try something else rather than to follow the same course which we now know is a failure and will bring, eventually, ruin not only to the cotton farmers but to the entire country?

Mr. POAGE. I think the gentleman has asked a very fair question, and I will frankly tell him that I think we must make a fundamental change in our method of approach to the farm problem. I think we cannot increase the wealth of the Nation by failing to produce wealth. But I recognize that at the present time, that at this moment. in Texas, there is cotton already up.

There is cottonseed going into the ground by the thousands of acres every day in Texas. I know that it is too late in the year of 1939 to change our farm program. I know that the program must be the same this year, in general outline, as it was last year, and that being true, it leaves us but one alternative at this time. That is to do for the farmer what we have done for other groups, and that means to add to his buying power, substantially, right now. I do not say that this is panacea. I do not say that it is a solution, but I do say that the only way he can have a living this year is for you to do for him the same as you are doing—

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. POAGE. Yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I concede everything the gentleman has said, but does not the gentleman believe we should get down to fundamentals and adopt some permanent program that will be of long and lasting benefit to the farmers of this country?

Mr. POAGE. I quite agree with the gentleman. The gentleman will recall that last year I suggested that the domestic-allotment plan, a reversed tariff plan, was to my way of thinking preferable to the plan we adopted, but this Congress did not see it as I did.

We cannot now adopt another plan. It is too late to adopt another plan for 1939. We cannot let these farmers starve during the year 1939. We must give them some consideration this year; and if you let us make the same tragic mistake that we made last year, if you let our farmers go with a purchasing power of practically zero, you cannot expect to start your industries this year or next year. You have got to put purchasing power in the hands of those farmers this year. You must give the farmers purchasing power now, and this can only be done by giving them a substantial subsidy; and when I say "subsidy," that is just what I mean—a bounty paid out of the Federal Treasury. I am not talking about giving them something for something they have done.

It is an outright gift from the standpoint of the Federal Government, and we might as well recognize it as such; but from the standpoint of the farmer it is but partial restitution for the inequities he has so long suffered under the protective-tariff system. It is but belated and imperfect justice to the farmer, and from the national standpoint we cannot spend our money in any better way. We must give to the farming industry the same kind of treatment we have accorded others, and we certainly do not do it when we give to the farmers only $31 per year. Thirty-one dollars a year will not start the factories. Thirty-one dollars a year will not put men to work.

Let me make one further observation and then I will yield for a question. I want to get one thing before the Members of this House who are interested, as I am, from the standpoint of cotton. I hope every man in this House, regardless of where he lives, will realize that his own district, the welfare of his own people, is influenced by the greatest export crop that this Nation now or at any time in the past has ever grown. Most all of the new money that has ever been brought into the United States—at least 75 percent of the total trade balances of America during our history—has come from the exportation of cotton. You must realize that no crop that bears that tremendous relationship to the entire export history of America can be taken lightly in any district. It affects every district in the United States.

Unless we have assurance here today we are going to find that the cotton farmer received a subsidy on the 1937 crop; that he is going to receive a subsidy of $84,000,000 on the 1939 crop; and not one thin dime, not one dime will he receive on the 1938 crop. You cannot figure from the calculations that the Department of Agriculture is now giving out where they are going to pay one thin dime of cotton subsidy on the 1938 crop. I hope that before this bill is finally passed the chairman of the committee who brought it in, and he has done a good work and is sincerely interested in the welfare of agriculture, will give us assurance that the cotton farmer, as well as other farmers, will receive some kind of consideration, something to help increase their purchasing power, based on the 1938 crop. Not to do it is to break faith with those farmers who were led to expect that kind of treatment when they voted last fall, at the instigation of the Department of Agriculture, for a continuation of cotton quotas, which means that they can only produce some 60 percent of their normal production. I had planned to offer an amendment to this bill to increase the appropriation for price adjustment or subsidy payments so that the failure to make payments on the 1938 crop could not be charged to Congress, but I have been assured that a member of the Committee on Agriculture will offer such an amendment. I shall, of course, support it.

If you were to give every man in the South 15.7 cents a pound, which is today parity on cotton, on the present rate of allowable production you would be giving him but 60 cents on the dollar with which to purchase the things that farmers have to purchase in the markets of the world, as compared with his ability to purchase in the parity period from 1909 to 1914. Then, my friends, you wonder why your factories are closed; why your laboring men are out of jobs. You put that purchasing power back in the hands of the farmers and do it with a direct subsidy from the Government, and you will turn your factory wheels and work your factory hands. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Lord].

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, I think we have all listened with a great deal of interest to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Poage], who has just spoken. He has brought out some of the things we will have to do if we are ever to bring this country back to normal conditions and to prosperity. We cannot continue to give shots in the arm. We will have to be constructive. The Committee on Agriculture has been hearing witnesses for some 6 or 8 weeks now with regard to the different panaceas that would bring us back to prosperity. If we would adopt all that has been brought before us, the farming conditions of this Nation would sink into a deeper rut than they are today; and that we know is bad enough.

Cotton seems to be king in this Nation, as it always has been, and they all want "bigger and better" subsidies. The condition of the cotton farmer and what we are going to do to help him is the question that is always brought before us. I consider that the cotton farmer has got to be taken care of or else the farmers of the North, the dairy farmer and the wheat farmer and the corn farmer is going to lose his business, for, of necessity, if the cotton farmer cannot prosper he must go into general lines of farming, and when he goes into the general line of farming, dairying and wheat raising and pork raising, then he comes in direct competition with the northern farmer, and they are both hurt by this procedure.

I think we all know what has happened to the farmers engaged in raising cotton, wheat, corn. They have all had some form of subsidy. While the dairy farmer, as we see it, has had no help whatever, he has been the forgotten man and still is. The Surplus Commodities Corporation has bought up some butter and cheese but it has been at a low price; it has been at less than the cost of production, and we in the dairy districts believe that it has hurt rather than helped the dairy farmer. It has established a price for the dairy products that is below the cost of production, and we feel we would have been better off if the Surplus Commodities Corporation had not existed.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point? I want to get a little information from some of these gentlemen from farm districts.

Mr. LORD. In just a minute. I want to turn back to cotton again. We have on hand now about 11.500,000 bales of cotton, and I think there is a total of about 17,000,000 bales of cotton in the country. It developed from the hearings in the committee that only recently England sent a delegation here to try to arrange some way to buy cotton from the United States. Other countries are trying to buy cotton here, but the cotton is held by the Government, and the Government cannot sell it. Therefore the export trade that we might have is going to Brazil, Egypt, and other countries for their supply. Until such time as we can make some arrangement to feed out the cotton to the foreign trade that is in storage the cotton growers of the South cannot hope to prosper. Certain grades of cotton are available only from the Government, and the Government is not able to sell this cotton. The cost of carrying this cotton is something like $4 per bale besides the interest and other charges. Were the Government to sell out the cotton today, it would be at a tremendous loss, at a loss, I suppose, of perhaps $500,000,000; but this is not the greatest loss. The real loss about which we should worry is the loss of our export markets.

We consume about 6,000,000 bales of cotton in this country for domestic needs and used to have a foreign market for from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 bales, but that market has dwindled away one-half or more, and the chances of our regaining it are very remote, because other countries have begun to grow cotton. The wheat and the corn farmers have their troubles. Prices are very low and foreign competition is upon them whenever prices advance.

The dairy farmer, as I have said before, is not making the cost of production; he is not making a living. They are losing their farms, and unless something is done to bring back buying power he is going to be in a worse condition than he has ever been. This condition is aggravated and to a considerable extent brought about by the reciprocal-trade agreements. Foreign dairy products come into this country to compete with our farmers. Another part of the fault lies with high taxes. Taxes generally come at a time of year when the farmer has no money; and if, in addition to that, he has to meet interest on his mortgage, he has to scurry around and sell a cow or two in order to pay his taxes and interest.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LORD. I yield.

Mr. CARLSON. I do not remember the exact number of pounds of butter imported, but I remember hearing the statement made that the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation has bought and taken off the market the same number of pounds that have been imported. Can the gentleman tell us if this is correct?

Mr. LORD. I have heard similar reports, to the effect that butter and cheese to the same number of pounds as that imported has been taken off the market by the Surplus Commodities Corporation. While this Corporation has tried to be of some assistance, it has not helped us at all. It would have helped, perhaps, if the price had not been lowered because of the amount that has been imported.

A REMEDY FOR COTTON INDUSTRY

One of the best witnesses who appeared before our committee was a gentleman from a southern cotton State. He told us, in substance, that if we would put a tariff on oils and fats coming into this country high enough to protect our home market that cottonseed would pay the farmer and that cotton might become a byproduct; in other words, if we would protect the American cotton farmer so that he was sure of getting pay for his cottonseed and his cottonseed oil he would get along without subsidies, and we would be far on the way to recovery.

What we need for all our farm products is a home market, the American market for the American farmer. When he gets his home market that belongs to him and has buying power, and industry has some assurance from the Government that they can go ahead and run their own business without interference, then we commence to get out of the hole and on to better times.

A short time ago we read in our papers about a demonstration of farmers and sharecroppers in the Southwest, who were camped along the highways and suffering greatly from cold and want. They put on this demonstration to call attention to the bad conditions of the sharecropper, and it was brought out that their income was only about $150 a year for the support of their families. Now I am informed that the landlords in this and many other sections are putting the sharecroppers off their farms and that by hiring day labor for a short time at around 75 cents or a dollar a day, they can operate these large tracts themselves, and with the subsidy payments make good money out of their farming, while the tenant farmers go on relief.

I believe this situation can be remedied, if we are to have subsidies, which I doubt the wisdom of, by only the farmers on family sized farms or the real sharecroppers who work farms being given the subsidies.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes. STICAR

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, we have a vast territory in this country that can produce sugarcane and sugar beets, yet because of the small quota that is given to the States under the quota system, only a very small portion of the sugar we consume is produced in the United States. Florida and Louisiana are urging Secretary Wallace to allow them to raise sugarcane. Michigan, the Middle West, and West could put many thousands of men to work raising sugar beets if they could get the right to raise them. On the other hand, our reciprocal-trade treaties have reduced the tariff on sugar from $2 a ton to something like 75 cents a ton and the sugar is being raised principally in Cuba. This could be raised in the United States and it would make our farmers more prosperous. This would help all agriculture. Only yesterday we made an appropriation for the relief of Puerto Rico of $1,000,000. We cut down by 25 percent the amount of sugar that Puerto Rico can produce. They have in Puerto Rico now 300,000,000 tons of sugar they cannot sell until 1940 on account of their quota. One-third of the 1,800,000 people in Puerto Rico are on relief. That is 600,000 people. Yet we take away from them 25 percent of the sugar they normally could produce, and give it to Cuba at the same time keeping our people on relief.

Mr. Chairman, it is far better to keep the people of this country working and keep them raising sugar, wheat, corn, cotton, and dairy products, and keeping our sugar factories working than to go haywire as we have with the reciprocal-trade treaties.

We cut down the production in the Virgin Islands. We even put an export tax on all the sugar they ship out of the country. No one seems to know why. I asked Secretary Wallace why they put that tax on sugar going out of the country, and he stated he did not know. The only conclusion I could come to is that they want to force the farmers to sell it to the Government rum factory down there so that they can produce a greater quantity of rum.

Mr. Chairman, I have only shown a few instances where people can be put to work in agriculture. There are many more places where we can do the same thing. Our Nation seems to be out of joint, but we could get it back to normal if we would listen to the farmers of this country. Secretary Wallace in a whole day before our committee did not suggest any reforms or any constructive manner in which we could improve ourselves so far as the farm industry is concerned.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. LORD. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. We have heard a great deal of discussion about the plight of the cotton industry in the South. In view of the fact that Brazil has taken a great deal of our southern cotton export market, does the gentleman think it is going to assist that sick cotton industry in the South by following the Morgenthau-Hull program of opening up a pipe line from the taxpayers' Treasury in Washington and pouring over a hundred million dollars into Brazil so that it can take the rest of our export cotton market?

Mr. LORD. In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I have presented two ways that we can protect the American farmer, by just letting our farmers raise as much as they can of the sugar that we consume. Let the State of Florida raise the sugar they consume, and by protecting cottonseed oil we could do away with our subsidy payments and bring about better business and distribute our farming so all would have work. The whole New Deal farm program is unsound and has ruined many thousands of farmers. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the Delegate from Puerto Rico [Mr. IGLESIAS].

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Chairman, I am aware of the numerous important problems that have been discussed this afternoon in connection with the bill now under consideration. I am speaking at this time on behalf of 1,800,000 inhabitants of the island of Puerto Rico. You have been presented with many great problems that involve conditions very near to those that prevail among the people of the island.

My purpose now is to call your attention to one item of this bill which interests the agriculture of Puerto Rico very much. I beg to submit for the consideration of the Members of this House the reasons why we are seeking to obtain additional Federal funds appropriated by Public Act 407 for the support of extension in agriculture and home economics in Puerto Rico. It is a very peculiar position for us to have passed a law by Congress that is in force now, and at the same time to notice that this bill has cut out almost half of the money that such law directs shall be given for extension of agriculture work in Puerto Rico.

A small allotment for forestry extension work is available to Puerto Rico, but is at present available only under the provisions of the Smith-Lever Act of 1914 as extended to Puerto Rico by the act of March 4, 1931. The sum of $45,000 was authorized last year from funds appropriated by Public Act 407. The amounts authorized by Public Act 407 do not affect the amounts authorized for payments for the States and Territories as provided in the original Bankhead-Jones

Puerto Rico has an area of 3,400 square miles, with a population of 1,723,534, or 501 persons per square mile. Of this total population, 1,200,000 has been classed as rural. The 1935 census reported 837,350 acres of cropland, thus only allotting 0.48 of an acre of cropland per capita. Statistics show an increase in population of 35,000 a year. Therefore, with such rate of increase in population and such small amount of arable land, every piece of available land must be intensively cultivated in order to supply work and subsistence for its population.

The census of 1935 shows that 75 percent of the total number of farms range from 0 to 9 acres of cropland, representing only 15 percent of the total value of farms; and farms ranging from 10 to 19 acres represent 12.3 percent of the total number of farms with a farm value of 7.2 percent. Therefore it may be safely concluded that 80 percent of the farm operators are small farmers.

The cash income of these small-farm operators is very low, ranging from $250 to $500 a year.

Puerto Rican farms of this type are scattered over 76 municipalities. A large portion of them are found in the interior municipalities of very mountainous topography where communication facilities are very scarce.

The responsibility of the Extension Service is to bring to these rural people the latest information regarding agriculture and home economics and to help them adopt improved methods and practices in the production and marketing of crops and livestock, the growing of gardens, and the diversification of agriculture for the best interests of the people there. The Governor of Puerto Rico and the farmers have come to the conclusion that it is necessary in view of the unemployment situation to allot to the farmers lots of land and help in diversification of the production especially of food for workers all over the island. This Agriculture appropriation bill has reduced the little appropriation that was intended to help this plan of diversification in Puerto Rico to help in the betterment of condition of the people in general in that island.

It is obvious that the Extension Service in Puerto Rico has a tremendous responsibility placed upon it by the insular and Federal authorities. Therefore, we respectfully request of this House to modify the item relative to Puerto Rico and giving us the cooperation granted by Public Act 407 reinstating the sum of $123,000 in the bill that is now being considered.

You may know that 80 percent of every dollar invested in Puerto Rico returns to the United States to foster employment and business. The fact is that 95 percent of the $100,-000,000 of goods imported annually by Puerto Rico comes from the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Reed].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I get a little impatient sometimes when this tariff question is up for debate and Members advocate lower tariffs, and yet I am one of those who believe that to have my own opinions respected I ought to respect the sincerity if not the opinions of others who disagree with me on the tariff issue.

We have before us now a bill involving a billion dollars, with hearings covering 1,720 pages. We are facing a great National and State debt. It seems to me that under the circumstances every provision of this bill should be very carefully considered and scrutinized to see if without doing any injury to the country we can be helpful to the taxpayers by reducing the appropriations.

I wish to discuss a subject for you men to think about. There is nothing partisan in what I have to offer. There are certain new factors that have entered into the consideration of all our legislation so far as the importance of our market is concerned. I think what is going on in the other countries of the world is often overlooked, and I am not referring to the wars and the threats of wars. I refer to a change that has been taking place in many nations during the past few years, to which we have paid very slight attention.

There have been set up in various nations of the world new forms of government. You can call them totalitarian or collectivist or whatever you like. Each of these countries has organized its economic forces for two purposes, one military and the other on the basis of export. Each country is preparing to penetrate the markets of the world. They are organizing their governments to reduce the cost of production. Each is now equipped with the latest technological improvements.

The birth of the first collectivist government, one that was organized not only for its own needs but for export purposes, was in Russia. The first 5-year plan under this new system of production was from 1928 to 1932. The collectivist sector of farming increased from 3 percent to 60 percent in 4 years of that period. To put it another way, 16,000,000 peasants were organized under a collectivist plan for the purpose of producing farm products at the lowest possible cost, largely under a system of regimentation. The second 5-year plan was in operation from 1933 to 1937. During this period these industries were organized and socialized for mass production: 178 coal mines, 93 oil-cracking plants, 95 electric stations, 45 blast furnaces, and 38 silk, linen, and woolen mills. Stress during that period was placed upon production of agricultural products for export purposes.

The third 5-year plan will extend from 1938 to 1942. The purpose of this mass-production system is to reduce cost to a point where Russia will ultimately be enabled to penetrate the markets of the world on a large scale.

Italy has organized under a mass-production plan. The system operates under an autonomous administration of state monopolies. Even those who produce certain crops in my district, and I am speaking of the farmers, have to face the competition of exports from Italy into this country to the detriment of my people.

On March 5, 1934—and I am only touching the high spots—the Cotton Institute was placed in control of the purchase of raw materials and the regulation of production and sales for the entire cotton industry in Italy. In April 1935 this control of all cotton imports and exports was confirmed. In July 1935 the Coal Institute was formed to exploit coal mines for the purpose of national defense and export.

Germany is now organized under a state-control, massproduction plan. In December 1936 General Goering was appointed to supervise a 4-year plan with state control over output, prices, wages, hours, and working conditions in all branches of industry. Of course, their purposes are twofold—military and export.

Germany has absolute control over industry, commerce, banking, insurance, power, transportation, agriculture, and of its entire economic life, and by its recent drives, of course, it has brought within its area of control practically all of those economic assets which it lost under the Versailles Treaty.

Japan organized a 5-year plan on June 15, 1937. Here again the economic interests are under absolute state control to lower the cost of production. The Japanese Government on June 29, 1938, by decree, prohibited cotton imports, permitting only imports used for military purposes or manufactured for export. The New York Times correspondent re-

In the factories, men, women, and young girls work cheerfully for wages that would stagger a day laborer in the United States. They will tell you a fraction of the wage of each worker goes into each product. "If we work for less, these goods can be sold for less. The world will buy cheaper Japanese articles in preference to more expensive ones from other nations."

I have mentioned these major countries which are competitors of ours in all fields, but, mind you, there are 17 other countries of lesser magnitude, each of which has some form of state control over industry and agriculture to lower the cost of production. These countries are in competition, practically all of them, to some extent, with the United States of America. Now, just remember that the United States is the best cash market in the world, and it is the envy of every totalitarian state organized for export purposes.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. REED of New York. No; I have not much time.

They are organized to penetrate our markets in industry and in agriculture.

Now, just make note of this: We are the highest-cost production country in the world. We have the highest standard of living in the world. Now, I ask any reasonable man on either side of the House, can we hope to compete with these governments-totalitarian governments, state controlled, regimented governments with the same technological machinery as we possess, but with a wage scale infinitely lower than ours?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. REED of New York. Can we hope to compete with these countries, maintain our standard of living, and continue to be a high-cost production country? There is only one alternative. We must either protect our markets, whether it is for cotton or any agricultural or industrial product-we must either do that or submit to the same standard of living as the competitor that can manufacture and sell the cheapest in our markets.

If this is not logical, I want to know the reason why. I will admit that I have endeavored to look upon this question in a nonpartisan way. The two countries that are anywhere near comparable in their standard of wages in the whole world today are the United States and Great Britain, and Great Britain, of course, is many percent lower than we in their level of wages and in their standard of living; and just consider this, too. All of these totalitarian states, every last one of them, by financial manipulation, inflation, and what not, has each absolutely wiped out its internal debt. They are not paying interest as we are on a colossal national debt. This lowers the cost of production of the nations that do not have this burden of debt, but Great Britain and the United States of America are together carrying a mortgage of $100,000,000,000 on industry and agriculture. Not only this, our internal debts and England's internal debts have not been wiped out, and we might just as well, as a country, when we are considering these public questions, face the facts like reasonable men, submerge our partisanship, and legislate in the interest of the country. We are not doing this when we invite and even urge all low-cost production nations to enter our market and undersell our farmers and our laboring men. This administration is doing this under the trade agreements. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN] having resumed the chair, Mr. PATMAN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 5269) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, had come to no resolution thereon.

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. St. Claire, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 4425) entitled "An act to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. BYRNES, Mr. BYRD, Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. BARKLEY, Mr. HARRISON, Mr. LUcas, and Mr. McNary to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent that all Members who have spoken on the bill today and who will speak on the bill tomorrow may have permission to revise and extend their remarks in the RECORD

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include therein an address that I delivered today before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in this city.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by Col. Julian Schley, Chief of Engineers, before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in this city today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include therein an address made by me today before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include therein two short tables on agricultural prices.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, before I discuss the amendment which I propose to offer on page 91 of the farm appropriation bill, up for discussion. I want to refresh the minds of the membership by setting out section 303 of the Farm Act of 1938:

SEC. 303. If and when appropriations are made therefor, the Secretary is authorized and directed to make payments to producers of corn, wheat, cotton, rice, or tobacco, on their normal production of such commodities in amounts which, together with the proceeds thereof, will provide a return to such producers which is as nearly equal to parity price as the funds so made available will permit. All funds available for such payments with respect to these commodities shall, unless otherwise provided by law, be apportioned to these commodities in proportion to the amount by which each falls to reach the parity income. Such payments shall be in addition to and not in substitution for any other payments authorized by law. by law.

In order to make this section work and actually pay parity, or rather approach parity, I am proposing the following amendments.

On page 91, line 3, strike out the sign and figure "$250,000,000" and insert "$500,000,000."

On page 91, line 17, strike out "1939" and insert "1940."

On page 91, line 25, strike out "75 per centum of."

At this point in the RECORD I wish to insert two tables. Table I shows the division of agricultural payments for 1939, the use of the $212,000,000 appropriated for parity payments last year. Table II shows what will be accomplished by the appropriation of $500,000,000 in this bill for the 1940 crop. The appropriation of this $500,000,000 brings the price of the five basic crops in the 1938 Agricultural Adjustment Act to about 90 percent of parity.

I also propose another amendment prohibiting loans on the 1939 crop if a farmer intends to accept parity payments on his 1940 crop. Thus a farmer who accepts a loan on his 1939 crop will be ineligible to receive parity payments in 1940. This amendment would read:

Page 91, line 25, after the word "price", strike out the period and insert a semicolon and add: "And provided further, any producer who accepts a loan under provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 on his 1939 crop shall not be eligible for payments provided by this section."

Every Member of this House realizes that loans above the market price obstruct both domestic and foreign channels of trade. Such parity payments as provided by this $500,000,000 appropriation will obviate the necessity of loans, clear the channels of trade, and allow this country to regain its export market of wheat, cotton, and corn. Every Member of this House has at one time or another pledged allegiance to the farmer and his problem. The appropriation of this $500,000,000 will go a long way in solving the farm problem, restoring purchasing power to the farm area, and in my opinion one dollar in the hands of the farmer generates more industrial activity than a similar amount in the hands of any other group.

TABLE I .- Division of agricultural payments for 1939

dron and file	Distribu- tion of $212, 000, 000 under sec. 303	1939 agri- cultural conser- vation program	Average actual price, 1938	Conservation payment, 1939	Parity payment from $212,000,- 000	Total, 1939	Parity
Cotton	$84, 578, 000	$113, 592, 000	Cents 8, 6	Cents 2.0	Cents 1.6	Cents 12.2	Cents 15. 7
cial area)	61, 613, 000 64, 113, 000 1, 696, 000	82, 740, 000 88, 882, 000 1, 433, 000 10, 232, 000	47. 3 53. 4 1. 34	9.0 17.0 .10	6.0 11.0 .12	623. 0 81. 4 154. 0	72. 2 112. 2 229. 0
Total	212, 000, 000	296, 879, 000

TABLE II .- Division of payments for 1940 if $500,000,000 voted

[Distribution of $500,000,000 for parity payments based on amounts by which the sum of proceeds of production and Agricultural Conservation Program payments fail to reach parity income, with resulting total proceeds and total proceeds per unit of yield]

	U Bres	Distribut $500,000		SIPIL-1572		Payment p	er unit of y	rield	To other		to the state
Commodity 1938 actual farm price		basis of amounts by which sum of proceeds and Ag- ricultural Con- servation Pro- gram payments		Sum of proceeds, Agricultural Conservation Program payments and parity payments		Unit	Agricul- tural Conser- vation Program	Parity payment (cents) 2	and Ag Conse Program	Sum of farm price and Agricultural Conservation Program and par- ity payments rates per unit
	Percent	$1,000	$1,000	Percent of parity value	Cigaros est est milysaren i so geografia	payment (cents)		Cents 3	Percent of parity price 3	on edition
Cotton	8.6 cents 47.3 cents 53.4 cents $1.34	42. 160 30. 718 25. 100 1. 292	210, 800 153, 590 125, 500 6, 460	957, 240 954, 917 711, 430 39, 479	81. 0 85. 4 84. 2 85. 2	Pounds	2. 0 9. 0 17. 0 10. 0	4. 2 17. 5 25. 3 47. 4	14.8 73.8 95.7 191.4	94. 3 102. 2 85. 3 83. 6	15.7 cents. 72.2 cents. 112.2 cents $2.34.
Types 11-14 Types 21-24, 35-37 Type 31 Types 42-44, 46, 51-55		.117	585	181, 522 13, 779 77, 232	133, 0 95, 6 129, 1	Pounds	.8 1.4 .8	.4	23. 2 10. 3 20. 1	127. 5 105. 1 119. 7	and the
Type 41			3, 065	13, 592 5, 107	80. 7 148. 2	Pounds	1.0	4.1	16. 3 16. 0	115. 6 151. 0	111111111111111111111111111111111111111
Total		100.000	500,000	2, 954, 298							-0.1(0.00)

See column 10, table I.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague from New York [Mr. Taber] I ask unanimous consent that he be given the privilege of revising and extending his own remarks and to include certain tables bearing upon the remarks he made today in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

GENERAL DEBATE ON DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the consideration of the bill is resumed tomorrow that general debate be limited to 3 hours, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Lambertson] and one-half by myself.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Celler, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. Magnuson, for March 23 and 24, on account of official business.

To Mrs. Norron (at the request of Mr. Harr), on account of death in family.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] may be recognized for 20 minutes. [After a pause.] The Chair does not see the gentleman from Michigan in the Chamber.

Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Connery] is recognized for 10 minutes. Congressional investigation of conditions with regard to RADIO BROADCASTING

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, during the last session of Congress there was considerable discussion relative to the need of a congressional investigation of the nauseating conditions which exist in radio broadcasting. This condition applies probably with as much force to the Federal Communications Commission as it does to the radio monopoly, which everybody, with the exception of the Federal Communications Commission, seemingly knows to exist.

¹ Assuming same acreage allotments, normal yields and percentage participation as estimated for 1939 agricultural conservation program. No deductions have been made for administrative expenses.

¹ Applies to cooperating producers only.

The Congress of the United States, in the Communications Act of 1934, specifically provided that radio broadcasting licenses should be issued only when public interest is served. The Congress further authorized the F. C. C. to issue licenses in its discretion, and it naturally expected that the F. C. C. would eliminate any possibility of a radio monopoly. Yet, while the public records will disclose that some 95 percent of the power used at night for radio broadcasting is controlled by a few people, I find that the Chairman of the F. C. C. and the attorneys of that Commission seemingly are in doubt that a radio monopoly is in existence.

Evidence already in the Congressional Record shows clearly that a radio monopoly does exist wherein a few persons located in New York City decide what the American people shall listen to if they wish to listen to radio. Surely no sensible person will contend that a few persons controlling radio and located in New York City can correctly define what constitutes public interest in the many States and congressional districts of our country.

Mr. Speaker, a congressional investigation of the Federal Communications Commission and the radio monopoly will definitely show: First, that this Commission has operated solely for the benefit of vested interests; secondly, that this condition was in full force and effect when the Roosevelt administration came into power; third, that the contracts which the networks hold with affiliated stations force the affiliated stations to blindly accept such radio programs as the radio network monopolists decide the people of every community of America must listen to, especially between the hours of 6 o'clock and 11 o'clock at night.

The radio monopoly has gone to great lengths to force all its affiliated stations to accept its judgment of what programs must be broadcast over the air. An investigation will disclose that both the National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia Broadcasting System force the 300 or more radio stations, which they control through operation or affiliation, to blindly accept those programs which the radio monopoly itself decides shall be broadcast.

For years there has been a persistent and growing demand for the elimination of block booking in motion pictures. If I recall correctly, such legislation was unanimously adopted by the Senate last year, and I know it has the support of a large number of Members of the House. Block booking is conceded to be harmful and deprives the local picture-house owner of the privilege of rejecting those pictures which he, knowing the sentiment of his patrons, feels they would not care to see or have their children see.

Yet he at least has the opportunity of knowing the contents thereof. Further, he has the opportunity of not showing the picture even though it may result in a monetary loss to him.

The local radio stations affiliated with the networks are not so privileged. They must accept blindly and without any opportunity of substituting something else that which the radio monopolists in New York decide constitutes "public interest" in almost every hamlet in America.

Yet it is my understanding that in many cases these affiliated or leased stations are forced to operate as much as 75 percent of their time on the air broadcasting radio programs originated by these dominating radio monopolies hundreds of miles from the locality where the station is located. Will anyone contend that such affiliated or leased stations, licensed by the Government to serve "public interest," are serving the public interest in that locality which they are supposed to serve?

A congressional investigation will disclose that the radio monopolists force the affiliated radio-station owner to sign a contract wherein the local station owner agrees that that station's facilities will not be permitted to broadcast any program of any network other than the one with which he is affiliated.

Further, an investigation will disclose that prior to 1936 there existed a gentlemen's agreement between the officials of the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System wherein both agreed they would not service with programs any station which had a contract or was affiliated with a so-called competitor.

Further, an investigation will disclose that both of these radio monopolists force the local affiliate into signing a contract of exclusiveness which virtually deprives the station licensee of operating his station in the public interest, because by so contracting for the sale of time to the network he is forced to give to a few persons in New York City, to all intents and purposes, the operation and control of his radio station.

Were the members of the Federal Communications Commission free to function in the public interest as the Congress intended, no such contract could legally exist, let alone secure the approval of this governmental agency. But the F. C. C. has totally ignored this practice—a practice that has resulted in greater monopoly for a few.

As an illustration of how tightly the radio monopolists control their affiliated stations, let me state to you that if a mayor of a city or a Governor of a State sought to deliver a radio address between the hours of 7 and 10 o'clock at night over a station affiliated with the National Broadcasting Co. or the Columbia Broadcasting System he would not have that opportunity; he would be compelled to accept time on the air when many of his constituents have retired for the night. I have heard it alleged that the radio monopolists have educated the White House not to ask for time before 10 o'clock at night.

Yet, Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that some of those officials attached to the public pay roll in the Federal Communications Commission have the audacity to ask, Is there a radio lobby?

Mr. Speaker, the Congress of the United States indicated a month ago the virtual contempt which it has for the apparent malfeasance in office of those who constitute the Federal Communications Commission under the leadership of Chairman McNinch when the Congress enacted the independent offices appropriation bill without appropriating a dollar for the further support of this agency.

A perusal of the Congressional Record shows that this matter was called to our attention; the Appropriations Committee very rightfully stated that it could not recommend any appropriation until new legislation had been enacted.

The Congressional Record of last year contains many indictments not only of the radio monopoly but of the subserviency to vested interests of those who constitute the Commission.

Mr. Speaker, I know of no other situation wherein on the floor of the Congress charges have been made to the effect that the moneys of those holding franchises from the Government have been used to corrupt and debauch elected representatives of the people as well as judicial officials. Charges have also been made that those holding licenses or franchises issued by the Government have indulged in legal blackjacking wherein a complaint is put in print charging a competitor with monopoly for the purpose of forcing that competitor, because of what those who made the charges know and most likely could prove, to divide the spoils at the expense of the American people.

Yet, despite these most unusual charges of the use of moneys, secured through the holding of franchises issued by the Government, to corrupt and debauch elected representatives of the people and officials of our judiciary, the radio monopoly had sufficient influence last year to prevail upon many Members of this House to vote against the congressional investigation.

It is true that many Members of the House were influenced to vote against such an investigation on the promise of House leaders that the Monopoly Investigating Committee which was being authorized would conduct an investigation of this monopoly in radio. We must bear in mind that those who made such promises may have thought at that time that the Monopoly Committee would investigate the radio monopoly. But, may I ask if there is any evidence in existence that the Monopoly Committee has made or intends to make any investigation of the radio monopoly?

The all important Appropriations Committee of the Congress of the United States has taken the position that before appropriating further funds for the support of this subservient Commission, we should enact new legislation. In view of the charges of debauchery and corruption, of virtually proven monopoly, of a condition in the Commission itself with which the President of the United States has publicly stated he is thoroughly dissatisfied, I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that any fair-minded Member of this House can disagree that we should not enact any legislation until a full and thorough congressional investigation is made into the many ramifications of the power which resides in those entrusted with the molding of public opinion, through the licenses granted by this governmental agency known as the Federal Communications Commission.

During the past few months I have discussed this matter with several Members of the House, and I was surprised to find that many Democratic Members, while conversant with the corrupt conditions which exist and who freely admit the need of a congressional investigation, hesitated because they believed it would reflect upon the Roosevelt administration. Mr. Speaker, I have gone into this matter of radio at some length, and I want to say to every Member of the House that the most distressing conditions existing today in the field of radio broadcasting are the result of the power, the practices, and the licenses granted to the radio monopoly prior to the induction into office of President Roosevelt.

Naturally, we are at fault when we entrust the issuance of radio licenses to a chairman who was rewarded by President Hoover with appointment to Federal office because of his desertion of the Democratic Party. The present Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission rose to fame in his local community as a leader of Democracy. In 1928 he deserted Democracy and was rewarded for such desertion by appointment by President Hoover to an office in Washington which he publicly testified paid him 10 times more per year than his prior average yearly earnings. This gentleman, as the records show, was accused publicly of failing to file a report of funds used in a political campaign to defeat the candidate of the Democratic Party for President of the United States; of having been appointed to a Federal position because of his treachery to the political party which had honored him with public office. For some unknown reason, shortly after Democracy came into power, this gentleman was placed at the head of first one and then another influential and powerful Government agency. His administration of the latter agency for the past 18 months has been such that on January 24 last President Roosevelt publicly stated that he was thoroughly dissatisfied with the conditions within the Commission.

To further indicate the attitude which President Roosevelt takes toward that Commission, I call the attention of the House to the President's recent public statement at a press conference when, as I understand, even before the President had received the resignation of one of the present members of the Communications Commission, he accepted that resignation before it was handed to him.

Many Members of the Congress have demanded economy in administration agencies. It might be of some interest for those Members of the Congress to know that the clerical costs alone of running the individual office of the present Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission this year has increased, without either reason or results, more than 100 percent over those of his predecessor.

In addition, the Publicity Division, operated last year at a cost of some $7,000, now is operated on a basis of some $17,000. This additional cost is due entirely to new attachés brought into the Commission by the Chairman himself.

Shortly after a substantial number of the Members of the House had indicated their lack of confidence in the Federal Communications Commission by voting for a congressional investigation, this Commission, realizing that something must be done to satisfy the public demand for the elimination of a monopoly in radio, went through the motions of investigating the radio monopoly. Imagine, if you can, those who illegally made the radio monopoly possible investigating their own activities. As was well said by a well-known news commentator, it reminded him of "the witches going on a witch hunt."

There are pending before the House Rules Committee two resolutions calling for an investigation of the radio monopoly as well as an investigation of the Commission itself. I have the honor of having presented one of these resolutions. I have no pride of authorship and am perfectly content for the Rules Committee, in its wisdom, to report out either of these resolutions or its own resolution.

I appeal to the House to protect its own good name, especially in view of the unchallenged charges which are contained in the Congressional Record of the moneys of holders of government franchises having been used to corrupt and debauch elected representatives of the people as well as judicial officials, to investigate a condition which is wholly contrary to the spirit, if not the language of the legislation enacted by the Congress, wherein a few persons located in New York alone decide what constitutes public interest in every community in our country. Further, I appeal to the House to investigate these charges and the entire trouble which exists in the radio broadcasting field before we try hurriedly and without due consideration to enact new radio legislation. [Applause.]

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A concurrent resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. Con. Res. 6. Concurrent resolution providing for the printing of additional copies of the hearings held before the Special Committee on Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries; to the Committee on Printing.

SENATE ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1476. An act to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.), pursuant to the order heretofore made, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, March 24, 1939, at 11 o'clock a. m.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue on Friday, March 24, 1939, at 10 a.m., on social-security legislation in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Friday, March 24, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation—H. R. 2531.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Monday, March 27, 1939. Business to be considered: Continuation of hearing on H. R. 5093—training air pilots.

There will be a meeting of the Business Research Subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Monday, April 3, 1939. Business to be considered: Hearing on H. R. 3395—business research bill.

COMMITTEE ON WORLD WAR VETERANS' LEGISLATION

There will be an executive session of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation on Friday morning at 10:30, March 24, 1939.

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

A subcommittee of the Committee on Patents. House of Representatives, will hold hearings in the caucus room of the House Office Building beginning Tuesday, March 28, 1939, at 10 a.m., on H. R. 4744, a bill to provide for the registration of trade-marks used in commerce, to carry out the provisions of certain international conventions, and for other purposes. Hon, Fritz G. Lanham is chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. Lanham announces that the procedure at these hearings will be the same as that he initiated at the hearings on trade-marks in the Seventy-fifth Congress, 1938; that is, the bill will be taken up section by section, so all testimony on a given section will be found at one place in the printed record.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a.m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries: H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels.

Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., to continue hearings on the project for the Connecticut River, Conn. and Mass.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators; H. R. 1010, intercoastal subsidy bill (Welch).

Thursday, April 6, 1939:

H. R. 1011, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission on San Francisco Bay (Welch); H. R. 2870, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Thomas F. Ford); H. R. 3040, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Geyer of California). Tuesday, April 11, 1939:

H. R. 1783, inspection of hulls of sail vessels and barges (Bland); H. R. 1785, motorboat bill (Bland); H. R. 1795, motorboat bill (HENDRICKS); H. R. 1809, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (Magnuson); H. R. 2398, regarding pilots on yachts (ANGELL); H. R. 3837, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (CONNERY).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 4220, load-line bill for seagoing vessels (BLAND).

Tuesday, April 18, 1939:

H. R. 2404, surgeon and hospital on vessels (Sirovich); H. R. 2660, limitation of liability (STROVICH); House Joint Resolution 153 and House Joint Resolution 194, investigate conditions pertaining to lascar seamen (SIROVICH).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

564. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, on reexamination of Louisiana-Texas Intracoastal Waterway from the Mississippi River at or near New Orleans, La., to Corpus Christi, Tex., requested by resolutions of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted June 8, 1938, and the Committee on Commerce, United States Senate, adopted July 5, 1938 (H. Doc. No. 230); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with two illustrations.

565. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on reexamination of Mississippi River between the Ohio River and mouth of the Missouri River, with a view to determining whether any mcdification in the existing project for improvement of Mississippi River between the mouth of the Missouri River and East St. Louis, Ill., is advisable at the present time, requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted October 31, 1938 (H. Doc. No. 231); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

566. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on reexamination of Cleveland Harbor, Ohio, including the channel in Cuyahoga River, requested by resolutions of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted March 24, 1937, and April 13, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 232); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

567. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on reexamination of Calumet Harbor and River, Ill. and Ind., requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted December 22, 1936 (H. Doc. No. 233); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

568. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated December 28, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of channel from Pamlico Sound through Pughs Channel to the town of Rodanthe, N. C., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 234); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and crdered to be printed, with an illustration.

569. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated December 28, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of channel from Edenton Bay, N. C., into Pembroke Creek to United States Fish Hatchery, authorized by the River and Harbor Act, approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 235); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

570. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of channel leading from the southeasterly end of Rollinson Channel, N. C., to the wharves in front of the town of Hatteras, N. C., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 236); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

571. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on reexamination of Peconic River, N. Y., requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted February 23, 1938 (H. Doc. No. 237); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

572. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated January 11, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of Lower Thoroughfare, Deals Island, Md., authorized by the River and Harbor Act, approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 238); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

573. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated December 28, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on reexamination of waterway connecting Swan Quarter Bay with Deep Bay. N. C., including the Swan Quarter Canal, requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted January 11, 1938 (H. Doc. No. 239); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

574. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated December 28, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a survey of Clinton Harbor, Conn., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 240); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

575. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated December 28, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of Duck Point Cove (Hearns Creek), Md., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 241); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration.

576. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated December 28, 1938, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of St. Catherines Sound, St. Marys County, Md., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 242); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with an illustration. 577. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a

577. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 15, 1939, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, on a preliminary examination and survey of Anclote River, Fla., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 26, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 243); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with three illustrations.

578. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to define the authority and power of certain Indian Service officers appointed by the Secretary of the Interior or the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

579. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain members of the United States Coast Guard for the value of personal effects lost; to the Committee on Claims.

580. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to provide for the construction of a graving drydock in New York Harbor or its vicinity; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

581. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the draft of proposed legislation to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to enter into a contract with the State Water Conservation Board of the State of Montana; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

582. A letter from the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, transmitting a report covering the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the fourth quarter of 1938, and for the period from the organization of the Corporation on February 2, 1932, to December 31, 1938, inclusive (H. Doc. No. 244); to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. GREGORY. Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 4771. A bill limiting working hours of pneumatic-tube-system employees to 8 in 10 hours a day; without amendment (Rept. No. 275). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GREGORY: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 4772. A bill to provide time credits for substitutes in the pneumatic-tube service; without amendment (Rept. No. 276). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GREGORY: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 4785. A bill to provide a differential in pay for night work to pneumatic-tube-system employees in the Postal Service; without amendment (Rept. No. 277). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GREGORY: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 4786. A bill to extend the provisions of the 40-hour law to pneumatie-tube-system employees in the Postal Service; without amendment (Rept. No. 278). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri: Committee on Appropriations. H. R. 5269. A bill making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 279). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SABATH: Committee on Rules. House Concurrent Resolution 11. Concurrent resolution continuing the special Joint Committee on Forestry; without amendment (Rept. No. 280). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SUTPHIN: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 4897. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of a naval supply depot, Oakland, Calif., and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 281). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CANNON of Florida: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 3946. A bill to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the United Confederate Veterans' 1939 reunion at Trinidad, Colo., August 22, 23, 24, and 25, 1939, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 282). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 5191. A bill to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical materials essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for armed forces and the civilian population in time of national emergency, and to encourage the development of these resources within the United States, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 283). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 300. Report on the disposition of executive papers in the War Department. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. KELLER: Committee on the Library. Senate Concurrent Resolution 1. Concurrent resolution authorizing the holding of ceremonies in the rotunda in connection with the presentation of a statue of the late Will Rogers; without amendment (Rept. No. 301). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. RAMSPEK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3673. A bill for the relief of the Allegheny Forging Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 284). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WINTER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3674. A bill for the relief of the Allegheny Forging Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 285). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3675. A bill for the relief of the Allegheny Forging Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 286). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. EBERHARTER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3726. A bill for the relief of Charles Weisz; with amendment (Rept. No. 287). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3784. A bill for the relief of the estate of J. D. Warlick; with amendment (Rept. No. 288). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3887. A bill for the relief of Capt. Walter L. Shearman; with amendment (Rept. No. 289). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3897. A bill for the relief of Harry L. Smigell; without amendment (Rept. No. 290). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4031. A bill to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim or claims of the Recording & Computing Machines Co., of Dayton, Ohio; with amendment (Rept. No. 291). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KEOGH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4456. A bill for the relief of William O'Connell; without amendment (Rept. No. 292). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. McGEHEE: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4843. A bill to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of John L. Alcock; without amendment (Rept. No. 293). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 5089. A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment on the claim of the legal representative of the estate of Rexford M. Smith; without amendment (Rept. No. 294). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MACIEJEWSKI: Committee on Claims. S. 11. An act for the relief of Hubert H. Clark and Dr. W. C. Copeland; with amendment (Rept. No. 295). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MACIEJEWSKI: Committee on Claims. S. 754. An act for the relief of J. G. Mayfield; with amendment (Rept. No. 296). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WINTER: Committee on Claims. S. 1174. An act for the relief of Alex St. Louis and Dr. J. P. Lake; without amendment (Rept. No. 297). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MACIEJEWSKI: Committee on Claims. S. 1253. An act for the relief of John B. Dow; with amendment (Rept. No. 298). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WINTER: Committee on Claims. S. 911. An act for the relief of Roscoe C. Prescott, Howard Joslyn, Arthur E. Tuttle, and Robert J. Toulouse; with amendment (Rept. No. 299). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 901) to exempt resident inmates of the United States Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C., and the Naval Home, Philadelphia, Pa., from pension reduction as prescribed by Veterans Regulation No. 6-Series; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 1008) to confer to certain persons who served in the Quartermaster Corps or under the jurisdiction of the Quartermaster General during the War with Spain, the Philippine Insurrection, or the China Relief Expedition the benefits of hospitalization and the privileges of the soldiers' homes; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

A bill (H. R. 3108) for the relief of R. E. Rule; Committee on the Civil Service discharged, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. COFFEE of Washington:

H. R. 5270. A bill prohibiting the use of United States supplies and equipment by National Guard organizations ordered in active service in connection with labor disputes, except under certain conditions; prohibiting private gifts and donations to National Guard organizations; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DINGELL:

H. R. 5271. A bill to provide for reamortization of certain loans made by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. DUNN:

H.R. 5272. A bill to add section 1007 to title X of the Social Security Act so that each State shall have the right to adopt its own interpretation of the phrase "needy individuals who are blind," as used in this act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GERLACH:

H.R. 5273. A bill to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of the Delaware River and its tributaries at and in the vicinity of Morrisville, Bucks County, Pa., with a view to the control of floods resulting from ice jams, for run-off and water-flow retardation, and for soil-erosion prevention; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. HOUSTON:

H. R. 5274. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOBBS:

H. R. 5275. A bill to repeal certain duties on vetch under the Tariff Act of 1930; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY:

H. R. 5276. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to adjust the compensation of certain employees in the Customs Service," approved May 29, 1928, to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEMKE:

H.R. 5277. A bill to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in agricultural products; to prevent unfair competition; to provide for the orderly marketing of such products; to promote the general welfare by assuring an abundant and permanent supply of such products by securing to the producers a minimum price of not less than cost of production; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. ROMJUE:

H. R. 5278 (by request). A bill to place postmasters of the fourth class on an annual salary basis, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. STEAGALL:

H. R. 5279. A bill to amend subsection (g) of section 22 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. CONNERY:

H. R. 5280. A bill to amend the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

H. R. 5281. A bill to amend the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

H. R. 5282. A bill to amend the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HENDRICKS:

H. R. 5283. A bill to amend section 13 of the Fair Labor Standards Act; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. MERRITT:

H.R. 5284. A bill to authorize the erection of a United States Veterans' Administration General Medical Surgical Hospital and domiciliary facility at Whitehall, N. Y., or vicinity; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. TALLE:

H. R. 5285. A bill to make permanent an interest rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent on Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans and to authorize longer maturities on certain Commissioner loans; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. VOORHIS of California:

H.R. 5286. A bill to amend Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), part III, paragraph I (e), as amended; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. BARRY:

H. R. 5287. A bill relating to the importation of distilled spirits for consumption at the New York World's Fair, 1939, and the Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939, and to duties on certain articles to be exhibited at the New York World's Fair, 1939; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland:

H. R. 5288. A bill to amend section 691-a of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, and of any act or acts amendatory thereof, relating to foreign building and loan associations doing business in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SCRUGHAM:

H. R. 5289. A bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to erect and lease or operate custom mills for the treatment of gold and silver ore; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

H.R. 5290. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RANKIN:

H.R. 5291. A bill to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. SUMNERS of Texas:

H. R. 5292. A bill to extend the privilege of retirement to the judges of the District Court for the District of Alaska, the District Court of the United States for Puerto Rico, the District Court of the Virgin Islands, the United States District Court for the District of the Canal Zone, and the United States Court for China; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 5293. A bill to provide that no statute of limitations shall apply to offenses punishable by death; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 5294. A bill to amend the Criminal Code in regard to obtaining money by false pretenses on the high seas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GEYER of California:

H. J. Res. 226. Joint resolution to amend the Neutrality Act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DIES:

H. Res. 139. Resolution requesting the Department of Justice to report on Nazi and Fascist activities in the United States; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. LEWIS of Ohio:

H. Res. 140. Resolution directing the United States Tariff Commission to make investigations and reports under the authority of section 336 of the Tariff Act of 1930; to the Committee on Ways and Means,

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their House Joint Memorial No. 37, with reference to House bill 2412, concerning the construction of a port; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate Concurrent Resolution 11, with reference to the so-called Townsend plan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their House Joint Memorial No. 7, with reference to public lands; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DARDEN:

H. R. 5295. A bill for the relief of the Priest Lumber Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DIES:

H. R. 5296. A bill for the relief of the estate of Fred Scroggins; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JEFFRIES:

H. R. 5297. A bill for the relief of Stanley V. Smith; to the Committee on Claims.

H.R. 5298. A bill for the relief of Harry Seaman; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana:

H. R. 5299. A bill graning a pension to Jesse L. Fisher; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KEOGH:

H. R. 5300. A bill for the relief of John McDonald; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KIRWAN:

H. R. 5301. A bill for the relief of Adam Emanuel Tsagournis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. By Mr. McLEOD:

H. R. 5302. A bill for the relief of Frank Drodowsky, otherwise known as Frank Weber; to the Committee on Military

By Mr. THOMAS S. McMILLAN:

H.R. 5303. A bill for the relief of Solomon Brown; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MERRITT:

H. R. 5304. A bill authorizing the President of the United States to present, in the name of Congress, a Distinguished Flying Cross to Thor Solberg; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SECCOMBE:

H. R. 5305. A bill granting a pension to Anna G. Van Horn; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SNYDER:

H. R. 5306. A bill for the relief of Clark Wilfred Martin; to the Committee on Patents.

H. R. 5307. A bill granting an increase of pension to Caroline Smith: to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee:

H. R. 5308. A bill granting an increase of pension to Ravon Cawood; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

H. R. 5309. A bill for the relief of Robert L. Taylor; to the Committee on Claims.

H.R. 5310. A bill for the relief of James T. Rich; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. THOMASON:

H. R. 5311. A bill granting a pension to Juanita N. Meeks; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WEAVER:

H. R. 5312. A bill for the relief of Baxter Campbell and Glestie Campbell Jones; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WOOD:

H. R. 5313. A bill granting a pension to Mary Stone; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YOUNGDAHL:

H. R. 5314. A bill for the relief of Paul J. Kohanik; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1981. By Mr. CARTER: Petition of E. A. Leonard, John Edgar Ellery, and 98 other residents of Alameda County, State of California, urging enactment of legislation to prevent resources of this country being used to aid treaty-breaking nations in any war of aggression; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1982. Also, petition of the Board of Supervisors of Contra Costa County, Calif., memorializing the Congress to use San Francisco Bay as the base and headquarters for onehalf of the United States Fleet; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

1983. By Mr. CURLEY: Petition of the International Association of Machinists, expressing vigorous opposition to House bill 4910, introduced by Congressman Hoffman, to provide for the registration of labor organizations having members engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, and to impose duties upon such labor organizations and the members thereof; also to impose liability for unlawful acts upon such organizations and the members thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

1984. By Mr. DONDERO: Petition of sundry citizens of Farmington, Mich., urging legislation for the proper regulation or prohibition of the great advertising campaign for the sale of alcoholic beverages through the medium of interstate commerce by the press and radio; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1985. By Mr. ELSTON: Petition of Lodge No. 1702, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Norwood, Ohio, submitted by John Schwall, recording secretary, protesting against amending the National Labor Relations Act, in particular Senate bill 1000; to the Committee on Labor.

1986. By Mr. FAY: Petition of Rev. Anthony Russo Alisi, S. J., pastor of Nativity Church, and 15,000 members of Nativity Church, urging that at least $150,000,000 requested by President Roosevelt be immediately appropriated to maintain 3,000,000 workers on the rolls of the Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

1987. By Mr. HARTER of New York: Petition of the Railway Mail Association, Second Division, Buffalo, N. Y.; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

1988. By Mr. JOHNS: A joint resolution of the Wisconsin State Legislature, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to rehabilitate the Great Lakes cut-over area; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1989. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Petition of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists, and Technicians, New York City, urging support of the President's third request for the $150,000,000 supplementary Works Progress Administration appropriations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1990. Also, petition of Miroslov Svec, New York City, signed by several hundred people, concerning the Czechoslovak crisis; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1991. Also, petition of Grand River Lodge, No. 265, Brother-hood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Grand Rapids, Mich., urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1992. Also, petition of Old Kentucky Lodge, No. 764, Brother-hood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Paris, Ky., urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1993. Also, petition of Crescent Lodge, No. 1551, International Association of Machinists, Jamestown, N. Y., urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1994. Also, petition of Washington Lodge, No. 193, International Association of Machinists, Washington, D. C., urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1995. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Jenkins Parent-Teacher Association, Jenkins, Ky., concerning House bill 3517 and Senate bill 1305; to the Committee on Education.

1996. Also, petition of the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce, Belle Glade, Fla., concerning freight rates on fruits and vegetables; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1997. Also, petition of the Valley Stream Free Library, Valley Stream, Long Island, N. Y., concerning Senate bill 1305 and House bill 3517; to the Committee on Education.

1998. Also, petition of the Rochester Ropes, Inc., Jamaica, N. Y., concerning Budget provision for river and harbor work; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

1999. Also, petition of Du Quoin city schools, Illinois, concerning the Harrison-Thomas-Larrabee bill; to the Committee on Education.

2000. By Mr. LEWIS of Colorado: Senate Joint Memorial No. 10, of the Thirty-second General Assembly of the State of Colorado, urging the Congress to provide funds to carry out the Norris-Doxey Act of 1937; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2001. Also, House Joint Memorial No. 8, Thirty-second General Assembly of the State of Colorado, urging that the War Department designate Ray Wilson, Inc., as one of the commercial air schools which is to participate in the Air Corps training program; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2002. By Mr. LEWIS of Ohio: Petition of sundry citizens of Jefferson County, urging action against selling munitions to foreign countries; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2003. By Mr. McCORMACK: Memorial of the City Council of Boston, W. J. Doyle, city clerk, urging favorable consideration of the additional appropriation of $150,000,000 recommended by President Roosevelt for the maintenance of the Works Progress Administration activities; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2004. By Mr. MASSINGALE: Concurrent resolution of the Oklahoma State Legislature, requesting the Federal Government to reimburse the State of Oklahoma for all revenue lost by the State of Oklahoma, due to the exemption from taxation by the Federal Government of Indian lands located in the State of Oklahoma; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

2005. By Mr. MERRITT: Resolution of delegates attending the Metropolitan Conference of Home Owners Loan Corporation Mortgagors, called by the Consolidated Home and Farm Owners Mortgage Committee and the council of Home Owners Loan Corporation Mortgagors, urging Congress to enact immediately the following amendments to the Home Owners' Loan Act: (1) Extend the amortization period from 15 to 30 years, (2) reduce interest to 3 percent, (3) completely eliminate deficiency judgments, (4) have the right to redeem homes already foreclosed, (5) create a legal division in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to handle foreclosures, and (6) provide 2 years' moratorium on principal payments where the owner pays interest and taxes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2006. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce, Belle Glade, Fla., favoring lower freight rates on fruits and vegetables from Florida; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2007. Also, petition of the Chinese-American Citizens Alliance, San Francisco, Calif., concerning our neutrality policy; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2008. By Mr. PITTENGER: Concurrent resolution of the Minnesota Legislature, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to stabilize prices on dairy products; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2009. Also, concurrent resolution of the Minnesota Legislature, memorializing the Congress of the United States to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the United States preventing the issuance of tax-exempt securities; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2010. Also, concurrent resolution of the Minnesota Legislature, memorializing the Congress of the United States and the Secretary of Agriculture on the need to establish a more stable program of subsidies to farmers for development and maintenance of farm woodlands and shelterbelts; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2011. Also, Joint Resolution No. 5 of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, memorializing Congress to take action to assist in controlling the grasshopper menace by making an appropriation of at least $6,000,000; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2012. Also, Concurrent Resolution No. 6 of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, petitioning the Congress of the United States and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, respectively, to pass and approve an amendment to the Federal Social Security Act to provide Federal financial assistance to States for aid to needy crippled persons; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2013. Also, Concurrent Resolution No. 1 of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, memorializing the Congress of the United States and the Secretary of Agriculture to take action modifying the restrictions on the production of spring or hard wheat grown in the Northern States; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2014. Also, Resolution No. 7 of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, memorializing Congress and the President of the United States to continue a low minimum rate of interest on farm loans through the Federal land-bank system; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2015. Also, concurrent resolution of the Minnesota Legislature memorializing Congress to stabilize prices on farm products; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2016. By Mr. SCHAEFER of Illinois: Petition of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, Victor A. Olander, secretary, urging passage of the proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act as introduced in the United States Senate by the Honorable David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; to the Committee on Labor.

2017. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Rev. C. H. McDonald, of the First Presbyterian Church, Moundsville, W. Va., urging that the Presbyterian ministers be excluded from social security; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2018. By Mr. WEAVER: Petition of certain citizens of Haywood County, N. C.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2019. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the California Association of Port Authorities, California, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to submerged lands and tidelands of the Nation; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2020. Also, petition of John W. Lane, of Rockland, Maine, and others, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Federal relief; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MARCH 24, 1939

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our Father, we rejoice, since Thou art the fountain of all life, that Thou hast manifested Thyself in the Christ our Saviour; in Him is the plenitude of Thy patience, mercy, and benevolent love. We pray Thee to take away all fear—the fear of the present and the fear of the future. Nothing can separate us from the love of God; Thou art our hope and shield, our armor and our defense. We praise Thee that Thou hast laid Thy scepter upon that which is noblest in human nature; do Thou open the living way for all who may be burdened and tempted beyond their endurance; soften sobs into sweet harmonies and blend discords into psalms of praise. Thou who knowest the secret of life and the mystery of death, we thank Thee for the splendor of that light which broke upon the world in the glorious Resurrection. We wait; there is a void in our breasts; there is a silence in our hearts. A notable Christian gentleman has left us. Well done thou good and faithful servant. So long as faith, hope, and love live, so long the immortality of the soul is assured. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 767. An act for the relief of Benjamin Weisenberg;

H. R. 950. An act to exempt all vessels of the United States of less than 200 tons gross registered tonnage from the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936 (being International Labor Conference Treaty, Convention No. 53, adopted by the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1936);

H. R. 1430. An act for the relief of Hyman Ginsberg;

H. R. 1836. An act for the relief of Jack Nelson, a minor;

H. R. 2079. An act for the relief of Charles T. Wise;

H. R. 2192. An act to extend the time for commencing and completing bridges across Cross Bayou, Twelve Mile Bayou, and Caddo Lake in Caddo Parish, La.;

H. R. 3090. An act for the relief of C. R. Henderson:

H. R. 3100. An act for the relief of Capt. Francis H. A. Mc-Keon;

H. J. Res. 110. Joint resolution to authorize Commander Henry Coyle, United States Coast Guard, to accept the decoration and diploma of the Marine Medal of Class 1 (gold), conferred upon him by the Government of Greece;

H. J. Res. 150. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to provide that the United States extend to foreign governments invitations to participate in the Third International Congress for Microbiology to be held in the United States during the calendar year 1939"; and

H. J. Res. 163. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Panama Canal.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 3801. An act to extend the time for retirement of cotton pool participation trust certificates.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 39. An act for the relief of the heirs of T. J. Kinser;

S. 43. An act to authorize the erection within the Canal Zone of a suitable memorial to the builders of the Panama Canal and others whose distinguished services merit recognition by the Congress;

S. 69. An act relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940;

S. 139. An act for the relief of Maria Bartolo;

S. 216. An act for the relief of A. C. Williams, administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams;

S. 473. An act for the relief of George Francis Burke;

S. 499. An act to amend the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1909, as amended, so as to extend commissary privileges to civilian officers and employees of the United States at naval stations beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska;

S. 808. An act for the relief of Calliope Minaca Pilavakis; S. 837. An act to admit Mrs. Henry Francis Parks permanently to the United States;

S. 964. An act creating the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark.; and for other purposes;

S. 1001. An act for the relief of Albert Pina Afonso. a minor

S. 1019. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to pay certain expenses incident to the training, attendance, and participation of the equestrian and modern pentathlon teams in the Twelfth Olympic Games;

S. 1186. An act for the relief of Herbert M. Snapp;

S. 1258. An act for the relief of the Rent-A-Car Co.;

S. 1269. An act for the relief of Emil Friedrich Dischleit;

S. 1291. An act for the relief of William Carl Laude;

S. 1302. An act to make permanently effective the act entitled "An act to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in petroleum and its products by prohibiting the shipment in such commerce of petroleum and its products produced in violation of State law, and for other purposes," approved February 22, 1935, as amended, and for other purposes;

S. 1385. An act for the relief of the Barkman Lumber Co.;

S. 1387. An act for the relief of Ida May Lennon;

S. 1394. An act for the relief of Johannes or John, Julia, Michael, William, and Anna Kostiuk:

S. 1430. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Dorothy Elizabeth Sisson, a minor;

S. 1502. An act for the relief of Donna L. I. Carlisle;

S. 1582. An act to authorize the President to bestow a Meritorious Service Medal upon civil-service officers and employees of the United States, and for other purposes;

S. 1692. An act for the relief of J. Vernon Phillips;

S. 1725. An act relating to the acquisition of the site for the post-office building to be constructed in Poplarville,

S. 1847. An act for the relief of Naomi Straley and Bonnie Straley

S. J. Res. 46. Joint resolution authorizing appropriation for expenses of a representative of the United States and of his assistants, and for one-half of the joint expenses of this Government and the Government of Mexico, in giving effect to the agreement of November 9-12, 1938, between the two Governments providing for the settlement of American claims for damages resulting from expropriations of agrarian properties since August 30, 1927; and

S. J. Res. 72. Joint resolution readmitting Mary Cohen

Bienvenu to citizenship.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by inserting a statement made by John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, who, I think, is one of the outstanding labor statesmen of the world, in which he asks and answers the question: "Did the Communist Party originate C. I. O. proposal for unity?"

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD, and to include therein an address made to the Rivers and Harbors Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Vermont?

There was no objection.

Mr. SANDAGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a letter from the Merchant Tailors' Association of Providence protesting against the trade agreements.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein the Keller analysis of the Dies committee reports and to include a letter from Mrs. Charles Lundquist, of Minne-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

WHY PROCRASTINATE WITH WORTHY BILLS?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, there are some things which it is difficult for a newcomer in Congress to understand. One of them is the delay occasioned in getting some meritorious bills out of committee and on the floor of the House for final disposition. Among such bills which have been introduced at this session and seemingly pigeonholed is H. R. 3400, which is aimed at an amendment of section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, in relation to through routes, and for other purposes.

This bill has been in the House committee without action since January 30, 1939, although it has already been heard before a Senate subcommittee and the hearings have been printed there.

The bill has the approval and active backing and support of 300 short-line railway companies throughout America. It has been approved by the big four of the railroad brotherhoods in the city of Minneapolis, and doubtless similarly throughout the Nation.

I am being importuned daily as to the reason for delay on this and other important measures, so I am asking this question publicly: Can we not speed up action on this and a few other meritorious measures?

I am in receipt of the following letter from the city clerk of the city of Minneapolis, which also shows the unanimity of support for this bill:

> CITY OF MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE OF CITY CLERK, March 20, 1939.

Congressman John G. Alexander,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: Attached you will find copy of action of the city council of the city of Minneapolis, Minn., at a meeting held March 10, 1939, advising you that the city council favors H. R. 3400 (bill to amend sec. 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, in relation to through routes, and for other purposes).

Very truly yours,

CHAS. C. SWANSON, City Clerk.

Alderman Anderson moved that the city council go on record as favoring H. R. 3400 (bill to amend sec. 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, in relation to through routes, and for other purposes), and so advise all the Senators and Congressmen from State of Minnesota. Adopted.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein a letter from the city clerk of the city of Minneapolis.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein an exchange of letters between the Secretary of Agriculture and myself with reference to pears imported from the Argentine.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to insert therein an address delivered by the Governor of Puerto Rico at the Rivers and Harbors Congress.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

OVERREGULATING AGRICULTURE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, debate on the agricultural appropriation bill has been limited to 3 hours today. In this bill we are appropriating $1,067,000,000. Think of less than 9 hours of general debate on such an important measure and one so vital to our country's welfare.

When we note that the prices of farm commodities according to yesterday's quotations were probably as low as they have been at any time in the history of this country, wheat 67 cents, corn 471/4 cents, oats 291/4 cents, rye 421/4 cents, lard 63/10 cents, and so forth, it seems to me we ought either to try to figure out what we are doing so far as this agricultural appropriation bill is concerned or else stop molesting the farmers. With all the regulations and rules that you have laid down for the farmers of this country, farm conditions are getting worse. The farmers are worried and everybody else. If the Congress would leave the farmers of the country alone and simply let them work out their own salvation, stop importation of farm commodities the farmers produce, and take away all the political leeches, the farmers will benefit greatly. If Congress would take off the farmers' backs half of the individuals that are now trying to regulate them, men who do not know how to farm, it seems to me the country would be better off, the farmers would be better off, and I am sure the Treasury of the United States would be better off. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, hardly a day passes but what my beloved friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, takes the floor to criticize the efforts of the administration. I have not as yet heard him or his party submit a program that would aid the farmers or help the country. I would be immensely pleased if some day the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the Republicans would submit from the floor a proposition that would be really helpful and beneficial to help us aid the farmers, as we are attempting to do.

When he states that nothing has been done to help the farmers he forgets the fact that when his party was in power the farmers were getting 2 cents a pound for cattle and hogs, and 17 cents a bushel for corn, and 23 cents a bushel for wheat. Today's prices would be at a still higher level if the Republicans would work with us to make the farm program a success. While the gentleman from Pennsylvania and his associates may mean well, their efforts are detrimental to the farmers, to the country, and to business. [Applause.]

Republicans are most eloquent when it comes to criticizing the administration, but they present the appearance of deaf, dumb, and blind men when it comes to the point of themselves offering a plan for the improvement of the evils they complain of. The blunt truth is the Republicans have no plan or program, unless it be one to hamper the administration in its every attempt to accomplish something in the interests of the American people.

I think it is only fair that if I criticize and find fault with someone who is conscientiously trying to do something that I should say what I myself would do if I were in his shoes. The Republicans rant that everything is wrong, but not a solitary soul of them offers or has a practical suggestion as to how they would go about it to make everything right. Or would they return to the old Hoover policies, which placed this country on the very verge of revolution?

I would like to put this query to the Republican side of the House. Supposing at the next election that unfortunately you were given a majority in this body. Supposing, again, unfortunately you were able to elect a Republican to the White House. Just how would you go about it to solve the economic, social, unemployment, and other problems which you say the administration has not solved? If you have a plan, is it fair to the people to keep it a secret? I say that it is not fair or playing the game. Either let us know what you would do were you in power, or quit criticizing so much and cooperate with the administration which is really trying to do something constructive and beneficial for the benefit of the people and the country as a whole.

The Republicans accuse; they denounce; they ridicule; they misrepresent-but they have no plan. Or, if they do have one, they are either afraid or ashamed to let the country in on it.

Mr. RICH. If the gentleman will come to my office and give me an hour, I will tell him how to do it.

Mr. SABATH. It would be an hour wasted on my part. [Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article by Paul Block on the timely subject Helping the Democracies of the World.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Jones]?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include three brief memorials from the Legislature of the State of Wyom-

The SPEAKER. Is their objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

There was no objection.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5269) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 5269, the Agricultural appropriation bill, 1940, with Mr. Parman in the chair. The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Ferguson].

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I first want to call the attention of the Members of the House to pages 3211-3212 of the RECORD, which outlines the amendment I propose to offer on page 91 of the bill. It is right at the end of yesterday's

This Hall has resounded now during many sessions with pleas for the farmer, but this has been in the nature of a shell game. The pea was always under a different shell. We never go forward under a program that exists. Someone always has a better plan to help the farmer-something over the hill at the next session. The result is Congress waits for a better plan and the farmer gets the short end of the stick.

But today is the day—the chance to help the farmer is before us this minute. The committee has had the courage to come in here with an appropriation of $250,000,000 to pay parity prices. If every Member who has made the statement that he advocated parity prices for the farmers would go through with it now, Congress today will vote parity.

I shall propose an amendment to increase the $250,000,000 to $500,000,000, which will bring the five basic crops under this bill to 90 percent of parity. If you do not take this opportunity, every Member who has pretended to be the farmer's friend is going to pass the only opportunity he will have in this Congress to raise the farmer's income up to an approach of where it belongs.

Mr. Chairman, this farm program the Government is sponsoring is not a squirrel cage. It is not the deterrent to agriculture that some of our friends on the Republican side of the aisle would have you believe. It is an intelligent approach to the farm problem in this Nation. First, it is based on soil conservation, taking the excess acres out of soil-depleting crops and building them up so that future generations may use them. Second, through loans maintain the price. If we had not had loans this year cotton would be down to 5 cents, wheat would be down to 25 cents, and corn would be down to 10 cents. It was only the loans that saved the price of those crops.

Mr. Chairman, what are we faced with? If we continue this loan policy we are going to build up a reserve in agricultural products that will ruin the price structure of all those products. The only way to avoid a continuation of this loan policy is to provide enough money under section 303 to obviate the necessity of loans and let those products go into the channels of trade freely and not be dammed up behind the loans. If the Congress does not provide this money to pay parity it will be guilty of fostering these huge surpluses behind the loans which will break the prices of cotton, wheat, corn, rice, and tobacco. It will be on our heads. The future of agriculture will suffer.

Let me read the existing loans as of March 15, 1939: $118,049,526.38 on 207,439,813 bushels of corn; $559,328,837.32 on 11,292,368 bales of cotton; $47,070,192.73 on 81,522,118 bushels of wheat backing up this surplus. If the House will vote my amendment providing for $500,000,000 for parity payments, I will propose another amendment providing that a man who accepts parity payments will not be eligible for a loan on his 1939 crop. The parity payments will pay the difference between what the farmer gets for his product and what he is entitled to receive, since he has to make all his purchases in a protected market.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi. Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman says this will guarantee the farmer 90 percent of parity. What does he call "parity"?

Mr. FERGUSON. If the gentleman will look at the tables I have inserted in the RECORD and have called attention to, this $500,000,000 provided by my amendment would give the farmer 14.8 cents for cotton as against a parity of 15.7 cents. In the case of cotton it would be 94 percent of parity.

Mr. RANKIN. Does the gentleman think that 15 cents a pound would put cotton on a parity with industry?

Mr. FERGUSON. I certainly do not, but it would approach parity a whole lot closer than we have in the past.

Mr. RANKIN. I agree with the gentleman. The only thing I am complaining of is that the gentleman does not go far enough. Agriculture is entitled to the same treatment as industry.

Mr. FERGUSON. To achieve full parity would require $1,024,094,000.

Mr. RANKIN. What price would that make for cotton and wheat?

Mr. FERGUSON. That would raise cotton to 16½ cents to achieve full parity.

Mr. PACE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.
Mr. PACE. The figures that the gentleman has inserted in the Record are official figures from the Department of Agriculture?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes; they are the official figures from the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. HULL. What does the gentleman propose to do for the dairy farmers out of the $500,000,000 he is seeking?

Mr. FERGUSON. The dairy farmer is not under the bill, probably through choice. Of course, he is entitled to payments under the general crop features of the bill and entitled to the money he has received under section 32.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman yield for another question? Mr. FERGUSON. I do not want to yield now; I have just a minute more. I am sorry.

We have a program in this bill, and I want to congratulate the committee on it, that provides for the study and development and the use of native grasses and the use of trees with the idea of not depleting the soil of this Nation and not planting more than we can possibly use and export, and conserving the soil for future generations by putting the excess 30,000,000 acres back to grass and back to trees, so that future generations and the future of this country, when it becomes necessary, will be protected by having that soil built up and held in reserve for the future needs of this Nation.

Any man who stands up and advocates that we turn the farmers loose, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] did a minute ago, shows that he has not made any investigations of the farm problem of this Nation. We must have control. We must put this Nation on a basis of producing what we consume now and what we export now, not what we may intend to export or hope to export.

I urge the Members to take this opportunity to keep your word given many times that you desire to aid the farmer, and vote for this amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Burdick].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, I find that the legislation on this bill is about as illogical as the legislation on most bills. This is the situation in which I find myself. We are called upon to make appropriations for an existing program. If we are to have no other program then I am in favor of carrying out the one we have to the extent of our ability and the ability of this country. I had supposed all the time, however, from the promises made by both parties, that at least in this session of Congress there would be a farm bill forthcoming that would make a lot of these appropriations unnecessary. But this bill is here, and the only possible way we can bring about any justice through parity prices to the farmers of this country, which in my judgment are essential to any kind of recovery, is the adoption of the program suggested by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Is it not true that every dollar we spend in restoring the purchasing power of the farmer will be worth five for one in reducing expenditures for relief?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. Chairman, I also wish to say that before we can ever hope to unravel this injustice to the farmers we must attack the markets.

The law regulating futures trading was passed by Congress June 15, 1936. The actual purpose of the law was to confer such power on the Commodity Exchange Administration as would limit the activities of operators for speculative purposes.

Under the act the Administration was authorized to make such rules and regulations as would best carry out the purposes of the act. I find that no regulations were promulgated until August 1937—as applied to futures contracts.

I have insisted that the Secretary of Agriculture has not carried out the duties imposed on him by the law. He is only one member of the Administration, but naturally the Attorney General and the Secretary of Commerce, who have quite different fields, would follow the advice of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The particular thing that I point to in the charge that the Secretary of Agriculture has been negligent, careless, and indifferent is as follows. The act reads:

When, and only when, the governing board thereof provides for the making and filing by the board (board of trade) or any member thereof, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, of reports in accordance with the rules and regulations, and in such manner and form and at such times as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board or the members thereof, either in cash transactions consummated at, on, or in a board of trade, or transactions to future delivery * * *. Such board shall be authorized to do business.

These are conditions precedent to securing authority to operate a board of trade.

No reports of cash transactions have ever been made by the Chicago Board of Trade, but still they have been authorized to do business in violation of law. Mr. J. W. Duvel is the administrator of the act, but I do not wish to criticize him for this failure to require the information set forth in the law. That is the absolute and entire responsibility of his superiors—the Administration.

The fact is, as stated, that no such information—cash transactions—has ever been required of the Chicago Board of Trade or any other contract market. The result is that there is nothing on record here in the office of the Administration to even suggest the amount of cash sales on the Chicago Board of Trade. The Administration admits this charge under date of March 17, 1939. I quote:

With reference to your request for figures showing cash transactions in wheat consummated at, on, or in the Chicago Board of Trade, I must advise that we have no figures procured under authority of section 5 (b) of the act which meet that description.

Mr. Chairman, that is my case. I restate that the Commodity Exchange Act is not being administered as prescribed by law, and that the Commodity Exchange Administration, and particularly the Secretary of Agriculture, is responsible for it. The above facts prove it beyond any explanation or excuse.

I have stated on the floor of this House before, and now repeat it, that the percentages of sales of futures contracts to actual delivery settlements under those futures contracts is greater this year than it was last. I have received letters from grain operators saying I must be dreaming, or, as the attorney for the Chicago Board of Trade says, "Burdick shot off his mouth up on the Hill." The fact is demonstrated beyond all possible denial that the percentage of wind sales to actual deliveries under those contracts is higher today than it ever has been in the history of the Chicago Board of Trade. I shall now prove this statement from the Commodity Exchange Administration itself. On page 11 of the report of the Chief of the Commodity Exchange Administration the following table appears:

DELIVERIES

As is customary, the percentage of futures contracts settled by delivery during the fiscal year was exceedingly small. Of the total volume of trading in wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade, only 0.13 percent was settled by delivery, as shown in table 16. The percentage for the other grains and for cotton was less than 1 in each case. For butter, eggs, and potatoes the percentages ranged from 3.40 to 6.21.

Table 16.—Volume of trading during life of all futures and total futures contracts settled by delivery for specified commodities upon contract markets, fiscal year 1938

Market	Commod- ity	Unit	Total volume of trading during life of all futures maturing in fiscal year ¹	Futures contracts settled by delivery	Percent settled by delivery as re- lated to total trading
Chicago Board of Trade.	Wheat Corn Oats Rye	Bushels Bushels Bushels	10, 410, 441, 000 2, 477, 929, 000 618, 009, 000 285, 784, 000		. 55 of Commerce. New York Cotton Ex-	Barley Flaxseed. Cotton	Bushels Bushels Bales	23, 266, 000 13, 148, 000 38, 518, 100	254, 000 626, 000	1.09 4.76
change. New Orleans Cotton Exchange.	do	Bales	8, 222, 450		100000
Chicago Mercantile Exchange.	Butter Eggs Potatoes.	Carlots Carlots	15, 488 43, 544 1, 819	527 1, 484 113	3. 40 3. 41 6. 21
St. Louis Merchants' Exchange.	Millfeeds.	Tons	291, 925	16, 925	5, 80
Kansas City Board of Trade.	do	Tons	183, 050	14, 400	7.87

¹ These totals are not comparable with those of the volume of trading during the fiscal year inasmuch as trading began approximately 10 months before delivery month and consequently covers a longer period than the fiscal year.

Not only do most hedgers as well as speculators prefer not to receive delivery in settlement of futures contracts, but the vast proportion of futures trades remain open for very short periods. The closing out of open contracts in any given future takes place to a large extent before the beginning of the delivery month.

This is an admission that not even 1 percent of the futures contracts result in delivery of actual wheat, but only thirteen one-hundredths of 1 percent. One percent would be 1 bushel delivery to 100 bushels in futures contracts sold. Constructing these percentages in the reverse figures to determine bushels we find that to every 1 bushel delivered under futures contract 719 bushels in futures contracts are involved. Based on deliveries then every bushel delivered on futures transactions has been sold 719 times. (See testimony, p. 978, agricultural appropriation bill for 1940.)

Yet the Administration on the same page says:

I would say that the markets during the last year have been quite free from large scale speculative operations.

Just what evidence does this Administration want before they are willing to put a stop to this high-powered, authorized gambling operation?

The Administration states to me that it would require a large appropriation to secure the information as to cash transactions, yet the same Administration makes no demand for any appropriation for this purpose. (See p. 969 of the hearings.) Furthermore, no appropriation would be required at all, if the law were enforced as written. The filing of these reports would be as the law plainly states a condition precedent to being authorized to gamble in farm products. If those requirements were demanded, and the board of trade did not file the reports, their authority could be canceled.

All I ask in House Resolution 25, which is now on the Speaker's desk under petition No. 3, is for this House to appoint a committee to investigate the whole situation and report back to Congress. No more than $10,000 is asked to carry on this work, and when the report comes in this Congress will be armed with the information it needs to deal with this most important subject. For this Congress to play ostrich and hide its head in the sand while the board of trade sells every bushel of wheat delivered under futures contracts 719 times is to admit that we either do not care anything about depressed prices or we are in favor of breaking every wheat farmer in America. I may say that, in my opinion, those who actually handle the administrative end of the Commodity Exchange Administration would not be adverse to this resolution.

The Speaker of the House would appoint the committee, thus the Democratic administration would control the investigation, but I have respect enough for the integrity of the Democratic Members of this House to say that in my opinion any committee so appointed by the Speaker of this House would be thorough, fair to everyone involved, and just to the American producers.

You can see what happens when people go on the board of trade and sell millions and millions of bushels of wheat as the Russians did a few years ago. They ran the price of wheat down, with no intention of ever delivering a bushel of wheat on this side of the Atlantic Ocean, and as soon as the price went down they bought back and took their millions and went back to Russia.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. FULMER. I wish to congratulate the gentleman on the fine work he is doing, and to say to him the same condition exists on the cotton exchange.

Mr. BURDICK. Exactly.

Mr. FULMER. Just the other day, on a rumor, the speculators put down the price of cotton $2.85 a bale; and I challenge the Department or anyone else to show even 100 bales of actual cotton passing hands from one person to another.

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman is right, and I thank him for his contribution.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman confuses the gamblers with the manipulators. The gamblers are bad enough, but the worst enemies the farmers have are the manipulators, who manipulate the market on the exchange and force it up and down. They do not gamble on the price. They get behind the scene and fix the price or arrange to drive it down. I investigated the cotton exchange in 1927, and I can show you how with a few thousand bales of dogtail cotton they drove the market from 22 cents a pound down to 14 cents a pound in 3 weeks.

Mr. BURDICK. I wish to say before my time expires that I have a petition on the Speaker's desk asking an investigation of the exchange in Chicago. I should like every Member who wants information to sign the petition, and that is all. I am not asking you to do anything until we have the facts before the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GILCHRIST].

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Chairman, farmers have always been weak in group action. They have been divided regionally and they have been divided into crop groups and into political groups.

This morning the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] spoke about the prices that were paid in 1932 for corn. I can recall back under a Democratic administration when corn was selling for 6 and 7 cents a bushel instead of 10 cents, and many of you gentlemen can too.

But I do not want to put any partisanship in the discussion of this bill. I think we all should go ahead on both sides of this aisle and do what we can for the farmer.

The gentleman from Illinois has asked what the Republicans are going to do. Why, as was stated by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Massingale] yesterday, the Democrats have simply stolen the program that was announced by the Republican Party in its platform of 1932. I have here what they said. They talked about the fundamental problem of American agriculture and then the platform of the Republican Party in 1932 went on to discuss it under three different headings, and said:

A third element equally as important is the control of acreage of land under cultivation as an aid to the efforts of the farmer to balance production.

And that is exactly what the present plan does. It is an attempt to control acreage under cultivation as an aid to balance the production of the farmer to the demands of the market. This is Republican doctrine.

What is the use of us farmers here trying to divide into State groups, regional groups, crop groups, and political groups, when we are making an attempt to get parity? Parity is that price which will restore to the farmer an income that will give him the same comparative buying power that he had in those years between 1909 and 1914.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GILCHRIST. I am sorry, but I have only 5 minutes. The parity price of corn at this time, as shown by the hearings, and I call this to the attention of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERGUSON] is 80.9 cents, and it is selling for only about 40 cents out on the farms of Iowa, and still you expect the farmer to progess and to buy your products from down East and from Massachusetts and Pennsyl-what he ought to get to restore him to a position of parity.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GILCHRIST. I wish I had the time to yield to the gentleman, but I just cannot do it. I would like to yield very much.

vania, and elsewhere, when he is getting only 50 percent of

When talking about what we are doing for the other groups, remember that the farmers are joining in to help you other folks. There is your wage and hour bill, providing for 40 hours a week. The farmer is undoubtedly working from 80 to 84 hours a week. The farmer in 1938 was only getting $164 per capita income for the year available for living expenses. He was getting only 77.9 percent of what nonfarm workers were getting. These things are all disclosed in the hearings as published and presented here this morning.

Now, talking about the buying power, I remember back in former days a binder could be bought for as low as \$85. Today a farmer who binds his grain in Iowa will pay \$300, or even \$350, for a binder. This is a mere example. The farmer just has not been able to live under these conditions, and what is resulting? Foreclosures, and more of them! Why, even the Farm Credit Administration itself, a Government agency, foreclosed more than 15,000 farms last year and took them away from the farmer because he just could not pay the interest, the taxes, the upkeep, and meet his other expenses. He was getting that money at three and a half percent. There is in this bill an appropriation to the Farm Credit Administration to enable them to continue the $3\frac{1}{2}$ -percent rate.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. GILCHRIST. I thank the gentleman.

As a matter of fact, the Farm Credit Administration of the Government is making money off of the farmers in loaning at $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent, and this can be demonstrated by the figures as published by the Farm Credit Administration itself.

Farmers work about twice as many hours per week as other people do. Farmers get less return for living expenses than any other class of people. It is true that farm loans are made, but the Federal land bank loans only 50 percent of the value of the farm, while the Government guarantees homeowners' loans at 90 percent of the value. Farmers sometimes get 75 percent of the value if they borrow through the commissioner, but even here they are discriminated against. Furthermore, a farm loan is safer than a loan on a building because the land will stay where it is and will not depreciate, if taken care of, while houses always depreciate. Taxpayers are allowed to write off 4 percent on wooden buildings each year in making income-tax returns. The Government subdizes many forms of rival industries. It puts hundreds of thousands of other farms into competition with them by furnishing the money to irrigate such other lands. Imagine what would happen if the Government would do this with shoe factories. In making these loans the farmers must, and do, contribute the capital to the Federal land bank, so when the face of the loan is $100 they get only $95. Farmers are exposed to every contingency-drought, frost, wind, floods, chinch bugs, grasshoppers, Mormon crickets, boll weevil, army worms, corn borers, rust, and many other infestations. We help laborers, manufacturers, bankers, and almost every other form of business. We limit the number of professional men-doctors, lawyers, dentists, barbers, and cosmeticians. Farmers alone are exposed to the hazards of gambling on future contracts in grain and cotton pits. They pay high tariff duties and buy in a protected market, but are forced to sell in one which has little if any real protection for them.

Here is a chance for us to protect future generations, and I would like to put into the Record an excerpt from a tragic story about soil erosion, and I ask permission to do so. This shows how we are really mining our soils, how we are menacing future generations and how hereafter we may expect that the farm lands of this country may be even as they are in parts of China, where they are not productive at all.

We have a duty in this respect toward our children, our children's children, and toward future times and ages. In the next 25 years the evil agricultural practices of three centuries must be righted—the soil depletion, the erosion, the deforestation. I quote from an article recently published, entitled "Tragic Truth About Soil Erosion:"

The soil-erosion specialists tell us that the duststorm of May 11, 1934, swept 300,000,000 tons of fertile topsoil off of the great wheat plains; that 400,000,000 tons of soil are washed annually into the Gulf of Mexico by the Mississippi River; that water and wind erosion together each remove beyond use 3,000,000,000 tons of soil. At this rate it would require a train of freight cars long enough to encircle the world 32 times to carry this load. They find that 100,000,000 once fertile acres of farm land equal to Illinois, Ohio, Maryland, and North Carolina combined have been essentially destroyed for profitable farming; that another 100,000,000 acres are threatened—all belonging to the best land in the United States.

And further, that the present annual money loss to landowners

And further, that the present annual money loss to landowners and to the Nation is not less than $400,000,000 each year; that the annual rate has been increasing; that the cumulative loss may be conservatively stated as already not less than $10,000,000,000; and that if this wastage is not stopped, in another 50 years the cumulative loss will reach the staggering figure of twenty-five or thirty billion dollars, equivalent to a loss of $4,000 on each and every farm in the United States. The present loss to farmers and ranchers is $400,000,000 annually.

I want, therefore, to appeal to Members on both sides of this aisle to quit party bickerings and see if we cannot do something to restore prosperity to the farmer. When you do this, benefits will come to everybody else, because statistics show that when you give the farmer a dollar you add to the national income at least $7 and you give to factory employees at least another dollar. So, in the interest of everyone, it is well that we quit the idea of keeping the farmer down. Let us go ahead and help him to be prosperous and to live happily with his family, just as they do in other industries. This is the program and this is the platform that both sides and all parties have promised to the farmer.

This is your promise. Now let us keep that promise here today and pass this bill.

As the gentleman from Oklahoma has said, this bill will not accomplish the business of giving the farmer parity, but it will help to give him parity; and if there is any other program announced, we can discuss it and go ahead with it in the future, but I think we ought now to vote for these appropriations. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I do believe that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GILCHRIST] is interested in the farmers. He is an intelligent man. I have heard him make many speeches in their behalf, but so far, I am sorry to say, the Republican Party has not had the intelligence to follow his advice and to cooperate with him.

The Republican Party has promised to help the farmer, and I know that the gentleman spoke the truth when he said that the Democrats have taken a plank of the Republican Party in promising relief to the farmers. The important thing is that we are carrying out that pledge, while the Republicans have always promised much but done little except to oppose our efforts.

It would mean a lot to the farmers if the Republicans would really cooperate with us, and that cooperation should extend to assisting us in seeing that the laboring classes in the cities are given a living wage in order that their prosperity may in turn bring prosperity to the farmer.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Dowell], who is sitting here before me, whom I cherish as a dear friend of long standing, has been unceasing in his efforts to help the farmers. He can tell you that I have always voted for farmelief legislation. Is that correct, Mr. Dowell?

Mr. DOWELL. It is.

Mr. SABATH. I always have and always will, because I think that the farmer does not receive the price for his product that he is entitled to; but, on the other hand, neither does the laborer. In fact, the laborer today does not receive enough to exist on, but when we appeal to you gentlemen from the rural sections to help the needy of the cities, you turn against us and refuse assistance.

But now I appeal to you again, and I appeal to all those who are interested in helping the farmers, and ask them to see that our efforts in behalf of the city dwellers will receive their sympathy and aid.

Only a few days ago I promised the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Burdick] that I would do what I could to help him get action on his resolution to investigate commodity exchanges which have grown up in this country and which rob the farmers and consumers alike. They play both ends against the middle, and always have. I promised that I would help to put these greedy parasites out of business, and I intend to keep that promise if I possibly can. I think the opportunity will soon present itself.

This is not a matter of being a Democrat or a Republican but a question of humanity with me. I assure you I want to be fair, but I must appeal to you to cooperate with us from the cities and not to turn your back on the city dwellers in all their misery.

When my vote will really help the farmer, no one needs persuade me. I appeal to you now to aid the starving people in the cities when you have the opportunity, and that opportunity will probably come within a few days. These city people constitute the greatest potential market for the products of the farm that you will ever have.

I am thankful to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Gilchrist] for calling my attention to these things, and I hope that in conjunction with those who are honest and sincere in aiding the needy that they will help to bring about legislation that will be helpful not only to the farmers but to the country in general. [Applause.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE].

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I have been here during the debate on this agricultural bill and I have listened with extreme interest to the concessions which have been made by gentleman after gentleman from the Democratic side, who have stood here before the Congress, man after man, and have been kind enough and honest enough to concede that the farm problem in America is still just as vital and still just as bad as it was in 1932. I compliment the honesty of gentlemen on the Democratic side who stand here before the Congress and admit today that the labor situation in America is just as bad today as it was in 1932. It seems to be a good thing—a confession you all ought to make, as confessed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], who just spoke. He said that this is no longer a political question, and he is correct. However, my mind goes back to 1932, when it was a political question, when we heard the mouthpieces of the Democratic Party telling the people of America, "If you will only place us in office, we will relieve the intolerable conditions of labor; we will relieve the intolerable conditions of agriculture; give us an opportunity to see what we can do." The people of America listened to the siren voice over the radio, and they were entranced by the spectacular and glamorous presence of the leader of that party, who flew in an airplane to the city of Chicago and stood on the platform in a very theatrical manner and told the people of America, "I stand foursquare on this platform"—a platform, Mr. Chairman, which attracted the attention of not only the Democrats but the attention of the thinking people throughout this country; a platform which, if carried out, would have kept the Democratic Party in power, in my judgment, for a very long period of time.

It was a magnificent platform of principles, if you please. What happened to them? Despite the promises that they were going to do something for the farmer, about the only thing that has been done is to spend money in a vain attempt to carry on the philosophy of the Secretary of Agriculture, which the gentlemen who spoke yesterday, man after man, conceded has been a complete and absolute failure. They freely confessed that we are as bad off as we were in 1932, and worse off, if you please, because we have saddled onto the backs of the people engaged in agriculture a staggering debt that they and their children will never be able to pay.

What have you done for labor? Oh, yes. These men who rise up and proclaim their liberalism and their great avowed interest in the welfare of the common man, the laborer, what have you done for him? It is true you passed some legislation that is worth while, but as represented in the interest of the common man and his ability to earn his daily bread and educate his children and protect his family, what have you done? You have assured him the right to bargain collectively, it is true. You have assured him that through that right of collective bargaining he will have the possibility of getting a larger hourly wage; but you have not insured to labor today a guaranty of a single hour of work, and when labor gets a contract from an employer guaranteeing an increase in his hourly rate of pay, that laborer has not been guaranteed a single hour of labor.

We find a situation today where honest and decent members of labor organizations have gone out and fought for better labor conditions, and they find that they have only been given a stone instead of a piece of bread. I have been interested in this labor situation as well as the farm situation. I have sat in strike negotiations for months at a time only to find that as a result of those negotiations, under the beneficent influence of the New Deal, that when labor got all through there was not any work to perform, and no hours of labor for them. They were worse off when they got through than when they started.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Wisconsin 3 additional minutes.

Mr. KEEFE. We still have our millions of unemployed with us. You talk about what Hitler is doing in Germany and the newspapers write editorials denouncing him because he is taking away the property of the Jews in Germany. Good old Uncle Sam, throughout the length and breadth of the land of this country, is taking away, day by day, the homes and farms of citizens of America, driving their occupants out into the streets. I think we ought to think somewhat of what is taking place here in America instead of thinking so much and spending so much of our time worrying about what is taking place abroad. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I do not have time to yield at this point. I only have a couple of moments, if you please.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin declines to yield.

Mr. KEEFE. I say to you that Wisconsin is a great dairy State and the dairy industry represents between 25 and 30 percent of the gross farm income of this country. What are you doing for the dairymen? What are you doing in this bill for the dairymen of Wisconsin? You are doing absolutely nothing for them except to give them little payments that come as the result of your soil-conservation subsidies. They do not amount to the snap of your finger. It is true you did help the farmers in Wisconsin to some extent when you made an appropriation to the Surplus Commodities Corporation and permitted them to go into the market and buy surplus dairy products, but now you have taken that away from us. When the farmers of Wisconsin sold their dairy products to the Surplus Commodities Corporation they did not receive a subsidy. They gave them something in return, and they sold them dairy products to feed the people of America, that cost them 25 percent more to produce than they received. You cannot be very proud of what you have done for the dairy farmer in America. You are doing nothing for the farmers of Wisconsin who are being dispossessed of their farms. Fifteen thousand of them will be turned out into the streets this year. What are you doing for them in this bill? What are you doing to insure parity for the dairy farmers in America? [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has again expired.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

I seldom make so emphatic a statement, but truth compels me to say that the remarks of the gentleman from Wisconsin carry more misinformation than any speech of the same length I have ever heard in all the years I have been on this floor. [Laughter and applause.] When the Republican administration went out of power they had quit selling farms under the hammer because the market was so congested they could no longer get anyone to bid on them. One-third of the farmers of the United States were dispossessed of their farms under the administration of President Hoover. On the other hand, it is a matter of common knowledge that as soon as the Democratic administration came into power loans were provided to save the rest of the farms still in the hands of farmers, and I submit herewith a tabulated statement showing the decline in forced sales in the dairy States:

Estimated number of farms changing ownership by forced sales per 1,000 of all farms, 12 months ended Mar. 15, 1933-36, in States in which dairying is a major farm enterprise

State	1933	1934	1935	1936
New Hampshire	24	19	19	13
Vermont	17	19 20	19 21 17	19
Massachusetts	13	16	17	1
Rhode Island	5	5	5
Connecticut	9	7	4	34
New York	33 24	32	27	2 2 2
Pennsylvania	24	21 31 42 39	27 20 24 29	2
Wisconsin	- 40	31	24	2
Minnesota.	67	42	29	3
United States	54	39	28	2

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I regret I cannot yield. I only have 2 minutes.

I also append a comparative summary of the decline of the mortgage debt of the dairy States in the last year of the Hoover administration and as of today:

Estimated farm-mortgage debt, Jan. 1, 1930, 1935, and 1938, in States where dairying is a major farm enterprise

State	1930	1935	1938
New Hampshire	1,000 dollars 10, 632 32, 749 45, 782 4, 009 31, 817 237,003 168, 472 504, 016 492, 800	1,000 dollars 11, 335 32, 228 53, 270 4, 526 49, 091 212, 154 147, 688 436, 982 407, 888	1,000 dollars 12,097 33,878 56,131 5,114 50,370 210,252 139,992 421,053 355,601
Total, 9 States	1,527,280	1, 355, 162 25	1, 284, 488

Contrary to the gentleman's position, the mortgage burden which had risen to an all-time high in the closing years of the Hoover administration has declined successively every year of the present administration. And in the gentleman's State in particular it dropped from $504,000,000 in 1930 to $421,000,000 in 1938.

And what is even more to the point, the value of dairy-farm real estate, which in 1932 touched the lowest level ever reached since the land was cleared of virgin forest, advanced consistently throughout the dairy district, as follows:

Farm real estate—Estimated value per acre, in terms of pre-war average value, Mar. 1, 1933, and 1938, in States in which dairying is a major farm enterprise

State	1933	1938
New Hampshire Vermont Massachusetts Rhode Island Connecticut New York Pennsylvania Wisconsin Minnesota	Percent 92 101 112 118 124 82 78 80 79	Percent 93 100 111 112 122 83 88 88 88
United States average	73	85

It will be noted that in Wisconsin, the gentleman's home State, the increase was from 80 percent in 1933 to 88 percent in 1938. These are official statistics reported in the Annual Agricultural Yearbooks.

And let it not be overlooked that under the Republican administration every dairy farmer paid a rate of interest on his farm mortgage varying from 5½ percent to 8 percent, while under this administration the rates of interest on Federal farm mortgages have been decreased until they are as low as 3½ percent, and amortized over a long period of time—the lowest rate of interest and the most advantageous terms ever offered the farmers of any country in any period of the world's history. What has the gentleman to say to that? On the item of interest alone the dairy farmers of America are saving vast sums of money, not to mention the worry and anxiety which always attended the negotiation of a farm loan in the good old times back in 1932 to which the gentleman refers so affectionately.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I will take 2 additional minutes in order to yield to my friend the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KEEFE. While it is true that you have plastered a great portion of the farms of Wisconsin with mortgages, is it not also true, and do not the same records disclose, that even in the face of the low rate of interest, that due to your Democratic farm program the farmers are not able to get sufficient income to pay even that low rate of interest; and you are foreclosing upon them and dispossessing them right and left.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. No; that statement is not true at all. The records disclose quite the contrary, as the tabulations above conclusively demonstrate.

And it is even more astonishing to hear the gentleman from Wisconsin say that this administration has done nothing for the dairy industry. In order that there may be no question about it, I give the amounts paid the dairy farmers of the gentleman's section in cash. In the golden days of the Republican administration to which the gentleman refers in which dairy prices dropped lower, and dairy farms were valued at less, and mortgages were higher than ever before or since, the Government passed by like the Levite without contributing a cent. But under this administration which the gentleman condemns so unreservedly the dairy farmers have received:

Payments under the 1936, 1937, and 1938 agricultural conservation programs in States where dairying is a major farm enterprise

ESTATE OF THE PROPERTY OF	Total payments
State State	1936	1937	1938
New Hampshire Vermont Massachusetts Rhode Island Connecticut New York Pennsylvania Wisconsin Minnesota	$98 000 305,000 215,000 10,000 370,000 2,951,000 2,801,000 11,307,000 18,240,000	$195,000 447,000 367,000 27,000 337,000 3,824,000 3,301,000 8,134,000 12,838,000	$189,000 503,000 410,000 35,000 417,000 3,119,000 3,539,000 9,777,000 15,936,000
Total, 9 States	36, 297, 000	29, 470, 000	33, 925, 000

And that is only a part of the generous aid provided by this beneficent Government for the dairy States. In 1933–34 the Government, through the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, bought in the open market in round figures $14,000,000 worth of dairy products for the purpose of supporting dairy prices and distributed them through the Relief Administration. In 1934–35, between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000, and in 1935–36 a similar amount was used for the same purpose. In 1936–37, approximately $10,000,000 was used in buying the surplus that was weighing down the dairy markets. In 1937–38 this amount was increased to $15,000,000. And for the current fiscal year, the Government in order to relieve the market is setting aside $4,000,000 for the purchase of fluid milk, $2,250,000 for the purchase of butter.

These sums do not include the loans made available to dairy farmers which with the above amounts aggregate an approximate total of $44,000,000 provided by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation for the relief of the dairy industry in this one year. And yet the gentleman says the Government is doing nothing for the dairy farmer. As wide a latitude as is ordinarily permitted for political buncombe, I appeal to the elemental sense of fairness of the American people, and the Wisconsin dairy farmer in particular, to say whether the statements made here this morning are within the pale of even our generous standards of political tolerance. [Applause.]

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. NELSON. In connection with the figures the gentleman said he would insert will he not also insert figures showing comparative prices in 1932 and at the present time; what the farmer receives?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I thank the gentleman. I was about to overlook that. And that is the most significant of all the benefactions conferred by the present administration. It is especially impressive when compared with the prices received by the dairy farmer in the closing days of the Wilson administration and the closing days of the Hoover administration after the party of the gentleman from Wisconsin had enjoyed 12 years of uninterrupted control of every branch of the Government. Here are the prices of representative dairy products under the three administrations:

Prices received by farmers for dairy products in January 1920, 1933, and 1939

peralignable to socillary the word the projection of social as relief users had	1920	1933	1939
ButterButterfat	59.6	20. 6	26, 2
	61.8	18. 9	25, 2

Reducing these prices to index numbers in order to show the treatment accorded the dairy industry in comparison with other industries, we find the price of dairy products consistently higher throughout this administration than the prices of other commodities, as follows:

Index of prices received by farmers for dairy products and all commodities, 1932-38
[August 1909-July 1914=100]

Year Year	Dairy products	All com- modities
1932	83 82 95 108	65 70 90
1935 1936 1937 1938	108 119 124 109	108 114 121 98

In addition to all these services to the dairy farmer this administration, through marketing agreements and the Dairy Products Marketing Association, has stabilized the marketing of milk, both in terms and prices. And while the guaranteed prices so secured have been of immeasurable benefit to the farmer, at the same time they have assured the consumer an adequate supply of wholesome milk and reduced the hazards of shortages arising from farm strikes or the producer being forced out of business by losing prices. This administration has benefited the producer and the consumer of dairy products in a manner and to a degree without precedent in the history of agriculture, and partisan politics should not be permitted to minimize or obscure a record of such invaluable service not only to the industry but to the Nation as a whole.

Mr. Chairman, I regret the necessity of this diversion from the immediate discussion of the bill, but representative government must be based on facts; and, in the words of Josh Billings, "It is better not to know so much than to know so much that ain't so."

Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones].

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I am not interested in partisan discussion today. This question far transcends in its vital effect on the American people any party preference.

Those who talk about the size of this bill forget the importance of the business of farming. There is more than $35,-000,000,000 of value in the farm and range lands of America, and this figure does not include the livestock or the machinery. At present rates the gross farm income of America is more than $8,000,000,000 annually. Thirty million people are directly affected, and all America is indirectly affected. There is no business in this land comparable to it either in value, volume, or number of people affected.

Had there been no adverse legislation—the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] said we should leave the farmer alone—had there been no special legislation; had there been no tariffs, no trade barriers, no trusts, no monopolies, no wage and hour law, there would have been no need for special farm legislation; but for over 100 years special groups have come down here and secured legislation favorable to their interests. I am not talking about the merits or demerits, I am not criticizing; I am just commenting. Behind the tariff wall everyone recognizes that prices of industrial products have been increased to the American people around $4,000,000,000 a year. This is a conservative estimate. I do not believe the most ardent protectionist will claim that the cotton farmer gets any advantage of that—he gets all the disadvantages from that system. The roots of the farm problem are to be found in 50 years of favoritism in legislation. I think some of you will remember that about a year ago I quoted from Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton. When the Declaration of Independence was written, the first statement of principle was that in a democracy all men are created equal—referring to the application of the laws of the country. That is a statement by Thomas Jefferson.

There are not many principles of government. Most of what we call principles are simply policies. There are just a few fundamental principles; for instance, in mechanics, the same principle is involved in the wheelbarrow that is involved in the automobile, just the one little principle of the lever, that is all. No man can create power; it is simply a transfer of power. But if you try to use the same policy in running the automobile that you use in running the wheelbarrow you would run it into the ditch. The one great fundamental principle involved is that of equality. Alexander Hamilton also recognized that in his first message on manufactures on December 5, 1791—and I wish I had time to read that part of his statement to you. He, being intellectually honest, recognized that the farmer would not get the same benefits from the tariff that industry would and he said: "There should be an offset to the tariff in the form of bounties to the farmer." Go read that.

When the tariff bill was enacted the farmer was left out of the picture. Selfish groups got together and enacted the tariff bill, and for 100 years we have marched down the line with the one-sided system.

Both those men occupied positions far apart. I agree with Mr. Jefferson's philosophy. They both, however, were honest enough to agree on the same basic principle, differing on the means or policy of reaching that end. Thus the adoption of the tariff policy made the farmer of America the first forgotten man. That is the literal truth about the situation.

Mr. Chairman, there is a good deal of money involved in this bill, but there are 4,850,000 farmers who have received checks as an offset to the tariff totaling $712,000,000 when the funds appropriated last year are finally spent. There have been over $2,000,000,000 spent for 3,000,000 people on relief, and some of those people have received more than many of the farmers. I am not criticizing the relief funds.

I do not think anybody should be permitted to starve. But when you talk about the amounts that are being appropriated you people in the city do not forget that as a complement to the $712,000,000 that has been given to the 4,850,000 farmers, we have given also $2,000,000,000 to keep about 3,000,000 people on relief. Contrast those figures when you are talking about what is fair.

Mr. Chairman, I am going to support the committee on this proposition contained in this provision. I had thought some of offering an amendment to increase to $500,000,000 the amount of these payments on condition that they be available only to participating farmers who waive the privilege of loans on their 1939 production. I believe that that might save money in the long run by keeping most of the commodities free for the general markets. But the Parliamentarian advises me that that restriction cannot be attached to the amendment without making it subject to a point of order. As that provision cannot be tied into this appropriation, I am going to support the committee, although, of course, we have an act that commits us to the doctrine of parity. We have to go as far as we can in achieving that. I do not know but that I will vote for whatever sum is offered, but I think it would be wise if we used our good judgment in connection with this matter.

Mr. Chairman, we have had a lot of discussion about the farm bill and what it has and has not done. We forget many things when we get to talking in a partisan and enthusiastic way. The farmer received in 1938, even under the low prices prevailing, three and one-half billion dollars more than he did the year the program became effective. Due to decreased interest rates, the amounts paid in interest of farm mortgages has been one hundred and sixty million per year less than in 1932, and I am stating that conservatively. The interest rates have been reduced. Purchases have been made of surplus commodities. There have been rural electrification and other policies involved in our farm program. I wish I had the time to discuss them more fully.

We have the freight-rate provision in the farm bill. We have the research provision. We have the purchase and distribution of surplus commodities. We have soil-conservation payments. We have many other advantages. There is just one element on which there is a difference of opinion and even that, may I say to you, is a matter that is finally left to the vote of the farmer. Whether it is wise or unwise has not been determined. However, the farmer is infinitely better off today than he was before the program became effective.

Mr. Chairman, I hate to hear some of my friends make the statements they do at times. My good friend from Oklahoma, for whom I have a great affection, said the farm bill is a colossal failure. I do not think the effort to correct freight rates would constitute a failure. I do not think requeing interest rates $160,000,000 a year is a failure. We now have the lowest interest rates in history as was so clearly stated by the gentleman from Missouri. I do not think soil conservation, which protects the soil of America, can be designated a failure. I admit we have not reached the end of the road, but anyone who thinks he has a simple panacea for solving all the problems of the farmer is dreaming. I wish it were not so, but this is a vast and conflicting piece of machinery, as shown by past experience.

Mr. Chairman, this farm situation is not a bill. It is a movement. And, bless your hearts, we are going to keep what we have and press on until we get on a basis of equality and bring the country to the fundamentals on which we started and which we departed from when we began the passage of special group legislation. You will remember the old and oft repeated story of Aesop about the dog and a piece of meat he had in his mouth. He looked down in the water and saw what he thought was a better piece of meat. He turned loose the meat he had and grasped at the reflection and lost the substance of what he had. Aesop spoke that philosophy 2600 years ago. True then, it is true today, and will be true tomorrow.

I know it is easy to paint rosy pictures. I know it is easy when you do not have the responsibility of doing a job to say, "Why, all this is very simple"; but you must remember there are scores of commodities and an infinite variety of types and grades.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, there is the winter wheat of the Southwest, the spring wheat of the Northwest, and the type of wheat in some parts of the country sometimes referred to as the macaroni wheat. There are more than 100 different types and varieties grown by farmers living 2,000 miles apart. Even parts of certain commodities compete with other parts of that commodity. Consider the scores of different commodities, the subdivisions thereof and the different grades grown by farmers who live here, there, and yonder. When a thing irritates us we Americans always reserve the right to beef. We are supposed to kick and complain. But you ask the men who live out on the farms, the men who stay on the farms. Ask them if they want the 31/2-percent interest rate of the Farm Credit Administration, and the average private rate of 41/2 percent that has followed the Government rate. Ask them if they want that restored to the old rate of 51/2 to 8 percent which they formerly paid. Get out your pencil and figure out the difference before you shipwreck a program that it took us years and years to sell to the country. Do that before you try to scuttle and wreck it. Figure what the results are going to be. I went through the wracking tragedy and heartbreaking experience of having bill after bill defeated on the floor of this House in the twenties when the farm Representatives on both sides of the aisle were not together.

Together we represent only about 30 percent of the American people, and we have to appeal to the good sense and the common interest of the people who live in the cities to go along with us. We have to be fair to them, and they must be fair to us.

We have two horses to this team. For a long time we have overfed one horse and underfed the other. Let us drive toward the position of getting them back on a basis of equality. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

SECTION 32: MONEY-"UNITED EFFORT-THE WAY TO PLENTY"

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, August 24, 1935, the President approved Public Law No. 320, Seventy-fourth Congress (H. R. 8492) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes.

Section 31 of this bill amended the Agricultural Adjustment Act by adding thereto the following:

SEC. 32. There is hereby appropriated for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, an amount equal to 30 percent of the gross receipts from duties collected under the customs laws during the period January 1 to December 31, both inclusive, preceding the beginning of each such fiscal year. Such sums shall be maintained in a separate fund and shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture only to (1) encourage the exportation of agricultural commodities and products thereof by the payment of benefits in connection with the exportation thereof or of indemnities for losses incurred in connection with such exportation or by payments to producers in connection with the production of that part of any agricultural commodity required for domestic consumption; (2) encourage the domestic consumption of such comthat part of any agricultural commodity required for domestic consumption; (2) encourage the domestic consumption of such commodities or products by diverting them, by the payment of benefits or indemnities or by other means, from the normal channels of trade and commerce; and (3) finance adjustments in the quantity planted or produced for market of agricultural commodities. The amounts appropriated under this section shall be expended for such of the above-specified purposes, and at such times, in such manner, and in such amounts as the Secretary of Agriculture finds will tend to increase the exportation of agricultural commodities and products thereof and increase the domestic consumption of agricultural commodities and products thereof: Provided, That no part of the funds appropriated by this section shall be expended pursuant to clause (3) hereof unless the Secretary of Agriculture determines that the expenditure of such part pursuant to clauses (1) and (2) is not necessary to effectuate the purposes of this section: Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated by this section shall be used for the payment of benefits in connection with the exportation of unmanufactured cotton. of unmanufactured cotton.

This section, therefore, authorized the use of 30 percent of the gross receipts from duties to, first, encourage exportation of agricultural commodities or make payments to producersfarmers-in connection with the production of that part of any agricultural commodity required for domestic consumption and, second, encourage domestic consumption of such commodities and, third, finance adjustments in the quantity planted or produced for market. These three specified purposes to which the 30 percent of the gross receipts from duties may be applied are, of course, most significant and should be constantly kept in mind in consideration of practices which have developed and plans now under way for the future.

FOOD PURCHASED, CUSTOMS COLLECTED, APPROPRIATIONS UNDER SECTION 32

During the past 31/2 years about 3,000,000,000 pounds of food have been purchased and distributed through State relief agencies. This food was purchased from individual farmers, farm cooperatives, and dealers in farm products. In most cases the Secretary delayed purchasing these surplus foods from farmers until prices fell to 75 percent of parity, and often purchases were delayed until the price fell to less than 60 percent of parity. Ordinarily carload shipments have been made of the surplus foods purchased to the States wanting the food for the purpose of distributing through State relief agencies. This method of distribution led to complaints on the part of the food distributing trade against the loss of retail markets and general disturbance caused by such a method of the distribution of free food. There has been a cognizance of the waste and unfair distribution to individuals and altogether considerable pressure has been brought against the Secretary of Agriculture and his agency, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

We find obligations under section 32 of Public, No. 320:

AND THE PARTY OF	Fiscal year—
THE MAN IN THE WHITE	1936	1937	1938	1939
Funds appropriated by sec. 32 Cotton price-adjustment	$92, 111, 741	$109, 135, 621	$125, 097, 214	$144, 024, 893
payments (including administration expenses)	42, 271, 000	1 64, 000	65, 000, 000	64, 713, 285
Return to Treasury, end of year	2 35, 249, 935	3 92, 974, 552	5, 895, 006	esada eda Estada eda
ministrative expense) Unallotted reserve	14, 590, 806	16, 097, 069	- 54, 202, 208	73, 497, 526 5, 814, 082

Payments for domestic flax production.
Later made available by Congress for tax refunds.
Later made available by the Congress for payments under the 1938 program of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act.

We also find from Mr. Tapp's testimony that customs receipts and amounts available to the Secretary of Agriculture for the encouragement of exportation and domestic consumption to be as follows for the years stated:

Calendar year of the same of t	Customs	Fiscal year	Amount available to Secre- tary of Agricul- ture!
1935.	$307, 039, 136	1936	$92, 111, 741
1936.	363, 785, 403	1937	109, 135, 621
1937.	416, 990, 713	1938	125, 097, 214
1938.	460, 082, 976	1939	144, 024, 893
1939.	307, 000, 000	1940	2 92, 000, 000

¹ Equals 30 percent of the customs receipts for the previous calendar year.
² Estimated roughly.

Mr. Chairman, March 13 the Secretary of Agriculture, addressing a meeting of the Food and Grocery Conference Committee in Washington in discussing this plan, said:

If this plan is fully successful, it means that the day is not far distant when all of the people of the United States will be adequately nourished.

The Secretary also pointed out that-

It is our sincere hope that this plan in operation will prove the most simple and practical method developed so far for getting an increased flow of surplus agricultural commodities into the hands of those who need them.

From these brief observations, selected from the Secretary's general statement, we can come to only one conclusion, that is, that if the plan in its experimental application proves reasonably satisfactory to all parties concerned, it will be applied toward the reduction of such surpluses as may, from time to time, appear on the retail markets of this country. The Department of Agriculture has made it very clear "that such a program merits a trial" and that a "limited number of cities be selected as experimental areas. ranging in population upward from 50,000, at least one or two of which should have as one of its primary sources of income agricultural back country, to get the greatest experimental value from the farmers' standpoint."

There is no doubt left as to the experimental nature of this plan.

SOCIAL CREDIT, PRINCIPLES OF FINANCE, AND MONETARY MANAGEMENT

The Secretary's approach through "section 32" money and his application of the two-price system-locally and internally, but not internationally—to the purchase at retail, of products domestically produced, and ruled by the Department of Agriculture as surplus, and to be distributed through the use of "blue stamp" money, impinges on the principles involved in our contemporary conception of social credit and monetary reforms. A close analysis of the statements which have been made by the Secretary and his associates, together with the releases submitted to the public by the spokesmen of the distributors of food products in this country, leads us to assume that the objectives sought by the Secretary's two-price idea are—

First. To reduce or eliminate surpluses so there will follow a higher total price to the producers of the total output of domestic agriculture.

Second. Through the operation of the plan, to obtain a greater consumption of food—later the plan to be extended to fibers, cotton and wool—products through increasing the consumption of those people the Secretary now classes as "underconsumers."

If the second objective could be attained, the Secretary argues indirectly, a considerable approach could be made to the first objective; that is, a higher total price.

In the early days when the two-price idea was less developed, the Secretary talked about a plan that would provide a two-way retail price. It was suggested that processors and distributors enter into agreements with the Secretary whereby surplus commodities would be sold on a basis which, when manufactured, would move to the consumer at a price per unit less than the price prevailing on the products processed out of goods not covered by a two-price agreement. The promotion of such a plan, of course, invited criticism. Retailers objected. They took the position that consumers enjoying the lower retail prices would buy more than actual needs, resell at a higher price, and thereby disturb the relationship of the retailer to his consuming trade. It was contended that such a program would reduce the retailers' volume of business, and, of course, had such a plan been adopted, the tendency would have been to force the retail price on goods not covered by a two-price agreement, into the channels of consumption at the same price as units fabricated out of the raw products covered by the two-price agreement. Some contended that a two-price idea so operated would be the equivalent of a type of Government-subsidized processing and retailing activity and would therefore cut directly across the path of private enterprise.

Now, through section 32 money the Secretary is about to place in operation a plan—a form of monetary management, if you please—which answers or sets aside, as evidenced by the overwhelming approval of the trade, the complaints originally emanating from the retail trade against the two-price idea. This elimination is accomplished through the mechanism which gives to the retailer his full price on all sales, whether the purchase price is burdened directly on the purchasers or met through some subsidized method or channel. But with this section 32 money plan about to take form and with the Secretary having made statements which justify an assumption that this monetary management reform may spread to a volume calling for hundreds of millions of dollars—or even billions—of subsidy, the Secretary invites the objections of another group—that is, the taxpayers.

The issuance of "the way to plenty-blue stamp' money" obtained or financed through the sale of interest-bearing, tax-exempt bonds and with the monetization value applying to the retail prices on commodities designated as surplus concerns vitally, of course, two specific groups-taxpayers generally, and farmers growing and marketing commodities designated as surplus and operating as primary producers and taxpayers. Now, if the Secretary, or the administration, and the Government desires to escape the condemnation of the taxpayer and the unorganized primary producerthe farmer-and if, at the same time, the compensation represented by the dollar value of the "blue stamp" money is to be provided by Government, it is reasonable to assume the new credit which we have as the basis for the blue-stamp money will have to be obtained not through borrowing but through the creation of interest-free credit.

PLANS CALL FOR SHIFTING OF CONSUMERS' LOYALTY

Now, it is proposed, by high-pressure advertising participated in by Government agencies as well as the grocery trade, to shift the desires of consumers away from some particular food item they may be using and divert that consumer loyalty to the item advertised as surplus food. It has even been claimed, I am informed, by the grocery trade that it will be possible to sell $200,000 worth of surplus foods where heretofore only $100,000 worth has been sold. The original thought was, it appears, that through the issuance of the "blue stamp" money the sales might have been increased on the items designated as surplus as much as 20 percent. But to this original thought of an increase of only 20 percent has been added the suggestion that through specific advertising, offering of leaders, and general coordination of the efforts of the allied food trade along with the efforts of Government agencies, some proponents claim the sales can be doubled that is, where only $100,000 worth of surplus goods previously moved, retail sales can, under the new plan, be increased up to $200,000. I assume, of course, that the quantity moved will be also increased 100 percent or more and that the increase in dollar sales volume will not represent any material gain in unit selling price.

Now, if the "way to plenty—'blue stamp' money" plan brings such startling results in a shift of consumer loyalty and increased sales of 200 percent or less of goods by quantity and dollar value, let us inquire as to what is likely to happen to the producer adversely affected. If through the operation of the natural law of demand and supply—as natural as it can operate today—there develops a reasonably high market on potatoes, or a market that would allow, let us say, cost of production; and if this occurs at a time beans are advertised as surplus food, it would appear under these circumstances the potato grower would find his product advertised against until the surplus of beans disappeared into consumers' stomachs. Probably by that time, there would be a surplus of rice or potatoes—both being somewhat of a substitute food for beans.

NEW ECONOMIC FORCES AT WORK

It is very clear that we are here, through the issuance of "way to plenty—'blue stamp' money," placing in operation a new monetary and economic force which adds to the natural hazards faced by an enterpriser in any given line of production, artificial barriers which he cannot with any degree of certainty forecast and which we can measure only when the decision of the Secretary is reached to specify as surplus some given food product; the Secretary's decision to be followed by the coordinated effort of the allied food trade through advertising and other sales pressure to direct consumer loyalty to the item so declared and advertised.

MONETIZATION OF GOODS AT RETAIL PRICE

Mr. Chairman, I am of the belief at this moment, having in mind the limited time in which we have had to consider this far-reaching plan, that the mechanism here created very definitely monetizes goods at the retail price, the money element in the form of "blue stamps" being secured through the sale of interest-bearing tax-exempt bonds arranged through the customary agencies of the Budget and the Treasury. If the "blue stamps" were issued directly against the commodities involved and at the price for which the primary producer—farmer—sold the products and without incident to interest-bearing bonds, the economic consequences would be very dissimilar to those which must follow the present plan. Or perhaps we should also observe that if the "blue stamp" money was issued directly to the farmer, instead of against the retail price level, the farmers' income would be greatly increased and his buying power correspondingly raised.

The Secretary and the Treasury could have given consideration, and we may say that an experiment could have been tried wherein the Secretary of Agriculture would declare to the Treasury the accrual in supply of food commodities, naming quantity and price at not less than cost of production, representing surpluses. If upon receiving this report of an accrued surplus from the Department of Agriculture the Department of the Treasury then proceeded to monetize the surplus through a special issue of currency, debt free, without bank reserve characteristics, and thus not having a basis for bank creation of credit, and in a sum sufficient to cover the farmers' cost of production on the raw material involved, the farmer would, under this plan, directly benefit. With his increased buying power other phases of industry would also share in the returns from the

COSTS INVOLVED IN "BLUE STAMP" MONEY PLAN

If, as the Secretary has indicated, the plan is to be spread sufficiently wide to take in all surpluses arising out of agricultural operations, we must come to the conclusion the appropriations heretofore made and limited by 30 percent of custom receipts will in no way finance the undertaking. Ten times the ninety to one hundred and fifty million dollars per annum will no doubt be involved. Now if this vast sum is to be raised through the issuance of tax-exempt interest-bearing bonds and the whole procedure is to clear through the operations of the Treasury it is indeed an undertaking in which the taxpayer is vitally concerned. The amount which he must use as a basis of calculation is represented by the retail value of such commodities, at raw or processed value, as the Secretary may hold to be a

FISCAL POLICY OF GOVERNMENT WILL NOT BEAR UP UNDER THE WEIGHT

Mr. Chairman, when we consider the present direct debt of the Federal Government, the mounting and continued deficits which we face, the channeling of custom receipts from the general funds of the Treasury in this manner, the plans, in the rough, to reach out and embrace all surplus agricultural commodities as they may appear under our present limited planned economy and the fact that this whole procedure is based on the theory of tax-exempt interest-bearing bonds which now amount to more than $65,000,000,000, I say, Mr. Chairman, that if this is the general conception back of the "section 32-united effortthe way to plenty-'blue stamp' money," it is time we make rapid calculations to see and determine in advance as best we can, just where this last experiment is to take us.

It appears to me it is high time we take a saner course, follow fundamentally sound procedure and eliminate much of the experimenting which has already led us into troublesome days. In 1940 the people of this country will again have an opportunity to express their views and indicate their appraisal of policies now being followed.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Luther A. Johnson] such time as he may require.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, this bill is not a farm bill nor an agricultural bill prescribing a formula but is merely an appropriation bill to appropriate funds out of the Federal Treasury to carry on agencies created by the Government to aid farmers and to make available money to be paid directly to the farmers. Later in the session the Committee on Agriculture will, I hope, bring in a general farm bill by which methods of aiding farmers may be materially improved. The distress of farmers certainly warrants and demands that such relief be afforded.

The item in this appropriation bill in which I am especially interested is the $250,000,000 for parity payments, which, added to other items, would make approximately $750,000,000 available for payments to farmers. This is only about $38,-000,000 increase over last year, and I am surprised that there should be any opposition to it. Surely if the Members from the city districts knew of the great need of farmers. they would not oppose this slight increase. It should be even greater, and I will vote for a larger amount if opportunity is afforded.

Mr. Chairman, I represent an agricultural district, but in my judgment those who represent districts that are not agricultural should realize that for every dollar that is spent in restoring the purchasing power to the farmers of America they will lessen the expense of relief and other forms of relief throughout the country. For every dollar's aid to the farmer, the Government will relatively reduce expenditures to be made elsewhere, and it is foolish, short-sighted, and inexcusable for those from the cities and industrial centers to vote against this assistance to the farmers of America.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. LEMKE].

Mr. LEMKE. Mr. Chairman, this is not a political issue. It is neither Democratic nor Republican; as a matter of fact, the agricultural problem can never be solved by Republicans or Democrats alone but must be solved by the united action of this Congress.

I am for the bill here under consideration for the same reason that I am for the W. P. A., because agriculture is in distress and we have unemployed and hungry people, but we have no business in having them in the United States. If the proper legislation had been passed years ago, we would not have this problem before us today.

If the farmer had been given cost of production years ago, you would not have this situation. As a matter of fact, neither party need be very proud of its record on agriculture. They have been farm-boarded under the previous administration until they were sick, and now they have been triple-A'd until they are sick; and what the farmer really wants and needs is cost of production.

I shall discuss briefly in the short time I have the Massingale cost-of-production bill. I may say that that bill provides that the Secretary of Agriculture shall fix the average minimum price at the average cost of production on all agricultural products that entered into interstate or foreign commerce in excess of $10,000,000 the previous year. This takes in over 99 percent of all the farm products that are raised in the United States and sold.

We feel that you have to approach this problem, not in a little canoe of your own on cotton, not in a little canoe of your own on wheat, but we must take the whole agricultural structure out of the mire and give cost of production as a minimum price to all the products that enter into interstate or foreign commerce, because if you give cost of production on just one or two items, then you will find that they will be overproduced.

We intend to leave the agricultural structure or the relative position of the various products on an even keel and in the relative position that they are in today, so that when you get cost of production for one product you will also get cost of production for the other; that is, for that part which is domestically consumed.

We are not so much interested in the part that we raise for export, but we are concerned with the American market for the American farmer and we are going to have it eventually, why not now? [Applause.]

Now, what is this cost of production? This is the question I am asked. How are you going to arrive at it? We provide in this bill that the cost of production of farm products shall be derived at the same as industry or the manufacturer finds cost of production for his product; that is, he first figures what it costs for raw material, then his investment, and he is entitled to a return on that, and then he figures his labor and the labor of others whom he employs, and with that kind of formula you will find that the cost of production is practically the same throughout the United States of America.

Do you know that it costs within a few cents as much to operate a 500-acre farm in North Dakota as it does a 150acre farm in Iowa, and do you know that because of different conditions that exist, the income from the North Dakota farm is within $63 a year as much as the income of the Iowa farm? The fact is that we have not been conscious that the cost of production is practically uniform throughout this Nation, because unknown to us the cost of production has made uniform the average cost at which you can produce. This because of the higher price of land, the higher price of fertilizer and of labor, and because of climatic conditions, and so forth. Those are facts that have been ascertained, and that the Agricultural Department has at its fingertips.

The cost of production of wheat in North Dakota is practically the same per bushel as in Illinois and Indiana, and again the cost of a pound of tobacco in one State or in one locality is within 1 cent per pound the same as in another, and the same is true of cotton. But you must take an average of years; that is, an average period of 5 or more years. cannot take just 1 year, as the Department of Agriculture has been doing, because in that 1 year your corn crop or your tobacco crop or your cotton crop may be an entire failure, and therefore, it would cost some $3 a pound to produce for that year, but take an average of 5 or more years, and you will find that the cost of production of 1 pound of cotton in Texas is practically the same as the cost of production of 1 pound of cotton in South Carolina or any other southern Considering the average individual farm as a business unit we find that the average farm in Iowa consists of 158 acres. That the total fixed charges and operating costs of the farm in 1930 was $4,487. The average gross income of the average Iowa farm in the same year was $3,395, or a loss of $1,092.

Then taking the average individual North Dakota farm in 1930 and we find that it consisted of 495 acres, or 337 acres larger than the Iowa farm, yet the total fixed charges and operating costs of the Dakota farm was $4,488, or just $1 more than the Iowa farm.

Again the average gross income of the Dakota farm was $3,332, or just $63 less than the Iowa farm.

So you may take any of the principal farm commodities and you will find that the average cost of production over a 5-year period is virtually the same throughout the United States. This because of the difference in transportation charges, the difference in the amount of taxes, the necessity of fertilization, climatic conditions, and so forth. All these have silently adjusted the cost of production of agricultural products throughout the Nation without our knowledge.

Next, how will we enforce the provisions of the cost-ofproduction bill? We have the Secretary of Agriculture find the minimum price, the cost of production, each year, and, at the same time, he will tell the producers before they plant the domestic requirements of that product. Then when the crop is harvested the farmer can do with it as he pleases until he sells the product to a dealer who deals in interstate commerce. He is under no obligation to sell until he is ready. He may give it to his neighbor or he may feed it to his stock, but when he does sell to a dealer in interstate commerce he will get the cost-of-production price for that percentage of his product which is domestically consumed.

For illustration, let us take wheat. Let us say that we will consume 90 percent of the production each year. Then when you take 100 bushels of wheat to the elevator you will get the cost of production for 90 bushels, which would be approximately $1.50 a bushel, and for the other 10 bushels you would get a certificate from the Secretary of Agriculture. The bill provides that the Secretary will have to sell that in a foreign market, or he may sell it to a domestic mill, provided the mill gives him a bond that it will sell all of the products in a foreign market. Only in case of a shortage at home can the Secretary use any part of such product for domestic consumption, and when he does use it for domestic consumption he will have to pay the farmers the cost of pro-

Ever since 1920 there has been a real farm problem. Ever since 1920 hundreds and thousands of farmers have been losing their homes by mortgage foreclosure, judgment, forced, and tax sales. Hundreds and thousands of innocent men, women, and children have been evicted from their homeshundreds and thousands more lost their farms and became tenants or sharecroppers and serfs for absentee landlords. In this nefarious work the Federal land banks have been some of the worst offenders.

Since 1920 over 10,000,000 farm boys and girls have been driven into the already overcrowded cities to swell the ranks of the unemployed-compelled to look for W. P. A. jobs or doles. This is an insult to our intelligence. This condition has been brought about because we have compelled the men, women, and children who live on the farms to feed the Nation-to feed us-below the cost of production. Any intelligent person knows that a farmer can no more continue in business by selling the things we eat, drink, and wear for

The truth is we have not been honest with ourselves or with the farmers. We have permitted the curtailment and the destruction of agricultural wealth by cutting the throats of little pigs, by shooting calves, and by setting fire, and plowing under cotton, wheat, and corn. Congress has been influenced by a "brainless trust" during this administration and by less than it costs him to produce them than a businessman can stay in business and sell goods for less than he pays for a "do nothing bump on the log" during the past administration.

Ever since 1920 there have been, and there are pending today, before Congress bills which, if passed, would solve the farm problem once and for all. But whenever one of these bills, such as the Frazier-Lemke refinance bill or the nonpartisan cost-of-production farm bill, comes up for consideration then every reformer in the land attempts to amend it so as to include some pet reform or idea of his own. The Department of Agriculture—which is supposed to represent the farmer but does not—is always there with its ax there with its political machine, built at the expense of the taxpayers—with its salaried lobbyists to defeat the bill.

Ever since 1920 we have done the wrong thing, we traveled in reverse, back and forth, we have never had the courage to tackle the proposition as we should. We have gone backward and forward. We have done everything in the wrong way, the most illogical way.

We talk of overproduction. I have said, and I repeat today, that we have an overproduction of just one thing in the United States, and that is an overproduction of ignorance at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue. We have had these problems and the solution of them at our fingertips ever since I have been a Member of Congress, and I came here with Mr. Wallace 6 years ago.

Oh, you need not apologize for Mr. Wallace on this side of the House. He was not born a Democrat. He became a Democrat by adoption. The trouble is that you adopted the wrong baby. He appeared before our Committee on Agriculture the other day and virtually admitted that his Triple A was a flop. He said that you cannot continue with the Triple A and give the farmer parity; that he has never received parity, and never would unless you give him a processing tax.

But he forgot to tell us that the processing tax was charged back to the farmer in lower prices. The farmer paid the processing tax. He forget to tell us that his own Department had made a report that the farmer paid the tax in lower prices. It reported that the farmer who signed the hog and corn contract received $2.34 less per hundred pounds when the tax went into effect. Therefore, the farmer paid $2.34 processing tax in order to get $2.20.

Since only 17 out of every 100 hog producers signed the contract, therefore 83 out of every hundred farmers who paid the $2.34 processing tax per hundred pounds in lower prices received nothing in return. They were taxed without getting any benefit. They were short changed $2.34 for every hundred pounds they produced. This is the deception practiced upon the farmer that we object to.

The Secretary of Agriculture now admits he cannot make the Triple A work unless you give him the processing tax, so that he can fool the farmers some more and tell them he is giving them something for nothing, when they have to pay $7 for every dollar they receive. That is not all. He says if you do not do that, then you will have to appropriate millions and millions, and the Treasury cannot stand it. That is the millions we have before us today, and I am going to vote for it, because you are responsible for that law; not I; nor those men and women who fought with John A. Simpson years ago to give us cost of production, the thing that we were promised by the former Governor of New York.

Let us go a little further. How are we going to enforce the payment of the cost of production? We are following the same system that Mr. Hoover used when he was Food Administrator. He licensed the buyers of wheat, and they had to pay $2.20 a bushel at Minneapolis, and $2.26 at Chicago, and similar prices at other primary markets. When he had that price fixed, then if a dealer in grain who held a license paid more or less, he took his license away.

You do not need 88,000 wet nurses to wait on the farmers if you give them the Massingale cost-of-production bill. Neither do you need to appropriate millions and millions each year to keep it going. The cost-of-production price will then be paid for that part that goes into domestic consumption. Then if we have a shortage, the Secretary of Agriculture can take part of the surplus to supply the necessities of this Nation. If he does not need it all, then he must dispose of it on the foreign market.

You in the South have had a splendid example with your cotton. You have got 11,000,000 bales piled up in front of you and you do not know how to let loose of any of it. You seem to be in the same position that I felt the Secretary of Agriculture was the other day. It seemed to me that he felt he had a bear by the tail and he did not know how to let loose and he was virtually begging the Committee on Agriculture to cut the tail off so that the bear could escape without embarrassment to Secretary Wallace. There is the situation that you have.

Now, we have in the Massingale bill section 10, which provides that whenever the cost of production has been established, then if there is any competing commodity that comes in from the outside that would bring that price below the cost of production, the Secretary of Agriculture will notify the Secretary of the Treasury and he will immediately put into effect a duty equal to the difference in cost of production abroad, as figured in United States currency, plus a 10-percent profit or advantage to the American farmer. Surely, the American farmer is entitled to have an advantage of 10 percent over the foreign farmer or over the peon and slave labor of foreign countries. There can be no question about that.

There is nothing new in this bill. It makes use of the same Federal power to help agriculture that has been used to help industry. The Interstate Commerce Act fixes the rates for the transportation of commodities in interstate and foreign commerce. The Packers and Stockyards Act regulates commission and yardage charges and fixes the price per bushel or ton on corn and hay charged farmers for feed for their stock while awaiting sale. The Commodity and Exchange Act regulates interstate and foreign commerce in the commodity markets of the Nation. It regulates the amount of commissions charged for the sale of grain. The Supreme Court has held all these acts constitutional.

This bill will not cost the Federal Government one penny. When it becomes a law there will be no further need for subsidies to the farmer. There will be no further need of the 27 varieties of Federal agencies now riding on the farmer's back. There will be no further need for an army of Federal employees to regulate the daily lives of the farmers. It will take at least 3,000,000 off the W. P. A. pay rolls because they will find useful employment. Prosperity and security for agriculture means prosperity for labor and business as well. When this bill becomes a law the Government will no longer have to bail out the farmer—the farmer will bail out the Government.

This bill will not materially increase the cost of living. This is true because the cost of the raw material is usually only a very small part of the finished product. The leech and the parasite, who still thinks that the farmer can or will feed him below the cost of production, will now be smoked out. He will have to come out in the open and be counted. This bill, together with the Frazier-Lemke refinance bill, is a complete solution of the agricultural problem and, also, largely, of the unemployment problem.

We imported from foreign nations $8,373,652,981 of agricultural products, substitutes, and manufactured products thereof in the last 6 years. That is the foreign valuation. The domestic valuation would be over $16,750,000,000. That is what the consumer paid. That is what our own people should have received instead of foreigners.

This would have been sufficient to have handed to every head of our 6,000,000 farm families a check for $2,790. That money would have done billions of dollars' worth of business in our own country. It would have kept the idle employed. It would have given buying power to the Nation—that is what the cost-of-production bill will do.

I would like to discuss this bill for about an hour, but I only have time to hit a few of the high spots.

A great deal has been said about the tariff and duty. My friends, let us be honest with ourselves.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Lemke] 5 additional minutes.

Mr. LEMKE. Let us take up that situation for a minute. Do you know that since 1933 we have imported something like $8,000,000,000 worth of agricultural products and substitutes? Do you know that that is the foreign valuation, and do you know that the domestic valuation would be $16,000,000,000? Do you know that that would be equal to a check for $2,700 to every family of the 6,000,000 farm families? That is no small item. These imports do control the domestic price.

I know what I talk about, because I was in Chicago when a shipload of corn came in from Argentina that was sold for 34½ cents a bushel. Our corn in Cass County, N. Dak., was 85 cents a bushel at that time, but it immediately came down to 35 cents a bushel. It is self-evident that if you are in the corn-buying business, you would buy that cheaper foreign corn as long as you could get it, and if one shipload was not enough, you would get more.

Now, again, we talk of the low price of farm products and we always go back to 1932, but I would like to take you back to 1933 and I would like to take 6 years prior to Mr. Wallace's reign and 6 years before, and you will find the advantages are all in favor of the 6 years before. That is no credit or argument or criticism of either party. It is simply saying to you that we have been a miserable failure when we have legislated on agriculture up to date.

I want to repeat, my friends, that there are two petitions—petitions Nos. 5 and 6—at the Speaker's desk. If you will bring those two laws out, the cost-of-production and the Frazier-Lemke bill to refinance the farmer, this agricultural problem will be solved once and for all. We have a lot to say about appropriations. I regret that we have millions unemployed. I regret that one farmer out of every five has lost his farm by foreclosure, tax sale, or judgment sale since I have been a Member of Congress, and Mr. Wallace has been at the head of the Department of Agriculture. These figures were questioned the other day when I gave them in the Committee on Agriculture, but I will give to you or anyone who questions them my authority, and I will show it to you in print from Mr. Wallace's own Department, in his circular on the farm-debt situation.

There you will find that 170 farmers out of every 1,000 lost their farms and homes in the first 5 years of Mr. Wallace's reign—1 out of every 6; and if you include 1938 you will find that 1 out of every 5 has lost his farm since 1933. There are 435 Members of Congress, 96 Senators, and the Chief Executive at the other end of the Avenue. Working together, we can intelligently solve this problem if we will make up our minds to do so; and we are going to do so, because the American people demand that it be done. Let us do this thing and stop this curtailment and destruction of agricultural wealth. No nation ever became great because it destroyed its wealth, but only because it always produced more.

There never has been overproduction of any agricultural products as a whole in the United States. The National Reclamation Association shows the amount of agricultural displacement by importation, as follows:

Total agricultural displacements

Year	Foreign values	United States displacement	United States acres to produce
1935	$812, 660, 463	$2,656,310,744	73, 461, 118
	869, 765, 000	2,209,295,000	75, 746, 570
	1, 136, 802, 000	3,410,406,000	87, 234, 280

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEMKE. I yield.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is it not the duty of Congress to legislate rather than to let some bureaucrats in the departments legislate for Congress?

Mr. LEMKE. I will say that we as Members of Congress are the hired men of the Government and that these bureaucrats are our hired men, not our bosses. The time has come when we should rise to the supreme occasion and let the American people know that we are going to write the Nation's laws and write them correctly for the benefit of all the people. The millions of unemployed and the farmers who have been dispossessed of their homes are a far greater danger to our democracy than all the armies of Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin combined. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Brown].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, naturally we all are very much interested in the welfare of the people of our country. It is my opinion that if we can secure parity prices for cotton, wheat, corn, and other basic commodities, this will, in the long run, be the economical thing to do.

We have spent billions of dollars for relief, and are continuing to spend large sums for this purpose. Of course, no one wants to see people suffer for the want of food and clothing

Should we obtain parity prices for these agricultural commodities, the people in the agricultural areas can remain off of relief and those who have left the farms and have gone to the cities and towns could return and earn their livelihood on the farms, where they can secure fair returns for their farm products and, in addition, have their gardens and lands on which to produce their food crops. I contend that parity prices, in a great measure, will solve the farm problem, as well as take care of a great part of the relief load. The Government cannot continue to pay the large sums for relief, especially in view of the fact that the number of unemployed is not decreasing.

Unless the buying power of the farmer is materially raised, many of the industries of this country cannot operate, and, furthermore, most of our farmers will be forced to leave the farms and go on relief.

Cotton in my district and State, and in many States of the South, is the only money crop, and it is impossible for these cotton growers to reside on the farm when obtaining only 8 and 10 cents a pound for their product. Last year in my district the average one-horse farmer, with a family group consisting of a wife and two or three children, did not make more than 1½ bales of cotton on account of infestation of the boll weevil. These growers have no other money crops and cannot remain on their farms without outside assistance.

The farmers of the South last year had only a gross income of about $84 for each individual laborer for 1 year's work. I do not mean $84 per family group but $84 for each individual of the family group. Out of this they had to pay the cost of fertilizer, poison for boll weevils, livestock, farm implements, taxes, interest, and other essentials. Therefore, no one can doubt that the cotton grower of the South is the problem No. 1 of this Nation. Unless the cotton farmers are given an improved program over what we have now, they will remain problem No. 1 for some time.

We have sufficient land in the agricultural sections of the country to place every man that is on relief in a home, where he will become happier and more contented, at much less expense than under the present program. A man on relief has very little to look forward to in this life, with no gardens, cows, hogs, poultry, and nothing to better his condition. All he receives is the small monthly amount the Government pays him to work in all kinds of weather. Of course, many people will do anything, and are justified, to prevent starving and keep their small children and loved ones from hunger.

The amount the cotton farmers of the South and the grain growers of the West receive as benefit payments and subsidies, together with the small amount paid for relief, is not as much per person as the sum paid for relief in many of the cities and States of the North. Therefore, if we could secure parity prices for our farm products of the South and West, we would need very little for relief in these sections of the country. Therefore, from an economical standpoint it would be good business, would prevent further abandoning of the farms, and people from the cities and towns would return to the farms.

The growers of agriculture, especially the cotton growers, must have price protection which will enable them to sell their cotton in any market and obtain sufficient funds to keep them in the necessities of life.

If northern and eastern industrial labor is protected from cheap foreign labor by a tariff, the western and southern farmer, whose purchasing power is thereby diminished by just that amount, should certainly be paid parity and receive benefits to offset this disadvantage.

The present price of cotton is around 8 cents per pound, which means $40 per bale. When this same cotton is manufactured into cloth and sold to the cotton farmer of the South it costs him many dollars per pound. I see no reason and no justice for such a spread. Anyone can easily see that the cotton grower is not getting his just part of the product.

Under the present plan of small allotment and the low price of cotton, the cotton growers of the South have very little to look forward to; and I wish to impress upon you that in many sections of the South, if the cotton growers leave cotton, they can produce nothing else on their farms for sale for want of markets.

Under this bill the portion of the $250,000,000 to be allotted to the cotton growers is nothing like parity for the growers; and, while it is helpful, I do not see how this class of farmers can live on the cotton farms even with the present subsidy added to the present price.

The hearings show that the present price of cotton now is little less than 8½ cents per pound; that parity price is little less than 16 cents per pound. Therefore there is a difference of about 7 cents per pound between the present price and parity price.

Without commodity loans the farmer probably would not be receiving more than 5 cents a pound for his cotton. I think these loans have prevented the price of cotton from going to 5 cents a pound or lower. The same can be said of corn as well as wheat.

I am sure that if parity price is paid the farmers of the South and West for their commodities the difference between what we are now paying and parity price would not compare in amount to the large sums we are paying for the relief load in the towns and cities. These people certainly would be more contented and satisfied on the farms.

Several weeks ago I introduced H. R. 4675, which is practically the same bill as S. 1303, introduced by Senator SMITH, of South Carolina, and known as the Smith bill, with the exception that I undertake to raise the price of cotton to much nearer parity, and I think we certainly should have parity. I shall vote for the amendment to be offered, and I hope it will pass, to this pending bill to raise cotton and other basic commodities to parity prices. If we are unable to secure this amendment, I hope H. R. 4675 will later be enacted. It proposes to supplement, strengthen, and improve the farm programs by amending the Agricultural Adjustment Act in four important respects, as follows:

Part 1, if enacted into law, assures to the cotton farmer 90 percent of the parity price, which is approximately 14 cents a pound at present market. Cotton upon which a price-adjustment payment is made is not eligible for Government loans. As the adjustment payments will very probably yield more income to the cotton producer than by placing his production of cotton under Government loans, it is very probable that the movement of cotton into domestic consumption and export through regular channels will be expedited and that there would not be a further accumulation of stocks of cotton under Government loans.

While the Government loan programs have doubtless been of great benefit in emergency periods in the past and have been instrumental in helping to maintain the income of the cotton producers, stocks have now accumulated under the loans to such an extent that the probable good effects of the loan programs in the future will be impaired and the interest of the industry as a whole is best served through a normal movement of cotton into trade channels.

The terms of the bill provide an assurance of a fair income to the cotton producer on a normal crop and restores to a considerable extent normal purchasing power to this large group. This will doubtless prove an important factor in bringing greater prosperity to the South and the Nation. When this is done there will be a greater demand for cotton and cotton products, and it is predicted that the price of cotton will rise to a point where the cost to the Government under the formula provided for price-adjustment payments would not be great.

When the proposed amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 are adopted the necessary additions to the act will have been made and Congress will have provided the necessary laws for the operation of farm programs which will, in a large measure, solve our difficult agricultural problems.

Part 2 authorizes the Commodity Credit Corporation to transfer to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation approximately 1,666,000 bales remaining from the 1934 crop as security for loans. The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture, may use this cotton in a way that will tend to expand markets and increase consumption of cotton and cotton products. Not exceeding 500,000 bales of the cotton or the products thereof may be donated for distribution to those in need. Under this proposal, a considerable amount of cotton is provided for new-use programs and expanding the markets for cotton and cotton products. An ample amount is also set aside for relief purposes.

Part 3 offers a method whereby cotton producers may reduce their cotton acreage in 1939 by not less than 20 percent nor more than 75 percent below the farm acreage for such farm, and for so doing may have released to them by the Commodity Credit Corporation cotton at a price of 3 cents per pound from the 1937 or 1938 loan stocks in an amount equal to the normal production of acreage taken out of production under this formula. There is also a provision in the bill which enables the Commodity Credit Corporation to acquire title to such cotton as is required for the purposes of this particular section.

Part 4 provides for release, after July 1, 1940, by the Commodity Credit Corporation of cotton held under the loans similar to plans of release in operation in 1936 and 1937 by the Corporation. This section provides a plan under which not exceeding 2,500,000 bales may be marketed annually. Under this plan, domestic mill and export requirements can be met as marketing conditions warrant.

If the farm problem is not solved at this session of Congress so as to give the cotton grower and growers of other basic commodities more benefits than they are receiving now, producers of farm commodities will not be able to remain on the farms, and the Democratic Party will be criticized. [Applause.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. August H. Andresen].

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, passing the buck and blaming Congress for the failure of the farm program and other New Deal policies has now become a popular sport on the part of President Roosevelt and his New Deal associates.

The "rubber stamp" Congresses of the past 6 years are largely responsible for the economic condition of the present day. This Congress must accept the criticisms in all sincerity and immediately get busy to undo the damage that has been done to the American people and our economic structure by the dictatorial few who have ruled this country by executive flat under the New Deal.

The Democratic majority is responsible for the surrender of legislative power to the Executive. They are still in control of Congress. As representatives of the people it is up to all of us to forget about partisan politics and join together as Americans to: (1) Recapture from the executive branch of the Government the power that constitutionally belongs solely to Congress; (2) repeal all laws and Executive orders that are now working a hardship on business, agriculture, and labor; (3) restore confidence in our American Government and institutions so that business and agriculture may again assume a profitable place in our economic structure and provide employment for the millions of unemployed at an American scale of wages.

It is up to Congress now to save America. The New Deal program has failed, and it is the responsibility of Congress to function. Get busy, and do it now.

Mr. Chairman, a few days ago Secretary Wallace honored our Committee on Agriculture by appearing as a witness to discuss the subject of farm legislation. He made some rather startling revelations before the committee, and it is my desire to call your attention specifically to those revelations in the short time that I have. Secretary Wallace said—and I quote from his remarks before the Committee on Agriculture—that our farm income for 1938 amounts to $8,880,000,000. He stated:

If we take into account the lower level of prices of commodities purchased by farmers, interest, and taxes in 1937 and 1938 compared with 1929, we find that the purchasing power of agriculture has been restored practically to the 1929 level, and this improvement was shared generally in all agricultural regions except those that were affected by drought conditions.

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. JOHNS. Does the figure the gentleman quoted include the payments made to the farmers?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The amount of $8,880,-000.000 includes $462,000,000 in benefit payments.

It is rather interesting to note the way the Secretary has juggled figures. He states that the income for the farmers in 1938 was $8,880,000,000. On the 1st of February the Department of Agriculture issued a publication called Crops and Markets, which was received by most of the Members of Congress—at least by those who come from agricultural sections—in which the following statement was made:

Cash farm income in 1938. Cash farm income and Government payments to farmers in 1938 are estimated by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics at $7,632,000,000, which includes benefit payments, loans on cotton, wheat, and corn as well as cash received from sale of all farm products.

This amount is $1,200,000,000 lower than the figure that Secretary Wallace gave us the other day.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I yield.

Mr. REED of New York. Is that measured in 59-cent

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Both these figures are measured in 59-cent dollars; and when I questioned the Secretary on his statement with reference to the fact that agriculture was in as good shape today as it was in 1929 I asked him about the prices that the farmers received today as compared with 1929. In 1929 the farmers received from 50 to 60 cents a pound for butterfat; today they receive from 22 to 25 cents a pound. In 1929 they received from $1.35 to $1.65 a bushel for wheat; today they receive from 37 cents to 65 cents a bushel; and so I could enumerate many commodities, including cotton, in which so many people are interested. In 1929 the cotton farmer received from 18 to 22 cents a pound for cotton as against from 7 to 81/4 cents a pound today. There is quite a difference between the income of the farmers today and their income in 1929. If Mr. Wallace has not wakened to the fact that there is a difference in farm income between 1929 and 1938 he had better examine the figures of the Department over which he has jurisdiction. How he could make a mistake from the official figures issued by his Department of $1,200,000,000 in the income for 1938 no one can comprehend.

The only conclusion I could draw was to the effect that possibly he juggled the figures on income of the farmers the same way he juggled the corn figures last year when he stopped the referendum vote because he knew the farmers in the Corn Belt would not vote for compulsory control or marketing control from Washington.

I notice the gentleman from Oregon is present and I want to quote from a letter I received from one of his farmers. Possibly this is not from his district, but this farmer from Oregon sends me the prices he has received for his wheat since 1922.

In 1922 he received 89 cents; in 1923, 82 cents; in 1924, $1.24; 1925, $1.40; 1926, $1.13; 1927, 97 cents; 1928, 84 cents; 1929, 96 cents. Today he states he is receiving from 46¼ to 48¼ cents. I will put these in the Record for the benefit of the gentleman who, I know, is always interested in the welfare of agriculture and who is generally working on the right side when politics do not interfere.

Secretary Wallace has taken occasion several times to criticize my stand on farm legislation. You will recall that when we had the Agricultural Adjustment Act up for consideration in December 1937 I opposed the compulsory features of that bill. In appearing before the committee this week Secretary Wallace said, referring to me:

As a matter of fact, so far as Mr. Andresen and myself are concerned, I am sure that personally we have much in common, but as a matter of the farm program I suspect I differ from him mowen widely than I differ from any member of this committee, as a matter of policy, because I feel his attitude is definitely disadvantageous to the farmers of this country.

Secretary Wallace stands for controlled regimentation of American agriculture. He stands for the present farm bill, which has broken down agricultural prices, destroyed our foreign markets, and has brought distress not only to the 30,000,000 people residing on our farms but to the entire country; while, on the other hand, I stand for free agriculture; I stand for protection of the commodities that may be produced upon American farms; I stand for high prices, and I want to aid the farmers in recapturing their world markets. I want to help them in every possible way to bring about parity income or cost of production or such prices as will make it profitable to them to operate their farms.

I cannot go along with the program of regimentation and the control as administered by Secretary Wallace. The Secretary admits a break-down of the program. We know that the program has broken down and the farmers of this country know that as well as we do.

At a later date, when more time is available, I will discuss at length a sound solution for the agricultural problem and point out in detail the causes for the break-down of the New Deal program for American agriculture.

I will vote for the benefit and parity payments provided in this bill for the reason that the farmers of this country cannot be held responsible for the break-down in agricultural prices. The responsibility lies with the New Deal.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Pierce].

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, and Members of the Committee, a slogan that hits the public fancy just right at the psychological moment, a few brief words that click just at the critical time, may be worth a million votes in a general election. The slogan may far outweigh solid, substantial arguments. It has been said that most people do not seriously think over and study public questions. They have neither time nor necessary information at hand. They want an impression and they can get that impression from a slogan, or a newspaper headline which may belie the article under it. "He kept us out of war" probably elected Wilson in 1916. "A full dinner pail" added thousands of votes to the McKinley total. "Fifty-four-forty or fight" contributed largely to Polk's election. A few years ago the Railroad Commission of Oregon made a ruling that the street railway of Portland could charge and collect 6 cents for a ride, even though their charter said that 5 cents should be the limit. A candidate for office swept Oregon by the thousands by simply declaring "6 cents is too much for a 5-cent

"Cost of production" for the farmers' products will, I predict, in the 1940 campaign, ring from the hills of Oregon to the potato patches of Maine. The election may turn upon these magic words. I warn my associates on the Democratic side of this House that we must not allow our political opponents on my left to capitalize on this slogan. I believe in cost of production for farmers, as well as for industrialists.

We must analyze the situation as we find it, and not be led astray by our desires.

I introduced one of the several companion bills on cost of production in order to secure a complete hearing on this much-heralded policy. I wanted it gone into thoroughly. I have given it a great deal of serious thought, especially since the Massingale bill has been under consideration by the Agricultural Committee. The hearings have been thorough and extensive, and more questions have arisen in my mind every day. What I want to know, and what I realize every thinking Member of this House wants to hear discussed on this floor, is how this proposed law is going to work. We want to know about the mechanics of it. Is it possible by a simple decree or law to proclaim that cost of production will be paid and have it come true? Our learned and eloquent colleague from Oklahoma says there is going to be no compulsion, no cost to the Government, if his bill is passed and put into effect. Ideal, perfect! We all want to free the taxpayers from these heavy appropriations which are constantly adding to the national deficit.

I warn you Republican Members of this House who won your seats in this Seventy-sixth Congress by such a slogan, against talking about cost of production. Yes; I warn you that there is going to be great resentment if this extensive country must be filled, from ocean to ocean, with agents and inspectors, enforcing iron-clad laws, making certain that every farmer gets his share, and no more, of the percentage of his crop which goes into domestic consumption. Remember, we were told in the Committee on Agriculture that this law will affect more than 50 commodities, all of which must have cost of production for the amount consumed within the United States. And we were also told that if we attempt to make wheat the guinea pig, or allow the law to only cover a few basic commodities, then we would kill the effect and make it impossible to bring about the happy day dreamed of by those who want the law passed as it was introduced.

Understand, there is to be no limit, no law regulating the amount a farmer may plant of any commodity. Take to-matoes—a man has been growing tomatoes, say, in New Jersey for the New York market, 10 acres. He plants 20 acres. When it comes to harvest, does he get cost of production on the 20 acres, or cost of production on the 10 acres? Suppose he has a brother, sister, or friend, who is willing to claim to be the producer of the second 10 acres, will that substitute get cost of production on his additional acres?

Take wheat—suppose the estimate is for 800,000,000 bushels, domestic consumption being 640,000,000 bushels, or 80 percent, with a cost of production guarantee at $1.25 a bushel. Suppose a farmer has been raising 100 acres of wheat, 100 acres of corn, 100 acres of alfalfa. Remember, raising wheat on a large scale is largely through the use of machines. It is indeed a lazy man's job. Under this plan, the man is guaranteed cost of production on 80 percent of what he raises. He plows up his alfalfa, quits corn, puts 300 acres in wheat. He is obliged to hire very little extra help in harvest. Is he guaranteed cost of production on 80 percent of this 300 acres with no control over planting? Is it possible, or are we fooling somebody, including ourselves?

I raised wheat in a big way during the war years, and wish I could do it again, as it was the most satisfactory farming of my life. When raising of wheat was under war conditions, we had an unlimited market. The Allies stood ready to accept, at the fixed price, every bushel we raised. The Chicago Board of Trade ceased to exist for many months. The market we had in those World War years is gone, and probably will never return even though there be another great European war.

Suppose a farmer in my colleague's district in Oklahoma comes to town after harvesting his crop of, say, 300 bushels of wheat, bringing it all in for sale except what he is allowed to keep for seed and feed. The allotment for domestic consumption being 80 percent, 240 bushels, he confidently expects to receive $300, the cost of production price of his crop, if it is fixed at $1.25. He finds nobody ready to pay it; there are no buyers. Mills refuse it. Suppose this happens in Cordell, Okla. He hunts up the author of the bill, which has become a law and demands that somebody take his 240 bushels of wheat going into domestic consumption, and pay him the $1.25 a bushel. He calls on our colleague and he says, "What about it?" Echo answers, "What about it?"

Members of the Committee, under that bill would it not be necessary to provide millions of dollars in money to make good our boasted cost of production price, not only on wheat but on cotton, strawberries, cherries, butter? Yes; ninety-odd percent of all the farm products would fall under the plan. Our Government might, of necessity, become the ultimate buyer.

I am becoming a firm believer in America self-contained, American markets for the American farmers, as well as for the American industrialist, in spite of the boasted advantages of reciprocal-trade agreements. In our attempts to bolster up farm income we should not forget, for 1 single minute, the fact that we are trying to do something which has never been done before in the history of the human race. The tillers of the soil have ever been peasants, have ever been slaves, except under our modern democracies. Those who could manipulate them and their commodities have accumulated the wealth. Never has it been better stated than by Beard in his History of American Civilization, where he uses these significant words:

In every age, in every clime where civilization has passed its most primitive form, there has always appeared a small group of men devoted to finance, commerce, and industry. These three groups—commerce, finance, and industry—have always borne down with terrific oppression upon that group which derived its sustenance from agriculture.

It was true on the Euphrates and on the Nile. It has been true everywhere. We are attempting to keep it from coming true in America. Nowhere in any place nor at any time has the farmer had the opportunity he has here enjoyed in the last century and a half during which we have lived under our present Constitution. That opportunity is in jeopardy; it may have passed.

This administration clipped the wings of the group devoted to finance when it provided materially lower interest rates. The inventive geniuses who have given us the automobile and the truck have helped free the farmer from the clutches of those who controlled transportation. The Congress has helped by improving navigable rivers, but the industrialist still reigns supreme, ready to exact for his agricultural tools, for the articles that the farmer must have, and for the transportation of his crops whatever price his whims may desire and his speculative manipulations require.

THE PROCESSING TAX

The subsidies we have been voting so lavishly cannot long continue. It is my firm belief that the users of every commodity should bear the burden of paying the producers of that commodity the cost of production. It may be through a processing tax, if you wish. Let the tax move directly into the Treasury of the United States, just as the money is raised and paid for railroad pensions. Pay it to the Government and then appropriate it out under direct subsidy to avoid the constitutional question. Make every bakery in this land put bread in wrappers which have plainly printed thereon the cost of the wheat and the amount collected in a processing tax. This will show the buyer the facts on cost of ingredients and of taxes, which might be a half cent a loaf, the amount which would give the farmer 30 cents a bushel-an ample subsidy. By compelling the bakers so to wrap the bread, it will not be possible to make the people believe that the processing tax is the sole cause of the heavy increase in prices, such as was the case during the time we had the tax in 1934 and 1935.

Perhaps the cost of production is the goal toward which we ought now to be moving, but I warn you that with it there must be ironclad control more drastic than that outlined by the Senator from Oklahoma when he argued so forcefully before our committee. Every farmer must have his allotment of flax, wheat, corn, hogs, strawberries, or cream before such a plan can be accomplished. It will take many inspectors and agents to enforce such a law.

Should the Massingale bill come before the Committee of the Whole for consideration, I shall offer amendments giving to the Secretary of Agriculture sweeping powers of control over production. Much study and careful attention to extended hearings have not made the way seem easier for such a plan, though the end is much to be desired. The difficulties may not be insurmountable, but the operations have not yet been suggested which would bring about the successful application of the plan. [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Johns].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, I was very much interested this morning when my colleague from Missouri was talking about the situation of the farmers in my State, and also I assume, in the rest of the Nation, with reference to their condition being much improved as far as mortgages on their property are concerned. I thought it might be interesting to put into the Record some of the figures so that you could judge for yourselves.

In my opinion, all that was done in 1933, after the present administration came into power, was to extend or prolong the agony of the farmers in the payment of their obligations.

The Federal farm foreclosures in the State of Wisconsin in 1938 were three times as many as the foreclosures in 1936, just 2 years prior. The Federal land bank and the Federal land commissioner foreclosed 1,723 mortgages on farms in 1938 compared with 542 in 1936. They were particularly heavy in the northern counties of the State.

In my own district, Marinette County, bordering the State of Michigan on the north, had 5 foreclosures in 1936 and 39 in 1938. The total number of foreclosures in counties in my district and adjoining counties for 1938, for both farm and city were: Brown, 74; Outagamie, 88; Calumet, 15; Manitowoc, 116; Shawano, 121; Waupaca, 104; Oconto, 71; Marinette, 70; Kewaunee, 21; Door, 39, while in two other counties, Florence and Forest, where the Government owns a large portion of the counties for parking purposes, in Florence County over one-third of the people are on relief and W. P. A. and in Forest 80 percent are on relief and W. P. A. The Government has purchased this land and that which remains and which has not been purchased carries the burden of the total amount before the land was sold.

In Forest County, bonds were issued to build beautiful roads prior to the time the Government took over its lands, and at present the remaining inhabitants there are carrying the burden of paying these bonds and also the interest on them.

Mr. MUNDT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNS. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.
Mr. MUNDT. Does the gentleman know whether the Government is content with taking the farms in Wisconsin, or does it also secure deficiency judgments against the farmers?

Mr. JOHNS. At the present time they take deficiency judgments. There has been some move, of course, to do away with that by legislation, but up to this time they have taken deficiency judgments.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Is it not the gentleman's impression that the Federal lending agencies in this country have acquired what might be called the reputation of being a Shylock in their dealings with the farmers throughout the Middle West?

Mr. JOHNS. I do not know just what the gentleman's interpretation of a Shylock is, but I would say that the ordinary farmer fared very much better during the time he was borrowing his money from private individuals and from banks, because they would extend the time on the mortgages. The Government, between January 1, 1938, and July 1, 1938, took over more than 21,000 farms in this country. Many of these farms are lying idle, many of them without anybody on them. In some instances the Government is able to get tenants, who pay just about enough to cover the taxes there may be taxed against the farm.

Last night I glanced over the 1,720-page hearings of the committee. To me it is a serious proposition when we are by this bill appropriating $1,067,000,000 that we do not have more time to consider it. I have discovered that in 1916 it cost $734,056,202 to run this Government. Twenty-two years later it costs over $7,000,000,000 a year to run the Government. Today we are paying more interest in 1 year on our obligations than it cost to run the Government in 1916. When they talk about doing something for the farmer, this is what they have done for him: The per capita tax in 1916 was $7.29. Today it is $59.70. The farmer's taxes have been doubled since 1929.

What have they done for the dairy farmer? There is not a word in the bill about the dairy farmer. The only thing I have discovered is that the farmer is the forgotten man about whom the President has talked so much, and I discovered it in this bill. Five leading dairy States—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Texas, and New York—produce a large part of the cheese of this country. [Applause.]

The State of Wisconsin leads the United States in dairying. We produce about 50 percent of all the American cheese consumed in the United States. On January 1, 1939, we had 2,179,000 head of dairy cattle on farms in the State. Minnesota ranked next with 1,705,000 head, and Iowa ranked third with 1,472,000 head. Texas ranked fourth with 1,458,000 head and New York fifth with 1,423,000 head of milk cows. The increase in the number of dairy cattle in these States for 1938 was about 1 percent.

The total milk production for Wisconsin alone last year was 11,862,000,000 pounds. This figure is about 484,000,000 pounds greater than the State's output in 1937. The value of dairy cows in Wisconsin averaged $69 per head January 1. The value last year was $72 per head. I might add that the total value of all milk cows in the United States at the beginning of the year 1939 was $1,397,280,000. Fluid milk prices under the present administration were much lower for each month in 1938 compared with 1937, and the loss to Wisconsin farmers was approximately $1,000,000 per month.

In addition to this during the year 1937, 60,000,000 pounds of cheese was imported into this country and to the detriment of the American farmer of approximately $3,000,000, because of the reciprocal-trade agreements with countries exporting cheese to the United States. Wisconsin produced 50 percent of this cheese and the loss to the dairy farmers of Wisconsin was one and one-half million dollars. The prices paid to Wisconsin farmers for livestock and livestock products during 1938 averaged 12 percent lower than in 1937.

As I read the hearings on this bill, and from the statements of Members on the floor of the House today, the condition of the agricultural population is as bad, if not worse, than it was in 1932, when we were at the bottom of the depression. The butterfat prices on my farms between 1922 and 1932 averaged about 46 cents per pound. They reached the low of 28 cents per pound in August 1938, and are about 28½ cents per pound at the present time.

We must not forget that in 1935 the agricultural population was 31,800,907 people. This is over 25 percent of our population. The value of farms in the United States in 1935 was $32,858,844,012; that the population of the five leading dairy States on the farms was about 6,000,000 people. As I figure the percentage of farmers raising cotton, corn, and wheat, they represent about 3.1 percent of the national income. We are certainly taking good care of them in this bill, but we are not doing anything for the dairy industry of this country.

I received this morning in the mail a request from the Wisconsin State Dairy Committee, in which they request that the dairy products be made a basic commodity and that a parity payment be made to equal the difference between the average price of butter on the New York market and parity price, this payment to be made only to those farmers who stay within their allotment. They also make other requests, but this bill makes no provision whatever to take care of them.

It is rather hard for my colleagues from the State of Wisconsin, and I should judge that it would be the same from those of other States whose dairy industry are large, to vote to appropriate such a large amount of money as provided for in this bill without due consideration and without any farm program that covers all agricultural interests. Only corn, wheat, cotton, and some rice will benefit from this tremendous amount of money being appropriated here, outside of some small conservation checks that may be issued in order to catch a few votes from other parts of the country that may be necessary to enact this bill into law.

What we should do is to return this bill to the committee with instructions to study the farm problem and bring out a bill that will benefit all of the farming interests instead of just a few. If this cannot be done, then the $250,000,000 provided for class legislation should be stricken from the bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, we are being constantly propagandized with a barrage of war scares. We are told every day about a war that is going to happen in Europe. I have come to the conclusion that nobody wants a war in Europe except a few people in the United States. They are not going to have a war in Europe if we let them alone, but we are having a war in this country.

We are today being subjected to competition we cannot meet under existing conditions. Every country in Europe is releasing its industrial forces that have been engaged in manufacturing munitions of war, gas masks, and so forth, and they are now manufacturing useful articles which they are shipping into Central and South America and exchanging for raw materials, for wheat, corn, cotton, cattle, lumber, and dairy products. A farmer in Central or South America gets twice as much, or three times as much, for his wheat or cotton or other farm products in exchange for the goods he has to buy as does the farmer in the United States.

There are two reasons for this situation. As I pointed out the other day, we are stymied behind a tariff wall, which places a tax on everything the farmer has to buy, from the swaddling cloths of infancy to the lining of the coffin in which old age is laid away. It even goes beyond the grave and places a tax on the tombstone that marks his last resting place. This is one condition that must be corrected, if we are ever to enjoy uniform prosperity throughout this country.

A further reason is that we are the only country in the world that has not met existing conditions by depreciating our currency. On this floor 6 years ago I made a speech in support of the proposition of giving the President the right to cut the gold content of the dollar and to issue $3,000,000,000 in currency and put it into circulation. If that had been done then the depression would have disappeared. It is going to have to be done yet, but in all probability it is going to take a great deal more than $3,000,000,000 to do it.

I understand we have $14,000,000,000 or $15,000,000,000 worth of gold buried in the ground, while we are attempting to pay war prices, war debts, and war interest on the depressed prices of 40-cent wheat and 8-cent cotton. It cannot be done. I am going to vote for the amendment which will be offered asking $500,000,000 for parity payments to the farmers of the country but even that will not be sufficient.

This is what you are driving to. You are either going to have controlled expansion of the currency to restore prosperity by raising the prices of farm products to their normal value of 15- to 20-cent cotton and $1.50 wheat, or you are going to break into uncontrolled inflation that will wipe out existing holdings, or else you will have wholesale repudiation of your national debt, and your State debts, and that will involve private debts.

Suppose a few years from now a new membership comes into this House, and an appropriation bill comes up for consideration with provision for $2,000,000,000, we will say, or $3,000,000,000 for sinking fund and interest on the national debt, and a Member arises and says, "Is that the debt those fellows contracted back yonder when they were spending money by the billions and issuing bonds to pay current expenses rather than using the gold they had? Is that the debt they made to pay running expenses that ought not to have been passed on to us? I move to strike it from the bill."

In all probability, his motion will be sustained. There is no power on earth that can make them pay it. No power on earth can make a country pay its debts. If I knew of such a power we might use it to collect our European debts right away instead of talking about getting into another European

I am going to insert in the RECORD a speech I made 6 years ago in reply to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Beck, on this proposition of expanding the currency and restoring prosperity to the American people.

Every word I uttered then is true today. I hope every Member of the House will take the time to read it. [Applause.]

The matter referred to is as follows:

The matter referred to is as follows:

Mr. Speaker, with the probable exception of the signing of the Armistice, which brought to a close the most devastating war in all history, the passage of this currency-expansion measure will likely be the greatest step ever taken by any government since Biblical times. If properly and fully carried out, it will be the greatest boon to suffering humanity of any measure ever passed by a legislative body in all the tides of human history.

I only regret that every man in this House cannot join in its support, the passage of which will probably mark a turning point in the history of our civilization.

I should particularly like to see my distinguished, able, affable, elequent, and erring friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Beck] who has just spoken—and for whom I have an abiding affection—throw the weight of his great ability into the scales on the side of this program and help secure the passage of this the most far-reaching and beneficent measure ever adopted by a legislative body. If he would do that, he would render his country the greatest service of his long and distinguished career. The suffering people throughout the world, even the generations yet to come, might then "rise up and call him blessed." [Applause.]

In order to successfully contest on this floor with the gentleman up and call him blessed." [Applause.]

In order to successfully contest on this floor with the gentleman from Pennsylvania one should be able to "bend the bow of Ulysses" or "wield the spear of Goliath." I realize my feeble inabilities to meet such a test. But I am conscious of the admonition of his favorite author, William Shakespeare, to the effect that "Thrice is he armed that feels his quarrel just." Or, as was once said by William Jennings Bryan, "The humblest citizen of the land, clad in the armor of a righteous cause, is stronger than all the hosts of error." [Applause.]

It is said that Alcibiades once stopped up his care and feet for

It is said that Alcibiades once stopped up his ears and fled from the presence of Socrates for fear that he would grow old listening to his eloquence.

to his eloquence.

As I have listened to the adroit and persuasive arguments of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, the greatest Shake-spearean scholar in either House, and one of the ablest lawyers in America, who probably knows more about the Constitution than any other man in Congress, and possibly more ways around it—as I have melted beneath the magnetism of his marvelous eloquence, embellished by his unaffected rhetoric and reenforced by a literary resourcefulness equaled by few men on this earth, I have found my-self holding to the seat to keep from slipping, lest he should sometimes even persuade me to go astray. [Laughter and applause.]

I am told that he was once a Democrat, back in those struggling years of his youth and young manhood, before he attained his present status of eminence and distinction. But you know we are told by his favorite author, that—

"Lowliness is young ambition's ladder.

"Lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend."

[Applause.]
But we also have the consoling assurance of Holy Writ that if you teach a child the way it should go, when it is old, it will not depart therefrom. Probably when he begins to grow "old," and reaches the age of mature discretion, he will return to the conviction of his early youth and join in the fight for the promotion of every righteous cause. [Laughter.] Nothing would be more fitting as a climax to his long and able career than to make that change today. "While the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return." Come on, Mr. Beck, join the hosts of righteousness in this crisis of the world's history, when America is awaking like a sleeping giant, from a long and hideous nightmare, breaking the fetters of this depression, turning from the dead past toward the living future, catching the step and taking the lead in the onward march of modern progress.

If he will do that, he will not only render his country his great-march of modern progress.

If he will do that, he will not only render his country his greatest service, but he may then spend the evening of his career in quiet and ideal peace, conscious of a well-spent life, and confident of its good, enriched with an abundance of those blessings which Shakespeare says should accompany old age, such "as honor, love, obedience, troops of friends." [Applause.]

I have often remarked that his speeches remind me of another expression of his favorite author, when he said:

"The world is still deceived with ornament. In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt, But being season'd with a gracious voice, Obscures the show of evil?"

And when I hear his attempts to fortify his erroneous positions with copious quotations from the celebrated literature of the past, even including passages from Holy Writ, I am reminded of the further expression:

"In religion, What damned error, but some sober brow Will bless it, and approve it with a text, Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?"

I am afraid that by his gracious voice, his persuasive eloquence, his attractive personality and literary resourcefulness, he has not only obscured the evil of his contentions, but has led the minds of many Members to reach the wrong conclusion. [Applause.]

As was once said by a great American, "It is a condition and not a theory that confronts us." We are not only charged with the gravest responsibility that will probably ever come to Members of this body in our day and generation, but we are confronted with the most glorious opportunity for service to humanity with which we will ever have to deal.

We are in the midst of the most terrible panic of all history.

the most glorious opportunity for service to humanity with which we will ever have to deal.

We are in the midst of the most terrible panic of all history. For more than 3 years we have witnessed the tragedy of increasing failures, foreclosures, and bankruptcles—farmers forced to sell their crops far below the cost of production, and see their lands swept away for debts or sold to pay their taxes. People are being driven from their homes to join the hungry multitudes who crowd the streaming bread lines along the streets of our cities. Ten or twelve million men, who are able, willing, and anxious to work, are tramping the streets or treading the highways, begging for employment by which to earn their daily bread. Men, women, and children from the best families of America, people who won't get the chill of the humiliation out of their blood for two or three generations, are forced to beg their bread from door to door. A crimson wave of suicide is sweeping over the land—mothers killing their children to keep from seeing them suffer and then committing suicide across their dead bodies.

All this is happening in a land teeming with abundance, where we have more wheat, more corn, more cotton, more manufactured articles, more of everything necessary to sustain human life and contribute to human happiness and human comfort than was ever known before. All this is happening in the most advanced and enlightened age, when we have gained the greatest ascendancy over the forces of nature and the greatest command over our surroundings ever reached in all the history of the human race.

What is the cause of all this? The answer is simple; we are in a money panic—a man-made panic, which we are attempting to cure by the passage of this, the most far-reaching piece of financial legislation ever enacted on this earth. We are "cutting the Gordian knot" that binds suffering humanity to the gold fetish, antiquated theories, and discredited policies of the past. By this measure we hope and expect to put the people of America back on t hope and expect to put the people of America back on the highway to permanent prosperity.

When the Great War closed, it left the people of the world, including America, loaded with a burden of indebtedness that at best it will take generations to pay. Those debts were contracted on an expanded currency, when times were prosperous and commodity prices were high. We are now asked to pay them with a contracted currency that has so reduced commodity prices as to render this burden too heavy for the people of the world to bear. Yet they are asked to carry on, or told to carry on, driven by the whip of the money kings, who offer them no hope of relief. They have about reached the point of exhaustion and are now stumbling, fainting, and falling under the very cross of taxation upon which they and their children and their children's children are to be crucified.

they and their children and their children's children are to be crucified.

Something must be done. They can stand this strain no longer. This bill will do the work. I have said time and time again that one of three things is bound to happen:

We are going to have to expand the currency, to bring back commodity prices to where they were when our debts were incurred, or we are going to have to have a readjustment of all debts, public and private, scaling them down, extending the time for payments and reducing interest rates almost to the vanishing point. Unless one of these two courses is pursued, we are going to be swept into a saturnalia of wholesale repudiation of public and private obligations, including district, municipal, country, State, and Government bonds. That would be revolution—the last protest to which an oppressed or suffering people resort.

By this measure we propose to expand the currency to raise commodity prices, and restore the purchasing power of the American farmer, which will automatically restore the purchasing power of the industrial laborers, because it will enable the farmers to buy the things they need. That will start the wheels of industry to turning and furnish work for the unemployed. Then our bread lines will melt away, our entire economic machinery will begin to function normally, and the clouds of this depression will disappear.

appear.

appear.

But the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania questions the constitutionality of this law which delegates to the President the power to diminish the gold content of the dollar. In my opinion that question was settled by the Court when it upheld the constitutionality of the flexible clause in the tariff bill. The gentleman from Pennsylvania and I both voted against that clause and both of us thought then that it violated the Constitution of the United States, but the courts decided differently, and the law was upheld, just as this one will be, in my opinion, if it is ever put to a test. Besides, this matter will be disposed of by the President before the Supreme Court could ever act upon it. Then, if there is any doubt as to the constitutionality of his acts, Congress would have ample time to ratify them.

Then, too, "there is a higher law than the Constitution." The "safety of the people is the supreme law." This is war. We are at war with the most destructive depression of all times—one that not only threatens the life and safety of every person under the American flag but one that challenges the very existence of our circlination. civilization civilization.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania refers to the President's advisers as the "brain trust," as if this currency-expansion theory originated with them. He knows, and every other Member of the House knows, that for more than 3 years I have advocated a liberal, controlled expansion of the currency as the only possible means of relief from this unprecedented depression. I have made this appeal in the House, through the press, over the radio, on the stump, and everywhere else that an opportunity has presented itself. Other Members of the House and of the Senate have done the same thing.

itself. Other Members of the House and of the Senate have done the same thing.

We were not prompted by any "brain trust," but we were opposed by the "money trust," representing the owners of great fortunes who have their money invested in tax-exempt securities and are now opposing expansion because they know that under the present state of depressed prices their hoarded dollars will buy three or four times as much of American commodities as they will when this currency is expanded and normal conditions return.

I want to touch briefly on the three principal points involved in the currency expansion provision of this bill. It has been stated by the opposition, time and time again, that the $6,000,000,000 of new currency provided for in this bill, $3,000,000,000 through the Federal Reserve System, and $3,000,000,000 of United States notes, will be "fiat money."

currency provided for in this bill, $3,000,000,000 through the Federal Reserve System, and $3,000,000,000 of United States notes, will be "fiat money."

There is not a scintilla of truth in that statement. Every dollar of this money, under the Gold Standard Act of 1900, will be worth 100 cents on the dollar. It will be interchangeable with every other dollar we have, whether it is gold or silver, or United States notes, or Federal Reserve notes, or national-bank notes, or what not.

This measure has also been attacked because of its provision on the silver question. Did you know that more than 1,000,000,000 people in this world use silver almost exclusively as a money? Silver is mentioned in Holy Writ as a money, before we find any mention of the use of gold as a currency. Silver is the money of the Orient. It is the money of all Central and South America, of all eastern Europe. In 1926, when the international bankers who are opposing this measure induced England to force India onto a gold standard, they destroyed the purchasing power of silver and therefore destroyed the purchasing power of silver and therefore destroyed the purchasing power of a billion of America's customers. Some of you gentlemen opposed William J. Bryan on his silver policy in 1896. We Democrats were in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 [applause], and in the Republican platform of 1900, if not in 1896, you provided for the coinage of silver, provided it was done by international agreement, on the theory that if you remonetized silver in the United States alone it would draw the surplus silver to America and drive down the American dollar.

This bill, from that standpoint, is merely carrying out the ideas the American dollar.

This bill, from that standpoint, is merely carrying out the ideas you expressed more than 30 years ago. In addition to broadening the base for the issuance of American currency it will restore the purchasing power of the people of the silver countries throughout the world, who buy American cotton, cotton goods, wheat, wool, manufactured goods, and other commodities.

Probably the most important proposal contained in this measure is that to give the President the right to reduce the gold content of the dollar, in order to broaden the base of our circulating medium and to reach an understanding with foreign nations for some kind of a working agreement as to monetary standards.

The chief opposition to this provision is coming from that element of our prople who own Government bonds navable in American

The chief opposition to this provision is coming from that element of our people who own Government bonds payable in American dollars based on the present gold standard. They prefer to prevent, in any way they can, an expansion of the currency that would raise commodity prices, for the simple reason that it reduces the purchasing power of their dollars invested in those tax-exempt bonds. They prefer to exact the last "pound of flesh." They ignore the appeals of suffering humanity. They ignore the ominous warning of discontent. They ignore the pleas of the President to the effect that this change is necessary to bring order out of chaos, restore the prosperity of the American people, and to save American institutions. When they are asked to cooperate in this stupendous undertaking, they raise the question of the Government's right to cut down the gold content of the dollar and ask, in the words of the greedy Shylock, "Is it so nominated in the bond?"

If by some chance we had discovered an unlimited supply of the greedy Shylock, "Is it so nominated in the bond?"

If by some chance we had discovered an unlimited supply of gold and had offered to pay these bonds in that commodity, then they would have demanded American dollars instead.

The Government has a perfect right to change the gold content of the dollar, without consulting the holders of Government bonds. If this program goes through, they will be paid every dollar the United States owes them in United States money. If they should block its passage, and this country should be swept into the maelstrom of repudiation, they might find, as did Shylock of old, that they had forfeited their bonds by their own perfidy.

We have come to a change in world affairs. We are in the same that they had forfeited their bonds by their own perfidy.

We have come to a change in world affairs. We are in the same condition the people of Europe were in at the time of the fall of the Roman Empire. Two thousand years ago Rome sat upon her seven hills, the unchallenged mistress of the world. A few people owned practically all the wealth of the empire. They had gathered unto themselves the gold of the known world. The supply was limited and the amount per capita was gradually diminishing, and there was little or no hope for the discovery of new supplies. They were charging the people as high as 48 percent interest at the time of the murder of Caesar. He was murdered, not because he was ambitious, as many of us have been led to believe, but because he had taken the side of the people of Rome and was wringing the loathsome fingers of the money changers loose from the throats of the suffering people of Europe, just as Roosevelt is doing in America today.

people of Europe, just as Roosevelt is doing in America today. [Applause.]

After his death, they continued to concentrate and control the money supply of the world. They drove commodity prices down. International trade fell off, and commerce died. Because of the lack of a circulating medium, the people were driven to barter in trade. Poverty increased, stagnation prevailed, patriotism withered and perished away, corruption crept into the state, Rome tottered and fell, and Europe lapsed into an economic lethargy that lasted for a thousand years. It was broken only by the discovery of America, and with it new, and apparently unlimited, supplies of gold. When this new gold was added to the circulating medium of the Old World. Europe awoke as it were from her lethargy of centuries and leaped forward into an era of prosperity, the like of which mankind had scarcely dreamed.

forward into an era of prosperity, the like of which mankind had scarcely dreamed.

Commodity prices began to rise, wages were increased, employment became plentiful, commerce was revived, international trade was stimulated, and there dawned upon this earth what is known as the "golden age," the most glorious period in the history of the human race—an age that gave to the world more of genius and of greatness than any other period in all the annals of recorded time.

Under the impulse of progress generated by this revival, our forebears swarmed across the Atlantic and carved this Republic out of the unbroken wilderness of the New World, and established here, for the first time, a nation dedicated to the proposition that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed.

For approximately a century after the establishment of the American Republic, we had a double monetary system of gold and silver. In 1873 silver was demonetized, and soon thereafter the supply of gold per capita began to wane.

Today we are in the same condition the people of Europe were in at the time of the fall of the Roman Empire. The gold supply is insufficient, with the present standards, to supply the basis for the circulating mediums of the world and the amount per capita is on the wane. We are virtually at the end of gold. We have prospected every field, we have searched every territory, we have exhausted every mine. There are apparently no more fields to be discovered. We must find some other method of broadening the base for our monetary supply, or suffer the fate of the people of Rome.

A great American orator once said that "It took Rome 400 years base for our monetary supply, or suffer the fate of the people of Rome.

A great American orator once said that "It took Rome 400 years to die, and our death, should we perish, will be as much more terriffic as our intense civilization has given us more bone and sinew and nerve and strength and vitality."

We are making history today. The world is looking to America for leadership. The destiny of our civilization is in our hands. We must not fail. [Applause.]

Some years ago, Lord Robert Cecil, Viscount Cecil of the British Empire, is reported to have said in a speech in Chicago, that "England's sun is going down." But he said it would be a "glorious sunset." And it will. No nation that has ever risen and fallen in all the tides of human history has contributed more to the progress and enlightenment of mankind than has the British Isles. He is quoted as having said further that "The leadership of the world has now been transferred to the United States." In order to maintain that world leadership, we must prove ourselves worthy and able to lead. We are in the crucial test today. Upon the outcome of this measure may depend, not only our leadership, but the very destiny of our American institutions.

One of the ablest ambassadors ever sent to the United States, said in a speech in this country a few years ago that "An age is dying in Europe; the waves caused by its death agonies are lashing the shores of America."

In the midst of possibly the greatest crises through which the British Empire has ever passed, when all that she had builded for a thousand years was threatened with dissolution, Phillip Snowden, Chancelor of the Exchequer, arose in the House of Commons, just out of a sick bed, pale and emaciated, dramatically pointed his bony finger at the opposition across the aisle and said: "All our past acclaims our future: Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand,

"All our past acclaims our future: Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand,

Milton's faith and Wordsworth's trust in this our chosen and chainless land, Bear us witness: come the world against her, England yet shall

In this tragic hour, when American institutions, and probably American civilization, are trembling in the balance, let us draw courage and inspiration from the sacrifices and accomplishments of the past, and say in the words of that great Englishman that all our past acclaims our future. The sword of Washington, the pen of Jefferson, the heart of Lincoln, the spirit of Lee, the valor of Davis, and the voice of Bryan; the blood of a million American heroes crying out to us from the ground, echoed and reechoed from the hearthstones of millions of American homes—all these admonish us that America must not fail, our civilization must not perish, our institutions must not die! [Applause.]

By the consummation of this program we can restore the prosperity of the American people, broaden the base of our monetary supply, and restore normal conditions throughout the world, and thereby usher in the golden dawning of a new and a grander day. Let me appeal to you again, and especially to the erudite gentleman from Pennsylvania, to join us in this fight and follow our great leader in this "battle of the centuries," to rescue and perpetuate the civilization of mankind. Then you will not only receive the deserved plaudits of a grateful Nation, but throughout the distant lapse of far-off years your praises will be sung by the sons of men, even in the ages yet to come, when this, our lofty scene, shall be acted over "In States unborn and accents yet unknown." [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THILL].

UNSOUND PROCESSING TAXES

Mr. THILL. Mr. Chairman, during recent months one New Deal leader has asked for the renewal of processing taxes. The esteemed gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Lemke] seemed to indicate in his talk this afternoon that processing taxes are a sort of fetish with the Secretary of Agriculture.

It is argued that until processing taxes are restored farmers cannot be assured of a permanent program. It is claimed that the particular commodity concerned should bear a part of the cost of financing its own program; that the processing tax will help maintain balanced production and surplus control; that it will help to preserve parity of income by assuring a continuing source of revenue on commodities that do not lend themselves to price boosting through adjustment of supply.

This argument for the renewal of processing taxes does not tell the complete story and does not take into consideration the resultant decrease in the purchasing power of the American consumer, the indirect tax burden which is shifted on to those least able to bear it, the lowering of prices paid to the farmer for his products, the decline in exports of farm products, and the disastrous effects of a corresponding expansion in imports.

Although this tax is collected from the processor, he usually does not bear any appreciable proportion of the cost. The burden ordinarily is borne by the consumer in the form of higher prices or is taken from the price which otherwise would have been paid for the raw material, or reduces the profit of the processor and makes his existence precarious. If the processing taxes are again incorporated into law, the consumer will be forced to pay many millions of dollars additional for flour, bread, and other wheat products and a similar amount for cotton clothing and articles made of cotton. This tax would be directly responsible for high retail food prices. although the profit on raw materials remains small. The processor and the distributor must shift the tax to continue their existence. Further, they are forced to serve in the role of tax collectors in a manner which conceals the fact that the taxes are actually collected from the consumer.

The processing tax will increase the tremendous burden of indirect taxes which the individual is now forced to pay. It will amount to nothing more than a sales tax on food and clothing, which constitute the necessities of life. It will fall most heavily on the class least able to pay. When the last processing tax was in effect the amount of the tax was equivalent to 15 percent of the selling price of a yard of denim used in work clothing and less than 5 percent on the superfine cotton materials used in shirts retailing above $2.50. We know that American families in the lower-income groups spend a larger portion of their income for food than those in the higher brackets. Therefore the processing tax would in effect be a burdensome levy on the American workingman.

As evidenced by our sad experience under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the processing tax is a trade-diminishing type of taxation. In the year ending June 30, 1935, when this type of tax was in existence, there was a distinct down trend in farm-product exports, particularly cotton, and a corresponding expansion in imports. During this period it has been shown that the farmer received lower prices for his products than if some other means had been used to finance the program. In Three Years of the A. A. A., by the Brookings Institution, pages 303-304, it is reported that—

A review of the course of live-hog prices, processors' margins, and retail pork prices during 1933-35 suggests strongly that the effect of the processing tax was to reduce hog prices by approximately the amount of the tax.

Practically all mills that buy raw cotton and process it are united in opposing a processing tax on cotton. They rightfully believe that it will cut down sales. During the period when the last processing tax was in effect, outlets for the heavier cotton goods, such as ducks, sheetings, and osnaburgs, were lost to paper, jute, and synthetic fibers. A new processing tax will prevent the recapture of these outlets.

On January 6, 1936, the Supreme Court handed down its decision in United States against Butler. In that decision, which invalidated the production-control programs carried out by contracts between the Federal Government and individual farmers and financed by processing taxes, the Court said:

A tax, in the general understanding of the term, and as used in the Constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the Government. The word has never been thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another. We may concede that the latter sort of imposition is constitutional when imposed to effectuate regulation of a matter in which both groups are interested and in respect of which there is a power of legislative regulation. But manifestly no justification for it can be found unless as an integral part of such regulation. The exaction cannot be wrested out of its setting, denominated an excise for raising revenue, and legalized by ignoring its purpose as a mere instrumentality for bringing about a desired end (297 U. S. Reports, 61).

The processing tax is contrary to the basic laws of economics. Had not a Supreme Court decision frustrated the continuance of the A. A. A., the natural laws of economics would have ultimately killed this plan, which had already extracted from the wage earners of America more than $1,000,000,000.

This form of taxation violates the theory that taxes should be levied according to ability to pay. It penalizes the poor consumer, forcing him to pay a subsidy to the farmer.

In those cases where the tax burden cannot be shifted to the consumer or to the raw material it causes financial losses to the processor and in some instances will actually force him out of business.

Processing taxes curtail the consumption of certain essential products, following the economic law which states that the higher the price the lower the demand. This increase in price and corresponding decrease in demand, if continued, will ultimately wreck both producer and consumer. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. White].

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, I feel we are dealing with one of the paramount problems facing the Congress and one which must be solved. In common parlance, we must do something for the farmer.

What we are really attempting to do here, as I see it, is to establish parity of prices between the things the farmer must buy and the things he must sell. I am for a parity of prices and I am for the bill.

During the discussion here it has been necessary to stay on the floor to maintain a quorum and in listening to the debate I am reminded of the poem by John G. Saxe about the six blind men who went to see the elephant and each man examined some part of the elephant. One took hold of his trunk and said, "Why, the elephant is like a rope." The next man felt along his side and said, "The elephant is like a wall." Another felt his ear and said, "The elephant is like a fan," and the next man took hold of his leg and said, "The elephant is like a tree." The debate I have heard here on the floor reminds me very much of those blind men who were disputing about an elephant.

It is my feeling that we must get down to basic principles and attack the main problem or the paramount problem facing the American people, including both the farmer and labor engaged in industry, and give this country a workable and adequate monetary system. I mean that in the full and literal sense of the word. Coupled with that we must pass the necessary laws to bring about a parity of prices by eliminating unfair competition and unfair trade practices.

I believe we are just adopting one expedient after another, and I look upon this bill as simply an expedient by which we are trying to do something that will place the country a little deeper in debt and piling up a little higher the interest load on business, when we could attack the problem and settle it and give the enterprise, thrift, and industry of the American people an opportunity to solve the problem by their own initiative and relieve the Congress and the Government of a good deal of the trouble with these expedients by which we are attempting to solve a problem which we are not solving at all.

I was very much interested in a statement of the gentleman from Montana yesterday in referring to a harness that cost $60 being sold to the farmer for $160. That touches on the very thing that is the matter with us and with the country now. I refer to profiteering on the people engaged in our basic industries, one of which is agriculture. Agriculture employs about one-third of our people and next comes mining, next lumbering, and next fishing. Everybody engaged in these basic industries is being overcharged for pretty nearly every necessity that goes into such production, and until we pass the necessary laws to protect business and bring about a parity through the free play of competition, such attempts as we are making here will put this country deeper and deeper in debt and pile up a higher and higher interest load.

It is my feeling that the first thing this Congress should do—and I think we should turn our attention from these expedients or little schemes we have been trying to make work here for the last 6 years—is to attack the money problem and give this country a workable and an adequate money system and also prevent profiteering at the expense of the basic industries.

Let us bring about a price parity, not by Government price fixing, but by removing the restraints of trade and the practices of these big industries and these big business organizations in eliminating competition, all of them operating in restraint of trade and forcing the people engaged in the basic industries, which includes farming, to pay too much for everything they use. This profiteering and price fixing operates to drain the resources of the people engaged in the basic industries and bring them to a point where they are facing bankruptcy or just keeping above insolvency, because they are being put under too much of a debt load. This reduces the Government income from income taxes and from other sources of revenue.

Until we can attack this problem and solve it, there can be no permanent prosperity in this country.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SHAFER] such time as he may desire to use

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, the Congress has recognized the imperative need for economy. The Nation has demanded it. Yet what has happened in connection with this Agricultural Department appropriation bill? Here we have a bill embracing more than 100 pages, involving an amount of $1,060,000,000. The hearings on this bill embrace 1,732 pages; it is a volume more than 2 inches thick, and to consider this appropriation bill we have been allowed but a few hours for debate.

The President, Mr. Chairman, in response to the demand of this Nation for economy, said he was going to place the question of achieving that economy squarely in the hands of the Congress. In the face of that statement the administration leaders—Mr. Roosevelt's leaders—propose this bill for $1,060,000,000 and lash it through the House in about as much time as it would take a butcher to skin a calf.

The American people do not want a spendthrift policy on the part of the Government, because they know that they, not the Government, must eventually pay the bill. The farmers of this country do not want a spendthrift policy on the part of the Government. Let us face the facts as they are. If the Congress wants to pursue a policy of retrenchment and economy, the President, by his great prestige, his power, and his control of patronage, can defeat that effort if he desires to do so. If the President wants to achieve economy, Congress, through its great power, can defeat that objective if it so desires. The first and foremost requirement of the situation in this country today is that the actual, honest, aggressive will to achieve economy be present in both the executive and legislative departments of the Government.

It has recently been stated in the press that the President is chuckling over the failure of Congress to achieve economies and to reduce taxes. In my opinion, Mr. Chairman, this is no chuckling matter. The welfare of this Nation is involved in this question of economy. It is not something to be made the pawn of a political game of hide and seek between the New Deal administration and the Congress. It is something to command the most grave and careful consideration of both.

Of course, all the conscientious Members of Congress, Republicans and Democrats alike, want to do whatever can be done to bring about an improvement in the state of agriculture in this country. Such an improvement is not to be brought about, however, by the executive department and the Congress jockeying for position in order to get each other into an embarrassing predicament. Constitutional government is neither benefited nor preserved by two or three independent and opposing branches, but by three independent, coordinate and cooperative branches.

It is time we stopped playing politics with these problems. It is time for all of us to rise above the desire for partisan advantage and to devote ourselves to the single objective of solving the problems of the Nation.

The critics of the administration, regardless of party, section or class, are agreed that the New Deal farm policy has failed. This bill, Mr. Chairman, is the best evidence that the New Deal farm policy has failed. In my district, the farmers do not want to be regimented. All my farmers are asking is a fair break, a return of their American markets to them, and a chance to be let alone. It has been amply demonstrated, and the farmers know it, that crop control has no stopping place except complete control. The American farmers are not being fooled. They know that they and their children, and their children's children will be paying the costs of these New Deal experimental policies for generations to come.

Last November 8 the people of my district overwhelmingly voted for economy. There has been no effort to achieve economy in this bill. There is no apparent desire on the part of the administration to achieve economy in other appropriation bills. There are many of us who believe that this bill has been unwisely drawn, that it will result in enormous expenditures without achieving its objectives, and that when the farmers know the truth about it they will be the first to condemn the illogical and uneconomical aspects of it. This bill provides no solution for the farm problem. It merely provides for a continuation of a policy already branded as a failure, and for a continued piling up of the Federal debt. Therefore, in keeping with the wishes of my constituents for economy and sound legislation, I intend to cast a negative vote.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Hawks].

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, I am granted 5 minutes for debate on a billion dollar agricultural bill. I am almost ashamed to use the time. Five minutes to talk about a bill that affects the biggest industry in my district and the most important industry in my State. Fine stuff! I am not blaming the people in control of the time on my side, but I am blaming the majority, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon] who is in charge of this bill. He tried to cut this debate to 3 hours yesterday but did not get away with it, and now we are to settle one of the gravest problems in this country in 2 days' time—less than 2 days. I picked up a Wisconsin paper this morning and one article said "Wisconsin farmer income lower." I turned the page and saw another article headed "Wisconsin Farm Employment Lower Than It Has Ever Been."

On January 5 the President of the United States stood in front of us and said:

Gentlemen, the responsibility is yours.

He had particular reference to unbalanced budgets and huge deficits. I imagine. The President charged the Congress of the United States with responsibility from here on in. Last week we passed a billion dollar bill for the Department of the Interior, and now we are considering another billion dollar bill for agriculture. No attempt on the part of the membership of the House to accept the challenge of the President whatsoever-no effort in two of these bills that have been here in the last 2 weeks to tell the President of the United States that we accept his challenge and that we are going to do something about it.

We start out in this bill talking about parity. Parity for whom? Parity for the politician. Do not you people on the Democratic side of the House realize that the passage of this bill with a $250,000,000 parity feature will hang a further burden on the dairy farmer in this country? Have you not analyzed that feature of it thoroughly enough to realize that from the point of view of feed every single item of feed that the Wisconsin and Michigan and other dairy farmers of the Nation will have to buy will be burdened with the additional price added to the commodities that go into the making of this feed?

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HAWKS. No; I cannot yield. I am not going to vote for this bill. I could not vote for it coming from one of the best States in this Union, because the farmers back home would kick me right out of the State. It may be all right for the cotton farmer. It may be all right for the corn and wheat farmer, but why do you have to go on, year after year, abusing one of the biggest industries in the

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 minute more.

Mr. HAWKS. There is only one agricultural industry that exceeds the dairy industry in dollar volume, and that is the cotton industry. Why is the dairy industry not mentioned in this bill in the matter of parity?

The only place that we can find anything about it is the amount appropriated for dairy investigations. The total amount of that is $717,405, of which $343,000 stays in Washington to pay salaries. The Wisconsin people sent eight Republican Congressmen down here for the purpose of getting representation for the dairy industry, and we are pleading with you fellows to give us some recognition, to give our industry some recognition in the agricultural bills that will be forthcoming. [Applause.]

To definitely put Wisconsin and her dairying industry on the map of our major commodities, the problems of which industries are badly in need of help-and in this bill the dairy industry is given practically no consideration whatsoever-I endorse the sentiments as expressed in a press report of the State meeting of the Wisconsin Dairymen's Association, held in Sheboygan on Wednesday, as follows:

It's no use fooling ourselves. People have got to be put to work in private industry at good wages before we can get better prices. We've tried everything else and we've got dollar milk checks again

These dairy farmers see a ray of hope in the present lowprice situation, in that they realize prices for milk and dairy products cannot go much lower; and they now hope that with the administration program of recovery in business, prices for our dairy products will rise, with a resultant better living for our dairy farmers.

In behalf of our dairy industry in Wisconsin, I want to include in my remarks a resolution which has been well considered and endorsed by these good farmers, and which I sincerely trust will receive the consideration merited, in preparing future agricultural legislation:

Whereas dairying comprises a wide and varied argricultural enterprise which provides a major income for a large number of farmers in the several dairy States and thus far we have received only indirect consideration as dairy farmers in the Agricultural Adjustment Act: and

Whereas large sums of money are invested in the dairy sections today for the purpose of producing dairy products of good nalty. Because of this fact and due to climatic conditions, we quality. Because of this fact and due to climatic conditions, we do not have the alternative of going into other types of farming;

Whereas the dairy farmer is put at a disadvantage, in that the Agricultural Adjustment Act does not control the production of dairying and does not assure the dairy farmer a fair share of the national income; and

Whereas the buying of the dairy products by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation has helped dairying as a temporary relief, but with the large surplus in storage and without some control of production the dairy farmer of today is placed in a very unfavorable position: Now therefore be it Resolved, That the following program be incorporated in the Agricultural Adjustment Act:

That dairy products be made a basic commodity and that a parity payment be made to equal the difference between the average price of butter on the New York market and parity price. This payment to be made only to those farmers who stay within their allotment.

That a marketing allotment be set up for each farm on a cow plus butterfat productivity basis, and that the procedure for set-ting up the allotment be national in scope and similar to that ting up the allotment be national in scope and similar to that used in setting up allotments on other commodities, using as a base period the past 10 years, barring those years in which there were abnormal weather conditions, Government cattle purchases, tuberculosis and Bang's eradication programs, special consideration being given small and family-sized farms, and change of operators on farms in setting allotments—the national allotment to be based on domestic consumption, supply of butter on hand, and probable imports and economic conditions of the country.

That an allotment payment of 5 cents per pound based on the allotment for the farm be made for staying within the allotment; that 30 percent of this payment be earned through improvements in herd management, such as cow-testing associations, production-bred sires, and approved herd-health practices; that a deduction of 25 cents per pound be made from this or any other payment earned 25 cents per pound be made from this or any other payment earned under the act if the allotment is exceeded for the amount that it is exceeded.

we recommend that the Dairy Products Marketing Corporation be strengthened so they can operate the dairy markets effectively. This will protect the consumer and dairyman in preventing the big fluctuation in the price of dairy products.

EINAR L. NESS Secretary, Wisconcin State Dairy Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has again expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gross].

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand an Associated Press report concerning the 1939 crop outlook for the farmer. It says that the American farmers are launching their field work, and the 1939 crop report outlook is dimming their hopes, that quotations on the Chicago market are ranging like this-corn 16 percent lower than a year ago, wheat 12 percent lower, oats down 20 percent, butter 27 percent, and hogs 2 percent, and these prices are from 2 to 21 percent higher than they were in 1928—and that is with the juggled dollar and not the 100-cent Hoover dollar. To these men who have been making comparisons with prices in 1932 I say that on the basis of a 59-cent dollar we are as bad off as we ever were, and you cannot control this farm problem by way of the Treasury and go out into the country and say to the farmers who have been raising the finest corn in the world that they must let their land lie idle. That is adding insult to injury. It will be enough to defeat so many of you Democrats in the next election that you will not be able to hold a caucus. The Associated Press dispatch goes on to say that it is expected that the wheat program will result in less bushels for this year. It always works out the same way. That is, it does not work out as expected. It also goes on to say that the corn that is sealed in the cribs of the Middle West is charged up as farm income. That is not farm income, that is a millstone on the prices of farm commodities in the next year and on this. We have been approaching this thing from the wrong way.

When the farmers are hard up they do not need credit. They need cash to get rid of the credit they have already got. If this administration will change its tactics and stop these broadside attacks on manufacturers and help industry to get functioning, the farmer will have a market, and then we will all go to town.

In 1932 it was my privilege to drive to Philadelphia every month. In May of 1932, when we were all down in the dumps, when hogs were $2 per hundredweight and wheat was 35 cents a bushel, I counted the smokestacks in the steel mills at Coatesville, Pa., and there were 39 smokestacks, and they had 4 smoking. In August they had 9 smoking and steel was $10 a share higher and the country felt better. In 1937, in September, there were 39 of them smoking. Fat cattle in Chicago were $20 a hundred, wheat was $1.15 a bushel, hogs were $9 per hundredweight, and United States Steel was $127 per share. We were really going to town. When the smokestacks of this country belch forth smoke you will find in them a solution to the agricultural and economical problems of this country. I warn you fellows, get up and support a protective tariff. I attended a meeting of the Ways and Means Committee yesterday and I heard one of the big men of the United States say, "We are ready to spend $4,000,000 to expand our plant if you will legislate so we can."

The New Deal is retarding everything today, and you are responsible for all the deviltry on the scene. [Applause and laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Coffee] such time as he may require.

A BILL TO LIMIT THE ACTION OF THE NATIONAL GUARD IN LABOR DISPUTES

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, yesterday I introduced a bill, H. R. 5270, to curb the use of the National Guard in labor disputes. I want to make a statement here about the nature and purposes of this measure, which I believe is one vital to the national defense of our country and the morale and prestige of this arm of our defense.

THE NATIONAL GUARD HAS A JUSTIFIABLE EXISTENCE

The National Guard in times of peace should be an instrument of protection for the American people in the event of flood and fire, earthquake and hurricane, and other natural disasters. It should be a weapon of defense against foreign aggression and the stanch protector of the homes, lives, and constitutional liberties of the citizens of the United States. But the National Guard cannot be all these vital things to America so long as it is used in the obnoxious role of strike-breaking. The people of the United States refuse to let their National Guard be a masquerade of finks in uniform, desecrating in their actions the uniforms of the United States Army.

Mr. Chairman, the bill I have introduced today is designed to cure an evil which has alienated many important sections of the population from sympathy with the National Guard, which they have so often seen misused.

THIS BILL ORDAINS A SANE LIMITATION OF SCOPE

The bill provides that unless the civil courts are unable to function, unless the writ of habeas corpus is suspended because of declaration of martial law, the National Guard, when called to aid the civil authorities in connection with any labor dispute, shall not abridge the constitutional rights of any person; shall at all times be subordinate to and not supersede the civil authorities; shall not interfere with the fundamental rights of freedom of speech, press, and assembly. It provides against unwarranted and uncontrolled arrest and detention by the National Guard.

NO SUBSIDIES BY INDUSTRIALISTS

It provides that the National Guard shall not be subsidized in any manner by private individuals and corporations—to throw off the taint and the suspicion that has been cast upon the guard by the zeal of industrialists equally to raise funds for the National Guard and to obtain exclusive use of the guard's services against their employees in case of strike.

It provides for a public record to be made of all activities of the National Guard when called out in connection with a labor dispute.

It provides penalties of $250 to $1,000 fines, imprisonment from 60 days to 1 year, or both, for any person who violates the provisions of the act provided. In addition it provides for damage suits and penalties by persons injured through violation of this measure.

LXXXIV-205

THIS IS A MILD AND REASONABLE STATUTE

I think this is a very mild statute. There have been proposals to forbid altogether the use of the National Guard in any labor dispute, and these proposals have found widespread support not only from labor unions but from nonlabor bodies of all sorts as well. The present bill, I believe, is one that can be supported by every progressive person in the United States and by every person who holds dear the honor of our armed forces.

THERE IS WIDESPREAD SUPPORT FOR SUCH A MEASURE

The efforts of the Congress to establish and protect the rights of labor, and thus to eliminate violence and bloodshed from industrial disputes, have won the applause of a majority of the people. Six years of Federal recognition of labor's rights have done much to right the wrongs endured through many years of callous disregard by the Government. It is doubly wrong and strangely unreasonable, therefore, that the policies of the Federal Government are often subverted and defeated by an establishment of the Federal Government itself. That is exactly what happens as long as we allow the National Guard to be used in behalf of labor-hating employers as strikebreakers, labor spies, and gun-bearing vigilantes.

LET US ENCOURAGE SUPPORT FOR THE NATIONAL GUARD

At a time like this of national crisis, when the country is recognizing the dual dangers of aggression from without by warmongering dictators and of reaction from within on the part of native un-American enemies of democracy, the people must repose their trust and confidence in the armed forces of the Nation. Insofar as these armed forces are dedicated to the protection of democracy and the preservation of our liberties, the trust and confidence of the people shall be theirs. When American soldiers respond to the needs created by natural emergencies, they earn the respect and gratitude of the entire country. But I say that as long as any branch of the United States Army-and the National Guard is exactly that-takes part in the sordid business of smashing strikes, breaking labor unions, and employing force against working men and women, that branch of the armed forces can never hold the trust, confidence, respect, and gratitude of the American people.

. THESES TROOPS SHOULD NOT BE THE TOOLS OF UNSCRUPULOUS INDUSTRIALISTS

It is crime enough when profit-hungry industrialists meet the demands of their employees for decent wages and living conditions with the gunfire of hired thugs and the tear gas of private guards. But it is a far greater crime in the eyes of the country to see a people's army, paid for by and responsible to the people, turned over to these same industrialists for the purpose of protecting their thugs, violating the spirit, and often the letter, of the law, and forcing demoralized employees to accept at bayonet point whatever sweatshop wages and working conditions the employer wishes to foist upon them.

YEAR OF 1938 WAS BETTER THAN AVERAGE

That it is a great crime, and so recognized by public opinion, is evident in one gratifying fact: The year 1938 saw fewer instances of strikebreaking by the National Guard than in any year since the Coolidge administration. According to a survey made by Walter Wilson and David Scribner, the record shows that 1,550 guardsmen were in active service in 5 strikes and an additional 3,500 were mobilized, but never actually sent into the field. This is a marked improvement over preceding years. It shows that in the face of public hostility to the employment of troops during labor disputes the Governors of the several States have been using more discretion in the declaration of martial law as an aid to employers seeking to escape the obligation of collective bargaining with their employees.

Nevertheless the record for 1938 does not mean that the problem is solving itself. It does not provide an excuse for allowing matters to remain as they are, and for the Congress to duck a responsibility that lies squarely before it. The freedom of conduct of interstate commerce, the rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively, and the preservation of civil liberties are matters subject to the legislative regulation of the Congress.

YET THERE IS VAST ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT

While the National Guard record for 1938 may be small, it is nonetheless a glaring one. It contains instances unparalleled for open disregard of Federal law, for undisguised strikebreaking, and unashamed violation of the rights of American working men and women. For example, I call to your attention the action of Governor Kraschel, of Iowa, in calling out the troops during a strike at the Maytag Washing Machine Co. plant at Newton, Iowa, during July and August 1938. At about the same time that the Governor ordered 500 guardsmen to the strike scene on July 19, he sent in a board of mediation to investigate and try to bring about a settlement of the dispute. The union stated its willingness to accept the recommendations of the mediation board, in spite of the fact that they involved accepting a cut in wages. The employers refused flatly even to consider them.

THE IOWA INCIDENT

Did Governor Kraschel back up his own board of mediation? He did not. Turning completely about, the Governor advised the union to go back to work at the company's terms, and coupled with his advice a warning that unless they did the troops would reopen the plant under the protection of machine guns and that all picketing, union meetings, and other strike activities would be forbidden.

The Governor did not stop there. He was not satisfied merely to play the part of a Pinkerton or a Bergoff. He was inspired by the bayonets and uniforms and he wanted to play Napoleon as well. He issued an order forbidding the National Labor Relations Board from holding hearings on charges of unfair labor practice filed against the Maytag Co. Federal authority, however, was not cowed by tin-hat edict. The Governor retreated in confusion when the National Labor Relations Board defied his order and announced that the hearings would continue. For, said the Board with truth and dignity—

Any other course would be subordination of the National to the State authorities in matters affecting national sovereignty and of the civil to the military authorities in time of peace. Both are abhorrent to American institutions.

GOVERNOR KRASCHEL COERCED LABOR

If the Governor could not subdue Federal authority in one respect, he could subvert it in another. He promptly announced his determination to reopen the plant with the aid of the troops, and protesting against coercion the union men marched back to work under the surveillance of National Guard men with fixed bayonets. The strike was broken, and American institutions suffered another defeat at the hands of the very forces created and armed to protect them.

THE STRIKE AT SWIFT & CO. PLANT

Troops were employed a second time in 1938 by Governor Kraschel during a strike at the Swift & Co. plant at Sioux City, Iowa. At the request of the sheriff, mayor, and county attorney, 600 National Guard men were sent to the scene on October 19 and remained there on guard duty until November 22. Martial law was not proclaimed, in spite of the Governor's threats, and the strike was finally settled on January 26, 1939. It is interesting to note that on two occasions prior to the calling of the troops the union itself had pleaded to the Governor for protection from 50 thugs imported by the company; but the union's pleas were not granted.

THE GOVERNOR OF OHIO INTIMIDATED ORGANIZED LABOR

The State of Ohio offers another example of the misuse of the National Guard during 1938. Unquestionably the all-American tin-hat title belongs to the former Governor of that State, Mr. Martin L. Davey, whose generous use of the Ohio National Guard got him into serious trouble with the voters during the primary elections in 1938, helped remove another State from the Democratic ranks, which he betrayed.

Mr. Davey's dying gesture during the last days of his term was to send in troops on November 2, 1938, to reopen the struck plant of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. at Middletown, Ohio.

What the employers could not bring about through a back to work movement, the Governor offered to do for them through force. Terming the strike "a brutal, lawless, and tyrannical invasion," and despite official regulations demanding strict neutrality of National Guard officers during labor disputes, Davey ordered 500 guardsmen to reopen the plant in the face of a flat refusal by the company to negotiate with the union or even to meet with officials of the United States Labor Department.

Anxious to avoid bloodshed, 1,000 strikers went back to work, while one of their leaders commented:

We don't intend to have our people murdered by a "lame duck" Governor of the State of Ohio, who has proven himself to be America's No. 1 strikebreaker.

Earlier, on May 27, Davey had mobilized 3,000 National Guard men for possible use during a strike at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. plant at Akron.

IN OKLAHOMA, TOO

Tulsa, Okla., received a Christmas gift of martial law when "lame duck" Gov. E. H. Marland ordered 200 National Guard men to the struck plant of the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation. Following an appeal from the local sheriff, the troops were sent out on December 24, 1938, and discovered that the only act of violence was the beating up by scabs of a workman who had nothing to do with the strike. While martial law was in effect, workers living in the military zone were required to obtain passes to go to and from their homes.

Those who are quick to defend strikebreaking under the pretext of protecting the right to work should note the fact that these oil workers in Oklahoma did not want that kind of protection. When some of them were herded into the refinery and held there by the troops, in order to force them back to work, these workers made their escape to join their union comrades by braving the icy waters of the Arkansas River in near-zero weather.

DULUTH, MINN., ACHIEVES SIMILAR NOTORIETY

In Duluth, Minn., 300 National Guard men were mobilized, but never used, on May 23, 1938, as the result of a strike at the plant of the Herald News-Tribune. The purpose of the Governor in this instance was not to break the strike, but rather to prevent the recurrence of violence by police, who had used tear gas to disperse a picket line of the newspaper guild.

THE J. R. CLARK BOX CO. STRIKE

For a most shocking misuse of the National Guard, I refer you to the findings and opinion of a court of inquiry created by Governor Benson, of Minnesota, early in March 1938 in order to investigate the strikebreaking activities of Maj. J. R. Clark, an officer in the National Guard and owner of a manufacturing plant, the J. R. Clark Box Co., whose employees went out on strike. The court of inquiry, whose findings were inserted in the Congressional Record under date of March 21, 1938, established that Major Clark recruited strikebreakers and scabs from the ranks of his regiment, the One Hundred and Fifty-first Field Artillery, used the National Guard Armory for strikebreaking headquarters, and employed property of the National Guard for purposes of housing the strikebreakers within his plant. The court of inquiry, which was composed of three majors of the National Guard, found Major Clark and two of his subordinate officers-one of them assistant superintendent of the J. R. Clark Box Co .- guilty of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and of a nature to bring discredit to the National Guard." Here is an example, only too rare, of true anxiety on the part of a commander in chief of the National Guard to preserve the integrity and the honor of his military forces by exposing and cleaning out actions which disparage the guard in the eyes of the citizens.

EXCITEMENT AT WESTWOOD, CALIF.

An incident which took place in Westwood, Calif., in July 1938 is one more proof of the fact that the National Guard is far too often called out exclusively in the interests of employers and is far too often blind to the most outrageous violence practiced by these very employers upon helpless workers and their families. The National Guard was sent to Westwood when workers of the Red River Lumber Co. went on strike against a 17½-percent reduction in wages, and Sheriff

Olin S. Johnson rushed a plea to Governor Merriam for aid in restoring law and order. When the troops were only a few miles from Westwood, word was received from the sheriff that everything was under control and the guard need come no farther. Whereupon the troops were sent back to barracks.

Let us examine now what kind of law and order had been established at Westwood. Newspapers all over the country printed dispatches on July 13 and July 14 which give a detailed description of the kind of control which made superfluous the presence of the National Guard. Several hundred vigilantes, deputized by Sheriff Johnson, proceeded to raid the homes of all strikers and sympathizers in Westwood, rounded up whole families at gun-point and drove them from the town. Then these guardians of law and order patrolled all roads leading to the town in order to prevent the return of the outcast men, women, and children.

ALL CIVIL LIBERTIES DENIED UNIONISTS

Incredible as that may sound, it is borne out by perfectly sedate news dispatches. The United Press reported as fol-

Deputies patrolled highways leading into the town, halting all cars to question occupants as to their membership or sympathy with the C. I. O. A truck, to which a loud-speaking system was attached, went through the streets, an announcer calling the names of men suspected of C. I. O. membership or sympathy when the men could be found, they were put on the truck and forced to state their position. If the crowd was satisfied with the man's explanation, he was freed; if not, he was given a short time to pack up get his family and leave town. to pack up, get his family, and leave town.

On the following day the Associated Press reported that Small groups of C. I. O. unionists and their women and children, 750 of whom were driven from Westwood yesterday after a riot, straggled back here today pleading to be allowed to get their belongings

I submit that here indeed was cause for action by the National Guard, action to protect 750 men, women, and children from lynch-law brutality and un-American vigilanteism. That, I insist, is why the citizens of the United States pay from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 a year to promote and uphold the National Guard.

THE INDIVIDUAL GUARDSMAN HAS NO TASTE FOR STRIKEBREAKING

Mr. Chairman, the facts I have presented speak for them-They show that even though the 1938 record of the National Guard was an improvement over other recent years, it is still a black and uncomforting record. They prove that the need exists for Federal action to govern the use of a Federal military body which can be an invaluable weapon of the people in the great cause of preserving a threatened democracy. The American boys who make up the National Guard deserve honor and praise for their service as ministers of mercy. They would reject the role and stigma of strikebreaking storm troops. It is not fair to them to force them to prod unarmed men with bayonets, to break up lawful and peaceful assemblies, and to act as nursemaids and knight errants for gangs of finks and thugs. Above all, it is a perversion of the people's will to thrust them into service as the private army of those special interests who seek to evade, violate, and defy the laws of the Federal Government.

EMULATE THE TRADITIONS OF THE QUONDAM PEOPLE'S MILITIA

The forerunner of today's National Guard was the people's militia, the embattled farmers of Concord and Lexington, who in 1776 "fired the shot heard 'round the world" when they struck the first blow for freedom and democracy. Let it not be the case that the shots fired by our militia and heard today are those fired into the backs of American workers who are forced by stubborn and irresponsible employers to go on strike for living wages and decent conditions of work.

Regulate the use of the National Guard in labor disputes, and you will have gone a long way toward restoring the historic prestige of the American militia.

The bill introduced by me follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no arms, clothing, equipment, equipage, stores, or materials, heretofore or hereafter supplied by the United States to the National Guard of any State, or heretofore or hereafter purchased for the use of the National Guard of any State, out of any funds appropriated at any time by the United States, shall be used by any unit, member, or officer of the National Guard of any State, in connection with, or in any situation arising out of, or resulting from, any labor dispute, unless the National Guard or any unit, member, or officer thereof, is used in strict conformity with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2. (a) The National Guard and any unit, member, officer, or agent thereof, unless martial law is declared—

(i) shall at all times be subordinate to and shall not supersede the civil authorities:

the civil authorities;
(ii) shall not in any way interfere with, abridge, limit, diminish, deny, or prohibit the rights and liberties of, or the exercise thereof by, any person under the Constitution and laws of the United States or of the State in which the National Guard is used;
(iii) shall not arrest or otherwise detain any person except upon reasonable cause, and in the case of such detention or arrest such person immediately, and in any event within 2 hours after his arrest and detention, shall be released or transferred to the custody of the civil authorities of the area of the labor dispute, and upon such transfer the officer of the National Guard responsible for the arrest shall file a written statement specifying the charges against such person.

(b) The National Guard and any unit, officer, member, or agent thereof shall not be used to enforce martial law in any situation connected with, or arising out of, or resulting from any labor dispute so long as the civil courts in the area affected by the labor dispute are or may be functioning or can or may entertain proceedings upon a writ of habeas corpus by or on behalf of any person according are or may be functioning or can or may entertain proceedings upon a writ of habeas corpus by or on behalf of any person according to law.

Sec. 3. (a) Any and all expenditures of the National Guard and any and all compensation payable to any unit, member, officer, or agent thereof for official services or duties shall be payable only out of the public funds appropriated for that purpose to the amount and in the manner prescribed by law.

(b) Gifts, donations, and gratuities of any nature whatsoever made by any person, firm, association, or corporation to any National Guard unit or to any member, officer, or agent thereof shall not constitute public funds within the meaning of this act, and no National Guard unit or any member, officer, or agent thereof shall perform directly or indirectly any official services or official duties on behalf of any person, firm, association, or corporation, or shall receive directly or indirectly any compensation, gift, donation, or gratuity of any property, real or personal, on account of or during such official service or duties.

(c) No National Guard unit, member, officer, or agent thereof shall accept as a gratuity, donation, or gift any arms, ammunitions, uniforms, clothing, equipment, stores, military supplies or equipment, or supplies or articles of a similar nature from nor shall any such gratuity, donation, or gift be made by any person, firm, association, or corporation.

Sec. 4. Any and all contracts and agreements, whether written or order approach and accept and agreements, whether written or order approach agreements, whether written or order approach agreements or hereafter entered into the corporation or corporation.

such gratuity, donation, or gift be made by any person, firm, association, or corporation.

Sec. 4. Any and all contracts and agreements, whether written or oral, express or implied, heretofore or hereafter entered into between any National Guard unit or any member, officer, or agent thereof and any person, firm, association, or corporation in violation of this act are hereby declared to be contrary to public policy and void and no such contract or agreement shall afford any basis for the granting of legal or equitable relief by any court.

Sec. 5. The adjutant general shall keep a record of the daily activities of the National Guard when used to aid civil authorities. Such record shall include among other things the daily assignments of each squad or corresponding unit of the National Guard in active service, the names of the officers and members or agents of each such squad, the names of all persons arrested and detained and by whom, the names of all persons injured or killed and the location and description of all property selzed or damaged in the course of the activities of the National Guard. Such record shall be filed with the secretary of the State in which the National Guard is used within 72 hours of midnight of each day of such active service and shall be a public record available for copying or inspection.

Sec. 6. Any person, corporation, or association or any public officer or official of the State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or any officer, member, or agent of the National Guard who shall aid or incite the willful violate any of the provisions of this act or who shall aid or incite the willful violation of any of said provisions shall for each such offense be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction therefor shall be fined not less than $250 nor more than $1,000, or shall be imprisoned for a period of not less than 60 days nor more than 1 year, or both.

Sec. 7. (a) Any person, firm, corporation, or association, or any therefor shall be fined not less than $250 nor more than $1,000, or shall be imprisoned for a period of not less than 60 days nor more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. 7. (a) Any person, firm, corporation, or association, or any public officer or official of a State or any political subdivision thereof, or any member, officer, or agent of the National Guard who shall violate any of the provisions of this act or who shall aid or incite the violation of any of said provisions shall for each and every violation thereof be liable for all damages and, in addition, to a penalty of $250 to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction by any person or persons aggrieved thereby, for and in behalf of himself or themselves or other persons similarly aggrieved, or by an agent or representative designated by such person or persons to maintain such action for and in behalf of all persons similarly aggrieved.

(b) In any civil action as provided in this section to enforce the provisions of this act it shall be sufficient for the plaintiff to plead and prove that the alleged violation of any provision of this act was committed by a person acting under color of his authority in the National Guard as officer, member, or agent thereof; and it shall not be a defense to such action that such person was acting pursuant to the authority vested in him as officer, member, or agent of the National Guard claim any immunity from the provisions of this act by reason of his office or official duties or powers; and each officer of the National Guard in active service, commissioned or noncommissioned, excluding the Governor, shall be liable for any violation of the provisions of this act committed by any other member or members, or agent of the National Guard under his command, regardless of whether the said other officer or member or agent was acting in conformity with the orders or directions of such commanding officer.

SEC. 8. The district courts of the United States and the United State courts of the Territories and possessions shall have jurisdiction upon the application by any interested person to restrain any violation of any provision of this act.

SEC. 9. (a) As used in this act, the term "State" means any State of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or any Territory or possession of the United States.

(b) The term "labor dispute" includes any controversy—

(i) concerning terms or conditions of employment; or

(ii) concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment; or

(iii) concerning employment relations, including the right to be recognized as the representative or bargaining agency of employers or employees; or or employees; or (iv) concerning the respective interests of employer and employee regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee, and regardless of whether or not an employer or employee is a party to or participant in such controversy.

(c) The term "rights and liberties" under the Constitution or laws of the United States, includes the right—

(i) to strike;
(ii) to picket or patrol any public street or place by any person or persons singly or in numbers, with or without placards, regardless of whether the person, firm, corporation, or association whose premises, residence, or place of business is being picketed or patrolled is the employer of such person or persons engaged in such picketing or patrolling;

(iii) to hold or conduct any meeting, assembly, or gathering in any auditorium, stadium, hall, room of any dwelling or other any auditorium, stadium, hall, room of any dwelling or other building, or in any other meeting place, or in or upon any vacant building, or in any other meeting place, or in or upon any vacant land or ground;

(iv) to distribute or circulate in or upon any street or public place, or from house to house, any written matter not offering for sale goods, services, or real or personal property; and

(v) to publicize orally or in writing the existence and any information pertaining to any labor dispute.

SEC. 10. If any section, sentence, clause, or part of this act or the application of such section, sentence, or clause to any person or circumstance, shall be held invalid the remainder of this act or the application of section sentence, or clause to other persons or or circumstance, shall be held invalid the remainder of this act or the application of section, sentence, or clause to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 11. All the acts and parts of acts inconsistent with any provisions or parts of this act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 12. Nothing contained in this act shall be deemed to limit the powers of the President of the United States to call out the National Guard under the Constitution of the United States.

SEC. 13. This act shall take effect upon enactment

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs] such time as he may

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, Alexander Hamilton was a great mind. He was also a straight and honest thinker. He was the father of the Republican Party and the protective tariff. He would have been the father of parity prices for farm products if his honesty had prevailed. For, said he, every dollar put into the coffers of industry by the protective tariff obviously must be taken from the farmers; so not as a gratuity but as a mere restitution the farmers should be given reciprocal bounties. This was said in his Report on Manufactures.

The protective tariff which he caused by this report has been taking millions of dollars out of the poverty-stricken pockets of the farmers every year since then. Only recently, when the goose of the farmers pockets which laid these golden eggs had been nearly starved to death, and therefore ceased to lay, have we begun to make some niggardly restitution

Make no mistake. Not one thin dime of all the benefit payments, diverted acre rentals, and what-not paid American farmers has been a gift. Let no one think or claim that there has been any generosity. We have but restored to the rightful owner a small part of the wealth that the protective tariff has stolen from him.

But the tariff is only one of the pistols with which the farmer has been robbed. Adverse and discriminatory freight rates have wrongfully taken other millions. Usury, extortion, and unjust exactions of a skillfully manipulated money system have also taken their toll of ill-gotten gain at his expense.

Take the cotton farmer for illustration. The total of all trade balances in our favor in the history of our Nation is some $35,000,000,000. Of this sum cotton is credited by every calculation with all but two billion. Who has this wealth which the cotton farmer created and brought to this Nation? Hardly one slick nickel of it was ever allowed to stay overnight in the Cotton Belt. The industrial regions took it all.

I am not foolish enough to plead for justice for justice's sake. I do not ask for sympathy, nor for release from the cruel and iniquitous system because of the righteousness of that request. I have no hope of restitution. I simply appeal to the sense of enlightened selfishness to give back to farmers, North, East, South, and West, enough of the wealth which has been taken to enable them to become better customers of national commerce and industry. The surest way out of the slough of despond for business is to deal fairly enough with the farmers to create purchasing power sufficient for national prosperity.

How can Alabama, for instance, buy what she should of the products of industry when her annual cash income per farm family is only $200?

Mr. Chairman, once upon a time there was a lawyer who lived in the same town with a carpenter. The carpenter employed the lawyer to represent him in a case of considerable importance. There was no written employment agreement and no definite understanding as to the amount of the lawyer's fee. During the pendency of the case the lawyer employed the carpenter to add a sleeping porch to his home. One afternoon the lawyer, accompanied by one of his other friends, drove by the carpenter's home and left the plans and specifications and an estimate of the materials needed and their prices. The carpenter was asked by the lawyer how much his bill would be, and almost took the breath of the mutual friend away by the amount he stipulated for his services. As they drove off the mutual friend said to the lawyer: "You certainly were a sucker to agree so readily on the price the carpenter named." The lawyer replied: "You don't see the whole picture. I am his lawyer in the case in which he is now involved, and I haven't sent him my bill yet."

This fable is like all other good fables-it is true. It illustrates perfectly one of the aspects of the plight of the American farmer. No matter how high the prices of farm products may go nor how low they fall, the farmer has no voice in fixing them. He is compelled to take what he can get on an open, free, and unprotected market. But the producers of the goods the farmers have to buy have always fixed the prices of their goods; and no matter how high farm prices may go, they have not sent in their bill yet. So like, the lawyer, no matter what the farmer gets, they can and do take it way from him simply by increasing their prices.

The appropriation carried in this bill of $250,000,000 will not give the American farmer parity prices for his products, but it is a step in that direction and should certainly not be reduced. In fact, it should be increased. If we were enlightened enough to appreciate the whole economic picture. we would multiply it three or four times. For all well-posted economists tell us that every dollar of farm income means a dollar in the pay envelopes of the workers in industry and at least $7 in increased business.

I maintain that the estimate of $7 as a minimum increase in business income for every dollar of farm income is entirely too low when we are thinking of dollars paid the farmers under appropriations such as this so-called parity appropriation. For this is extra money-new money-not fettered by the normal obligations he has to meet out of crop returns. Every one of these new, extra dollars would not only be freer to move into the channels of trade than the ordinary farm-income dollar, but it would come into the possession of the farmer under the pressure of a longdammed-up demand, so that it would move with much greater velocity than do the regular dollars which multiply themselves only seven times in their circulation. It is a conservative estimate that each of these dollars would mean at least $10 of new business. If we were to apropriate sufficient money to pay the American farmer full parity, it would mean three billion of these new, extra dollars added to national farm income. This would mean $3,000,000,000 added to the wages of industrial workers because of the increased demand for the products of industry and it also would mean an increase in the national business income of $30,000,000,000 in each year of such full parity payments.

Therefore, it seems clear, beyond argument, that national prosperity waits upon the payment of parity prices for farm products. Parity means equality in exchange value. It makes practically no difference whether cotton sells for 5 cents or $5 a pound, if the price of that cotton buys the same amount of necessities and luxuries for the farmer.

The Nation can no more survive half slave and half free now than it could in the 1860's. Today the farmers and their dependents are shackled in economic slavery as real as the kind which disgraced our civilization before the Proclamation of Emancipation.

By all means, let us retain this small appropriation carried in this bill for the purpose of approaching that far toward parity. We can watch the results and see if it does not prove the best investment we have ever made.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Shanley] such time as he may require.

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Chairman, there has been so much uncertainty about the situation of our trade agreements with Czechoslovakia that I have contacted the State Department and received the following press release in regard to that situation. I have asked unanimous consent to insert the proclamation of the President on this situation and herewith insert it as a contribution to clear thought on this doubtful fact:

MARCH 23, 1939.

The President today signed a proclamation terminating as of April 22, 1939, the rates of duty which he had previously proclaimed pursuant to the trade agreement with Czechoslovakia. The action taken by the President is based upon the fact that, although the trade agreement remains in effect, its operation has been suspended as a result of the occupation of the Czechoslovak Provinces of Bohemia, Moravia, and Slovakia by the armed forces of Germany, and of the Province of Ruthenia by the armed forces of Hungary.

The trade agreement with Czechoslovakia was signed on March 7, 1938, and, as modified by the terms of a protocol of amendment signed April 15, 1938, was applied provisionally by the two governments on and after April 16, 1938.

The text of the proclamation is as follows:

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION

Whereas it is provided in the Tariff Act of 1930 of the Congress

Whereas it is provided in the Tariff Act of 1930 of the Congress of the United States of America, as amended by the act of June 12, 1934, entitled "An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930" (48 Stat. 943), which amending act was extended by joint resolution of Congress approved March 1, 1937 (50 Stat. 24), as follows:

"SEC. 350. (a) For the purpose of expanding foreign markets for the products of the United States (as a means of assisting in the present emergency in restoring the American standard of living, in overcoming domestic unemployment and the present economic depression, in increasing the purchasing power of the American public, and in establishing and maintaining a better relationship among various branches of American agriculture, industry, mining, and commerce) by regulating the admission of foreign goods into the United States in accordance with the characteristics and needs of various branches of American production so that foreign markets will be made available to those branches of American production which require and are capable of developing such outlets by affording corresponding market opportunities for foreign products in the United States, the President, whenever he finds as a fact that any existing duties or other import restrictions of the United States or any foreign country are unduly burdening and restricting the foreign trade of the United States and that the purpose above declared will be promoted by the means hereinafter specified, is authorized from time to time—

"(1) To enter into foreign trade agreements with foreign govern—
"(1) To enter into foreign trade agreements with foreign govern—
"(1) To renter into foreign trade agreements with foreign govern from time to time

(1) To enter into foreign trade agreements with foreign governments or instrumentalities thereof; and

"(2) To proclaim such modifications of existing duties and other import restrictions, or such additional import restrictions, or such import restrictions, or such additional import restrictions, or such continuance, and for such minimum periods, of existing customs or excise treatment of any article covered by foreign-trade agreements as are required or appropriate to carry out any foreign-trade agreement that the President has entered into hereunder. No proclamation shall be made increasing or decreasing by more than 50 percent any existing rate of duty or transferring any article between the dutiable and free lists. The proclaimed duties and other import restrictions shall apply to articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of all foreign countries, whether imported directly or indirectly: Provided, That the President may suspend the application to articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of any country because of its discriminatory treatment of American commerce or because of other acts or policies which in his opinion tend to defeat the purposes set forth in this section; and the proclaimed duties and other import restrictions shall be in effect from and after such time as is specified in the proclamation. The President may at any time terminate any such proclamation in whole or in part."

Whereas, pursuant to the said Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, I entered into a foreign trade agreement on March 7, 1938, with the President of the Czechoslovak Republic, which agreement was amended by a protocol of amendment signed on April 15, 1938:

Whereas by my proclamations of March 15, 1938, and April 15, 1938, I did make public the said trade agreement, as amended by the said protocol of amendment, in order that the said agreement, as amended, should be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States of America and the citizens thereof on and after April 16, 1938:

Whereas the occupation of the Czechoslovak Provinces of Bohemia, Moravia, and Slovakia by armed forces of Germany, and of the Province of Ruthenia by armed forces of Hungary, and the assumption of de facto administrative control over these provinces by Germany and Hungary renders impossible the present fulfillment by the Czechoslovak Republic of its obligations under the said agreement;
Whereas this condition will obtain so long as such occupation and administration continue:

administration continue:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acing under the authority conferred by the said Tariff Act of 1930, as amended by the said act of June 12, 1934, as extended by the said joint resolution of March 1, 1937, do hereby proclaim that my proclamations of March 15, 1938, and April 15, 1938, shall be terminated in whole on the thirtieth day after the date of this my proclamation.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 23d day of March A D 1939.

Done at the city of Washington this 23d day of March, A. D. 1939, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-third. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

[SEAL] By the President: SUMNER WELLES, Acting Secretary of State.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAHON 1

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, may I speak one moment before we begin to read this appropriation bill?

When the 1938 Farm Act became law I made the prediction that it would not prove fully acceptable to the farmer because, among other reasons, it would not insure an adequate price for farm products. Any farm program which merely reduces production and does not automatically raise the price of farm crops cannot fully succeed. The farmer is interested in soil conservation and a lot of other things, but he knows, and everybody who knows anything about agriculture knows. that there can be no wholesome condition in agriculture until the price level is raised—until the farmer gets his fair share of the national income.

I know that the Committees on Agriculture of the House and Senate are working constantly and diligently on this problem. What they will recommend I do not now know.

However, the Committee on Appropriations, of which I am a member and which has brought in this bill, cannot authorize agricultural legislation. We can only sponsor appropriations. But at this time and in this appropriation bill we do have a small opportunity to adjust upward the farm income by making an appropriation for partial parity pay-The committee has favorably recommended $250,-000,000 for parity payments to supplement the $500,000,000 recommended for soil-conservation payments. Two hundred and fifty million dollars is not enough, and I should like to see a much greater appropriation. These are large sums we are talking about, but let us remember that we are considering the welfare of a large number of people—the welfare of 30,000,000 people living on the farms of America.

The agricultural producer is facing an almost desperate situation. We must not forget that there can be no sound and wholesome conditions in the Nation until the buying power of the farmer has been restored. The tariff and our economic system generally have handicapped the farmer. The farmer does not want a dole. He only wants a fair opportunity to receive that which is justly due him. I hope we can retain the full amount provided in this bill, and, if possible, increase the sum sufficiently to provide parity.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Stefan] such time as he may desire.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to thank those in charge of this bill for giving me the opportunity to address Members of this House on this important question of the farming industry. I wish first to notify the membership of the House that I have filed with the Clerk petition No. 6, which asks for the discharge of the committee from further consideration of H. R. 70 which is a bill to liquidate and refinance agricultural indebtedness at a reduced rate of interest by establishing an efficient credit system through the use of the Federal Credit Administration and the Reserve banking system. I urge every Member of the House who is interested in the welfare of the farmer to sign this petition in order that we can bring this meritorious bill on the floor of the people's representatives for debate and actual consideration. This is not a political party measure. The petition is a pro-test against the gag rules under which we operate here to the detriment of meritorious legislation which millions of American people feel should be given a fair and liberal hearing by their representatives. It will require a majority or 218 signatures on my petition to get such a hearing and I want to thank those Members from farming districts for giving me support and encouragement in filing this petition and their pledge to aid me in securing the signatures of additional sympathetic Members.

Full hearings have been held on this bill and these are available to every Member. I urge that each of you secure a copy of these hearings in order that you may become familiar regarding the merits of this proposed legislation.

Every time this Congress adjourns I go home and actually visit every corner of my district, which is purely agricultural. I feel that I know what is going on in the farm homes and in the farm communities. I have become depressed in traveling over the 22 counties of my district to find so many farms abandoned, so many foreclosures, so many farmers pleading for some method to refinance themselves so that they or their children may eventually own their homes. Thousands of farmers have lost their farms. If these foreclosures and farm abandonments continue, we in Nebraska will become a land on farm tenancy which may bring the standard of farm life equal to the low standards which prevail on the farms in some foreign lands.

Since returning to Washington I have hundreds of letters and petitions from farmers and business and professional men pleading for some better refinancing of the farmer. Even the officers and stockholders of the farm-loan associations have sent me scores of petitions with thousands of names pleading for lower rates of interest and extension of payments on the principal on loans in order to stop the exodus of our farmers and the loss of their homes. I am in full sympathy with these pleas, and because I am here representing these fine people who believe in the future of our fine Nebraska farm land I want them to know that I am vocal and active in their behalf. You, too, have these problems. You, too, must realize that there will be no prosperity in our land until the farmer and his children will have some hope of owning their own farms and some hope that they again will have some purchasing power. I could discuss here for many hours real and bona fide reasons why there will be no recovery in our land until the farmer's purchasing power is returned to him. But time does not permit and I will discuss that matter at some later date. I wish now to confine myself in discussing this refinance bill, which is commonly known as the Frazier-Lemke refinance bill. I do this because there are many new Members in this House who were not here during the past 4 years when we have been fighting

We have passed laws for railroads, banks, industrialists, and even for labor. We listen attentively when the representatives of these groups come before us. Here is a bill in which 32,000,000 men, women, and children who feed and clothe us are asking to be debated on this floor. After all these years of waiting I feel that this session of Congress should give these people a hearing and pass this farm refinance legislation.

To both the old and new Members I wish to explain that there are a few minor changes in the new farm refinance bill. It retains all of its principles. To briefly explain the new bill, known as H. R. 70, it provides:

SEC. 2. The Farm Credit Administration is hereby authorized and directed to liquidate, refinance, and take up farm mortgages, and other farm indebtedness existing at the date of the passage of this act by making real-estate loans, secured by first mortgages on farm lands, to an amount equal to the appraised value of such farm lands and 75 percent of the value of insurable buildings and improvements thereon such loans to be made through the Federal lands and 75 percent of the value of insurable buildings and improvements thereon, such loans to be made through the Federal land banks and national farm-loan associations. Such loans shall be made on the standard amortization plan at the rate of 3 percent per annum, the interest rate shall be 1½ percent, and the balance of each installment or payment shall be applied on the principal. SEC. 3. The Farm Credit Administration is further authorized and directed to liquidate, refinance, and take up chattel mortgages and other farm indebtedness, existing on the date of enactment of this act, by making loans at the rate of 3 percent interest per and other farm indebtedness, existing on the date of enactment of this act, by making loans at the rate of 3 percent interest per annum, secured by first mortgages on livestock, to an amount equal to 65 percent of the fair market value thereof, such loans to run for a period of 1 year, with right of renewal from year to year for a term of 10 years: Provided, That any depreciation in the value of such livestock is replaced by additional livestock, and the amount of the loan is reduced 10 percent each year. Such loans to be made through the intermediate credit banks and the production credit associations. associations.

associations.

SEC. 4. The funds with which to liquidate and refinance existing farm mortgages and other farm indebtedness shall be provided by the issuing of farm-loan bonds by the Farm Credit Administration. Such bonds shall bear interest at the rate of 1½ percent per annum if secured by first mortgages on farms and 3 percent per annum if secured by first mortgages on livestock. The Farm Credit Administration may sell these bonds at not less than par to any individual or corporation, or to any State, national, or Federal Reserve bank, or to the Treasurer of the United States. It shall be lawful for the Federal Reserve and national banks to invest their available funds, including surplus and net profits, in such farm-loan bonds. Any State, national, or Federal Reserve bank that buys such farm-loan bonds direct from the Farm Credit Administration may, upon giving 30 days' notice to the Board of Administration may, upon giving 30 days' notice to the Board of Governors, exchange them for Federal Reserve notes. Such notes to be issued by the Federal Reserve System and given in exchange for the bonds without recourse.

SEC. 5. In case all of said farm-loan bonds are not readily purchased, then the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration shall present the remainder to the Board of Governors of the shall present the remainder to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Board shall forthwith cause to be issued and delivered to the land-bank commissioner Federal Reserve notes to an amount equal to the par value of such bonds as are presented to it. Such farm-loan bonds to be held by the Federal Reserve Board as security in lieu of any other security or reserve: Provided, however, That as additional security and reserve, the President, in his discretion, by Executive order, may set aside a gold fund in the Treasury as a reserve for such notes out of free gold in the Treasury or out of the exchange stabilization fund created by section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, and maintain such reserve fund in an amount equivalent in dollars to not more than 40 percent of such notes outstanding. The outstanding Federal Reserve notes issued under this act shall at no time exceed $3,000,000,000.

SEC. 8. The benefits of this act shall also extend to any farmer

SEC. 8. The benefits of this act shall also extend to any farmer or member of his family who lost his or her farm through indebtedness or mortgage foreclosure since January 1, 1930, and who desires to purchase part or all of the farm lost, if available, or another like farm. It shall also extend to any tenant or member of his or her family who desires to purchase a farm not exceeding $10,000 in value, provided he or she has lived on and operated a farm as a tenant for at least 3 consecutive years prior to the enactment of this act.

There is nothing new in this bill. The banks are given an opportunity to buy the bonds. They have $15,000,000,000 of idle money that they are unable to invest because the people have no credit left. If this bill is passed, they can invest part of this in these bonds. If they refuse, then the Federal land banks can get the money from the Federal Reserve System the same as the Federal Reserve banks do now for the bankers. What is "sauce for the goose is sauce for the gan-Then the Government would make a profit of $6,345,000,000 at 11/2 percent interest in 47 years—the time required for amortization of the farm indebtedness-and the farmers would save over $19,000,000,000 in lower interest.

On behalf of the hundreds and thousands of farmers who have been losing their homes since 1920 through mortgage foreclosure I plead with this House and its Members to sign my petition and get some action on this bill during this session. Hundreds and thousands of innocent men, women, and children have been evicted from their homes-hundreds and thousands more have lost their farms and have become tenants, or sharecroppers and serfs for absentee landlords.

Since 1920 over 10,000,000 farm boys and girls have been driven into already overcrowded towns and cities to swell the army of unemployed-compelled to go on relief. Prosperous farmers of yesterday have become wanderers over our land, discouraged and confused humanity searching for a home. This, Mr. Chairman, is America's problem today. Our problem is not in foreign lands where wars are being waged. Our war is at our front door. We are intelligent enough to realize this today if we but look about us. Our farming industry is our most important industry. When we make that industry succeed we will solve our labor and industrial problems and not until then.

Today we are passing the annual appropriation bill to pay the cost of running our Agriculture Department. The bill carries over a billion dollars. With the exception of the parity price item against which there is so much fight today, this gigantic money bill will not result in increasing the price of farm produce one penny. So you realize the importance of immediate action toward real refinancing legislation for our great farming industry. I plead for your support today.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Talle].

A MEASURE TO AID AGRICULTURE

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, I rise at this time to call attention to a bill which I introduced in the House yesterday. This bill is known as H. R. 5285, and it is has to do with rates of interest which farmers now pay on loans made through Federal land banks and through the land-bank commissioner. It has to do also with the maturity of landbank-commissioner loans.

Specifically the bill proposes that the interest rate on both types of loans be made permanent at a rate of 31/2 percent. And it proposes further that the maturity period of the landbank-commissioner loans be made to extend over 34 years instead of the much shorter period which the law now prescribes.

It appears to me that there is merit in this bill. In the first place, it is reasonable. The Federal Government can borrow money at so low a rate that it can afford to lend money to farmers at 31/2 percent. Commercial banks do not now pay more than 2 percent on savings accounts. Many banks pay less than 2 percent. The Federal Government pays no more than 2 percent on postal savings. Some commercial banks will not pay any interest at all on savings accounts. In fact, I have known commercial banks to turn down prospective customers, rejecting their savings accounts

In the second place, it appears to me that simple justice demands that such a bill should pass this House. Industry can borrow money at a rate which is lower than that which the farmer must pay. Interest on a mortgage is a heavy fixed charge. Justice demands that this burden should weigh no more heavily on agriculture than it does on industry.

In the third place, this bill will help to stabilize agriculture. If the borrower is permitted to make his payments on principal over a period of 34 years, he will be better able to make his payments regularly because the amount which he must pay each year will be considerably smaller than that now required by the law under the land-bank-commissioner loan contracts. This bill, when enacted into law, will promote orderly payments of the principal with the result that fewer farms will be foreclosed upon and become a burden to the Federal Government.

It is not necessary for me to point out that agriculture is in a bad way at the present time. It is not necessary for me to point out that the future prospect of agriculture is not bright. This problem is a serious one, and I say it is a much more serious matter than is the problem of national defense. I plead with this Congress to pay attention to our internal problems first. If this Congress does not do so, it may well be that we shall have little to defend. Let us put first things first. Then, as we begin to solve our internal problems such as the plight of agriculture and unemployment, we can meet our external problems with more assurance. I am for adequate national defense. So is every other loyal American. But I also want to be sure that the internal affairs of my country are in such shape that there is strength in our farming group, strength in our industrial group, strength in our commercial group, strength in our transportation group, and strength in our professional group. The best defense our country can have is a strong domestic economy. Certainly the condition of agriculture at the present time demands that this all-important branch of our domestic economy be strengthened.

Finally, I do not maintain that my bill, when enacted into law, will solve the problem of agriculture. But I do maintain that it will aid in the solution. And I do maintain that this bill is a reasonable measure. It is a constructive measure. It is a measure which merits the support of every Member in this House.

I was born and reared on a farm. I have done all the kinds of work the farmer must do in the Fourth District of Iowa, which I have the honor to represent. I helped my parents to pay off a mortgage on the old homestead which is still held in the family name and on which my mother and one brother still reside. There is no mortgage on that farm today. There has not been since before our country entered into the World War. But that is rather an exceptional case. I mention it here because I want to make it clear that I do not expect to profit in a definitely personal way by the passage of my bill.

In conclusion, I contend that the American farmer is an honest, upright, hard-working, clean-living, intelligent citizen of our country. He is the backbone of our Nation. He raises the food we eat. He furnishes the raw materials that go into the clothes we wear. He supports our schools and our churches. He reaches down into his pockets and supplies a good share of the taxes that must be paid for the maintenance of government. He does not die rich. But during his lifetime he works hard; maintains a decent home; tries to educate his children; and is as loyal to the free institutions of America as any man who has the honor to call himself American.

Mr. Chairman, I am glad that in my first speech in this House I might raise my voice in behalf of the American farmer. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, at the appropriate time I shall ask unanimous consent of this House to include in my remarks a house concurrent resolution, No. 3, passed by the Forty-eighth General Assembly of Iowa which convened at Des Moines January 9, 1939. This resolution is signed by the speaker of the house, Hon. John R. Irwin, and certified to by the chief clerk of the house, Mr. A. C. Gustafson, and reads as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 3

Whereas the welfare of the great Commonwealth of Iowa depends

Whereas the welfare of the great Commonwealth of Iowa depends upon the stabilization of agriculture; and Whereas long-term loans and low-interest rates help materially to stabilize the agricultural industry; and Whereas the emergency farm loan interest rate of 3½ percent, made possible by special action of the National Congress, to the farmer borrowers having Federal land-bank loans expires July 1, 1940, and the emergency farm loan interest rate of 4 percent, made possible by a special act of the National Congress, to the farmer borrowers having land-bank-commissioner loans expires July 1, 1940; and

Whereas the land-bank-commissioner loans provides for principal payments of 5 percent or 10 percent per annum in addition to the interest payments; and

Whereas thousands of farmers in the State of Iowa have Federal land-bank and/or land-bank-commissioner loans, and because of the fact that the interest rates are not definitely fixed at a low rate, the fact that the interest rates are not definitely fixed at a low rate, and because of the fact that principal payments of at least 5 percent or 10 percent per annum are required on land-bank-commissioner loans, there is much uncertainty and indefiniteness in the plans of such farmer borrowers; and

Whereas it appears to be possible to extend lower interest rates to the farmers without an excessive burden to the taxpayer and with almost no administrative costs, and that interest rates on Government loans to other industries is considerably less than that fixed for the farmer of the Middle West; and

Whereas it is our opinion that low-interest rates and small principal payments accorded to the farmers of Iowa through the Federal land-bank system would contribute much to the stabilization of agriculture: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house (the senate concurring), That the Legislature of Iowa, duly assembled in Des Moines, Iowa, respectfully petitions the Members of the National Congress to use every possible effort to secure the passage of a law making 3½-percent interest rate permanent to the farmer borrowers of the Federal land bank and the land-bank-commissioner, and that this legislature urges the Members of the National Congress to secure the passage of a law extending all principal payments on land-bank-commissioner loans over a period of 34 years, as provided for Federal land-bank loans, and that the said be made permanent, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to each United States Senator and Representative from the State of Iowa, to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, to the President of the United States Senate, and to the President of the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

For stationery, supplies, materials, and equipment, freight, express, and drayage charges, advertising and press clippings, communication service, postage, washing towels, repairs, and alterations; for the maintenance, repair, and operation of one motorcycle and not to exceed three motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles (including one for the Secretary of Agriculture, one for general utility needs of the entire Department, and one for the Forest Service) and purchase of one motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicle at not to exceed $1,500, including the exchange value of one such vehicle, for official purposes only; for official traveling expenses, including examination of estimates for appropriations in the field for any bureau, office, or service of the Department; and for other miscellaneous supplies and expenses not otherwise provided for and necessary for the practical and efficient work of the Department, which are authorized by such officer as the Secretary may designate, $108,250: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available for the payment of salaries of employees engaged in the maintenance, repair, and operation of motor transport vehicles, and that this appropriation shall be reimbursed from the appropriation made for any bureau or office for which such service is performed, in accordance with the provisions of the act of May 11, 1922 (5 U. S. C. 543): Provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture, during the fiscal year for which this appropriation is made, may maintain stocks of stationery, supplies, equipment, and miscellaneous materials sufficient to meet, in whole or in part, requirements of the bureaus and offices of the Department in the city of Washington and elsewhere, but not to exceed For stationery, supplies, materials, and equipment, freight, expriation is made, may maintain stocks of stationery, supplies, equipment, and miscellaneous materials sufficient to meet, in whole or in part, requirements of the bureaus and offices of the Department in the city of Washington and elsewhere, but not to exceed in the aggregate $200,000 in value at the close of the fiscal year, and the appropriations of such bureaus, offices, and agencies available for the purchase of stationery, supplies, equipment, and miscellaneous materials shall be available to reimburse the appropriation for miscellaneous expenses current at the time supplies are allotted, assigned, or issued, or when payment is received; for transfer for the purchase of inventory; and for transfer pursuant to the provisions of section 601 of the act approved June 30, 1932 (31 U. S. C. 686): Provided further, That the appropriations made hereunder shall be available for the payment of salaries and expenses for purchasing, storing, handling, packing, or shipping supplies and blank forms, and there shall be charged proportionately as a part of the cost of supplies issued an amount to cover such salaries and expenses, and in the case of blank forms and supplies not purchased from this appropriation an amount to cover such salaries and expenses shall be charged proportionately to the proper appropriation: Provided further, That the facilities of the central storehouse of the Department shall to the fullest extent practicable be used to make unnecessary the maintenance of separate bureau storehouse activities in the Department: Provided further, That a separate schedule of expenditures, transfers of funds, or other transactions hereunder shall be included in the annual Budget.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Pace: At the end of line 24, on page 6, add the following: "Provided further, That no part of the funds appropriated by this act shall be expended in the purchase of twine manufactured from commodities or materials produced outside of the United States." the United States.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, when the Post Office Department appropriation bill was before the House, I offered an amendment of this character providing that not more than one-half of the funds carried in that bill should be expended in the purchase of twine manufactured from foreign Inasmuch as the Post Office Department had been using jute exclusively for 18 years, I thought it would not be wise to require that they discontinue it entirely and suddenly but to let American commodities come along with the jute the first year on a 50-50 basis; but now we are appropriating for the Department of Agriculture, a department established for the single purpose of promoting the welfare of the American farmer. Certainly it seems to me only consistent that our own Department of Agriculture should use only American farm commodities.

I listened yesterday and today with much interest to the declarations and statements of our Republican friends to the effect that they thought the American farmer was entitled to the American market, and I hope they will be found in complete sympathy with this effort to have the Department of Agriculture use only twine that is manufactured from American material.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman: will the gentleman yield? Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Does the gentleman's amendment go so far as to exclude all material used in the manufacture of binder twine in the United States?

Mr. PACE. My amendment applies only to the Department of Agriculture and provides simply that the twine they use shall be manufactured out of American commodities.

Mr. DONDERO. If it goes as far as to exclude materials used in binder twine it would exclude all materials which come into this country for the manufacture of binder twine.

Mr. FULMER. For the information of the gentleman I may state that that is a different fiber than jute.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman's amendment does not include materials used in binder twine?

Mr. PACE. The amendment excludes all twine made of foreign materials.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I wish the gentleman would call to the attention of the House the fact that we have under our loan program 11,000,000 bales of American cotton, and in the meantime we are tying the mails of the United States with jute twine that is made in India when they could use cotton and help the farmers of the South to that extent. [Applause.]

Mr. PACE. Not only that, but the American Government at this time has an investment of approximately $600,000,000 in cotton. If I may proceed for a moment, I express the hope that this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. TARVER. I may say to the gentleman from Georgia that I have conferred with my colleagues on the majority side and they are in favor of the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. PACE. I was about to say that I felt sure the members of the Committee on Agriculture on this side would not object to this amendment, for this committee is set up for the sole purpose of looking after the interests of the American farmer. I therefore hope that in view of the investment of the Government in cotton, in view of the expressed interest of our Republican friends in an American market for the American farmer, in view of the interest of the Department of Agriculture solely for the welfare of the American farmer, in view of the interest of this committee solely in the welfare of the American farmer, that this amendment may have the unanimous support of each and every Member of this House.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. PACE. I am very glad to yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. I am very much in favor of the gentleman's amendment, but I wonder if he was entirely correct in his statement to the effect that the Government has a $600,000,000 investment in cotton? We have a liability; is not that correct?

Mr. PACE. We have $600,000,000 in loans on 11,200,000 bales of cotton.

Mr. COOLEY. It is more of a liability than an investment.

Mr. PACE. The gentleman is correct; it is a liability.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. REES of Kansas. From what country do we import the material for the twine used in the Post Office Department?

Mr. PACE. We are importing it from India.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Hawaii: To carry into effect the provisions of an act entitled "An act to extend the benefits of certain acts of Congress to the Territory of Hawaii," approved May 16, 1928 (7 U. S. C. 386–386b), $55,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. King: Page 10, line 16, strike out "$55,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$60,000."

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I have proposed would increase the allocation for the Hawaii Agricultural Experimental Station from $55,000 to $60,000, which is the recommendation of the Bureau of the Budget.

The provisions of the Hatch Act allotted $15,000 for the experiment stations of every State.

The Adams Act provided an additional $15,000 for each of the several States.

The Purnell Act provided a further $60,000 for every State, making a total of $90,000 for the experiment stations of the 48 States, regardless of size or population or the relative importance of agriculture in the particular State's economy.

None of these acts included Hawaii in its provisions. In 1928 a special act was passed extending the benefits of the three preceding measures to the Territory of Hawaii, but prescribing that Hawaii should receive a specific sum each year, increasing in amount until $90,000 per year was reached. In other words, Hawaii was to achieve parity with the several States gradually over a period of years.

The amount stipulated in the special act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, was $60,000. The appropriation bill as approved by the House included this item, but the Senate reduced it to $50,000, and the bill was passed with the lower figure. This meant a loss to the Hawaii Agricultural Experiment Station of $10,000 for that fiscal year.

For the present fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, the statutory provision called for an appropriation of $70,000. The Department of Agriculture submitted this figure in its estimates. The Bureau of the Budget reduced it to $60,000, noting that this provided for the statutory increment of $10,000. Of course, this is incorrect, because the law prescribed no increment, but names specific amounts for each fiscal year.

The House passed the appropriation bill with a further reduction to $50,000. The Senate restored it to $60,000. In conference the amount was fixed at $55,000, which meant a loss for the current fiscal year of $15,000.

The amount authorized by law for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, is $80,000. The Department of Agriculture included this sum in its estimates, but the Bureau of the Budget recommended $60,000, which is $20,000 less than the authorization. I ask that at least the Budget Bureau's figure be restored, as otherwise the law adopted in 1928 will be nullified, and Hawaii will never arrive at parity with the several States in this aid to agriculture.

Agriculture is Hawaii's only industry, practically; and the amounts allocated to the experiment station are most important in the development of diversified agriculture in that Territory.

Mr. Chairman, I sincerely hope the Committee will approve the Budget recommendation, at least, which was $20,000 less than the authorization passed in 1928, and approve my amendment.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the Delegate from Hawaii. Mr. Chairman, the committee allowed for this the same amount appropriated for the current year. After hearing the testimony, it seemed to the committee that the amount provided this year was ample, and we continued the amount allocated for 1939 over into 1940.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the Delegate from Hawaii [Mr. King].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Alaska: To carry into effect the provisions of an act entitled "An act to extend the benefits of the Hatch Act and the Smith-Lever Act to the Territory of Alaska," approved February 23, 1929 (7 U. S. C. 386c), $15,000; and the provisions of section 2 of the act entitled "An act to extend the benefits of the Adams Act, the Purnell Act, and the Capper-Ketcham Act to the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1936 (7 U. S. C. 369a), $8,750; in all, for Alaska, $23,750.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIMOND: Page 10, line 25, after the word "Alaska", strike out "$23,750" and insert "$25,000."

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Chairman, by the amendment proposed I am seeking to restore the amount approved by the Bureau of the Budget and set up in the Budget estimate. Several years ago, on June 20, 1936, there was passed an act extending the Adams, Purnell, and Capper-Ketcham Acts to Alaska. The act so passed and approved provides that for experiment station work Alaska shall have precisely one-half of similar amounts expended in each of the States. The act was very carefully drawn.

Hearings were had before the Bureau of the Budget and provision was made in the act that the increases so made should be given on a graduated scale—$5,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, then an increase of $2,500 for each year until in the year 1947, when the amount of $37,500 would be reached. Even under the Budget estimate we are $2,500 below the amount authorized for the fiscal year 1940.

The committee has stricken out the very slight increase granted by the Bureau of the Budget, $1,250. There is distinct and outstanding need for experiment station work in Alaska. Similar work in the States has already been largely completed. The situation in Alaska is well stated by Dr. Jardine, who is in charge of experiment station work in the Department of Agriculture, and, if permitted, I should like to read very briefly from his statement.

I quote from page 129 of the hearings:

I may say for the benefit of the committee, and also to express my own judgment and feeling, we have a tremendous territory in Alaska. It is a long way from the United States, and their soil problems and other problems are different from those problems in the United States.

States.

We do not have so many farmers, but we do have the Matanuska colony, a farming area at Fairbanks, and we have varying interests. I am quite sure, from 30 years' experience in research, that if and when the time should come that we would need to or would undertake much further development in Alaska, we would be sorely in need of facts which no amount of money could gather for us without requiring time. While I am not urging an additional increase at this time, yet, from some knowledge of Alaska and the national picture, I would hope that at some time in the future we could be a little more liberal for research in Alaska.

Mr. Chairman, Dr. Jardine assumed, of course, that the $1,250 increase granted by the Bureau of the Budget would remain in the bill. Many Members do not know that we have in Alaska about 40,000,000 acres of agricultural and grazing land, some of it of excellent quality, and that on similar lands in Norway, Sweden, and Finland several millions of people exist and have established a high degree of culture and civilization. The problem is like that of national defense in one respect. We cannot do the job overnight. Therefore it is much wiser, as the administration and the Bureau of the Budget have decided, to approach the thing gradually and grant yearly the modest increases authorized by the act of June 20, 1936.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIMOND. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky. Mr. MAY. What is the amount included in the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. DIMOND. An increase of $1,250. The committee went to the trouble of cutting $1,250 out of this appropriation, although we are already $2,500 below the amount authorized. We need this $1,250 in order to carry on work that has already been begun. It really means much more to us than 10 times this amount would mean for an experiment station in the States. It is not so many years ago that the Government was spending $85,000 a year for experiment work in Alaska.

The work carried on by the experimental stations in Alaska has already been of much value, but only a beginning has been made. We are now confronted with the immediate need of experimental work with respect to plant breeding in order to more efficiently produce feed for dairy cattle and other livestock. Progress has been made along this line in trying out a large number of grasses, alfalfas, and clovers, some of which give promise of success. But in order to attain a fair degree of success the work must be carried forward.

Mr. Lorin T. Oldroyd, of the University of Alaska, a highly capable man, who has charge of the experiment station and extension work in Alaska, informs me that a well-qualified plant breeder is now needed to carry on the work and that his services would be of high value to Alaska agriculture.

He also has informed me, to illustrate the value of the experimental work already done, that the matter of curing hay for livestock has been solved at the Fairbanks Experiment Station through the use of an inexpensive trench silo; that oats and peas produced ensilage at the rate of a little more than 12 tons to the acre last year; that the trench silo has been in operation for two seasons; and that there has been no loss from freezing.

Dr. Charles E. Bunnell, the able president of the University of Alaska, who was once described by a discriminating critic as the best university president in the United States, has repeatedly urged upon me and upon others interested the need and value of the reasonable expansion of experiment station work in the Territory, such an expansion as has been authorized by Congress in the act of June 20, 1936.

It is regrettable, Mr. Chairman, that in a country as vast as Alaska and with really such immense potential agricultural resources the larger sum authorized by the act of June 20, 1936, was not recommended by the Budget and placed in the bill by the Appropriations Committee. That amount would be $2,500 above what I am now seeking in the amendment which I have here proposed. The success and welfare not only of the present Alaska farmers but all others who are bound to come in the future may well depend upon the thoroughness and extent to which the experimental work has been carried on in the Territory. The problems there are unique and, hence, we cannot entirely rely upon the results obtained in the States. Years ago it was thought that science had little application to agriculture, but now we know different. The successful agricultural operations are those which invoked to the largest extent the aid of science and the policy of denying the necessary funds to carry on scientific experiments, the results of which we know, from what has been done in the past, are bound to be highly beneficial. appropriation of the increased sum now requested would be, in fact, an exercise of true economy because it would enable the work to be carried on and slightly enlarged in a wellordered and scientific manner.

The Members of this House know the outstanding importance of Alaska with respect to national defense. National defense would be promoted by the development of agriculture in the Territory. The development of agriculture to a measurable extent waits on the knowledge that can be gained through the agricultural experimental work. Therefore it is not an exaggeration to say that the increased appropriation desired is fully justified by considerations of national defense.

A reference to the bill, Mr. Chairman, will clearly show that the only attempt made at economies with respect to experiment station work has been in the cases of Hawaii and Alaska. We find in the bill that millions of dollars are carried, and properly so, for experiment station work in all of the States and no attempt has been made to curtail or economize or to go below the estimates recommended by the President in the Budget for the funds that are to be expended in the States. But in the case of Hawaii the Budget estimate has been cut $5,000 and in the case of Alaska the Budget estimate has been cut $1,250. I challenge anyone to show a single word in the printed record of the hearings which will justify either one of these reductions. I have already read an excerpt from the testimony of Dr. Jardine in which he expresses the hope that some time in the future there will be greater liberality with respect to research in Alaska, and for the sake of emphasis I invite your attention to the fact that Dr. Jardine's testimony was based upon the assumption that the committee would not go below the Budget estimates. Owing to the peculiar nature of the problems presented in Alaska with respect to agriculture and the very small amount of work that has heretofore been done looking toward a solution of those problems, it is obvious that much greater justification exists for proceeding with experiment station work in Alaska on an enlarged scale than exists in the States for the work which is there being undertaken.

I urge upon the House, in spite of the adverse report of the committee, that this small amount, which means considerable to us, be granted.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the Delegate from Alaska [Mr. DIMOND].

Mr. Chairman, we have here precisely the situation presented in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. King].

In each case we provided for the year 1940 the same amount provided for 1939. From the evidence presented by the Department and by those interested, there seemed to be no justification for increasing the amount over that provided for the present year. In order to continue to show no discrimination, inasmuch as we have voted down a proposed increase in one case, I ask that the same action be taken on this amendment in this case in order to maintain the same status throughout.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the Delegate from Alaska.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, we have had 5 minutes' debate on each side.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist on the point of order?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I do not insist on the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I do not usually take the floor to oppose the attitude of a committee of the House on a very minor matter. It seems to me the members of this committee today ought to consider this one thing: Here are two gentlemen, very excellent representatives of their Territories, both of which are domains of the American Government. Their hands are tied. They are permitted to exercise the high prerogative of speech, but they are unable to vote. Here we are with a committee of Representatives in Congress presenting a bill covering the subject of agriculture, up against what I regard as an absurd and ridiculous proposition. Just 2 or 3 years ago we started out to colonize Alaska. We sent several thousand emigrants to Alaska in a back-to-the-farm program. This committee raises the total amount of the agricultural bill, as I understand, for parity prices at home more than $200,000,000, but when it comes to the proposition of appropriating the magnificent sum of $1,250 under consideration it wants to close down on the gentleman from Alaska because he cannot vote, I suppose, and defeat his amendment. I think in justice to ourselves we ought to vote to carry this amendment this afternoon.

We may soon be rushing to the rich resources of minerals and timber in Alaska for war materials, and we ought at least make some effort to give encouragement to agricultural experiment and investigation of the yet undeveloped agricultural resources of that great area. We ought to quit swallowing a camel and straining at a gnat. Let us at least be consistent for at least a part of the time.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the amount provided in the bill for this purpose is the largest amount ever allowed in the history of the Alaskan Territory. The committee, after a thorough study of the situation, considered the amount more than ample for the purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the Delegate from Alaska [Mr. DIMOND].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. May) there were—ayes 23, noes 45.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, payments to States, Hawaii, Alaska, and Puerto Rico for agricultural experiment stations, $6,843,750.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the members of the Committee to the fact that the appropriations for experiment stations and for extension work under the Department of Agriculture in this bill under the terms of the allotments that will be made mean a reduction in the experiment-station allotments for 21 States. I have in my hand a table which gives the apportionments of the Federal funds allotted for cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics for the fiscal years of 1935 and 1938, and the probable allotments for the year of 1940. A good many members of the Committee probably do not realize that a change has been made in the method of apportioning money for extension work by reason of the expiration of some of the original authorizations of 1914 which provided extension funds. Under the terms in the Bank-head-Jones Act, the basis of allotment is changed so these States in 1940 will receive a decidedly reduced amount of money for their county agent and home-economics work. These are the States:

Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, and Wyoming—21 States. These 21 States are going to suffer a reduction in funds because the money will be apportioned to the other States. I do not know that anyone is claiming that the other States do not need more money for their extension work, but there is certainly something unfair in taking money from these 21 States and causing a reduction in their county agent and home-extension work during the next fiscal year.

I have been informed that a bill, S. 518, has passed the Senate and has been referred to the House Committee on Agriculture. This bill proposes to set up a new authorization for enough money to take care of the States that have had their money taken away from them. I call it to your attention at this time, because it will require approval of that legislative committee and then subsequently an appropriation in a deficiency bill, or these 21 States will suffer a reduction in their county agent work. I think many Members of this House have the feeling that some of the most effective work that is done for agriculture is done by the county agents and the home extension workers.

I call your attention to it at this time, because this is the time you are appropriating the money under the terms of acts that will cause a reduction in the amounts allotted to these States. When this subsequent measure comes up for consideration, if you believe in a square deal and believe in this work you will support it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Puerto Rico: To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry into effect the provisions of the act entitled "An act to extend the benefits of section 21 of the Bankhead-Jones Act to Puerto Rico," approved August 28, 1937 (7 U. S. C. 343f-343g), $45,000.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Iglesias: On page 15, line 18, strike out "$45,000" and insert "$88,000."

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is being presented in accordance with Public Act 407, according to which we should have an appropriation of $88,000 although we received only $45,000 the past year and this year the committee gives us again the same amount. The law states that the first year we should have $88,000. In reality we should have at this time $128,000 but the committee gave us $45,000. This appropriation is badly needed in the island. The island is being built up with the assistance and cooperation of Congress and the actions of the legislature over there. May I say to the Congress that every dollar that is invested in Puerto Rico by the Federal Government is returned duplicated to the United States. The people of the island are waiting for Congress to give them the larger sum of money in this appropriation bill. Of course, I do not have much hope, after seeing what happened to the amendments requesting additional appropriations for the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, by their distinguished Delegates but it is my duty to appeal to this House and its Members in behalf of the extension of agricultural work in the island of Puerto Rico, and this is the reason I have offered my amendment.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. IGLESIAS. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. MARCANTONIO. The sum the gentleman requests is the sum authorized by an act passed by the Seventy-fifth Congress?

Mr. IGLESIAS. Yes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The Committee on Appropriations is not carrying out that authorization when it does not grant the sum authorized by the Congress.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Exactly.

Mr. Chairman, the authorities of the Department of Agriculture have recommended highly that this sum of money be put in the bill. It is very little, really, the increase being from $45,000 to $88,000, the amount the law authorizes. I hope, Mr. Chairman, the members of the committee as a whole, of this House, will approve this amendment and vote in favor of it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this is one of the instances in which the bill carries the full Budget estimate. To agree to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Puerto Rico would be to go over the maximum amount submitted to the committee.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. The amount requested by the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico was specifically authorized in Public Act 407, passed by the Seventy-fifth Congress. Why not appropriate.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. But that was a mere authorization. In this case we allowed more than we usually allowed in this bill. We gave the full Budget estimate. We must ask, therefore, that the amendment be not agreed to.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. MOTT. Is it not a fact that you have exceeded the Budget estimate in the entire bill by about $250,000,000?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Does the gentleman take that as an argument against adding anything more to this already heavy bill?

Mr. MOTT. My argument is that the gentleman's argument is inconsistent. The gentleman said we should not vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Puerto Rico because to do so would exceed the Budget, yet the gentleman's committee has exceeded the Budget estimate by $250,000,000 in reporting out this bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. And now the gentleman wishes to still further exceed it?

Mr. MOTT. Yes; I do. I should like to exceed it in some other directions.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the Commissioner from Puerto Rico.

The amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

FOREIGN AGRICULTURAL SERVICE

Foreign Agricultural Service

To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry into effect the provisions of the act entitled "An act to promote the agriculture of the United States by expanding in the foreign field the service now rendered by the United States Department of Agriculture in acquiring and diffusing useful information regarding agriculture, and for other purposes," approved June 5, 1930 (7 U. S. C. 541–545), and for collecting and disseminating to American producers, importers, exporters, and other interested persons information relative to the world supply of and need for American agricultural products, marketing methods, conditions, prices, and other factors, a knowledge of which is necessary to the advantageous disposition of such products in foreign countries, independently and in cooperation with other branches of the Government, State agencies, purchasing and consuming organizations, and persons engaged in the transportation, marketing, and distribution of farms and food products, and including the employment of persons and means in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and the purchase of such books and periodicals and not to exceed $1,000 for newspapers as may be necessary in connection with this work, $295,000.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, Loffer an amendment.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Leavy: On page 18, line 18, after the word "products" and the comma, insert the following: "including biologic and economic investigations of rubber, forestry, medicinal, insecticidal, and other agricultural plants and products of the Latin American countries."

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment I have just offered is to increase this item for foreign agricultural service in the sum of $250,000 in keeping with the Budget estimate. The object of this increase is to permit the United States Government, in keeping with our present foreign policy, to encourage trade with the Latin-American countries and to make up, in part, for the export trade we have lost in the Eastern Hemisphere and to open for us a market for our surplus products. In thus opening a market we will greatly increase our purchases from the Central and South American countries in those products and commodities which we cannot produce and of necessity must import

The offering of this amendment just indicates with what a terrific degree of rapidity international events move. One committee heard the evidence in support of this appropriation on the 10th day of February. From the 10th day of February to this day, March 24, the history of the world has undergone a tremendous change. The entire geography of Central Europe has been remade and the powerful influences that grow out of international trade policies threaten to become more pronounced in Central and South America to the prejudice of both those countries and our own Nation. We cannot much longer remain indifferent to the dangerous influences of the totalitarian states in this hemisphere, working through commercial channels. The objective or the purpose sought here is to carry out that foreign policy that we agree on both sides of the House is a wise policy and that is a closer relationship with the South and Central American countries.

This must be done through closer commercial relationships, and those closer relationships can only be brought about by a better understanding of our own needs and those of our Latin American neighbors. We have assumed the responsibility of insuring political integrity to our less powerful neighbors in the south from aggression or ulterior influences coming from the Old World. This assumption of responsibility is by virtue of the Monroe Doctrine that none of us would for a moment advocate abandoning.

The Bureau of the Budget approved an additional $250,000 for the Foreign Agricultural Service.

The granting of this additional $250,000 would mean that the United States would have 10 foreign agricultural service offices where they now have 6, and of the 6 we have now, 5 of them are in the Eastern Hemisphere, and one of them alone is in the Western Hemisphere. This amendment would provide for five in the Western Hemisphere, and the objective sought is to create closer commercial ties between ourselves and all of the other countries in the Western Hemisphere, without in any way taking advantage of them, but with knowledge of the needs of all the Western Hemisphere nations involved and by common understanding an exchange of surplus commodities can be made and at the same time a high degree of independence from Old World intrigue and treachery avoided. We have been losing South and Central American trade constantly. It has been drifting toward central Europe principally.

Germany particularly has been holding out every inducement to win favor with our neighbors to the south by an extension of its trade relationships, and this, of course, carries with it all the menace incident to the political philosophy prevailing in that country. These four additional stations would tend to reestablish the relationship in trade we formerly had there, and to discourage in those countries the production of those crops that we can produce here, while at the same time taking from those people the crops that they can best produce in surplus quantities.

There are only about four or five products that are major enough to deserve consideration here. One of them is rubber; another is cinchona or quinine; another manila hemp; and another rotenone-producing plants for insecticide. All of these are produced in superabundance by our southern neighbors, and we must have them, either from this source or from the Eastern Hemisphere. It is a logical and natural exchange to permit and encourage these products to come into this country in a sufficient amount to meet our needs and for us in turn to export to the countries from which we get these products those things which they so badly need and of which we have a surplus.

America uses 50 percent of the world's rubber production now and we are increasing in that field of use, but the major part of it comes from the Eastern Hemisphere, principally the East Indies, and yet South America is capable of producing our entire needs in that field, and in turn, if we bought our rubber from them, we could sell them our surplus crops which they are now, in part, being persuaded by Germany to produce, even this upon a rather unsound basis.

I refer you particularly to the record of the hearing before our committee made on page 231 and the following pages. I think possibly my colleagues on the subcommittee, even on the Republican side will agree that had we more fully understood the significance of the needs and the international aspects involved, and how the general welfare of all Western Hemisphere nations would have been furthered, we would never have thought of cutting this item out of the bill. The amendment comes as a committee amendment, at least from the majority side of the House. The four stations sought to be established will be in Rio de Janeiro to cover Brazil; in Panama City to cover southern Central America and northern South America; in Mexico City to cover Mexico and northern Central America; and in Habana to cover the West Indies. In addition, the existing office at Buenos Aires would be strengthened.

When we consider how vital it is to the continued peace and cooperation in this hemisphere that commercial intercourse be maintained at a maximum at a time when that evanescent thing we call international law, at least in central Europe, appears to be entirely unknown and when national banditry and brigandry is the rule rather than the exception, then we ought not to hesitate in the interests of our Western Hemisphere neighbors and in our own interests to spend this small additional sum to thus make more secure the responsibility we have assumed under the Monroe Doctrine. I hope the amendment will prevail. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is offered by direction of the subcommittee, on evidence submitted to us subsequent to the report of the bill. It is within the Budget estimate, and in the judgment of members of the committee the exceptional circumstances warrant its approval.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I scarcely find myself in accord with the subcommittee, and I believe I am speaking for the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Lambertson] likewise, in approving an increase from $250,000 to $540,000 for this item for the foreign agricultural service.

The reason for this can, in fact, be found in the justification that was submitted to the subcommittee as appears on page 205 of the hearings.

Just let me indicate to the committee what is proposed to be done with the funds that are herein contained. Manifestly, they are going to make some investigations. They are going to make investigations to see how we can improve our trade with South America, but they are going to set up establishments in the nature of regional laboratories in South America and they are going to investigate the agricultural resources and potentialities of the Latin American countries from the standpoint of increased production of noncompetitive agricultural products. This is one thing they are going to do with this money. Secondly, it is proposed to survey the tropical hardwood resources of Latin America to see whether or not we can import more hardwoods from down there.

Third, it is proposed to survey Latin American countries and obtain information concerning soil, vegetation, climatic factors, and disease conditions, particularly as they pertain to the cultivation of rubber, quinine, and other valuable tropical plants needed in the United States.

I think the hearings and the records of the Department of Agriculture are the best evidence of the thousands and thousands of dollars we have lavished in seeking to find a plant or a tree or some kind of vegetation that will produce rubber in commercial quantities, and we have not found it yet. The time will come, I assume, when that problem will be solved by the bunsen burner and the beaker in some chemical laboratory like they have in Wilmington, Del. We have frittered away lots of money, and the latest reports we had on discovering rubber on this hemisphere are certainly not encouraging. I think we might just as well forget about it for a while, and I can see little virtue in writing this appropriation up by a quarter of a million dollars, most of which will be spent in South America for South American benefits and comparatively little for the benefit of agriculture in this country.

Now, I know what the stock answer is going to be, and that is that you are going to create purchasing power down there so they can buy our farm products. There is not anything to show that any purchasing power will be increased as a matter of fact, and after we have made these discoveries and after we have assembled the data, I suppose we will be called upon for a substantial appropriation to build structures in South America and go ahead with this experimental work, but do not forget that every dollar that we expend will have to be expended on foreign soil.

I wonder then if we are going to get the same kind of treatment we are getting from Mexico and Bolivia at the present time. Since they have expropriated the oil lands and the lands of citizens of the United States I am not very anxious to spend a great deal of money down there for that purpose.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. LEAVY. The gentleman will recall that the hearings disclose that this is not for the purpose of discovering new processes or new types of rubber, but is for the purpose of encouraging our rubber importations from South America, as distinguished from our present importations from India and the Orient.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I say to the gentleman that the only evidence that I have as to what they are going to do with the money is the information the Department laid before our subcommittee in the justification, and I just read that to the Committee, showing it is to be spent to help agriculture down there rather than in the United States. This increase is entirely unwarranted, and I hope the Committee will vote down any effort to increase this amount by a quarter of a million dollars.

Mr. LEAVY. I think the gentleman read only one paragraph. It was shown in the hearings that we import now 100,000,000 board feet of hardwood that we cannot produce.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That may be true.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. FULMER rose.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I am going to take only a brief time to express myself on this amendment. I have served in the Congress of the United States now for a little over 18 years. I have tried in season and out of season to get some real results in this country out of research work that has been going on in the Agricultural and other Departments of the Government. where we have been spending millions of dollars annually for this line of work; but up to this good hour it is almost impossible to get the Agricultural Department to back any kind of constructive bill or program that would put into execution the things that they have absolutely found out through this research work. Dr. Hall, employee of the Agricultural Department, serving in this foreign service, came and testified before our committee some years ago, stating that we are exporting into the foreign countries the most disgraceful bale of cotton that is sold in any foreign country. In other words, it is the same old type of bale put up by our grandfathers. Losses in freight waste, surplus tare, and insurance are costing farmers millions annually. Under this amendment, they will spend more money in setting up research stations in South America in the name of helping farmers, and annually we will get a report and a request for more money. This may help Firestone and other tire manufacturers who now have one of the biggest monopolies in this country. I dislike very much to oppose our good friends on this side, but unless we can get some results out of this line of work in this country I am against spending this money in South America.

I am not especially referring to jute. May I state that the General Motors Corporation, other large corporations, and the paper and pulp interests of this country with their money and laboratories have found out through research what to do and how to do it, and the paper people of the United States are growing by leaps and bounds, taking over the farmers' cotton market in the last few years to the extent of four and a half million bales, and our consumption in the United States, while we are worrying about foreign markets, is still on a level where it has been for a number of years. If we would give more thought to protecting our own markets and consuming more cotton in new uses, we would find ourselves in a much better situation.

Mr. TARVER. If the gentleman had read the hearings, he would be advised that the purpose of this is to enable this country to export more of its agricultural products to these South American countries by encouraging the development and importation into this country of noncompetitive materials produced there.

Mr. FULMER. May I state to the gentleman that this is what we hear every time we have up a bill in the name of the farmer. This is just the opening wedge and that the next bill that comes in will call for a larger appropriation and will continue to be larger. I doubt seriously if we will get the results you hope. I make this statement because of what we have been getting for money thus spent in research work in this country. Why, instead of using considerable amounts of our surplus cotton for new uses, the Secretary is now wanting to subsidize our cotton for export to foreign countries. I hope the amendment will not pass. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Leavy) there were—ayes 29, noes 86. So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Airways weather service and research: For promoting the safety and efficiency of aircraft as provided by section 803 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, and for the maintenance of stations for observing, measuring, and investigating atmospheric phenomena, including salaries and other expenses, in the city of Washington and elsewhere, $3,334,095.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Miller: On page 21, line 7, strike out "$3,334,095" and insert "$4,105,000."

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I dislike to appear in the role of asking more than the amount granted by the committee to the Weather Bureau for this airways weather service. I have favored most of the economy measures that have come before this House, but I also submit that there are times when real economy calls for spending additional money. I believe this is one of those cases. I realize that in 5 minutes it is impossible to present much of an argument or make much of an explanation of the developments that have been made in the past few years in our weather-forecasting

In recent years there has been developed a system of weather forecasting known as air-mass analysis. It has brought about more accurate weather forecasting and has benefited every user of the Weather Bureau service. I believe the Weather Bureau needs the increased amount that I have offered in my amendment in order that they may continue their research and study. The Army and Navy and the Civil Aeronautics Authority and many of our private technical institutions have cooperated with the Weather Bureau in developing this new science. First and most important, I believe this will be a definite safety factor. I call this to the attention of the House so that in the next few months should occasion arise that we find our Coast Guard and a large part of our Navy searching the Atlantic Ocean for a lost air liner that has gone down, no one will be able to say this has not been called to the attention of the House. We hope to see developed this coming summer a trans-Atlantic air service. There will be a great deal of competition in that field. I believe it is the beginning of expansion of a very important industry, an industry that is greatly needed. I do not believe that for a few thousand dollars we should throw any obstacles in the way of those who are trying to develop this industry.

It was stated in the committee hearings that the air line operators should contribute more heavily toward this Weather Bureau service. While they do benefit, it benefits every taxpayer in the country, and certainly every user of our air lines. I believe that every dollar spent at this time to allow the Weather Bureau to improve its service will be repaid to our Treasury tenfold.

I do not have time to any more than refer to the fact that there is a definite military value to improving the weather reports in connection with our Army and Navy Air Service. I remind you of the tragedy just a few weeks ago, in Florida, where 8 or 10 Navy planes with student pilots were in the air, unable to get back to their field due to lack of proper weather information. I noted that before the committee the tragic case of Senator Cutting was referred to and a Member expressed the wish that a more recent case might be cited. Just about a year ago this time the commanding officer of a Massachusetts air squadron, Major Hodge, and the lieutenant flying with him, bailed out of one of our National Guard ships over Montana. Their difficulty was caused by inaccurate weather forecasting in that area.

In 1 or 2 minutes it would be impossible to even attempt to prove to you the need of this additional service. I hope you will give serious consideration to increasing this amount. I submit that the chairman of the subcommittee apparently is not definitely set in his own mind on every item in this report, as just a few moments ago he voted to increase the amount recommended by his committee. I hope he will do so in this case.

Mr. ROUTZOHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. ROUTZOHN. Has the Weather Bureau requested this amount you are asking for?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, there is no activity of the Government provided for in this bill that has been so generously dealt with as the Weather Bureau. Among the items which we have increased most heavily is the item to which this amendment refers. To begin with, none of this appropriation is of any immediate practical service to agriculture. We have been increasing, from year to year, the expenses of the Weather Bureau service. In this bill we give them an increase of $834,095 over last year. On this particular item, whereas we gave them two and a half million dollars for the current year, the amendment provides an increase from two and a half million dollars to $3,334,000. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that as generous as we desire to be with the Air Service, we must observe some limitation within

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. In the item just before, when we increased $135,000 to furnish maps for the east coast to the central United States, $185,000 to double the mapping, that will be of general service to the Air Service.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is correct. The bill is more than generous to the entire Weather Bureau service, and especially with respect to this particular item.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman. Mr. MILLER. I would ask the chairman if it is not a fact that because of these studies over the Atlantic were we to get more accurate and dependable weather service. would not the farmers benefit equally?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The direct benefit to the farmers is decidedly problematical. We will concede that it is beneficial to the Air Service and to aerology, but we have already appropriated an amount out of proportion to the present need of the Service.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Chairman. I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman of the subcommittee a question. Will he explain in a little greater detail the item of $185,000 mentioned a moment ago by the gentleman from Kansas for the extension of the Weather Bureau or weather service in the Middle West? I would like to know what area it covers and just what its application will be.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this is one of the key stations of the Nation and was provided on the recommendation of the Department. It serves a wide territory including the entire Southwest, which accounts for this additional appropriation.

Mr. HOUSTON. And it does serve that territory out there for several States?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It covers some half dozen

Mr. SABATH. Does it cover Kansas? That is what the gentleman desires to know. He is interested in his State and he is entitled to know.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am glad to say it includes Kansas, and surrounding States, and the district so ably represented by the gentleman from Kansas, whose interests he always champions so vigilantly.

The Clerk read as follows:

Total, salaries and expenses, Bureau of Dairy Industry, $717,405, of which amount not to exceed $343,510 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, first I want to thank the Appropriations Committee from the bottom of my heart, and the House itself, and the Committee on Agriculture for the fact that in this bill I find three paragraphs recognizing the fact that there is a dairy industry. It is the only spot in the whole bill that shows there is such a thing as a cow. I looked over Washington last night to see if I could find a poster delineating a Wisconsin cow, or any other cow that gave milk, but I could not find one. I wanted to bring it here and exhibit it to this House because it will be only a short time, if the Committee on Agriculture and the administration continues to forget about the cow, before the only place you will find one will be in the Smithsonian Institution. [Laughter.]

I believe in helping every agricultural industry. There is always a great deal of conversation and debate concerning cotton. Let me tell you that all of the cotton values, all the money that is taken out of cotton and put into circulation, and all the fields and plantations do not equal the money that is received from the dairy industries and the investment in these great farm plants where they make the milk. Ride with me over the State of Wisconsin and you will see the lure there of the farms-not the shacks and shanties of the sharecropper, or the small house of the man on the plantation where they raise cotton and yams, but the great barns and buildings, additional houses where the cattle are constantly examined for tuberculosis and Bang's disease, where the herds are clean, where every sanitary attention is given to them in producing such milk as could be brought from Wisconsin to the city of Washington and sold here at 12 cents a quart at a profit against the 14 cents that is imposed here.

I am glad to note that in these few paragraphs in this bill the fact that we have a dairy industry is recognized. It does honor to this committee, it does honor to the Committee on Agriculture, and it does honor to the House itself in allowing it to be in this bill. I did not expect it would be here, because the lowly cow-if you would see her now in my State, with her milk from 80 cents to $1.10, you would take notice of her sad eyes and her drooping tail. [Laughter.] And you would be sorry for the cow and shed your own tears over the plight of the dairy farmer in Wisconsin and other dairy States.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOLLES. I yield.

Mr. HOPE. I am sure after the fine tribute the gentleman has paid to the mainstay of the dairy industry that the cows of Wisconsin will give more milk tonight.

Mr. BOLLES. Yes. If they do not I shall be disappointed. A committee came up from the gentleman's district to the State of Wisconsin. They were wheat growers. They came to me and I was chairman of that great delegation. It was fine of Clyde Reed and others there to tell me that they would never be willing to establish a dairy industry in place of the wheat industry because they had to work too hard. You must remember that there are 2,200,000 cows in Wisconsin. Each one of them has four tubes-I will use that word out of deference to JESSE WOLCOTT-four tubes. With 2.200,000 cows this means 8,800,000 tubes. Multiply that by 2 and you get 17,600,000 tubes which have to be pulled every day by the yeomanry of Wisconsin. [Laughter and applause.] This is the reason we have strong people up there. The price of milk, the inattention to the dairy business in Wisconsin, the neglect of this administration, the forgetfulness of Mr. Wallace that there are any cows, sent eight good Republicans down here to help you out. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time to ask the chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations a question with reference to the appropriation provided for the eradication of tuberculosis and Bang's disease. It is my understanding that with reference to the appropriation for tuberculosis the State must match the Federal funds on a 50-50 basis and with reference to the appropriation for Bang's disease the Federal Government will contribute $2 for every $1 contributed by the State. Is that correct?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is correct. Under the present arrangement and under the current act, the Federal Government pays two-thirds of the amount.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. May I ask the gentleman from Missouri a further question? The bill provides approximately $8,000,000 for these purposes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The bill provides, to be exact, $8,402,000.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. If the sum provided in this bill is not sufficient to take care of the needs as they appear throughout the country, and as the work progresses, is it my understanding that the chairman of the subcommittee will recommend additional funds in a deficiency appropriation bill?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am certain the gentleman understands that personally I am very sympathetic toward this provision, having lost two herds in this manner. I believe we have provided funds to more than meet the Federal requirements. Whereas the Budget estimate provided for a 50-50 requirement, we have continued until 1940 the present arrangement under which the Federal Government pays two-thirds and the local government pays one-third.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The gentleman thinks this fund is adequate for the eradication of Bang's disease for the coming year?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That was the opinion of the

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. If the funds prove inadequate, will the gentleman give us his assurance that he will secure additional funds in a deficiency bill?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Of course, the committee is not in position to give any such assurance, but I may say personally to the gentleman, so far as I am concerned, I would be unwilling to see this important work neglected or curtailed in any respect.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. With that assurance, I know the gentleman from Missouri will try to get additional funds in a deficiency bill if needed.

The pro forma amendments were withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Fruit and vegetable crops and diseases: For investigation and control of diseases, for improvement of methods of culture, propagation, breeding, selection, and related activities concerned with the production of fruits, nuts, vegetables, ornamentals, and related plants, for investigation of methods of harvesting, packing, ship-ping, storing, and utilizing these products, and for studies of the physiological and related changes of such products during processes of marketing and while in commercial storage, $1,328,982

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Voornis of California: Page 35, line, after the word "storage", strike out "$1,328,982" and insert $1,343,982."

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, this amendment proposes to add $15,000 to this item for the purpose of making possible the continuance of studies now being carried on by the Department to determine more efficient and, if possible, cheaper methods, of protecting perishable fruits and vegetables while they are in transportation from the place they are grown to the place they are to be consumed. These studies have already been started in a preliminary way, but in order for them to be carried to a conclusion, and before certain facts can be definitely established, it is important, I am informed, that this small additional amount be provided.

I do not think it is necessary for me to go into a long description of the fact that the farmer who raises the crops, then ships them to other parts of the country or the world, many times finds that the selling price of those commodities when they finally reach the ultimate consumer consists in large part of transportation costs. The purpose of these studies is to determine ways in which this cost may be reduced. For example, one thing that is under study is the possibility of using what is known as half-bunker icing instead of full-bunker icing in refrigerator cars, the problem of ventilation while in transit, and things of that kind.

Clearly, if these studies should result in the possibility of requiring a much less expensive method of protection for these fruits and vegetables in transit, it will more than justify itself, and, therefore, I am offering this amendment and asking for its adoption.

Mr. HENDRICKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. HENDRICKS. I understand this is the sort of work that is being carried on in the citrus laboratories established in Orlando, Fla. In that case, even though they are doing a splendid piece of work, I understand that because of lack of funds they are not able to make the results of this work available to the grower.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. HENDRICKS. I may say that I shall support the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman explain very briefly the purport of his amendment?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The amendment adds $15,000 to the present item for the purpose of enabling studies to be continued to a logical conclusion on the question of the best method of protecting perishable fruits and vegetables while they are in transit from the place grown to the place consumed or sold.

Mr. TARVER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. TARVER. We have added $15,000 for this identical work in Florida in the present bill. Does the gentleman want the work conducted also in California?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I understood the $15,000 had not been added.

Mr. TARVER. The estimate was for $19,000. The committee added $15,000.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. The gentleman from Georgia is in error. The amount added was for the laboratory that studies the utilization of byproducts. There was no amount added for the laboratory at Orlando, which studies the question involved in fruit in transit.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman. I was quite careful to find out about this matter and I am certain that the money for this particular purpose has not been provided.

Mr. TARVER. The gentleman is mistaken. The amount added is for the Winter Haven laboratory.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. That is right.

Mr. TARVER. But it includes the study of something to which the gentleman from California has referred. It does not include everything the gentleman from Florida asked.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. That is true.

Mr. HENDRICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. HENDRICKS. I may say that I believe the gentleman from Georgia is in error. I think the amount appropriated for the laboratory at Winter Haven is simply for building purposes, and that the amount to be used in the Orlando laboratory for the purpose for which the gentleman wishes this appropriation made is the same it has been for the past 2 years.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Did the gentleman's study include an effort to discover some method by which the farmers could get their fruit to market without paying tribute to the Bridges organization?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I do not believe that particular question is involved in this amendment.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The question is asked in good faith. I noticed in the Saturday Evening Post that the farmers out in the gentleman's part of the country must pay tribute to the Bridges organization to get their fruit to the cities. If that is true, does not the gentleman believe we ought to do away with it?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposi-

Mr. Chairman, we are already providing funds for this purpose in a number of sections of the country. They are being administered at Fresno, Indio, and Pomona, in California, and at Orlando in Florida. We are appropriating here the full Budget estimate and the amount carried in the current law. The proposal is outside the Budget and beyond the amount recommended by the Department of Agriculture.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. Voorhis].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, there may be some speculation as to what interest a Member representing an industrial district such as mine would have in an agricultural bill, but I believe everyone concedes the problems of this country are interrelated. After all, it is the consumers in the industrial districts who will eventually pay the cost of all farm subsidies.

I and Members from districts similar to mine have consistently voted for measures in the interest of agriculture. We want to continue doing so. Many members of the Committee on Appropriations, which has charge of the bill now under consideration, have recently spoken a great deal about economy. The Appropriations Committee, the same committee which is at the present time quibbling about whether or not it will bring in a W. P. A. appropriation bill for $100,000,000, $125,000,000, or $150,000,000, has arbitrarily written into this bill appropriations for $245,000,000 that are not in the Budget figure, $245,000,000 that was not contained in the Budget estimates, and for which the Secretary of Agriculture did not ask. Now I am told there will be an attempt to augment the appropriation carried in this bill by an additional $250,000,000 and make the amount $500,000,000 for parity payments.

I want to vote for everything that will benefit agriculture, because I believe that what benefits one section of this country will ultimately benefit every section of the country; but it is going to be extremely difficult for any Member from an industrial section of this country to support this $250,000,000 in the absence of adequate assurances that the Appropriations Committee, which is now so liberal-minded, will give equal consideration to the problems of this country in districts where men are being thrown out of work and forced into the bread lines. I want to vote for this $250,000,000. but I am having a great debate in my mind, as I know scores of other Members are, as to whether or not after we vote for it we shall find that this Appropriations Committee, which suddenly has no thought of economy, will quibble over whether the unemployed of this country shall get $25,000,000 when it finally determines the figure to be placed in the W. P. A. appropriation bill it will bring in next week.

Administrative officers of the Government recommended $150,000,000, and the Appropriations Committee is taking the stand it cannot spend that much money; that perhaps it is a waste; still, without any recommendation from any administrative officer, and contrary to the Budget estimate, they come in here and ask us to vote for $250,000,000 that no one in authority in the Government appeared before the committee to justify or ask for. I want to vote for this $250,000,000, but I also want to feel that Members from the rural sections will cooperate with us to the extent that they were willing to furnish adequate appropriations to the W. P. A.

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana. May I say to the gentleman I am from an agricultural section. Does the gentleman realize that the Workers Alliance held a meeting here this week and went on record to the effect that the southern Members were in favor of the appropriation the gentleman is now discussing?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I cannot say anything about that, because the only source of information I have is what I hear in the House.

I hope the Members from the industrial sections will give due consideration to this provision before we make our ultimate decision.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, will 5 minutes be sufficient for the gentleman?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Probably.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We are very eager to complete the consideration of this bill tonight so it will not be necessary to return tomorrow. However, I shall not object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr.

BRADLEY] is recognized for an additional 5 minutes.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I believe we have to be thorough about these things. You cannot expect that we can be very cheerful if the Appropriations Committee, the very committee that is handling this bill, denies an adequate sum for those who are unemployed, and at the same time asks us to appropriate $250,000,000 that even the Budget Bureau did not consider necessary.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I have enjoyed the gentleman's argument on this question, but should not the gentleman change his viewpoint just a little bit and take this into consideration: Ought you to punish the poverty-stricken farmers of America by denying them this money which it is sought to appropriate in an attempt to bring their farm products back to parity prices simply because the Congress of the United States has not done its duty toward them?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. May I say to the gentleman that I dislike to penalize anyone? I believe the gentleman will agree that I and my colleagues from the industrial centers have come in here repeatedly and not only have supported but have taken it upon ourselves to work for agricultural bills on every occasion they have been presented on the floor of this House. I want to be in such a position that when I go back to my constituents I can say to them that I have cooperated with the Members from the rural sections of this country because they in turn cooperate with us in securing what we believe to be and know are equitable demands from our own constituents.

Mr. MASSINGALE. That is my sentiment exactly.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I yield to my friend from Michigan.

Mr. HOOK. If agriculture is given parity and industry is given parity with agriculture, does not the gentleman believe that labor should be given parity also with both of them?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I believe so, and I believe they have to consider the unemployed; and if the Appropriations Committee turns economically minded on a matter of $25,000,000, it apparently is very inconsistent, because, obviously, it is inconsistent for them in the same breath and at the same time to come in with a bill that requires $245,000,000 more than the Budget asked for.

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I yield to my friend from

Texas

Mr. POAGE. Just a few weeks ago I voted, and most of those who represent agricultural States also voted, along with the gentleman from Pennsylvania for $725,000,000 of additional relief money in order that we might subsidize those who needed relief, largely in the industrial sections and in that way help the entire Nation. This was almost three times as much money in that one appropriation as the gentleman complains about here. It gave about $60 a month to the relief workers in his State, while this bill gives $31 per year to the cotton farmer.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. The gentleman states that we voted $725,000,000, and that is all right, but the gentleman will have to agree that also the House reduced that appropriation by $150,000,000 in the face of recommendations from responsible officials of the W. P. A. Now, insofar as that lump sum is concerned, the gentleman cannot compare that with the $250,000,000 for parity prices. If he is going to make a comparison, in round figures, he will have to take the full amount appropriated by this bill for the Department of Agriculture, because I may say to the gentleman that insofar as the Department of Agriculture as a whole is concerned, there is more than $1,000,000,000 in this bill that does not benefit districts like my own one cent, because we do not have anything bigger than a flower pot in our district insofar as agriculture is concerned. The gentleman, I am sure, will believe there is some merit in what I am saying. We wish to go along, but we should have some assurances that we will get real consideration from the Appropriations Committee on our own problems with regard to W. P. A. appropriations. [Applause.]

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this is a poor time for Representatives in this House who represent, in the main, distressed farmers, and Representatives whose principal constituency is composed of those who are unemployed in industry, to engage in an effort to cut each other's throats.

I also think it is a poor time to engage in any patent effort at what is commonly referred to as logrolling. I hold in my hand today's edition of the Washington News and I call your attention to an item appearing on page 8:

LOGROLLING BLASTS HOPE OF ECONOMY

A logrolling campaign to pass the $250,000,000 unbudgeted item for farm parity payments and the $150,000,000 additional work-relief request threatened today to rout the House economy bloc.

The headline here was the first news that I had had that any effort was being made to bring about any sort of logrolling agreement with regard to the parity-payment item appearing in this bill.

The second news I had with regard to this proposed or supposed logrolling was the speech of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

I think there is no Member of this House who does not realize the national nature of the question involving the relief of unemployment as well as the national nature of the question involving the relief of agriculture. I think there are some Members of this House, including myself, who believe that neither in the farm program nor in the relief program have we yet found the solutions of these two problems, but I do believe that the membership of this House under the plans which are now being used, both for agriculture and for relief of unemployment in industry, are willing to go ahead and do as far as their Government is able to do, whatever may be necessary in order to relieve these conditions.

The gentleman asks how is he going to explain to the people of Pennsylvania his voting for $250,000,000 for farm parity payments. Let me suggest to him that he might explain it to them by saying that during the last 6 years $15,000,000,000 have been appropriated for work relief in the United States. He might explain it to them by saying that in 1937, $214,-000,000 of that year's appropriations were used in the State of Pennsylvania alone for work-relief purposes, as against $210,000,000 used for those purposes in all of the 11 Southern States. He might say to them that when he voted for this $250,000,000 for farm parity payments he was voting for only $36,000,000 more for the farmers of the entire United States than was used in 1 calendar year in his State of Pennsylvania for the relief of men who were customarily employed in industry.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Does the gentleman seek to justify the denial of adequate appropriations for the relief of the unemployed simply because of the fact that appropriations have been made in the past?

Mr. TARVER. May I say to the gentleman I have no question but that this House will make adequate provision for the relief of the unemployed. I am not on the subcommittee which is handling the pending supplemental relief bill, but I do say that it is foolish, that it is unwise for Members to come in here and undertake to threaten the Members of the House who represent agricultural constituencies by saying that they are not going to vote for the farm parity provisions of this bill unless we will undertake to promise so-and-so with regard to an item of legislation which is not even within our control.

I say when you vote on this bill you ought to vote for what you think is just and right for the agricultural population of the country, and that when we vote later on the relief bill we ought to act in the same way, keeping in view the welfare of the people engaged in industry.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I believe the gentleman is quoting me incorrectly.

Mr. TARVER. I am sorry, if I did.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I did not say that I would exchange my vote or how I would vote on the bill. I told you the problems of my district in explaining my vote under the circumstances.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McGRANERY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on the pro forma amendment be confined to 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I object. All of the debate has been on that side, and I think we are entitled to a little time.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I amend that to make it 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGRANERY. Mr. Chairman, I regret exceedingly that the question of logrolling has been introduced into this discussion. I would be the last man in the House to swap my vote, as it were, in any logrolling proposition. I feel that the entire responsibility for our program lies on the Democratic side of the aisle. To give relief to the farmer without giving aid to the industrial centers is only a halfway measure, and also that many of our good Democrats now come in to the committee endeavoring to justify an appropriation not justified by any official of the Government who has made a study of the problem. It is a figure arrived at by the committee without any basis for it in its hearings. I realize as well as many of my good northern friends that the situation in the South is a serious one. There are many who have read Daniel's book, A Southerner Discovers the South, and many who have been there and seen with their own eyes what the conditions are. I have a deep sympathy for the problem of agriculture, and particularly so for the South, there it is most serious and I fully realize it. I want to vote for this bill, but the question in my mind is, How can I vote for this bill and go back and face my people? As my distinguished colleague [Mr. Bradley] has told you, there is much concrete and much asphalt and many bricks and much mortar in my district. There is nothing of agriculture in it at all. On the contrary, my people contend that these subsidies have increased the cost of living to them, and at the same time point to the record of this House, showing the very men who now advocate the $250,000,000 addition are the men who voted against relief for them. This would appear as though they cut relief in order to increase this. The condition in the South is a serious one, but the Members from the South do not realize the serious situation that confronts us. Conditions in the industrial centers are every bit as serious when you consider the people in the North who do not have the money to buy the products of the farm.

I want to go along with this program, but when these Members who stand here and say that they have voted this and that for relief purposes, all we have to do is to look at the record, and we find that in the years 1934 to 1938 the State of Alabama paid into the United States Treasury $58,537,554 and took out of the United States Treasury in Federal benefits $486,785,353. Take the State of Georgia. They paid into the Treasury $136,922,249 and received Federal-aid benefits amounting to $514,775,378.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGRANERY. I am sorry, but I have not the time. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Tarver], our distinguished friend, has just left the floor. He told us of his magnanimity in voting the amount for relief and what Pennsylvania got. The State of Georgia paid into the United States Treasury, 1934 to 1938, $136,922,247 and got out of the United States Treasury on the other hand $514,775,378. As a matter of good housekeeping, how long can we stand this?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McGRANERY. No; I am sorry. I realize what this means to the South. I realize what it means to the entire country, but my only point is that when these men who sit here on this very committee are the ones who blocked the payment of relief to the people of the North who are destitute, then how, in fairness, and injustice can we stand here and vote for something that will protect those engaged in agriculture at the expense, if you please, of relief to the industrial area. Both these people need aid. It is the responsibility of the Democratic majority to see they get it and not by sacrificing any one for the other. Our program cannot succeed on any halfway measure, and sectionalism or logrolling has no place here.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I represent an industrial city. I sympathize with the two gentlemen from Pennsylvania, the New Deal leaders, who have been trying to make a deal with the southern Members on legislative matters. I appreciate the unemployment in their districts, which, no doubt, causes them to want to know how their southern colleagues expect to vote on W. P. A. appropriations.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I think if the gentleman sympathizes with us he should have shown it in his vote on the last W. P. A. bill. His crocodile tears right now do not help our cause in any manner.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Oh, I do not apologize for any of my votes. The Record will show that I voted for adequate W. P. A. appropriations—appropriations which would permit the employment of many thousand additional W. P. A. workers, if properly expended.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that if the complaining gentlemen who represent industrial districts in Pennsylvania, where many factories are closed or running part time, would stop "rubber stamping" the international New Deal reciprocal tariff policies of Secretary of State Hull and his tribe, they would be rendering a great service to their districts. I understand that Pennsylvania bituminous coal mines are right outside the back door of the districts which the gentlemen represent. Instead of casting their votes in favor of appropriating many millions of dollars from the Federal taxpayers' Treasury, to subsidize the Government in the electric business in the Tennessee Valley and elsewhere, they would better serve the unemployed Pennsylvania coal miners and others unemployed in their districts by registering their voice and votes in opposition thereto. [Applause.]

I want to make a sincere suggestion to my friends from the South. Yesterday we heard about the deplorable situation in the cotton States. The statistics with reference to the reduction in the exports of southern cotton since the advent of this so-called New Deal are startling. Brazil and other South American countries have taken a great share of our export cotton market. Notwithstanding this fact, we find nearly all of our southern New Deal politicians and statesmen supporting the Export-Import Bank and the international policies of Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who are building a pipe line from the Federal Treasury down to Brazil and other South American countries. They have agreed to hand Brazil more than a hundred million dollars of our American taxpayers' dollars. These huge hand-outs will certainly enable Brazil and other cotton-producing South American countries to take over the balance of our American export cotton market. They will also enable them to invade our cotton market in America.

It will not be long before the southern Members of Congress and the Senate will be demanding a high protective tariff on cotton.

I have received hundreds of letters from cotton-producing sections of the country asking me what was the matter with their New Deal "rubber stamp" Congressmen; asking if they did not realize that Brazil and the South American countries were stealing the American cotton-export markets under the New Deal agricultural and foreign policies.

The gentlemen from Pennsylvania have good cause for complaint. I realize these New Deal gentlemen from the State of Pennsylvania, a great tax-paying State which will have to pay a great share of the expenditures from the Public Treasury, are no doubt getting the heat turned on them from back home. We realize that every dollar that is expended by the Federal Government must be produced in tax dollars, earned by the sweat and toil of someone sometime, this year or next year, this generation or the next generation. We also realize that the State of Pennsylvania pays into the Federal Treasury about as much in Federal taxes as some seven or eight Southern States combined. Therefore, for all the raids on the Federal Treasury which the New Deal Democrats from Pennsylvania support in order to take political pork back home to the State of Pennsylvania, the taxpayers of their districts and their State sometime this year or next year, this generation or the next generation, will have to pay back four or five dollars for every dollar's worth of New Deal political "pork" which they receive from the Federal Treasury. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Total, salaries and expenses, Bureau of Plant Industry, $5,083,760, of which amount not to exceed $1,736,620 may be expended for departmental personal services in the District of Columbia and not to exceed $24,575 shall be available for the purchase of motor-propelled and horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles necessary in the conduct of field work outside the District of Columbia.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, since I am from the South and happen to be one of the southern Members of Congress who voted with the committee and against the appropriation of $150,000,000 requested by the administration for the Works Progress Aministration, I want to further discuss some of the figures contained in the statement from which the gentleman from Pennsylvania was quoting at the time he declined to yield to me a few moments ago.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania states that he would like to vote for parity payments to farmers, but will experience difficulty in explaining to his constituents in the city of Philadelphia why he voted for parity payments to farmers when Members from agricultural districts voted against further appropriations for Works Progress Administration. The gentleman pointed out that certain agricultural States had received from the Federal Treasury during the period of 1934 to 1938 benefits far in excess of the amount of internal revenue collected by the Federal Government in those States. I would like to call the gentleman's attention to the situation with regard to North Carolina and ask him to take into consideration the position in which the members of the North Carolina delegation in Congress are placed if we are to be entirely guided by the record to which he refers. The gentleman has been kind enough to permit me to use the record to which he addressed his remarks. This record which I hold in my hand shows that during the period 1934 to 1938 my State, an agricultural State, paid into the Federal Treasury the stupendous sum of $1,464,909,552, and only received from the Federal Treasury the sum of $459,098,753.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Cigarette tax.

Mr. COOLEY. You may call it cigarette tax if you want to but I am quoting from the record furnished to me by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, from which he was likewise quoting. You may just as well say that the tax paid by the State of Michigan into the Federal Treasury is automobile tax or tax on other manufactured products. We in North Carolina pay very high taxes on the automobiles we buy, the Frigidaires and the thousand and one other manufactured articles which we purchase which are manufactured in other States in the Union.

Further looking at the record we find that the State of Pennsylvania in the period 1934–38 paid into the Federal Treasury the sum of $1,613,793,940 and received in benefits from the Federal Government $1,773,661,353, or to put it another way and to emphasize the point again, North Carolina paid in excess of a billion dollars more than it received, while Pennsylvania received in round numbers in excess of $160,000,000 more than it paid into the Federal Treasury.

It is interesting to note that the State of Illinois received benefits far in excess of internal revenue collected by the Federal Government in that State. The same thing is true with Michigan, Ohio, Massachusetts, and many other wealthy States of the American Union.

I frankly take the position that in asking for parity payments for farmers we are only asking for equality and justice. We are only asking for that which every friend of the farmer on both sides of this aisle has time and again promised to give to the farmer.

We hear great complaint about the $250,000,000 contained in this bill for parity payments. We are told that it is in excess of the recommendations of the Budget. An effort is made to create the erroneous impression that the $250,000,000 carried in this bill is $250,000,000 in excess of appropriations made for parity payments last year. The truth is last year the sum of $212,000,000 was authorized for parity payments. This year the committee has increased this amount to $250,000,000 or an actual increase over last year of an additional $38,000,000. I do not believe that we should hesitate to increase the $250,000,000 carried in this bill to $500,000,000 and even then we would not be able to pay or to assure our farmers parity prices which would put them on equality with industry. [Applause.]

At the proper time an amendment will be offered to increase the $250,000,000 provided for parity payments to $500,000,000, and we will then have an oportunity to see just where the farmers' friends are in this House. I hope that the Members from the agricultural sections will be courageous enough for once to vote for a sum which will enable us to at least approach parity payments about which we have talked so much. We have approved the principle of parity payments in former acts of Congress and we find in the report of the committee this language: "The failure of the President to include this item in the Budget"-referring to the provision for parity payments—"is not believed to reflect the Executive disapproval of the item itself." We find this further language in the committee report: "The committee believes its duty is clear to provide in this bill the funds necessary for a continuation of that policy." The report, of course, is referring to the policy of parity payments. In the report the committee recognizes that a further reduction in benefit payments to our farmers would be a blow to the agricultural recovery which is deemed to be essential to the complete restoration of our national economy as a whole. I assume that we are to understand from this report that the President does not disapprove parity payments. The fact remains, however, that every time we ask for money for agriculture we are told that we must raise the revenue. How can we raise the revenue with which to pay parity payments until we first fix the amount of the parity payments or the amount Congress wants to make available for this purpose? If the money is appropriated I do not believe that the President will veto the bill, nor do I believe that the proper committees of Congress will fail to comply with the President's wishes with regard to raising the necessary funds. The time has come for us to stop talking about parity and do something about it, and I hope that when the amendment increasing the amount to $500,000,000 is introduced it will be adopted.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the proforma amendment.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. McLEAN. I understood that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto had closed.

The CHAIRMAN. That was to the preceding paragraph. Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman reserving the right to object I do not want to talk on the Forest Service item of the bill, but I do want 5 minutes.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I am very anxious to cooperate with the gentleman but we are discussing matters wholly foreign to the pending bill and I hope we can conclude debate on this subject when the gentleman has concluded his remarks. We have been generous in allowing extraneous debate and I trust this late in the afternoon it will not be prolonged on matters which are not directly related to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I happen to be a member of the Committee on Agriculture. There is some agriculture in my district still in its infancy, but there is a great deal of lumbering and mining. I am, therefore, interested in both labor and agriculture. I have for better than 4 years listened to the arguments and to the presentations before the Committee on Agriculture on the question of parity. I have voted right down the line for every single, solitary thing that I thought would bring parity to the farmer. The programs that have been submitted and propositions that have been discussed have at no time definitely assured parity to the farmer. Those who now present this $250,000,000 addition to the agricultural appropriation do not even now definitely promise that they are going to bring parity to the farmer. Why fool ourselves? Why not be honest and approach this problem from a sane point of view?

The only way to bring parity to the farmer is to bring industry and labor out of the dumps. We must present a program that will put the 9,000,000 unemployed in this country to work not at relief wages, not at W. P. A. wages, but at honest-to-goodness living wages in industry and agriculture, wages sufficient to provide an honest living, so they cannot only buy the farmer's produce and pay him parity but also to be able to enjoy some of the luxuries of life. How can this be done? It can be done if all industry will work together in cooperation with the Government and set a base period which will determine the number of unemployed in reasonably healthy times. The Government to pay 40 cents on every dollar paid in wages to all new employment. In other words, if an employer will agree to hire additional men at regular wages the Government will pay 40 percent of those wages. This will put men to work in addition to those who are now on the pay rolls, and subsidize them so that we can give them a living wage. When this is done and if the plan that I will shortly submit to this House is put into effect, I will guarantee that within 3 months we will put 9,000,000 additional men and women back on the pay rolls, not the pay rolls of W. P. A. or P. W. A., but the pay rolls of industry and agriculture and auxiliary employment so that they will be able to look their neighbors in the face and at least feel that they are decently and honestly working for the dollar they receive. So that they will be able to feed and clothe their families in decency comparable with the standard of living that should exist in a democracy.

When this is done you will find that agricultural commodities will be consumed by a buying public of men and women paid by employees in agriculture and industry. This subsidy would not continue forever. It could be tried for 3 years, and I will guarantee you, you will wipe off the books of this Nation W. P. A., P. W. A., and all relief programs and give to the men and women of this Nation the right to live in decency as they are entitled to under a democracy.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOOK. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that in October 1935 the Ford and Chevrolet agencies in the little town of Greenville, N. C., which is a rural to-bacco town, led the Ford agencies and the Chevrolet agencies of the world in the sale of Ford and Chevrolet cars; and it was due solely to the fact that the income of the tobacco farmer had been greatly increased under the present administration's program. [Applause.]

Mr. HOOK. That is correct, but let me say, however, that no one industry by itself can solve the problem of unemployment. All industry must work together to put these 9,000,000 men back on the pay roll. I hope you men and women of this House will consider favorably the plan I will submit and explain more fully within a very short time to this House. It may be found in bill 833, introduced by me in this session of Congress.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

Mr. Chairman, although I have been privileged to speak once on the pending bill, I would not deem that I had performed my full duty for the people whom I represent if I did not rise at this time to ask a simple question of these gentlemen who have come up here one at a time from the Democratic side and professed their love, their loyalty, and their interest in the welfare of the farmer. What farmer are you referring to, please, when you refer to the farmer? Have you forgotten that the farmer of Michigan, the farmer of Wisconsin, the farmer of Minnesota, the farmer of these great dairy-producing States of this Union are still farmers? Have you forgotten in your rush and desire to aid the farmers of the South that according to available statistics for the year 1937 milk stood at the top of the list, having a value of $1,459,000,000?

You have forgotten the fact that we have in this country milk farmers, farmers whose principal and only crop is milk, producing the highest cash crop of any other produced by the farmers. I note that you have succeeded in establishing rice as one of the basic commodities entitled to parity payments. Rice produced a crop worth only $35,000,000. Tobacco produced $318,000,000. Cotton produced only $784,000,000. You put those crops and the farmers who produce those crops into your parity program, but you have completely forgotten the farmers whom I represent in my State, the farmers who produce the things that feed you and feed the people in your district in connection with the production of milk and dairy products.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEEFE. I yield to the gentleman from North Caro-

Mr. COOLEY. Has the gentleman introduced any bill during this session of the Congress for the relief of the dairy farmer?

Mr. KEEFE. I have not introduced a bill for the relief of the dairy farmer, but let me say to the gentleman that we have representation on the Committee on Agriculture, and these gentlemen have been struggling since this session started to get recognition for the dairy farmer. Bills have been introduced in this Congress since the Democrats have been in control to give them parity with these other crops. They have utterly failed and have been voted down.

Mr. Chairman, I want to address myself to one other thing. I notice in the pending bill a paragraph which proposes to appropriate $322,500 for sugar plant investigation, including the study of diseases of sugar beets, sugarcane, and sugar-beet seed. The gentleman from Montana yesterday very correctly interpreted the wish and will of the farmers of Montana when he told you that the present agricultural program is absolutely going to destroy the beet-sugar industry in this country. He told me privately that the reciprocal-trade agreements that have been entered into have nearly destroyed the beet-sugar industry of the State of Montana. I asked the gentleman privately after his speech whether he is in favor of reciprocal-trade agreements or opposed to them. He said I could quote him as saying that he was viciously opposed to these reciprocal-trade agreements. Gentlemen from Louisiana and from Florida on that side of the House told me the same thing privately. I ask those gentlemen, "Why do they not get up here and vote when the time comes to abandon this reciprocal trade agreement policy?"

I have received letter after letter from the State of Florida, as many of you have, protesting against the effect of the reciprocal-trade agreements and the allotment program of the Secretary of Agriculture and its proposed effect upon the sugarcane industry. I want to know, are you going to appropriate money to study sugarcane when you are stopping the farmers in Louisiana and Florida from raising it?

[Here the gavel fell.]

The Clerk read as follows:

General administrative expenses: For necessary expenses for general administrative purposes, including the salary of the Chief Forester, for the necessary expenses of the National Forest Reservation Commission as authorized by section 14 of the act of March 1, 1911 (16 U. S. C. 514), and for other personal services in the District of Columbia, $607,500.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state the point of Mr. TABER. A motion to strike out the last word is not an amendment under the rules. I think we have gone far enough on this.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a pro forma amendment. The gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR] is recognized for

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Montana yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Montana is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Keefe] quoted me absolutely correct with reference to the Canadian treaty and the treaty affecting the sugar-beet industry of this country. Our best cash crop in 1933 was in the neighborhood of a half million dollars higher than in 1936, the decrease being the result of the shrinkage of the production of sugar beets in the State of

May I say to the Members of the House that upon the first opportunity I get I will vote to take away from any one man the power to enter into trade agreements [applausel without their being ratified by the United States Senate, in accordance with the Constitution. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I want to speak a moment upon a part of the bill now under consideration by the Committee, and that is the so-called subsidy feature. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that I was one of the Members who voted for the Cannon amendment to increase the appropriation for the W. P. A. to $875,000,000, the amount the President of the United States and Colonel Harrington said was necessary to feed the people of this country. I speak, therefore, from that angle. And I may say that I will again vote for the $150,000,000 when the matter comes before the House, if the President of the United States says it is necessary, because I feel that he and Colonel Harrington know more about what is necessary than I. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, we need not go further in asking support for the $250,000,000 provided in this bill than to refer to the testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture given before the Senate committee with reference to the cost-of-production bill, in which he said that if the cost-of-production bill was passed it would cost the American consumers $1,000,-000,000 annually. Mr. Chairman, if that statement is true, the corollary of the statement is true, that is, the billion dollars represents the loss that the American farmers are sustaining as a result of the present system. It is the only reasonable deduction you can draw from that statement. The farmers of this country are doing business on the basis of a loss of $1,000,000,000 a year, and it is time to put a stop to it. I think the amount carried in the bill to provide parity prices will go a long way toward solving the problem. This amount should not be termed a subsidy. It is in reality a restitution.

I also wish to call your attention to the fact that the Democratic Party in its national platform in the year 1932 made a commitment to the American farmer. What was that This plank in the Democratic platform commitment? stated:

The enactment of every constitutional measure that will aid the farmers to receive for their basic farm commodities prices in excess

This commitment the Democratic Party made to the people of this country in the year 1932, and it has not been kept. The only bill that has been offered that in my opinion will ever cause it to be strictly kept is the cost-of-production bill now pending in the House.

I do not believe that if the Members of the House thoroughly understood the question before them there is a man or a woman here who would want to eat a loaf of bread made from a bushel of wheat that year after year had been produced at a loss, and that is what we are doing. The farmer is an orphan in the economic picture. Every other industry and labor are protected. The farmer has been producing at a loss ever since he began. Are we going to continue this policy or are we going to place him on a basis of equality with other industries in this country, and that is what this bill attempts

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. Does not the gentleman believe we should attempt to pay actual parity payments as far as we can?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes; I heartily agree with that. I also wish to say that I want to see the poor fellow on W. P. A. paid enough so that he can get along. I will vote for such appropriations as long as there is a hungry man, woman, or child in this country. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I regret exceedingly that politics has been brought into the consideration of this bill. I wish to say to the gentlemen from Montana, Michigan, and Colorado and the Representatives of other beet-growing States, who inadvisedly charge that the sugar-beet industry and agriculture in general has been affected by the reciprocal-trade agreements, that they are, unfortunately, misled by the Republican press, which at all times is giving the country misinformation and finding fault with any legislation that is beneficial to the Nation. I know if they took the time to post themselves they would learn that we are today producing many times more sugar beets than we did 30, 20, or even 10 years ago under any Republican administration.

Mr. Chairman, it is also unfortunate that the three newly elected reactionary Republicans from the State of Wisconsin for political reasons make the charge that this administration has ignored the farmers and has done nothing for the dairy industry. The fact is that this bill alone appropriates for the Bureau of Animal Industry the sum of $15,493,312 and $717,405 for the Bureau of Dairy Industry, a total of $16,-210,717. This appropriation for the two bureaus is nearly twice as much as Congress appropriated under the Republican administrations in 1908 and 1909 for the entire Department of Agriculture. Therefore, this talk on the floor is only another Republican effort to mislead the people at home, because the figures which I have quoted speak for themselves. As it will no doubt be of interest to the Members and to the country. I insert at this point the total amount of the appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the years 1908 and 1909. The appropriation for the year 1908, when Theodore Roosevelt was President, was $11,672,000, and for 1909, when Taft was President, the appropriation was $12,995,000.

Mr. KELLER. Billions, the gentleman means.
Mr. SABATH. Millions, I said. I meant not billions but millions. I repeat that the appropriation was only $12,995,-000 for the year 1909 for the Department of Agriculture, which includes all of its bureaus and divisions.

The bill we are now considering, including the two hundred and fifty million not recommended by the Bureau of the Budget, calls for an appropriation of $1,150,000,000—nearly 100 times as much as that appropriated for agriculture for the fiscal year 1908, 30 years ago. So, within 30 short years under this administration today we have increased the aid to the farmers one hundredfold. I am not going to claim that I brought about this great increase in appropriations for the farmers just because I have been their friend. No; but it is the Democratic administration which has demonstrated its friendship to the farmers; and I regret very much that these three Wisconsin milking men or milkmen have the nerve to claim that nothing has been done for the farmers or for the dairy industry, when I have shown we are appropriating for the dairy industry more this year than we appropriated for agriculture in general 30 years ago.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a correction?

Mr. SABATH. No; I cannot yield.

Mr. KEEFE. The gentleman would like to be corrected, would he not.

Mr. SABATH. No; the gentleman cannot correct me because my statements are correct. Further, I regret I have not the time, and therefore please take your seat for a minute, as I want to pay my compliments to other gentlemen. I do not blame you Wisconsin Republicans trying to make political capital out of this in the hope that it might help you to come back from Wisconsin. You cannot do it. You fooled the people last year, but you cannot fool them again. They are commencing to realize that they were misled.

Now, Mr. Chairman, where are the Republicans and those of the so-called economy bloc who continuously criticize the President for the spending of money. Here is your opportunity-but, no; you have not offered a single amendment to reduce the appropriations, but on the contrary have offered amendments to increase the tremendous appropriations called for in this bill. I have waited here for 2 hours to see whether the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] and the gentlemen from Georgia, Virginia, Texas, Kansas, and other States would rise and oppose some of the increases in appropriations but not a word have I heard from them; not a word. They are not ready to vote for appropriations that are not asked by the Bureau of the Budget but they are willing to increase them. Where is the consistency in that, I ask you, and I am going to ask it in the future. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

You know the two words I should like to strike out-

I should like to explain to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] why it has been necessary for him to make these appropriations for agriculture.

Mr. SABATH. To help agriculture, to help the farmers. that is the reason, because the Democratic Party is a friend of the farmer.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. I do not like to give a man too much time.

In reviewing the RECORD of yesterday's debate Y observed with high approbation a disposition expressed by those of you who participated in the debate to consider the farm problem from a nonpartisan point of view. I noticed, however, that you failed to recognize a vital element of the agriculture problem. It lies in the fact that our farmers, in the North and in the South, pay a heavier proportion of our taxes than other groups. [Applause.] Thirty percent of all people in the United States live on farms. They have always been unfairly taxed in proportion to other people. Consider the farmer's disadvantage in this respect. In the States of each and every one of you, due to the way your laws are written, you have heavy real- and personal-property taxes. A city man can conceal some of his property, his cash, and his securities, and often he does. The tax studies in our library prove that millions every year are so concealed in large cities. But the farmer cannot hide his property, his grain, his livestock, his cattle. They are all out where the assessor can see them.

As you know, almost every farmer in the United States has on his farm today a mortgage. If, due to decrease in price of land, he owes more on the mortgage than his land is worth, if he has no equity whatever in his land, he yet pays taxes on the full appraised value of that land.

Anybody who has anything to sell, except the farmer, can pass on a part of his taxes to other people—to the people who buy. The farmer, however, cannot pass on his taxes or any part of them to other people because his prices are fixed far away, in a city market, in competition with farm products shipped in from other countries where the taxes and the cost of production are lower than his.

You have alluded to subsidies—subsidies to the farmer! Why do you not call them what they are? Subsidies? What you are giving the farmers is not a "subsidy" but a "substitute" for justice. [Applause.]

Recently you have been sending back little checks to the farmer. They do not pay even the 20 percent in indirect taxes that the farmer now pays on every article he buys. Subsidies? What you are paying—you here in this Congress, we here in this Congress—is damages. Damages for running up the cost of government increasingly as we approach national bankruptcy. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going to attempt to answer in any way the impassioned, eloquent, and appealing address of the gentlewoman from Illinois [Miss Sumner] who preceded me. I am not even going to try to give you the benefit of any of my campaign efforts on the stump last fall that I might have used in order to come here. I do want to talk to you just briefly upon the matter now under discussion, which is the Forest Service.

I want to say by way of preface as a member of this subcommittee, there are six of us, four on the Democratic side and two on the Republican side. We brought to bear the best we had on these complex and difficult problems that presented themselves. We present to you nearly 2,000 pages of written record. We heard scores of witnesses and we sat, as it were, in judgment for some 7 weeks on the many and varied requests for money. I have the highest regard for the sincerity, the ability, and the integrity of my colleagues on this subcommittee, but we did not always agree.

I did not agree in reference to the treatment accorded forestry. I felt we were parsimonious, to say the least, with this great governmental undertaking that certainly has no sectional and no partisan complexion. I doubt if any bureau in the United States is more important to the national welfare in a material way. Yet it seems to me we are trying to starve it to death.

The United States Forest Service is now operating in 42 States of the 48. They now have under their jurisdiction and control the responsibility of caring for almost 200,000,000 acres of land. I am giving round numbers. There are in all about 2,000,000,000 acres of land in continental United States. Almost 10 percent of it is public forest. The demands upon this great Bureau are growing instead of declining. In my own State their position is quite secure.

We give to forestry this year, for management and operation, a little over $11,000,000, or just a little over 5 cents per acre. They turn in in receipts from timber sold and from grazing receipts and other matters of that type, which the law provides for, in the neighborhood of $5,000,000, and it is a new and a young agency. In less than a generation they will be producing revenue in excess of costs of operation and insuring for all time an adequate timber supply. The place they occupy in flood control, the place they occupy in recreational life, and the place they occupy in caring for our primary national resources—timber—makes it important that we all look upon this not as a sectional matter, that we at least give them enough money to function efficiently. Trees are a crop, and it requires from 30 years to several centuries to produce one harvest; yet without forests this Nation cannot

This Congress a year ago said that the Forest Service, by reason of having virtually 10 percent of the lands of the continental United States, most of which is the most rugged in this whole Nation, should have $14,000,000 a year for the construction of roads and trails and for the purpose of opening ways to preserve a national asset worth hundreds of millions of dollars-yes, even billions of dollars. We allowed that in the appropriation bill of a year ago. This year the Budget cut them to $12,000,000, and our committee, over the vigorous protest of several members, saw fit to cut them to $10,000,000. Not finding fault necessarily with my colleagues, but for the purpose of showing you the effect this cut will have, I desire to make a part of my remarks and a part of the RECORD the figures for the 42 States where the Forest Service is operating, which show how this is going to affect them in the next year.

Apportionment of forest road funds

State	1939	1940, if cut to 10,000,000
Alabama	$69,945	$119,963
Alaska	380, 260	421, 614
Arizona	745, 048	517, 560
Arkansas	167, 175	122, 202
California	2, 078, 995	1, 487, 382
Colorado	885, 276	627, 360
Florida	109, 239	61, 393
Georgia	74, 103	42, 376
Idaho	1, 624, 996	1, 179, 837
Illinois	48, 510	30, 529
Indiana	14, 415	9, 225
Iowa	77	31
Kentucky	84, 125	48, 124
Louisiana	43, 536	21, 203
Maine	9, 405	4, 886
Michigan	224, 495	127, 852

Apportionment of forest road funds-Continued

State	1939	1940, if cut to 10,000,000
Minnesota.	$166, 821	$121, 608
Mississippi	115, 546	60, 292
Missouri	128, 149	74, 606
Montana	1, 234, 099	858, 677
Nebraska	18, 625	21, 949
Nevada.	233, 295	162, 911
New Hampshire	108, 664	99, 822
New Mexico	516, 340	383, 349
North Carolina	142, 931	75, 811
North Dakota	169	104
Ohio	7,007	3, 929
Oklahoma	13, 273	58, 673
Oregon	1, 822, 646	1, 274, 587
Pennsylvania	68, 716	35, 242
Puerto Rico	9, 487	5,767
South Carolina	95, 383	51, 591
South Dakota	148, 125	67,509
Tennessee	72, 917	40,690
Texas	90, 247	50,544
Utah	469, 023	335, 497
Vermont	35, 154	17,753
Virginia	173, 598	92, 295
Washington	969, 500	696, 496
West Virginia	120, 849	114, 558
Wisconsin	128, 566	71, 554
Wyoming	551, 270	402, 649
Total	14,000,000	10,000,000

We made other cuts in land acquisitions vitally affecting Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, New York, North and South Carolina, Virginia, and at least 20 other States. Congressmen appeared and urged that we allow the Forest Service to expand at least in a reasonable manner. There is authorization for $10,000,000 per annum for forest acquisition. We compelled them to take over one-half million acres last year and still reduce their allowance. I was in favor of being more liberal than we were.

We have made some reductions in the matter of forest stations throughout the United States that do experimental work in range preservation that vitally affect great regions. A great agency being financially starved. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

National-forest protection and management: For the administration, protection, use, maintenance, improvement, and development of the national forests, including the establishment and maintenance of forest-tree nurseries, including the procurement of tree seed and nursery stock by purchase, production, or otherwise, seeding and tree planting and the care of plantations and young growth; the maintenance and operation of aerial fire control by contract or otherwise; the maintenance of roads and trails and the construction and maintenance of all other improvements necessary for the proper and economical administration, protection, development, and use of the national forests, including experimental forests: Provided, That where, in the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture, direct purchases will be more economical than construction, improvements may be purchased; the construction, equipment, and maintenance of sanitary, fire preventive, and recreational facilities; control of destructive forest-tree diseases and insects; timber cultural operations; development and application of fish and game management plans; propagation and transplanting of plants suitable for planting on semiarid portions of the national forests; estimating and appraising of timber and other resources and development and application of plans for their effective management, sale, and use; examination, classification, surveying, and appraisal of land incident to effecting exchanges authorized by law and of lands within the boundaries of the national forests that may be opened to homestead settlement and entry under the act of June 11, 1906, and the act of August 10, 1912 (16 U. S. C. 506-509), as provided by the act of March 4, 1913 (16 U. S. C. 512); and all expenses necessary for the use, maintenance, improvement, protection, and general administration of the national forests, including lands under contract for purchase or for the acquisition of which condemnation proceedings have been instituted under the act of March 1, 1911 (16 U. S. C. 521

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I do this to make a brief statement and ask the chairman of the committee a question. At the time of the hearings on this bill I understand the Forest Service asked for $500,000 for logging purposes. Following that announcement, private timber operators in my district protested against the United States Forest Service competing with timber operators by operating sawmills and engaging in the timber industry. I have checked up this afternoon and have been advised that the $500,000 item for logging operations for the United States Forest Service has been disallowed and is not in the bill. I rise to ask the chairman of the committee if I am correct in my interpretation, namely, that there is no such appropriation and that the bill does not authorize the United States Forest Service to construct or operate sawmills or engage in logging operations.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is correct. This request proposes to launch the Government on an entirely new enterprise. It provides for an activity in which the Government has never engaged. It would bring the Government into competition with private industry and has met with such general protest throughout the section of the country involved that the committee declined to include the item in the bill.

Mr. PITTENGER. Then there is no such provision in the bill?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. There is no provision in the bill for that purpose.

The Clerk read as follows:

Forest economics: Investigations in forest economics under section 10, $121,295.

Mr. FLANNERY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Flannery: Page 45, line 7, strike out "$121,295" and insert "$139,295."

Mr. FLANNERY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment asks for $18,000 for a survey of present and future forest employment opportunities in northeastern Pennsylvania. So that the gentlemen may know the background, this has reference to the Wyoming and Lackawanna Valleys and the Pocono Mountain area. You probably are familiar with the fact that there are millions of population and that there is over a billion dollars in the anthracite industry. That industry has been declining to a disastrous condition, as I believe the Committee is aware. It is practically bankrupt, and relief has been poured into the area. Conditions are going from bad to worse, and because of the inroads of competitive fuel oil, coke, gas, and soft coal, there has been a diminishing demand for anthracite until our conditions are desperate. In that area we have forest facilities, although they are practically denuded by fires and by foresting. We have soil erosion, we have floods, and necessity for flood control. There are reasons, therefore, why this survey is important and necessary. It is necessary not only for the region, but as the regions problems affect the entire Nation. We have resources, ample resources, but they must be intelligently used for new employment and diverted into new activities. Here is such a use. Here is such an activity. Many of you gentlemen object to the great relief load in that area. We are asking you for something that is corrective. We are asking you to let us stop treating the effect and eliminate some of the causes. We are not asking you for a program, we are asking for a survey so that you may decide on the necessity for a program and its scope. All we ask for that is $18,000 for an area into which millions and millions have been poured in relief. We are asking you gentlemen to give us a chance to help ourselves. That is all-nothing more-$18,000.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLANNERY. Yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Are the forests to which the gentleman has referred national forests?

Mr. FLANNERY. In part. The Allegheny Forest Service has its activities in that area and wants to make this survey, but appropriations will not permit. Eighteen thousand dollars will allow an intelligent survey and advise us of a constructive program that will exploit the resources there, restore the forests, aid flood control, and reduce unemployment now existing in the anthracite region, and give some of these people an opportunity to live on their own. That is all we are asking.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this amendment proposes to expend public funds on private property. It has not been considered, so far as I know, by either the Department or the committee. Apparently it is unwarranted, or should at least have more detailed consideration.

Mr. FLANNERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Certainly.

Mr. FLANNERY. I may say that has been taken up with the Department and presented and argued thoroughly before the committee. These points have been raised and answered. But let me point out again that this contemplates only a survey. The Department itself is ready and willing and anxious to undertake the work; and as for its being a new activity, the gentleman is asking for $500,000 for logging, a new activity, while I ask for an insignificant $18,000 for the partial rehabilitation of an impoverished area.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. If it was submitted to the Department of Agriculture, the Department apparently did not consider the circumstances sufficient to warrant its reference to the committee at this time. I fully appreciate the force of the gentleman's presentation and trust we will be in position to take it up at a later time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Flannery]. The amendment was rejected.

FOREST-FIRE COOPERATION

For cooperation with the various States or other appropriate agencies in forest-fire prevention and suppression and the protection of timbered and cut-over lands in accordance with the provisions of sections 1, 2, and 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the protection of forest lands, for the reforestation of denuded areas, for the extension of national forests, and for other purposes, in order to promote continuous production of timber on lands chiefly valuable therefor," approved June 7, 1924 (16 U. S. C. 564-570), as amended, including also the study of the effect of tax laws and the investigation of timber insurance as provided in section 3 of said act, $2,000,000, of which not to exceed $50,000 shall be available for departmental personal services in the District of Columbia and not to exceed $2,500 for the purchase of supplies and equipment required for the purposes of said act in the District of Columbia.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rose simply to call the attention of the membership of this House to the fact that when they voted the other day to appropriate $5,000,000 to remove the fire hazard that developed in the forests of New England and a part of New York as a result of the hurricane, we did not establish a precedent.

My distinguished friend from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]. when the matter was originally acted upon in the House, and when I offered the amendment, laid stress upon the fact that this was the first time in the history of the country that the Congress had made such an appropriation. At that time I could not controvert his statement or take issue with it. The bill went to the Senate and the Senate increased the amount to $5,000,000, as recommended by the Bureau of the Budget. Meantime I had ascertained information which showed me that my distinguished friend from Virginia had an erroneous impression. When the matter came up in the House I called it to the attention of the House, and the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum] still advanced the argument that the appropriation constituted a precedent. I may disagree with the gentleman from Virginia, but he is never wrong, in my mind. That is the high regard I have for him. Nevertheless, I feel that the record should be made clear.

I am glad to see this appropriation today. I want to compliment the committee. If the circumstances require a larger appropriation, the committee should make it. Anything that tends to the conservation of our natural resources for the present and future generations is something that is constructive and something that I will always support.

However, simply for the purpose of showing that New England received no special consideration when the $5,000,000 was appropriated, and to show that no precedent was established, I call attention to the organic law which permits this appropriation to be made. It reads as follows:

If the Secretary of Agriculture shall find that the system and practice of forest-fire protection and suppression provided by any State substantially promotes the objects of this act in section 564 of this title, he is hereby authorized and directed under such conditions as he may determine to be fair and equitable in each State, to cooperate with the proper officials of each State and, through them, with private and other agencies therein.

Simply in defense of the great section of New England in which I am proud to live and represent, I want to have the record clear that when we appropriated $5,000,000 recently the Congress was not establishing a precedent for the benefit of New England. In this bill we are carrying an appropriation which is fair, which is proper. This appropriation is the result of law passed in the early 1920's. The fundamental principle involved in this appropriation is identically the same as the principle upon which we acted several days ago in appropriating $5,000,000 to meet the disastrous results of the hurricane visited upon New England. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the acquisition of land to facilitate the control of soil erosion and flood damage originating within the exterior boundaries of the following national forests, in accordance with the provisions of the following acts authorizing annual appropriations of forest receipts for such purposes, and in not to exceed the following amounts from such receipts: Uinta and Wasatch National Forests, Utah, act of August 26, 1935 (49 Stat. 866), $40,000; Cache National Forest, Utah, act of May 11, 1938 (52 Stat. 347), $6,000; San Bernardino and Cleveland National Forests in Riverside County, Calif., act of June 15, 1938 (52 Stat. 699), $15,000; Nevada and Toiyabe National Forests, Nev., act of June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1205), $10,000; in all, $71,000.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time for the purpose of having the Record show the reasons which actuated the committee in inserting in this bill for the first time, in the item relating to the acquisition of lands for national forests, the words "under sound commercial title."

It was brought to the attention of the committee by the Forest Service that in the acquisition of forest lands throughout the country the title to which has to be approved by the Department of Justice, the Department of Justice has been more meticulous in the examination and approval of titles than is ordinarily true in the examination and acceptance of titles in commercial relationships within the States where the lands are being acquired.

In other words, the Department of Justice has been requiring perfect title as to those lands, which ordinarily sell for $3 or $4 an acre, or some approximate sum. Oftentimes it is necessary for those who have sold the lands to wait for as long as 2 years in order to have the title perfected to the satisfaction of the Department of Justice, by condemnation proceedings, when the titles would have been acceptable to any ordinary purchaser in due course of business, acquiring those lands privately in the States where they are located.

It is the purpose of the committee, in inserting this language, to indicate to the Department of Justice the intent of Congress that the Department, in passing upon titles to these cheap forest lands, shall accept sound commercial titles—titles which would be regarded as sufficient in the ordinary course of business in the States where the lands are located—and thus save to the Government itself hundreds of thousands of dollars annually which are spent in defraying the expense, not only of examination of titles but of condemnation proceedings, which have heretofore been deemed necessary in order to perfect titles.

We hope that that practice on the part of the Department may hereafter be discontinued with a saving to the Government and with expedition in the work of the Forest Service in the acquisition of these lands.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I appeared before the subcommittee in charge of this appropriation to urge that provision be made for the management of hardwoods in bottom lands. There are 12 forest stations in the United States, and wherever there are softwoods and hardwoods the appropriation for management is divided substantially in proportion to the areas of the different types of wood; for instance, in the northeastern region of the country, New England, the hardwoods cover substantially 50 percent of the total area, and the funds of the New England station at New Haven are divided between the softwoods and the hardwoods.

There are approximately 600,000,000 acres of forests in the United States. One-third of this entire area, or 200,000,000 acres, is located in the lower Mississippi Valley and in the region extending from Texas to South Carolina and along the rivers that flow into the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean.

There is no provision in this, nor has there been in previous appropriations bills since 1933, for the management of hardwoods in bottom lands. These lands constitute substantially 50,000,000 acres, or one-quarter of the entire 200,000,000 acres of forest lands in the southern region of cur country. Of the 12 stations in the United States, only 1 is located in this area, and this one at New Orleans.

I thought provision should be made for the management of hardwoods in lowlands, and I urged the committee to make an increase in the appropriation applicable to the New Orleans station. I realize the difficulty the committee is confronted with, and while a modest appropriation has been made by the committee, I do submit that the large interests involved and the fact that at every other station where there are substantial growths of both hardwoods and softwoods, provision is made for investigation of both; in the future and in the near future, I hope, additional and more substantial provision will be made. I can see the justice of making provision for hardwoods in lowlands at the New Orleans station when similar provision is being made in the other stations of the country where there are upland hardwoods.

It must be kept in mind that there are no hardwoods in bottom lands except in the southern region of the United States, there being none in the Southwest, the Northwest, or any other section of the country except the lower Mississippi Valley and the region adjoining the Gulf and the southeastern portion of the United States along the Atlantic Ocean. This is an important matter. The income of the farmer from his wood lot should supplement his income from cetton in those areas. About 64 percent of that area is owned by small farmers. I know of no more beneficial legislation than that which will enable the small farmer to supplement his income from cotton by growing hardwood in bottom lands.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield.

Mr. FULMER. As a matter of fact, the farm wood lot and its consideration in all of our work has largely been neglected. If the farmers could be shown how to build them up and bring about an increase of earnings through its utilization, this added purchasing power of the farmer would tend to relieve unemployment and cut down some of the appropriations we have to make for him.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I agree with the gentleman. From the beginning, since these appropriations have been made under the act of 1928, there has not been a division between pine 150,000,000 acres and hardwood 50,000,000 acres in the southern region, but I also realize that tangible results from forest management are not apparent for a number of years. I do trust that the amount, modest as it is, that is appropriated here for the initiation of the work under the supervision of the New Orleans station will be increased. I maintain that at least one-fourth the amount allocated to the New Orleans station should be devoted to the management of hardwoods in lowlands.

In extending my remarks briefly I am speaking of the appropriation of $593,403 for forest management on page 44 of the bill. This appropriation is made under the act of May 22, 1928, which was passed to insure adequate supplies of timber and to conduct forest research in reforestation, timber growing, protection, and utilization.

The appropriation for the current year is $648,403. I regret that the committee reduced the amount by $55,000. The items of reduction, however, do not relate to forest management, research, or economics. As shown by the report of the committee, the reduction of $55,000 covers forest genetics, forest regeneration, and forest mensuration.

I regret that the Committee on Appropriations did not follow my recommendation to increase the total appropriation by from $50,000 to $100,000 to provide for the management and investigations of hardwoods in bottom lands. It is fair to say that the committee took the view that without express authority the funds for the Southern Forest Experiment Station could be divided between pines and hardwoods in bottom lands. It is my view that the funds allocated, in the sum of $69,350, to the station at New Orleans were insufficient for both pines and hardwoods, and that provision should be made for increasing the funds for the New Orleans station so as to provide for at least $50,000 for hardwoods in bottom lands.

I am familiar with the work of the Forest Service. No agency of the Government is contributing more to the welfare of the people. Work is being done to aid in reforesting and in restocking cut-over areas in all regions of the United States, except hardwoods in bottom lands in the southern region.

I requested the Forest Service to give me a break-down and distribution of the funds under the appropriation for forest management and investigations for the fiscal year 1939. The following is the information furnished:

Distribution of funds under appropriations for forest management investigations, fiscal year 1939

Region	Work in pine and other soft- woods	Work in hardwoods (upland hardwoods only)
Northeast (Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massa- chusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New York) Allegheny (Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, and Delaware).	$40,000 9,200	$34, 650 20, 000
Appalachian (Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, northern Georgia, eastern Kentucky, and eastern Tennessee)	14, 900	57,000
northern Arkansas, western Kentucky, and western Tennessee. Lake States (Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and eastern North Dakota)	10,000 40,000	32, 500 18, 650
Southern (southern Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, eastern Texas, Oklahoma, and southern Arkansas). Pacific Northwest (Oregon and Washington). California. Northern Rocky Mountain (Montana and northern Idaho). Intermountain (southern Idaho, Utah, and Nevada)	69, 350 29, 150 118, 400 27, 750 7, 400
Rocky Mountain (Colorado, Wyoming, and southwestern South Dakota). Southwestern (Arizona and New Mexico)	22, 500 20, 359 56, 594	20,000
Total	465, 603	182, 800

As I have said, there are 12 forest stations in the United States. There are two types of hardwoods—upland hardwoods and bottomland hardwoods. Bottomland hardwoods obtain only in the lower Mississippi Valley and along the rivers that flow into the Gulf and into the Atlantic Ocean, extending from Texas to South Carolina. All other hardwoods, where they grow, are upland hardwoods.

At the station in the Northeast region at New Haven, Conn., the funds, as above shown, are almost equally divided between upland hardwoods and pines and other softwoods. Fifty percent of the Northeast area is in upland hardwoods.

In the Allegheny region the hardwoods predominate and the funds are allocated substantially in proportion to the area of upland hardwoods and pine and other softwoods.

In the Appalachian region upland hardwoods predominate and three-fourths of the funds are allocated to upland hardwoods.

In the Central States hardwoods cover three times the area of softwoods and the funds are accordingly allocated at the Columbus station.

In the lake States the upland hardwoods constitute about a third of the area and the funds are accordingly divided.

In the Pacific Northwest, in California, the northern Rocky Mountain, the intermountain, the Rocky Mountain, and the southwestern regions there are no hardwoods to speak of, either upland or bottomland hardwoods.

There are in the United States, as I have understood, approximately 600,000,000 acres of forest lands. Two hundred million acres are located in the lower Mississippi Valley and along the Gulf coast region. There are 150,000,000 acres of pine and 50,000,000 acres of hardwoods in the southern bottom-land region.

At the present time no work is being done for hardwoods in bottom lands. I maintain that they are being discriminated against. It is fair to say that at the time the management and investigations were undertaken at the New Orleans station, the pine industry was most extensive; the demands for pine management were many. There was probably not enough money for both pine and bottom-land hardwoods. The fact remains, however, that at all other stations where both hardwoods and softwoods obtain, the funds were divided. I repeat that bottom-land hardwoods were discriminated against. However, I know it is difficult to transfer from one type of work to the other. It takes years to grow trees, and yet I know that unless provision is made for hardwoods, the discrimination will continue.

There was a small appropriation of $10,500 that became available in 1931, but it was lost in the fiscal year 1933. There have been no appropriations, therefore, for bottom-land hardwoods since 1933. Fifty million acres, or one-fourth of the entire forest area of the South, including the alluvial valley of the Mississippi River, have been without forest-management aid. One-half of the lands in the Mississippi Valley are woodlands. Sixty-four percent is owned by small landowners and farmers who desire to supplement their cotton-farm income by growing timber.

The southern bottom lands represent one of the most urgent forest situations in the United States. The development of practical methods of rehabilitation and management is essential to placing the forest management of this region on a sound basis. There is need for research and information. The farmers who cultivate bottom lands are entitled to the same information and to the same aid that is accorded to farmers who cultivate uplands where hardwoods grow. Adequate information should be made available to farms and cut-over lands to enable the farmers to cultivate the forests as a growing business.

I realize that $5,000 definitely allocated to the management of hardwoods in the lower Mississippi Valley is a small amount. A beginning can be made. Forest protection and proper methods of fire protection are essential. Fires are the most destructive enemies of forests. The appropriation should be increased at the earliest possible date. Research, forest management, and proper methods of restocking and reforesting hardwood areas should be provided.

The management will include developing methods of cutting, of replacing and regrowing, thinning stands, and artificial restocking. Information will be provided that is essential in formulating plans for sustained-yield management. The financial aspects will be investigated. The elimination of forest fires will be emphasized.

The hardwoods in lowlands in the southern region should be given the equivalent of the benefits of the forest management that are accorded to hardwoods in all of the other regions of the United States. There is but one station in the southern region; it is located at New Orleans. This station serves approximately 200,000,000 acres of forest lands, or one-third of the entire forest area in the United States, but to promote reforestation in this area, the New Orleans station is only allocated substantially one-tenth of the funds appropriated for forest management.

[Here the gavel fell.]

By unanimous consent the pro forma amendment was | withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Agricultural chemical investigations: For conducting the investigations contemplated by the act of May 15, 1862 (5 U. S. C. 511, 512), relating to the application of chemistry to agriculture; for the biological, chemical, physical, microscopical, and technological investigation of foods, feeds, drugs, plant and animal products, and substances used in the manufacture thereof; for investigations of the physiological effects and for the pharmacological testing of such products and of insecticides; for the investigation and development of methods for the manufacture of sugars, sugar sirups, and starches and the utilization of new agricultural materials for such purposes; for the technological investigation of the utilization of fruits and vegetables and for frozen-pack investigations; for the investigation of chemicals for the control of noxious weeds and plants; and to cooperate with associations and scientific societies in the development of methods of analysis, $407,500, of which amount not to exceed $15,000 shall be available for the construction and equipment of an addition to the United States Citrus Products Laboratory, Winter Haven, Fla.

Mr. Chairman, I offer an

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Peterson of Florida: On page 50, line 5, strike out line 5 and insert in lieu thereof "analysis, $411,500, of which amount not to exceed $19,000."

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include in the presentation certain material-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will have to obtain permission in the House to insert extraneous matter. He already has permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is for the purpose of restoring an item of $4,000 which was approved by the Budget for what is known as the Citrus Byproducts Laboratory at Winter Haven. The original laboratory grounds were purchased by private individuals in the industry; and the original building was con-structed by the industry itself. There is no other laboratory in the United States that is doing the type of work done at this particular laboratory. Its purpose is to experiment and develop methods of utilizing the byproducts of citrus fruit and some other fruits. In fact it might be said to have two purposes: one is to develop various products and byproducts from fruits.

A large portion of the citric acid that comes to this country today is imported from Syria. Japan has developed certain processes for the canning of mandarins and tangerines. There came into this country and Canada last year threequarters of a million cases.

The other object of this laboratory is to develop ways of utilizing the byproducts in order that the waste may not pollute the streams. Juices, acids, and oils that are refuse from canning plants-waste today-contain many useful ingredients.

The Department asked the Budget to grant $25,000 for the purpose of developing these processes and experiments. The Budget cut the item to $19,000 and the committee, in turn, cut the Budget recommendation to $15,000, an additional cut of $4,000.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. PETERSON of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan, my good friend.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman may not need that station down there if we build the Florida ship canal, because that might have some effect upon your citrus fruit in Florida.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. It will affect many groves. I will be glad to take the $4,000 from the ship canal and use it for this laboratory.

Mr. Chairman, the Chief of the Bureau made a definite statement that no other laboratory was doing this work. He also made the definite statement it was needed. He made the statement a large percentage of culls were being wasted and that it is very probable the utilization of this would mean that more than 20 percent, the culls, that are now going to waste could be placed into profitable channels. It is also hoped that there may be worked out a method of freezing fruit juice and shipping it in frozen form. All this work is being done at this laboratory. I refer to oil of orange, citric acid, and similar things. Foreign countries have perfected certain processes. The development of new processes may mean the difference between profit and loss to a great industry that is now suffering.

We have done our part. We bought the land, we built the first laboratory, and we gave them trees on the ground. The Department asked for $25,000, which was cut. Then, lo and behold, the committee cut it $4,000 in addition. When you have worked out a program involving $25,000 it is hard to get by with $15,000.

I am asking nothing that the Budget has not allowed. I had hoped to propose an amendment making it $25,000, but I lost courage when all other amendments were voted down today, so I fell back to the Budget approved item.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. RICH. In increasing all these appropriations that you are asking for, can the gentleman or any other Member over there tell us where you are going to get the money?

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. The citrus industry itself will more than pay for this one particular item in a single year if they can develop one small process.

I sincerely trust you will give me what the Budget approved. You have to have a pretty good case to get by the Budget. This will enable us to utilize the products that are being wasted. It will enable them to develop new processes that are needed in the vegetable and fruit industry.

Mr. Chairman, I hope my amendment will be agreed to.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. PETERSON].

Mr. Chairman, the history of this station is interesting. In 1937 the industry proposed to the Government that if this work was taken up they would provide the local facilities. In agreeing to do this we stipulated that they should provide the land and the buildings, which they did. We have since that time carried out our part of the understanding by providing maintenance. If an addition is necessary, of course, they would be expected, in keeping with the original agreement, to provide this addition.

In our desire to go along with the industry and cooperate in every way possible, the committee this year, notwithstanding our original agreement, provided $15,000 toward the construction of this addition to the building provided by the industry. The amendment offered is to increase this amount from $15,000, as provided in the bill, to $19,000, and is entirely for a new proposition.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. The building was actually provided. This is for the purpose of installing a refrigeration unit and additions to the building. The Chief of the Bureau stated in the hearings that the increase was requested to enlarge one of these laboratory buildings and install storage rooms with the necessary refrigeration equipment.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is true; but the industry assured us, and the Government stipulated in 1937, when we entered upon this activity, that it would furnish the land and the building. In keeping with that agreement they would now be expected to furnish the addition. However, the Government, waiving its understanding, provides this $15,000 without contribution from the industry or the State. The amendment offered by the gentleman would increase this $15,000 to $19,000.

But, Mr. Chairman, there is another obstacle. In the preamble to this section of the bill there is a limit of cost, of $15,000. Under this limitation no construction can be entered upon to cost in excess of $15,000. So that even if this amendment were agreed to, the extra $4,000 would not be of any advantage because the limitation would still apply. In order to make it applicable it would be necessary to go back and repeal or extend the limitation, which would be a complete change of policy, and I am certain the House would not desire to do that at this time. Outside of the merits of the proposed amendment, the limit would preclude the construction of a building in excess of $15,000 and it would be idle for the committee to adopt the amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Peterson].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Japanese beetle control: For the control and prevention of spread of the Japanese beetle, $395,000.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise not to be facetious but really to strike out the last word in line 25 of page 53.

I am a city man representing a large rural area as well as a city area. Many times I have driven along country roads and have been stopped by some fellow who asks if I have any Japanese beetles or any fruits or vegetables or corn in my car. He does not inspect my car to determine whether or not there is anything like that in the car. He asks the question, and he accepts my answer.

For years this practice has been carried on. I do not know whether or not it has helped to eradicate the Japanese beetle, but I notice that the same appropriation asked for in 1939 is asked for again in 1940. I may be sticking my neck out in asking the question, yet I would like to know the facts, because I have had farmers riding with me in my car occasionally, and they have laughed at the practice and seemingly were not at all impressed with the claim that any Japanese beetles have been eliminated. I should like to ask the chairman of the subcommittee how much of this money is spent for the purpose of having men on the road to ask that question, and what benefit we derive therefrom.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the Japanese beetle is a very destructive insect. Whereas most insect pests prey on one crop, the Japanese beetle is omnivorous and consumes practically all vegetation, even small shrubs. Fortunately, up to this time it has been confined to a limited territory. The efforts of the Government have been to prevent its spread.

The pest is distributed largely through carriage by either railroads or highways. The sporadic instances in which it has established itself, sometimes in far distant cities, are due to carriage on the highways and railways.

According to the reports made to us, the inspectors have frequently found plants badly infested with Japanese beetles carried in private automobiles. If permitted to go on, they doubtless would have been spread to perhaps distant States. I realize it is irksome to be stopped on the highway by these inspectors, and I realize also that if a driver of a private automobile cares to mislead the inspector he can do so. However, this is the only practical method we have for this purpose, and up to this time seems to have proven sufficiently effective to warrant a continuation of this appropriation.

Mr. BENDER. The gentleman has answered my question, not satisfactorily, however.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I shall be glad to supply such further information as may be requested.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. May I just state that the gentleman who has

Mr. GROSS. May I just state that the gentleman who has just spoken on the beetle does not know anything about it. I have lived among them and seen them working and seen all the things that have been done to constrain the beetle, but the damage done by the beetle never amounted to a hill of beans. There is far more damage done by the whisky carried in automobiles than by the Japanese beetle carried in automobiles.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mexican fruitfly control: For the control and prevention of spread of the Mexican fruitfly, including necessary surveys and control operations in Mexico in cooperation with the Mexican Government or local Mexican authorities, $160,460.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the paragraph on page 54 which the Clerk has just read, being lines 1 to 4, inclusive, is legislation on an appropriation bill and not authorized by law. In fact, it goes far afield. It provides that we are to go over into Mexico. I know the administration is interested in foreign affairs but I did not know that we had come to the point that the Subcommittee on Appropriations for the Agricultural Department felt charged with the responsibility of carrying on affairs in Mexico. Therefore, I believe I should make the point of order at this time and inquire of the Chairman the purpose of this particular paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Can the gentleman from Missouri, the chairman of the subcommittee, cite any legislative enactment authorizing this provision?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this provision has been carried in the bill for many years, but there is no law under which an appropriation is authorized for carrying on these activities.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, the provision was retained in previous bills by reason of the fact that no point of order was made against it.

If the gentleman has no citation of law authorizing this provision in the bill, the Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Citrus canker eradication: For determining and applying such methods of eradication or control of the disease of citrus trees known as "citrus canker" as in the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture may be necessary, including cooperation with such authorities of the States concerned, organizations of growers, or individuals, as he may deem necessary to accomplish such purposes, $13,485: Provided, That no part of the money herein appropriated shall be used to pay the cost or value of trees or other property injured or destroyed.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the paragraph on page 54, lines 5 to 14, and call attention to the fact that this paragraph delegates additional duties to the Secretary of Agriculture. I call the Chair's particular attention to the language in the first part of the paragraph:

For determining and applying such methods of eradication or control of the disease of citrus trees known as citrus canker as in the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture may be necessary, including cooperation with such authorities of the States concerned, organizations of growers, or individuals, as he may deem necessary to accomplish such purposes.

This clearly is a delegation of additional authority to the Secretary and requires additional duties of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. What is the point of order, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. TABER. That it delegates additional duties to the Secretary of Agriculture and requires additional responsibilities of him, and thus is legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Of course, Mr. Chairman, the point of order is well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk read as follows:

Sweetpotato weevil control: For the determination and application of such methods of control for sweetpotato weevils as, in the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture, may be necessary, $75,000: Provided, That, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the control of sweetpotato weevil in any State until such State has provided cooperation necessary to accomplish this purpose: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the cost or value of farm animals, farm crops, or other property injured or destroyed.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I raise a point of order against the entire paragraph. I raise the point of order because I am interested in the sweetpotato growers, and it seems to me that the Appropriations Committee has certainly visited upon that group an injury in that it provides that no control of the sweetpotato weevil can be had unless there is cooperation from the State. Under all the circumstances, this sweetpotato weevil is a serious matter and it seems to me before the Appropriations Committee takes unto itself the setting up of standards and a delegation of authority, it should come in with legislation. Therefore, I am compelled to press the point of order I raise at this time.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the point of order. Without regard to whether or not the conceded point of order applicable to the preceding paragraph was a valid point of order or not, the point of order raised by the gentleman as to this particular paragraph is certainly not good. The gentleman does not take the position that the appropriation made is not authorized by law; he takes the position that the condition attached to the effect that no part of the appropriation shall be expended unless cooperation to an extent—

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TARVER. No; not at this time; wait until I have completed my statement.

Unless cooperation to an extent satisfactory to the Secretary of Agriculture has been afforded by the State is a provision not authorized by law. I submit that that position of the gentleman is untenable. If the Congress has the authority to make an appropriation for sweetpotato-weevil control, and the gentleman's point of order concedes that point, it has the right to attach to the making of that appropriation such conditions with regard to the requirement of State cooperation as it may deem proper. The gentleman, as I have said, has not attacked the legislative authority of Congress to make the appropriation by any point of order which he has so far submitted.

I now yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I thought I had made it plain that I was taking exception to the paragraph.

Mr. TARVER. I want to make this additional observation. I believe it is now too late for the gentleman to offer a point of order to the entire paragraph for reasons which he did not advance in connection with his point of order relative to the particular language to which he at first objected.

Mr. DITTER. The gentleman did not understand me, Mr. Chairman. I raised the point of order that it was legislation. I indicated that very plainly to the Chair by stating that there had been a delegation of authority and an establishment of standards for which no legislation had been provided. If the gentleman cares to have me make it specific, I direct the Chair's attention and raise the point of order on the ground that it is legislation attached to an appropriation bill.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Lanham). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TARVER. Does the Chair hold that the gentleman, after having failed originally to raise the question of the legislative authority of Congress to make this appropriation, may now, after an argument has proceeded on his original point of order, amplify his original point of order and raise a question which he originally neglected to raise?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman would have the right to raise additional points of order before the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. TARVER. There is one additional observation, Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit. The question of whether or not any appropriation contained in this bill for the control or eradication of insects injurious to agriculture is subject to a point of order is a very serious and far-reaching one, and notwithstanding the chairman of our subcommittee has conceded the point of order made with reference to one or two preceding paragraphs, I think it is a question which ought to have the careful consideration of the Chair before he permits to be stricken from this bill on points of order appropriations which have been carried for years for the protection of various branches of American agriculture, and for that reason, Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may say in that regard that no authorization has been cited or shown the Chair providing for the appropriation herein made.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, may I answer the gentleman by saying that I must express surprise that the gentleman is filibustering against his own bill. I thought we wanted to get through tonight. All the gentleman has thus far done has been to resort to filibustering tactics when a serious agricultural appropriation bill should be demanding our attention.

Mr. TARVER. Of course, that sort of observation by the gentleman is so patently foolish as to require no reply.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, it is evident we cannot complete the consideration of this bill tonight. It is now late and I therefore move that the Committee do now rise.

Mr. DITTER. May I first ask that the Chair rule on the point of order I raised?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the point of order would be pending when we resume consideration of the bill tomorrow.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct in the statement that the point of order would be pending when the Committee resumes its session tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Lanham, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 5269, the agricultural appropriation bill, 1940, and had come to no resolution thereon.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein a speech I delivered some years ago upon the question of currency expansion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FEDERAL HOUSING ACT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Banking and Currency to request that it be given until 12 o'clock tomorrow night to file a report upon the bill H. R. 3232, an extension of the Federal Housing Act, and that the minority of the committee be given until Monday night at 12 o'clock to file their views on the same bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS—FRANCES PERKINS

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on the Judiciary I present a privileged report upon House Resolution 67, which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read House Resolution 67.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, this is a unanimous report from the Committee on the Judiciary adversing this resolution. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama to lay the resolution on the table. The motion was agreed to.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PETERSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, at the conclusion of the legislative program. I be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD to include therein a speech I delivered March 18, 1939, on foreign affairs and conditions in Europe.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting at this point a letter from one of the prominent sugar farmers and producers, Mr. Charles A. Farwell, relating to the sugar industry, the letter being addressed to the chairman of the House Agricultural Committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., February 24, 1939.

Chairman, Agricultural Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.
DEAR SIR: I have read with interest the letter of January 26, 1939, addressed to you and signed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

By his letter of January 26, 1939, the Secretary of Agriculture put himself on record as knowing very little about his job as far as it affects the continental sugar business. I might also add that in various public utterances and in his actions he has indicated that various public utterances and in his actions he has indicated that he is not inclined to learn anything about the continental domestic sugar industry, especially in Louisiana.

In July 1934 Secretary Wallace, speaking on the campus of the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston, La., described the Louisiana sugar industry as being inefficient and in contrast, described cotton and hog raising as efficient industries. Mr. Wallace went on to say that the latter two were efficient industries because they could meet world competition.

without going into details I wish to state that I do not know whether the cotton industry was efficient in 1934, but after 4 years of being under the control of Mr. Waliace the cotton industry today is about as close to being "busted" as it ever has been during my life. As far as the efficiency of hog raising goes on account of its being able to meet world competition, I think it is an admitted fact that if South American and Central American meats were allowed free access to the American market, that the hog raisers of the United States would quickly find themselves out of business. My information is that we keep South and Central American meats off of our market by the claim that these meats are produced from diseased animals. Yet we see the various nations of Europe consuming these meats in large quantities over a period of years without any apparent ill effects.

apparent ill effects.

In the second paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter to you he says "criticism of the sugar program in recent congressional discussion relates almost entirely to an assumed inadequacy of income for sugar-beet producers." In both the hearings before the Senate Committee on Finance with reference to Senate Resolution No. 49, and in the proceedings of the House of Representatives of January 18, 1939, specific reference is made to the necessity of increasing the income of the sugar producers of Louisiana.

In the third paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter he takes up the first of what he calls the four outstanding elements in the sugar program and in this paragraph goes on to say "and limitations on marketings of the mainland sugarcane and sugar-beet industries which have been nominal since 1935, because production was generally below the quotas for such areas established in the legislation."

In 1935 the mainland sugarcane quota was 260,000 tons, and we In 1935 the mainland sugarcane quota was 260,000 tons, and we produced 382,892 tons; in 1936 our quota was 392,016 tons, and we produced 434,513 tons; in 1937 our quota was 472,337 tons, and we produced 457,113 tons; in 1938 our quota was 426,310 tons, and we produced 563,000 tons. Thus we can see that 3 out of 4 years Mr. Wallace's statement is grossly inaccurate, and that for the total of the 4-year period he is still wrong.

In the fourth paragraph of his letter he still hammers on the differential in the price of sugar in the United States and the price of what he calls "unprotected sugars."

price of what he calls "unprotected sugars."

It might be well to state at this point that there is no such thing as "unprotected sugars" sold in the United States, and there never has been. As a matter of fact, less than 8 percent of the total sugars consumed throughout the world are sold at what is known as the "world price." Therefore the continued use of this expression is simply dragging a red herring across the trail.

It might be well to note that in a report dated December 1938, published by the United States Department of Commerce, the prices of refined sugar as of May 1, 1938, show that in 20 countries the prices remained unchanged as of the year previous. In 14 countries the prices increased and in 9 countries, including the United States, the prices decreased. It is probably unnecessary to call to your mind that between May 1, 1938, and December 1, 1938, a further substantial decrease took place in the United States.

A further examination of this report shows that out of the 43 countries included in the report, there are only 12 countries in which the retail price of sugar per pound is lower than that of the United States. Furthermore, all of these 12, with the exception of 4, are either exporting countries or principally self-supplying countries, such as Brazil, Cuba, Peru, Costa Rica, Guatemala, and India.

The four importing countries where the retail price was lower than in the United States are Chile, Uruguay, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom. Of these four the United Kingdom is the only large per capita consuming country and its price is governed by special conditions which are shown on page 9 in the report to which I refer.

In the sixth paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter to you he refers to Federal conditional payments of 60 cents per hundred pounds of recoverable sugar. Mr. Wallace does not say that this rate of 60 cents per hundred pounds only applies to producers of less than 500 tons of sugar, nor does he mention the fact that this rate drops to where the payment is only 30 cents per hundred pounds in the where the payment is only 30 cents per hundred pounds in the highest bracket.

With reference to the seventh paragraph of his letter: Anyone reading this paragraph would think the Government had given free full-value crop insurance against such conditions as freezing weather, drought, etc. Under the administration of the Sugar Act by Mr. Wallace, abandoned cane was only paid for if the percentage of abandoned cane reached a certain figure in each parish. In other words, a man could lose practically his entire crop, but if this amount of cane did not reach the required figure for the parish in which he lived he got nothing from the Government on account of his frozen cane. Even in the parishes where abandoned cane was paid for, it was paid for at the rate of one-third of its recoverable sugar value. This can hardly be called any form of insurance, because when we insure our houses or automobiles or any other articles, we try to insure them for their full value and not one-third of their value.

In the thirteenth paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter to you he says any other attrices, we try to histie them for their full value and not one-third of their value.

In the thirteenth paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter to you he says "the increase in income to growers from the 1937 crop will average close to $10 per acre over that of the preceding year. Independent growers of sugarcane will benefit similarly."

You can see from this paragraph that Mr. Wallace thought that by the action of his Department he had decreased the income of the growers, who are also processors, to such a great extent that he had to specifically refer to independent growers of sugarcane to show any benefit whatsoever from his actions.

These actions on his part were taken in spite of the fact that he has figures at his command which show that over 39 percent of the sugarcane produced in Louisiana is produced by growers who are also processors.

Furthermore, these actions on his part were taken in face of the fact that the very law under which he is supposed to be operating says in its preamble, "To protect the welfare of consumers of sugar and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry." My interpretation of this clause is that it refers to the whole domestic sugar industry and not to any one small minority group.

try." My interpretation of this clause is that it refers to the whole domestic sugar industry and not to any one small minority group. I see nothing in either the preamble of the act or in the act itself to warrant the administrative officer in charge of the act to only attempt to benefit "independent growers of sugarcane."

In the next paragraph he says that the income of sugarcane growers was increased and the total income of the sugar industry was maintained in spite of the decline of the purchasing power of the consumers, remarking very carefully the fact that this statement is not made for the year 1938 but for the year 1937, because it could not have been made for the year 1938 without violating the record.

the record.

the record.

In the fourth from the last paragraph of his letter his statement that Federal payments of 60 cents per hundred pounds of sugar paid directly to the producers were not taken into consideration has nothing to do with the fact that sugar still is within the bracket of a record low price. Besides that, the record low price referred to dealt with the year 1938, and I can assure you that no Federal payments of any kind have yet been paid on sugarcane produced in 1938 in Louisiana.

With reference to the last paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter I no Federal payments of any kind have yet been paid on sugarcane produced in 1938 in Louisiana.

With reference to the last paragraph of Mr. Wallace's letter, I believe he should have referred again to independent growers instead of using the words "domestic producers" because it has been the writer's personal experience that nothing was done by the sugar section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in administering the Sugar Act of 1937 during the year 1938 except to harass the Louisiana sugar industry as a whole.

For example, Mr. Wallace knew we started the actual cultivating of the 1938 crop in February. He held hearings to determine the wage rates to be paid for this work in the last week of February, and did not issue a ruling until July 2, 1938, when practically all of the work on the 1938 crop had been done and paid for. When this ruling did come out, it carried an increase in wages and was made retroactive to January 1, 1938, so that we in Louisiana had to go back over 6 months of pay rolls and make a change for every man who had done any work in the cultivation of the 1938 crop.

The average price of raw sugar for the month in which Mr. Wallace held his hearings to set the price for the cultivation of the 1938 crop (February 1938) was $2.14 per hundred pounds. The average price for the month in which Mr. Wallace held his hearings to set the price for the cultivation of the 1930 crop (August 1938) was $2.78 per hundred pounds. The average price of raw sugar for the month in which Mr. Wallace he month in which Mr. Wallace issued his wage-rate ruling for the cultivation of the 1939 crop (January 1939) was $2.75 per hundred cultivation of the 1939 crop (January 1939) was $2.75 per hundred pounds.

This arbitrary action was done in spite of the fact that Mr. Wallace recognizes that the price received for cane by the farmer should and does vary with the price of sugar. Therefore, I do not feel it would be unreasonable for him to recognize that the price the farmer receives for his cane determines the price the farmer can pay for labor to make his cane. As you know, the price of cane is based on the price of raw sugar.

Again, Mr. Wallace and the Sugar Division know that the planting season in Louisiana for cane is generally the latter part of August and during the entire month of September. In spite of knowing this, he did not come out with his ruling with regard to proportionate shares until October 5, 1938. This ruling means that a certain amount of the Louisiana cane crop is actually going to have to be plowed up. If we had known of the ruling before we completed our planting, we would naturally have reduced our plantings by the number of acres that we are now going to have to plow up and destroy. Imagine destroying food with so many underfed people in this country; destroying a food of which we produce less than a third of the amount we consume. Is that American? Is that good sense? sense?

third of the amount we consume. Is that American? Is that good sense?

Furthermore, we just recently received notice to attend a hearing in Atlanta, Ga., with regard to fixing the mill quota for the 1939 grinding season. After much protest on the part of the industry and its representatives in Washington, the place of this hearing was changed, not to Louisiana, but to Mobile, Ala., in spite of the fact that of the 74 interested parties, 73 agreed that the hearing should be held in Louisiana and nowhere else, and Mr. Wallace's Department was notified of this agreement.

I want to say for myself and for the people that I represent that we deeply appreciate the earnest consideration that you have given the domestic sugar problem.

I am writing this letter as a matter of record, and I hope that you will insert it in the Congressional Record in the same manner that you inserted the letter from the Secretary of Agriculture.

There has been a tremendous amount of talk about no congressional action being wanted during the present session of Congress because the present Sugar Act expires in 1940. I simply want to call your attention to a fact which you probably already know, and that is the present Sugar Act expires on December 31, 1940, and, therefore, unless some legislation is passed to supersede this act or unless this act is amended, the sugar industry is faced with its present problems until the crop of 1941.

Respectfully,

Chas. A. Farwell.

Respectfully,

CHAS. A. FARWELL.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein an editorial from the London Times.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

HYDROELECTRIC PROJECTS

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, the people of the State of Idaho, realizing the importance of the construction of hydroelectric projects as a source of cheap electrical energy for the utilization of the resources and development of the industries of the Northwest, have through their legislature memorialized Congress for the construction of the Cabinet Gorge power project located on the Clarks Fork River near the Idaho-Montana boundary line.

Under the authorization of Congress the Bureau of Reclamation of the Department of the Interior has recently made a survey and examination of this site which is one of the best potential power developments in the West and is located in the center of the vast holdings of Federal-owned timber and close to the Coeur d'Alene mining district, one of the largest silver-lead producing districts in the United States. The development of Cabinet Gorge would provide the necessary energy for the economical manufacture of lumber, pulp, and paper from the extensive and valuable tracts of Federalowned timber much of which is wasting due to natural decay and provide the necessary energy for the development and operation of the large number of mines of the several surrounding mining districts.

In view of the importance of the development of this power project and the immense importance to the Federal Government and the general business prosperity of the country, I present herewith the memorial of the State Legislature of Idaho and request that it be printed at this point in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Senate Joint Memorial 2

Senate Joint Memorial 2

Joint memorial to the Honorable President of the United States and Members of Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, in twenty-fifth session, respectfully represent that—

Whereas reports of the Federal survey to the Department of Interior recommend the feasibility of the construction of a dam on the Clark Fork River at Cabinet Gorge for power and reclamation nurposes; and

Whereas there is an outlet in the immediate vicinity of the project for industrial uses of power in manufacturing plants to be established for converting raw mineral and timber resources to be established for converting raw mineral and timber resources to finished products; and

Whereas most of the agricultural land in the Panhandle of Idaho is in process of conversion from uncleared cut-over land to productive agricultural land, in which process these farmers clearing and developing such land are unable to progress with such development, make a living at the same time, and pay their way unless they have opportunity to work in industry part time; and

Whereas the relief load borne by the Federal Government in conjunction with the State will be permanent in such developing sections until the development of the land will provide an existence for its operators unless industrial employment be available to take the place of relief; and

Whereas such relief load over a period of years will be in excess of the initial cost of the $11,000,000 Cabinet Gorge development which development would be self-liquidating, whereas relief is not; and

Whereas power for industrial uses in mills and factories cannot be profitably transported from present Federal projects to this locality:

Now, therefore, be it Resolved, That the Cabinet Gorge project be developed in accord with recommendations of the survey report of the Department of Reclamation, in all details, except that it be commenced immediately; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be sent by the Secretary of the State of Idaho to the honorable President of the United States, and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Idaho

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include therein a proclamation of the President on the Czechoslovakian situation.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on next Monday, after the special order heretofore granted, I may address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know what is the program for next Monday.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman submit that as a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. RICH. I do, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to answer it.

Mr. RICH. Is there anybody in the House who can tell us what is going to happen on next Monday?

Mr. RANKIN. I will say that I understand there are a couple of special orders. I do not know what they are, and then the District of Columbia Committee probably has several small bills.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, of course, Monday is District of Columbia day. The District Committee has seven bills. There will be two special rules presented after that is completed.

Mr. RICH. We will have a full day's work on Monday?

Mr. RAYBURN. If not legislatively speaking, we will have oratorically speaking.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and, of course, I shall not object, I want to ask the majority leader if he expects to finish this bill tomorrow, and first, if we are going to sit tomorrow?

Mr. RAYBURN. We are going to sit tomorrow, and finish the bill tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Speaker, in Committee of the Whole I received unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made today. I now ask consent for additional permission to insert therein a joint resolution from the State Assembly of the State of Iowa.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks and include an article from Outdoor America, a publication by the Izaak Walton League.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include therein a resolution from the Wisconsin Agricultural Society.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein a brief editorial from the Omaha Daily Stockman.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Owen (at the request of Mr. Brown of Georgia), on account of illness.

SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE FOR TOMORROW

The SPEAKER. The Chair designates the gentleman from Texas, Mr. RAYBURN, to act as Speaker pro tempore tomorrow.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

Bills and a joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 39. An act for the relief of the heirs of T. J. Kinser; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 43. An act to authorize the erection within the Canal Zone of a suitable memorial to the builders of the Panama Canal and others whose distinguished services merit recognition by the Congress; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

S. 69. An act relating to the apportionment of shares of the sugar crop for 1939 and 1940; to the Committee on

S. 139. An act for the relief of Maria Bartolo; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

S. 216. An act for the relief of A. C. Williams, administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 473. An act for the relief of George Francis Burke; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

S. 499. An act to amend the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1909, as amended, so as to extend commissary privileges to civilian officers and employees of the United States at naval stations beyond the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 808. An act for the relief of Calliope Minaca Pilavakis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

S. 837. An act to admit Mrs. Henry Francis Parks permanently to the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

S. 964. An act creating the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 1001. An act for the relief of Albert Pina Afonso, a minor; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1186. An act for the relief of Herbert M. Snapp; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1258. An act for the relief of the Rent-A-Car Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1269. An act for the relief of Emil Friedrich Dischleit; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

S. 1291. An act for the relief of William Carl Laude; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

S. 1302. An act to make permanently effective the act entitled "An act to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in petroleum and its products by prohibiting the shipment in such commerce of petroleum and its products produced in violation of State law, and for other purposes," approved February 22, 1935, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 1385. An act for the relief of the Barkman Lumber Co.;

to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1387. An act for the relief of Ida May Lennon; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1394. An act for the relief of Johannes or John, Julia, Michael, William, and Anna Kostiuk; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

S. 1430. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Dorothy Elizabeth Sisson, a minor; to the Committee on

S. 1502. An act for the relief of Donna L. I. Carlisle; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1582. An act to authorize the President to bestow a Meritorious Service Medal upon civil-service officers and employees of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

S. 1692. An act for the relief of J. Vernon Phillips: to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1725. An act relating to the acquisition of the site for the post-office building to be constructed in Poplarville, Miss.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 1847. An act for the relief of Naomi Straley and Bonnie Straley; to the Committee on Claims.

S. J. Res. 72. Joint resolution readmitting Mary Cohen Bienvenu to citizenship; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 767. An act for the relief of Benjamin Weisenberg;

H. R. 950. An act to exempt all vessels of the United States of less than 200 tons gross registered tonnage from the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936 (being International Labor Conference Treaty, Convention No. 53, adopted by the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1936);

H. R. 1430. An act for the relief of Hyman Ginsberg;

H. R. 1836. An act for the relief of Jack Nelson, a minor; H. R. 2079. An act for the relief of Charles T. Wise;

H. R. 2192. An act to extend the time for commencing and completing bridges across Cross Bayou, Twelve Mile Bayou, and Caddo Lake in Caddo Parish, La.;

H.R. 3090. An act for the relief of C. R. Henderson;

H. R. 3100. An act for the relief of Capt. Francis H. A.

H. R. 3791. An act to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress; H. J. Res. 110. Joint resolution to authorize Commander Henry Coyle, United States Coast Guard, to accept the decoration and diploma of the Marine Medal of Class 1 (gold), conferred upon him by the Government of Greece:

H. J. Res. 150. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to provide that the United States extend to foreign governments invitations to participate in the Third International Congress for Microbiology to be held in the United States during the calendar year 1939"; and H. J. Res. 163. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Panama Canal.

THE LATE HON. CLARENCE W. TURNER

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, it is with very deep regret and personal sorrow that I announce that our highly esteemed and beloved colleague the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee, Hon. Clarence W. Turner, passed away at his residence in the city of Washington last night.

Mr. Turner was a man of high character, great ability, and demonstrated devotion to public service. He had served with great credit and distinction on the bench of Tennessee for many years before he became a Member of this body. He served for two periods of time as a Member of the House of Representatives; first, for a brief period following a special election in 1922, when he succeeded the Honorable L. P. Padgett, of Tennessee; second, he returned to the House following the election in 1932 and served continuously from that time to the present.

A man who enjoyed a wide circle of friends among his colleagues of the House and enjoyed their respect and esteem to as great degree as any Member of this body has left us.

At a later date it is my purpose, of course, to ask the indulgence of the House for sufficient time to speak at greater length of his character and public service.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Vermont.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, Clarence W. Turner is dead!

He was an affable and a courteous gentleman-

A statesman, yet friend to truth! of soul sincere, In action faithful, and in honor clear.

He wrote his name in bright characters high upon the scroll of the history of his city, State, and Nation. His memory will always remain a precious legacy to those of us who have been privileged to know, and to serve with him, and will stand as an example to be emulated by all those who may hereafter succeed him.

As a member of the Committee on Military Affairs, where I knew him best, he served his country patriotically, faithfully, and well. His clear, intelligent breadth of vision, and his spotless character were a source of strength to those of us who were very closely associated with him.

Calm in courage, steadfast in devotion to principle, persistent, forgetful of himself, yet confident in his own judgment and as to the correctness of the course he sought to pursue, he endeared himself to a host of friends by the charm of his genial nature; and all the while he was a tower of strength to his associates and a Gibraltar of defense against those who might undertake to attack the impregnability of a position he had once taken or undertaken to hold.

I happen to know that his passing was in the manner and after the fashion such as he had hoped it might be, for only recently in discussing the death of a mutual friend, he averted to the possibility of his going, although neither of us anticipated that this day would be so soon at hand.

In respect to this, his attitude and his desire may be no better expressed than in these words:

Let me live out my years in heat of blood! Let me die drunken with the dreamers' wine! Let me not see this soul-house built of mud Go toppling to the dusk—a vacant shrine.

Let me go quickly, like a candle light Snuffed out just at the heyday of its glow. Give me high noon—and let it then be night! Thus would I go.

And grant that when I face the grisly Thing,
My song may trumpet down the gray Perhaps.
Let me be as a tune-swept fiddlestring
That feels the Master Melody—and snaps!

CLARENCE W. TURNER! "May the earth rest lightly on him."

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

LXXXIV—207

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, as the milestones along the highway of life become the monuments to departed friends, those of us who linger "upon this bank and shoal of time" find it difficult indeed to express our real feelings, our profound sorrow, our deep regrets.

CLARENCE TURNER'S district borders mine. I have known him most intimately since he first came to the Sixty-seventh Congress to suceed the distinguished former chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, Mr. Padgett. I served with him in those days and have been thrown with him constantly since he returned to the House after the passing of our distinguished former colleague, his predecessor, the Honorable Edward Eslick.

I know of no man with whom I served in all my years in this House who had a more conscientious regard for the feelings of his fellow Members or who manifested a higher devotion to duty as a Representative in Congress than Clarence W. Turner. Courteous, affable, gentlemanly at all times, he possessed that courage and that persistency necessary to make a real Representative. Every man who knew him was his friend. He grappled them to him with hoops of steel. We can hardly realize that he is gone. He was here but yesterday.

That serene, friendly countenance with which we were so familiar is no more.

In the tragedy of Ion, when that death-devoted Greek was about to offer up his life as a sacrifice to fate, his beautiful Clemanthe turned to him and asked: "Shall we meet again?" To which he replied:

I have asked that dreadful question of the hills that are eternal, of the clear streams that flow forever, of the stars amidst whose azure depths my raised spirits have walked in glory, yet they are dumb. But when I look into thy living, loving face I see that which, mantling through its rich beauty, tells me it can never die. We shall meet again.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Tennessee yield?

Mr. COOPER. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.
Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, in the loss of Clarence W.
Turner the House has lost one who was truly representative and characteristic of that quality of citizenship of which his native State is justly proud.

In his representation he was sane, sound, and truly American. In his personal life he exemplified that purity of character which makes America a shining example of the follower of the Prince of Peace.

Mr. Speaker, his Christian life is somewhat known to me, since he represented a district adjacent and adjoining the one which I have the honor of representing. Christ was his model. For the hopes of the American people and for the people whom he so ably represented he strived constantly.

If we who remain as Members of the greatest body on earth of a legislative capacity can achieve that purity of purpose, that nobility of character, and that true faith in our fellow human beings which he so nobly exemplified, we will do well.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, the members of the Tennessee delegation in the House met today and adopted a resolution on the passing of our colleague.

I ask unanimous consent to insert this resolution at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The resolution follows:

Whereas the members of the Tennessee delegation in the House of Representatives have learned with deep sorrow of the passing today of our colleague the Honorable Clarence W. Turner; and

Whereas Representative Turner was held in affectionate esteem by all of his colleagues, we desire to record our feeling of personal loss and our sincere sympathy for the family of our friend and associate.

associate.

Representative Turner first came to the House of Representatives in 1922 to fill the unexpired term of Hon. L. P. Padgett and was not a candidate for the succeeding term, returning to his home to serve as judge in his native county of Humphreys. He returned to Congress in 1933, being elected to the Seventy-third, Seventy-fourth, Seventy-fifth, and Seventy-sixth Congresses. Clarence W. Turner was true to all the trusts of his office, steadfast in his adherence to the ideals of our country, loyal to his friends, and faithful as a public servant. Quiet in disposition, kindly by nature, and courteous in manner, Representative Turner held the respect and confidence of his colleagues in the House and on the Military Affairs Committee, of which he was an important and influential member: Therefore be it

Resolved by the undersigned members of the Tennessee delegation in the House of Representatives, That these expressions be placed in the Congressional Record as our tribute to the memory of the Honorable CLARENCE W. TURNER and that a copy of the same of the Honorable Clarence W. Turner and that a copy of the same be transmitted to the members of his family.

J. Will Taylor, Sam D. McReynolds, Jere Cooper, Herron Pearson, B. Carroll Reece, Albert Gore, Joseph W. Byrns, Jr., Walter Chandler.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 141

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. CLARENCE W. TURNER, a Representative from the the death of Hon. CLARENCE W. TURNER, a Representative from the State of Tennessee.

Resolved, That a committee of four Members of the House with such Members of the Senate as may be joined be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following Members on the part of the House to attend the funeral: Mr. COOPER, of Tennessee, Mr. Pearson, of Tennessee, Mr. Byrns of Tennessee, and Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee.

The Clerk will report the further resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now

The resolution was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, March 25, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue on Monday, March 27, 1939, at 10 a. m., on social-security legislation, in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Naval Affairs at 10:30 a.m. on Monday, March 27, 1939, for the consideration of the Hepburn Board report.

COMMITTEE ON IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation in room 128, House Office Building, at 10 a. m. Tuesday, March 28, 1939, for the purpose of considering H. R. 5076.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Monday, March 27, 1939. Business to be considered: Continuation of hearing on H. R. 5093—training air pilots.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Tuesday, March 28, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation-H. R. 2531. Commissioner Eastman will be the witness

There will be a meeting of the Business Research Subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Monday, April 3, 1939. Business to be considered: Hearing on H. R. 3395-business research bill.

There will be a meeting of the trust indenture subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Tuesday, April 4, 1939. Business to be considered: Hearing on H. R. 5220-trust indenture bill.

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

A subcommittee of the Committee on Patents, House of Representatives, will hold hearings in the caucus room of the House Office Building beginning Tuesday, March 28, 1939, at 10 a. m., on H. R. 4744, a bill to provide for the registration of trade-marks used in commerce, to carry out the provisions of certain international conventions, and for other purposes. Hon. Fritz G. Lanham is chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. Lanham announces that the procedure at these hearings will be the same as that he initiated at the hearings on trade-marks in the Seventy-fifth Congress, 1938; that is, the bill will be taken up section by section, so all testimony on a given section will be found at one place in the printed record.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be a public hearing before the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, March 29, 1939, for the consideration of H. R. 3657 and H. R. 4369. Room 445, House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., to continue hearings on the project for the Connecticut River, Conn. and Mass.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a.m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries; H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels. Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators; H. R. 1010, intercoastal subsidy bill (Welch).

Thursday, April 6, 1939:

H. R. 1011, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission on San Francisco Bay (Welch); H. R. 2870, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (Thomas F. Ford); H. R. 3040, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (GEYER of California).

Tuesday, April 11, 1939:

H. R. 1783, inspection of hulls of sail vessels and barges (Bland); H. R. 1785, motorboat bill (Bland); H. R. 1795, motorboat bill (HENDRICKS); H. R. 1809, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (Magnuson); H. R. 2398, regarding pilots on yachts (ANGELL); H. R. 3837, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (CONNERY).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 4220, load-line bill for seagoing vessels (Bland). Tuesday, April 18, 1939:

H. R. 2404, surgeon and hospital on vessels (Sirovich); H. R. 2660, limitation of liability (STROVICH); House Joint Resolution 153 and House Joint Resolution 194, investigate conditions pertaining to lascar seamen (Sirovich).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

583. A letter from the Secretary of Labor, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to provide for the deposit of certain collections for overtime immigration services to the credit of the appropriation chargeable with the payment for such services, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

584. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to promote nautical education, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

585. A letter from the Civil Aeronautics Authority, transmitting recommendations as to the desirability of Federal participation in the construction, improvement, development, operation, and maintenance of a national system of airports; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3596. A bill to amend paragraph 57 of section 8 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1913; without amendment (Rept. No. 302). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3597. A bill to provide for the appointment of research assistants in the public schools of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 303). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3667. A bill to amend Public Law No. 111, Sixty-sixth Congress, entitled "An act for the retirement of public-school teachers in the District of Columbia"; without amendment (Rept. No. 304). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3668. A bill to provide alternative methods of enforcement of orders, rules, and regulations of the Joint Board and of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 305). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 4940. A bill to authorize the furnishing of steam from the Central Heating Plant to the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 306). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 5066. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate proceedings in adoption in the District of Columbia," approved August 25, 1937; without amendment (Rept. No. 307). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3594. A bill to amend paragraphs 31 and 33 of an act entitled "An act to amend section 7 of an act entitled 'An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1902, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1932; without amendment (Rept. No. 308). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RANDOLPH: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3949. A bill to amend section 9, article V, of an act known as "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia,' approved June 20, 1906, as amended, and for other purposes"; without amendment (Rept. No. 309). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SMITH of Washington: Committee on Pensions. H. R. 2301. A bill to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the War with Spain, the Philippine Insurrection, or the China Relief Expedition, to certain maimed soldiers, to certain widows, minor children, and helpless children of such soldiers and sailors, and for other purposes," approved May 1, 1926; without amendment (Rept. No. 310). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3552) for the relief of Frederic R. Leland; Committee on Military Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 5014) for the relief of Isaac Rosenbaum & Sons, Inc., of Louisville, Ky.; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 5206) granting a pension to Jess Spurlock; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5247) granting a pension to Julia C. Messamore; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5263) granting a pension to Alva A. Anderson; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. COLLINS:

H. R. 5315. A bill to extend the time for filing claims for refunds of amounts collected under the Agricultural Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DWORSHAK:

H. R. 5316. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GEYER of California:

H.R. 5317. A bill to tax the profits out of war by steeply graduated income and other taxes in order to provide for an effective national defense, to promote peace, to encourage actual neutrality, to discourage war profiteering, to distribute the burdens of war, to keep democracy alive, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. IZAC:

H.R. 5318. A bill establishing a naval record for certain officers and enlisted men of the naval militia of California who performed active duty on the U.S. S. Marion or Pinta during the War with Spain; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. LANHAM:

H. R. 5319. A bill to amend sections 12, 13, and 29 of the Copyright Act of March 4, 1909, and further to secure the prompt deposit of copyrightable material into the Library of Congress and prompt registration of claims of copyright in the Copyright Office, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. LARRABEE:

H. R. 5320. A bill to prevent discrimination against graduates of certain schools, and those acquiring their legal education in law offices, in the making of appointments to Government positions the qualifications for which include legal training or legal experience; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. JOHN L. McMILLAN:

H. R. 5321. A bill providing for the examination and survey of Jeffers Creek, Florence County, S. C.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MOTT:

H. R. 5322. A bill to amend the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida:

H. R. 5323. A bill making certain provisions with reference to cane-sugar producing areas; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STEAGALL:

H. R. 5324. A bill to amend the National Housing Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. SUTPHIN:

H. R. 5325. A bill authorizing the preliminary examination and survey of Cheesequake Creek, Middlesex County, N. J.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota:

H. R. 5326. A bill relating to compensation for cooperative observers of the Weather Bureau; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mrs. NORTON:

H. R. 5327. A bill to create a Bureau of Unemployment Compensation in the Department of Labor; to provide for the appointment of a Director thereof; to provide for the transfer of certain functions, personnel, records, and property from the Social Security Board to the Bureau; to amend titles III and IX of the Social Security Act; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. SCRUGHAM:

H.R. 5328. A bill to authorize a sale of the old Carson City (Nev.) Mint site and building notwithstanding the provisions of Joint Resolution No. 18 of February 23, 1865; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CANNON of Florida:

H. R. 5329. A bill to extend the provisions of the civil-service laws to chaplains of the Veterans' Administration, and to authorize and direct the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to provide for and fix their salaries within certain limitations; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

H. R. 5330. A bill providing for an examination and survey at Pahokee on Lake Okeechobee, Fla.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia:

H. R. 5331. A bill to provide for the construction of a graving drydock in New York Harbor or its vicinity; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. VOORHIS of California:

H. R. 5332. A bill to amend Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), part III, paragraph I (e) and (f), as amended; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland:

H. R. 5333 (by request). A bill to amend the acts granting increased compensation to civilian employees for the period July 1, 1917, to June 30, 1924; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLOOM:

H. J. Res. 227. Joint resolution to provide for publication of a complete report on the formation, the signing, the ratification, and the establishment of the Constitution, including the commencement of the First Congress of the United States under the Constitution, the inauguration of George Washington as first President of the United States under the Constitution, the adoption and ratification of the Bill of Rights, and the first meeting of the Supreme Court of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN:

H. J. Res. 228. Joint resolution to declare certain papers, pamphlets, books, pictures, and writings nonmailable, to provide a penalty for mailing same, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. COX:

H. Res. 142. Resolution to provide for a report to the House with respect to aliens employed in the Government; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Maryland, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their house resolution, by Mr. Luber, with reference to an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania:

H.R. 5334. A bill for the relief of Neil McGilloway; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BURDICK:

H. R. 5335. A bill for the relief of the estates of James Collins, Harry Coleman, and Lewis M. Thornton; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COLE of New York:

H.R. 5336. A bill for the relief of Peter Bavisotto; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. D'ALESANDRO:

H. R. 5337. A bill for the relief of Selma Shapiro; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FERNANDEZ:

H. R. 5338. A bill for the relief of Josephine Emmer, wife of, and John Eckendorff; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5339. A bill for the relief of Alice Emmer, wife of, and Alexander G. Dorr; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HOPE:

H.R. 5340: For the relief of Paul Kruger Majors; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HULL:

H. R. 5341. A bill for the relief of Louis C. DuPont; to the Committee on Claims, H.R. 5342. A bill for the relief of Smieja Bros. (Roman Smieja and George Smieja, copartners); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JENKINS of Ohio:

H.R. 5343. A bill for the relief of Marshall Martin; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5344. A bill granting a pension to Robert G. Barker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JENSEN:

H. R. 5345. A bill granting an increase of pension to Mary Dearborn; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland:

H. R. 5346 (by request). A bill for the relief of Mrs. A. R. Barnard, Charles A. Stephens, Donald W. Prairie, and dependents of Vern A. Needles; to the Committee on Claims.

H.R. 5347. A bill for the relief of F. E. Perkins; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5348 (by request). A bill for the relief of certain postmasters; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5349. A bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain members or former members of the United States Coast Guard for the value of personal effects lost in the hurricane of September 21, 1938, at several Coast Guard stations on the coasts of New York, Connecticut, and Rhode Island; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5350 (by request). A bill for the relief of Caryl Burbank, Preston A. Stanford, and Fire Association of Philadelphia; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KEOGH:

H. R. 5351. A bill for the relief of Harold M. Stevens; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KRAMER:

H. R. 5352. A bill for the relief of Felix Bernstein; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. PETERSON of Georgia:

H. R. 5353. A bill granting a pension to J. L. Parish; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUTHERFORD:

H.R. 5354. A bill granting a pension to Lulu Marbaker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHANLEY:

H. R. 5355. A bill for the relief of Harry J. Somerville; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of West Virginia:

H.R. 5356. A bill to pay the adjusted-compensation benefits due to Nola McKnight; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. THORKELSON:

H. R. 5357. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Waterton Oil, Land & Power Co., of Butte, Mont., against the United States; to the Committee on

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2021. By Mr. ANDREWS: Resolution adopted by the International Ship Masters' Association Lodge of Buffalo, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of various bills having to do with operation of vessels; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2022. By Mr. BOLLES: Petition of sundry citizens of Evansville, Wis., protesting against repeal of the Neutrality Act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2023. By Mr. CHIPERFIELD: Petition of subscribers and stockholders of the Oneida Telephone Co., Oneida, Ill., urging an amendment to the Wage-Hour Act to exempt employees of small telephone companies; to the Committee on Labor.

2024. By Mr. FLAHERTY: Petition of the City Council of the City of Cambridge, Mass., supporting Senate bill 1557, to provide for, foster, and aid in coordinating research relative to epilepsy and other allied nervous disorders and establishing in the Public Health Service a division which shall be known as the National Epilepsy Institute; to the Committee on Labor.

2025. Also, petition of the City Council of the City of Boston, Mass., favoring the President's recommendation that an appropriation of $150,000,000 for unemployment relief or such adequate amount as will be necessary for the maintenance of the Works Progress Administration activities in the National Budget; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2026. Also, petition of the City Council of the City of Boston, Mass., opposing proposed amendments to the Social Security Act as would repeal exemptions for churches, hospitals, and charitable homes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2027. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Petition of the Parents Association of Public School No. 158, New York City, urging passage of the $150,000,000 deficiency Works Progress Administration appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2028. Also, petition of Lodge No. 105, International Association of Machinists, Todelo, Ohio, urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2029. Also, petition of the Psychologists' League, an organization of more than 200 psychologists, Brooklyn, N. Y., urging favorable consideration of the $150,000,000 appropriation to the Works Progress Administration budget; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2030. Also, petition of Citizens' Housing Council of New York, Inc., New York City, urging passage of House bill 2888, concerning the United States Housing Act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2031. Also, petition of the Real Estate Board of New York, Inc., New York City, expressing approval of House bill 4501, concerning license requirements of real-estate brokers; also approval of Senate bill 1097 and House bill 3232, concerning amendments to the National Housing Act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2032. Also, petition of the Metropolitan Lodge, No. 363,

Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, New York City, urging passage of House bill 4862, Transportation Act of 1939; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2033. By Mr. HALLECK: Petition of members of the First Baptist Church of Warsaw, Ind., opposing legislation to include employees of religious organizations under the Social Security Act: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2034. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Alpha Chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., concerning House bill 3517; to the Committee on Education.

2035. Also, petition of the Richmond Memorial Library, Batavia, N. Y., concerning Federal aid to libraries; to the Committee on Education.

2036. Also, petition of the Bayside Hills Civic Association. Inc., Bayside, N. Y., opposing Senate bill 286 and House bill 2196, imposing a tax of 3 cents per gallon on fuel oil: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2037. Also, petition of the United Federal Workers of America, Army Base Local No. 43, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the Randolph bill (H. R. 3664) and the Logan bill (S. 1314); to the Committee on the Civil Service.

2038. Also, petition of the Retail Dry Goods Association, New York City, concerning the Schwartz wool products labeling bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Com-

2039. By Mr. MERRITT: Resolution of Dunkirk-Fredonia Kiwanis Club, of Dunkirk, N. Y., actively supporting the Dunkirk Chamber of Commerce in their efforts to bring about the establishment of a Coast Guard station at Dunkirk because of its principal advantage to shipping interests that at present are without such protection; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

2040. By Mrs. NORTON: Petition of the Board of Commissioners of the City of Bayonne, endorsing the President's request for a second Works Progress Administration deficiency appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2041. Also, petition of the Citizens' League of Nurses, with headquarters at Philadelphia, Pa., urging the Congress to pass legislation which will make professional male and female nurses as a class subject to the provisions of the various acts providing for social security and other benefits; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2042. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Retail Dry Goods Association, New York City, concerning the Schwartz woolproducts labeling bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2043. Also, petition of the Bayside Hills Civil Association. Inc., Bayside, N. Y., opposing House bill 2196 and Senate bill 286, providing a tax of 3 cents on fuel oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2044. Also, petition of the United Federal Workers of America, Army Base Local 43, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning House bill 3664 and Senate bill 1314; to the Committee on the Civil 2045. By Mr. SANDAGER: Memorial of the Sylvester S. Payne Post, No. 174, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Providence, R. I., urging legislation providing for a 400-bed neuropsychiatric hospital for veterans in the vicinity of Rhode Island: to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

2046. Also, memorial of the New England Council, requesting Congress to achieve balanced budgets on the basis of lessened expenditures, and to express approval and support of those Senators and Representatives of both the Democratic and Republican Parties in Congress who are leading the movement to curtail Federal expenditures; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2047. By Mr. SCHAEFER of Illinois: Petition of the Catholic Physicians' Guild, Very Rev. Msgr. M. J. Gruenewald, moderator, diocese of Belleville, Ill., opposing Senate bill 1620, the so-called National Health Act of 1939; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2048. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Rev. Thomas Presnell, of Burton, W. Va., urging that ministers be excluded from the social security law; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2049. Also, petition of Hon. John J. Mathison, mayor of the rity of Wheeling, W. Va., protesting against the construction of Lake Erie to Ohio River Canal; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

2050. By Mr. THORKELSON: Petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to facilitate transportation of products of Montana and adjacent States by constructing dams and other facilities to make navigable the Missouri River from its mouth to Fort Benton, Mont.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

2051. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to bring about control of basic metals, to create a control board, and suggesting the powers of such board; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

2052. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting the Congress of the United States to enact appropriate legislation to protect Montana citizens against the importation of natural gas from Canada; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2053. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting the Congress of the United States to give favorable consideration to House Resolution 3320 and Senate bill 572, regarding acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials in time of peace; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2054. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana urging the Congress of the United States to amend existing laws pertaining to agriculture affecting wheat production in Montana; requesting that quotas in wheat production be on a bushel rather than an acreage basis; urging provisions of means for raising revenue for the purpose of insuring a parity price for wheat produced; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2055. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, petitioning the Congress of the United States to enact the Townsend plan into a law; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2056. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, petitioning the Congress to amend the Social Security Act to include sufferers from occupational diseases; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2057. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, endorsing passage and approval of Senate Joint Resolution 20, providing for cancelation of certain crop-production and harvesting loans heretofore made by the United States Government; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2058. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting a congressional investigation of the smelting and refining business in order to determine means for alleviation of economic distress, unemployment, and loss to small mine operators as a result of these smelters being closed; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2059. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, relating to construction of a water-conservation project in the valley of the Musselshell River, known as Dead Mans Basin or lower Musselshell project; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

2060. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting legislation by the Congress of the United States making an allowance to all active members of the officers of the Reserve Corps of the Army of the United States; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2061. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass legislation authorizing continuance of the purchase of silver; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

2062. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting the Congress of the United States to assist the beet-sugar industry in Montana; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2063. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, expressing appreciation of the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps in Montana, and requesting continuance thereof; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2064. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, memorializing the Congress of the United States and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for remedial action and modification of rules in the matter of granting quartz mining loans; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2065. Also, petition of the Legislature of Montana, requesting the Congress of the United States to investigate certain homesteads on Indian lands in Valley, Daniels, Roosevelt, and Sheridan Counties in regard to settlement thereof, money paid therefor to the United States Government, abandonment of such homesteads, and thereafter the enactment of legislation for refunding to such settlers or their heirs who were compelled to abandon said land, of the amount paid therefor; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

2066. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the County Board of Milwaukee County, Milwaukee, Wis., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Works Progress Administration appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2067. Also, petition of the County Board of Milwaukee County, Milwaukee, Wis., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Senate bill 1265 concerning Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2068. Also, petition of the Rumanian-American Central Committee, Detroit, Mich., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to un-American propaganda; to the Special Committee on un-American Activities.

2069. Also, petition of the Presbytery of Philadelphia North, Philadelphia, Pa., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to education and religion; to the Committee on Education.

2070. Also, petition of the Philadelphia Council of the National Negro Congress, Philadelphia, Pa., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Wagner-Steagall housing biill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SATURDAY, MARCH 25, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Christ of God, come out of the mystery which was before the world, out of the wonder of the oldest star, and make Thy righteous acts manifest; to be sure of Thee is life's deepest lesson. We rejoice that Thou art the way, the door, and the glory of immortality; help us to find in Thee the richest meaning of the soul. We beseech Thee to give us Thy peace, not a lifeless calm but a glowing, creative serenity that refuses to be disturbed by the tumult of earth. How blessed is that life that we may live in the spiritual uplands which touch the Divine. We thank Thee that whatever virtues which make men better, enlarge their horizon, and make them heirs of two worlds cometh from the Teacher of Nazareth. In the name of our dear Redeemer. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order a quorum is not present, but I shall withhold the point of order for a moment in order that the Speaker may recognize Members for unanimous-consent requests.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include three documents from the National Labor Relations Board relative to the Nylander matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the [request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, we are meeting now on a Saturday. This last week and the week before we had under consideration the Interior Appropriation bill, when it took us 7 days to spend $160,000,000. We were not going fast enough to satisfy the New Deal so that we may let the Members of the House stay at home on Saturday, and rest up but we bring them back here today in order that we may spend $1,060,000,000 within 3 days. That is certainly going some; that is "whooping 'er up" in spending. If seems to me we are going at a pretty fast rate. If you will examine the report of the Federal Treasury, Mr. Speaker, you will notice we have this year gone in the red $2,263,-000,000 and are altogether practically $40,000,000,000 in the red. It seems to me it is a terrible situation in which we find ourselves when all we do is spend, spend, spend. The faster the New Deal goes the more happy they seem to be. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I deplore these attacks that are being made on President Roosevelt and his administration by Members on the minority side of the House, who offer no solution for our problems.

The President now has it in his power to reelect himself as President, or name his successor, if he will exercise the power we have given him to expand the currency by issuing United States notes to the amount of $3,000,000,000 against the gold reserve we now have and putting that money into circulation in such a way that the Federal Reserve Board cannot retire it and bring on another depression. In that way he can restore commodity prices to their former level, raise the price of cotton to 15 or 20 cents a pound and the price of wheat to $1.50 to $1.75 a bushel, raise the prices of corn, hogs, land, and lumber, restore the purchasing power of the American farmer, and thereby restore prosperity to the whole country.

If we will do that, he will sweep this country in 1940. Mr. RICH. Is the gentleman in favor of the reelection of Mr. Roosevelt?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes, I am, as against a Republican, especially on that platform. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and incorporate therein a short memorial from the Georgia Legislature relating to discriminatory freight rates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

HAVE WE A DICTATOR?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend my remarks and include therein a certain editorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has just made the statement in substance that the President of the United States possessed the power to reelect himself for a third term or to name his successor.

Long have some of us contended that the President was seeking for and obtaining dictatorial power. I hope that hereafter, when Members on this side intimate or hint or insinuate that the man in the White House is using those powers-which he said in 34 months had been returned to Washington and which he said in the hands of some persons could be "used to shackle the liberties of the citizen" to take from us some of the liberties guaranteed to us by the Constitution—that we may be permitted to call the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] as a witness in support of that statement and to use the statement which he just made as evidence of our charge.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] stated that Republicans do not offer any solution for the situation of which we complain. We have offered many solutions. Only yesterday the Secretary of the Treasury in effect admitted that the amendment of the Social Security Act, somewhat in line with the suggestions which Senator Vandenberg has been making for 2 years past would greatly improve that law.

Just a few days ago the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Jenkins] suggested a bill to the Ways and Means Committee which advocated a constructive solution of some of our troubles.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER] has put forward a reorganization bill which, if adopted, would bring about real efficiency, substantial economy.

I have offered a bill which, if enacted, would really accomplish the purpose for which it was proclaimed the National Labor Relations Act, commonly known as the Wagner Act, was passed. The House ignores this suggestion.

CONGRESS SLEEPS ON, WHILE THE C. I. O., WITH THE AID OF THE N. L. R. B. AND THE N. L. R. A., HAVING THROTTLED INDUSTRY, NOW TURNS ITS HAND TO THE SKINNING OF THE A. F. OF L

In season and out, on the floor of this House and throughout the country, my efforts have been directed to demonstrate how, through the interpretation and administration of the National Labor Relations Act, the Labor Board was not only obstructing business, levying tribute upon the workingman, but was defeating the very purpose of the act.

Others who loudly proclaim their allegiance to labor and labor organizations have remained silent while the C. I. O. and the Labor Board working together have attacked and injured other labor organizations, principally the A. F. of L., levied tribute upon the workers and deprived them of the rights which the law was supposed to guarantee to them.

At last the tide of resentment throughout the country has become so great that even national publications which have swallowed doses of new dealism which in other times would choke any decent, patriotic American citizen, have seen the light. Let me quote, from this week's issue of Collier's, an editorial which reads as follows:

LOPSIDED LAW

Everybody except John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. enthusiasts seems to have become anxious sometime ago to amend the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

The procapital amendments have been offered to Congress by Senator Burke of Nebraska, the A. F. of L. amendments by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts. By the time this appears in print the expected middle-of-the-road amendments may have been offered by Senator Wagner of New York, himself, author of the original act.

expected middle-of-the-road amendments may have been offered by Senator Wagner of New York, himself, author of the original act.

So the question naturally comes up like a boil: Why the reluctance on the part of John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. cohorts to see so much as a jot or a tittle in the Wagner Act changed?

We think the future of the country, for better or for worse, is pretty intimately bound up with the future of the Wagner Act. We believe we have an answer to that question about the hostility of Mr. Lewis and his friends to any change in the act.

The Wagner Act itself gags employers to this extent: They may not express an opinion to their employees, even if asked, on the merits or otherwise of any labor organization their employees may be thinking of joining. That seems to us a plain denial of the constitutional guaranty of free speech.

The National Labor Relations Board, created by the Wagner Act, has interpreted the act to hold that, when two or more labor organizations are trying to unionize the workers in one shop, the employer may not ask the N. L. R. B. to hold an election to settle the dispute. Only the workers can ask for such an election—or the labor leaders trying to unionize the workers. Senator Wagner thought his law granted equal rights to both sides to ask for these elections, but the N. L. R. B. in its wisdom thinks otherwise and the N. L. R. B. administers the act.

These two aspects of the Wagner Act would seem to reveal why

These two aspects of the Wagner Act would seem to reveal why Mr. Lewis and the more eager hot shots in his C. I. O. are so fund

Mr. Lewis and the more eager not shots in his C. I. O. are so ich of the Wagner Act as is and have fought any proposed changes in it. Simply, the dice are loaded in their favor.

The gag on free speech for employers enables labor organizers to agitate anywhere in the country, with employers forbidden to open their traps to state their side of the case. The provision regarding elections, as interpreted by the N. L. R. B., throws the door open to jurisdictional strikes and at the same time ties the employer's

A new, militant organization such as the C. I. O. naturally finds its best fishing in troubled waters.

The Wagner Act as now written and interpreted lets the C. I. O. stir up previously calm waters anywhere it pleases, and keeps them troubled practically as long as it wants to fish in them.

That is fine for Mr. Lewis and his friends. They are smart to try

That is fine for Mr. Lewis and his friends. They are smart to try to fend off any changes in this set-up.

But it is not so fine for several other groups of people, all of whom are supposed to have some rights too, namely, the employers, the heavy non-C. I. O. majority of working people, and the general public that consumes the products of labor and capital.

These groups have been taking it on the chin, nose, breadbasket, and elsewhere ever since the Wagner Act took effect. There have been waves of sit-down strikes and jurisdictional strikes. Now, there seems to be starting a wave of split-ups and split-offs inside single labor organizations, as in the C. I. O.'s United Auto Workers of America.

America.
These things cut down production and boost costs, thereby cutting into consumption of what is produced—thereby in turn cutting down the number of jobs available—the well-known downward spiral.

The whole trouble goes back, we believe, to the fact that the Wagner Act is or has been made the hammer and anvil for the C. I. O.'s exclusive use in forging its destiny. The Wagner Act should be a law under which bosses and workers, with the friendly help of the Government as umpire, could iron out their differences with the least possible friction, cost, loss of time, loss of temper, and loss to the consuming mubils.

to the consuming public.

We believe that was the kind of law Senator Wagner thought he was putting together. Its basic principle—legal recognition and assurance of labor's right to collective bargaining—is in tune with these times, and should on no account, we believe, be amended or watered down.

But we think that experience has now shown that the Wagner Act needs to be restored to what it started out to be. And one job for this Congress seems to us to be to rip out that overzealous ban on freedom of speech for the employer, and to clear up all doubt about the employers' as well as the workers' or organizers' right to ask the N. L. R. B. for a plant election in case of a battle to sign up the boys and girls with this union or that or that.

The American people have an ancient way of smacking down special groups that get too grabby and spoil-babyish. That can happen to labor groups, too. It already has hapened in Oregon, whose new strait-jacket State labor law has recently described whose new in Collier's.

Looked at calmly, the Oregon law is a bad one; it goes too far. For all that, a plurality of Oregon's voters, annoyed by the superdizzy didos of various Pacific northwest labor leaders and labor units, batted that law onto Oregon's statute books. Which ought to be a warning, you would think, to laborites who are trying to make a fetish of the Wagner Act as now written. The fetish may turn on them some day, surprise-surprise, and kick their teeth down their throats.

This article in Collier's Weekly is all well enough so far as it goes, but the writer overlooked the greatest defect in the law. He points out how it is unfair to the employer. He calls attention to its one-sidedness. He entirely overlooks, he fails to see, the great injustice of the law, the palpable fraud in the law, which is that, while its announced purpose is to aid the workers in collective bargaining, it deprives them of that right.

This morning's Washington Post carries Mark Sullivan's column in which he, too, calls attention to the fact that the administration and the C. I. O. have so far in this session of Congress prevented hearings on the revision of the National Labor Relations Act. Closing his article, he says:

A. F. OF L. LEADERS FEAR SQUEEZE PLAY

Such an outcome—the ending of this session of Congress with no change in the Wagner Act—would be pleasing to the C. I. O. Presumably it would be pleasing also to the Roosevelt administration. It would be pleasing to everybody who wishes that no change be made in the Wagner Act.

It would not be pleasing to A. F. of L. The executive council of A. F. of L. appears to see the possibility here suggested. A. F. of L. wants the hearings of the Senate Committee on Labor to begin at once. The executive council of A. F. of L. this week gave out a statement saving:

ment saying:

ment saying:

"We hold that further delay of hearings in this case will lead to serious misunderstandings. On the other hand, it is our belief that an immediate hearing will tend largely to clarify the present situation and aid, rather than injure, current negotiations for an adjustment of existing differences. Further delay cannot be attributed to impartial desire for the adjustment of a serious situation, for it could only contribute to the advantage of one party to the controversy."

Apparently it is dawning upon the A. F. of L. leaders that they may be caught in a squeeze play.

It is all very well to talk of repealing those other regulations which have restricted and hampered business, but until industry and the workers themselves are freed from the shackles which this Wagner law and the C. I. O. have forged upon them-and this the act which I have offered if adopted will do-we shall have no great increase in free, steady employment.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I insist on my point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman withhold the point of order for a moment so the Chair may further recognize Members for unanimous-consent requests?

Mr. PLUMLEY. I withhold the point of order, Mr. Speaker.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next after all other business has been disposed of I may be permitted to discuss with this body for 20 minutes the difference between a Democrat and a Republican.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an editorial appearing in the Miami Herald, of Miami, Fla., on the 21st of March on the subject of national defense.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an editorial which appeared in the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel on March 23.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a brief editorial from the New York Times.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I intend to make today and to include therein some data from the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture and data from the State-wide Committee on Pink Boll Worm Control of Texas.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Vermont makes the point of order that a quorum is not present. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

	[Roll
Barden	Douglas
Barry	Elliott
Barton	Engel
Bates, Mass.	Englebright
Blackney	Evans
Boland	Fav
Bolton	Fish
Bryson	Gartner
Buckley, N. Y.	Gavagan
Byron	Gerlach
Cannon, Fla.	Goldsborough
Celler	Guyer, Kans.
Cochran	Hancock
Corbett	Harrington
Crawford	Hart
Creal	Harter, N. Y.
Culkin	Harter, Ohio
Cullen	Hartley
Curley	Hinshaw
Delaney	Izac
Dickstein	Jeffries

110. 11
Jenkins, Ohio	Owen
Keller	Pfeifer
Kennedy, Martin	Powers
Kennedy, Md.	Reece, Tenn.
Kennedy, Michael
Keogh	Sasscer
Knutson	Seger
McArdle	Short
McDowell	Strovich
McGranery	Smith, Ill.
McKeough	Smith, Va.
McReynolds	Snyder
Maas	Somers, N. Y.
Mansfield	Sullivan
Martin, Ill.	Sweeney
Martin, Mass.	Tinkham
Myers	Wadsworth
Norton	Weaver
O'Leary	Wolfenden, Pa.
Osmers	Woodruff, Mich.
O'Toole	Woodrum, Va.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and fortyseven Members are present, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. Cannon of Missouri, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Houston asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

Mr. COX, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 130), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed:

House Resolution 130

Resolved, That for the purpose of obtaining information necessary as a basis for legislation the Committee on Appropriations, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to conduct a thorough investigation and study of the Works Progress Admin-istration and the administration of laws, regulations, and orders administered by it.

The committee shall report to the House as soon as practicable during the present Congress the results of its investigations, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems desirable.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any member designated by him, and may be served by any person designated by such chairman or member. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any questions pertinent to the matter herein authorized, shall be held to the penalties provided by section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 2, sec. 192).

SUBSTITUTES IN THE POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3244) to provide sick and annual leave to substitutes in the Postal Service and that the same be referred to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting at this point in the RECORD a copy of the report of the Committee on the Judiciary on House Resolution 67, filed yesterday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

[H. Rept. No. 311, 76th Cong., 1st sess.]

[H. Rept. No. 311, 76th Cong., 1st sess.]

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following report (to accompany H. Res. 67):

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred House Resolution 67, authorizing and directing the committee as a whole or by subcommittee to investigate charges involving certain official acts of Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; James L. Houghteling, Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Labor; and Gerard D. Reilly, Solicitor, Department of Labor, to determine whether, in its opinion, "they have been guilty of any high crimes or misdemeanors which, in the contemplation of the Constitution, requires the interposition of the constitutional powers of the House," after consideration, unanimously report the same unfavorably with the recommendation that the resolution do not pass. that the resolution do not pass.

House Resolution 67 was introduced January 24, 1939. It charges that the Secretary of Labor, the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the Solicitor of Labor, "were and are guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors in office in manner and form as follows, to wit: That they did willfully, unlawfully, and feloniously conspire, confederate, and agree together, from on or about September 1, 1937, to and including the date of the filing of this resolution, to commit offenses against the United States, and to defraud the United States, by failing and neglecting and refusing to enforce the immigration laws of the United States * * * against Alfred Renton, Bryant Bridges, alias Harry Renton Bridges, alias Harry Dorgan, alias Canfield, alias Rossi, an alien"; by unlawfully conspiring "to defer and to defeat the deportation of the aforesaid alien"; by conspiring together "to release said alien after his arrest on his own recognizance without requiring a bond of not less than $500"; that said officials, "and each of them, have committed many overt acts to effect the object of said conspiracy" as set forth in the resolution; and that said officials, "as civil officers of the United States, were and are guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors by unlawfully conspiring together to commit offenses against the United States and to defraud the United States by causing the Strecker case to be appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and by failing, neglecting, and refusing to enforce section 137, United States Code, against other aliens illegally within the United States, contrary to the Constitution of the United States, the statutes of the United States in such cases made and provided."

The resolution correctly quotes section 4 of article II of the Constitution of the United States of America:

"The President, Vice President, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for and conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors."

On the day following the introduction of the resolution, the Committee on the Judiciary met. The resolution was read and discussed. Subcommittees were appointed to examine the record and briefs on file in the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Strecker v. Kessler (95 F. (2d) 976; 96 F. (2d) 1020); the files of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization relating to the deportation case against Harry Bridges; the report of the Dies committee—these being the records referred to in the resolution supporting the charges therein made; and to study the law bearing upon the questions involved in this investigation.

These subcomm

subsequent meetings.

Hon. J. Parnell Thomas, the author of the resolution, appeared twice before the full committee and testified. The accused also appeared and testified. No statements by accuser or accused were appeared and testified. No statements by accuser or accused were made public by the committee.

Before concluding the preliminary examination, the chairman of the committee wrote letters to the author of the resolution and to the clerk of the Dies committee, as follows:

FEBRUARY 28, 1939.

Hon. J. PARNELL THOMAS.

HOIL J. PARNELL THOMAS,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR COLLEAGUE: The Committee on the Judiciary has been, as you know, making a preliminary examination as to the merits of your resolution, House Resolution 67. In addition to having had the benefit of your testimony and the testimony of the accused officials, we have followed up your request and examined the record made by the Dies committee, the record in the Strecker case and all of the files in the Bridges case.

It is the thought of the committee that we should now prepare

It is the thought of the committee that we should now prepare

It is the thought of the committee that we should now prepare to conclude this preliminary investigation, and we have set next Tuesday, March 7, for a further hearing.

If you know of any witness or witnesses who could throw any additional light upon the questions involved in your resolution, we would be pleased to have you give us their names and indicate the testimony they would probably give, so that we might consider inviting them to come before us next Tuesday or at some later date. I would appreciate being advised as soon as possible.

Sincerely yours.

Sincerely yours,

HATTON W. SUMNERS.

The Special Committee on Un-American Activities, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. (Attention: Mr. Stripling.)

My Dear Mr. Stripling: In line with my telephone conversation this morning I beg to say that the Committee on the Judiciary to which was referred the resolution (H. Res. 67), having to do with impeachment charges which had been preferred against Secretary of Labor Perkins, I beg to advise that the Committee on the Judiciary is going to meet Tuesday, March 7, for further consideration of this resolution and would be glad to have some person representing your committee meet with the Committee on the Judiciary, for the purpose of giving to it such facts and suggestions as your representative may be able to give to assist the committee in the investigation in reference to the subject matter of this resolution. resolution.
Sincerely yours,

HATTON W. SUMNERS.

The following quoted replies were received:

MARCH 6, 1939.

Hon. Hatton W. Sumners,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Sumners: In reply to your letter of February 28, which, incidentally, arrived at my office by messenger at noon Saturday, March 4, I wish to suggest, before concluding your preliminary investigation that you invite the Honorable Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to testify before the Judiciary Committee in connection with testimony given to the Committee on Un-American Activities relating to the sub-ject matter contained in House Resolution 67. If, due to Mr. Dies' illness, he is unable to appear, I suggest that you invite him to present a brief. It is my very definite opinion that before you close your pre-liminary investigation you summon R. P. Bonham, district director, Immigration and Naturalization Service at Seattle, Wash. Mr. Bon-ham, a veteran in the Immigration and Naturalization Service, is probably more familiar with the Bridges case than is any one indi-vidual in the country. Some of the statements which were made by Mr. Bonham on the Bridges case and which I quote below, are well worth taking into consideration in determining whether or not he should be called as a witness:

"An appeal will not cure the situation in my judgment, but rather

"An appeal will not cure the situation in my judgment, but rather complicate it."

"The courts have without exception dismissed writs challenging this procedure in cases which I have conducted."

"I believe it proper that I acquaint the central office with the fact that when I interviewed Mr. Bridges some time ago in another matter, he boasted that he had seen the central office file relating to himself."

"Submitted herewith please find application for warrant of arrest with most unusual supporting evidence in the matter of Harry Renton Bridges." (This application for a warrant was not acted upon by the Department of Labor for several months. In the meantime the application and other documents disappeared from the files of the Department of Labor.)

I also suggest to the committee that it call R. J. Norene, divisional director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, and who was the director of the Division which included Bonham and which conducted most of the proceedings in the Bridges case.

In the application for the warrant for arrest of Bridges, Bonham and Norene stated in support thereof:

"This office has repeatedly proved that the Communist Party advocates the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States, and also the Communist Party causes to be written, circulated, distributed, published, or displayed printed matter advising, advocating, and teaching the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States."

This application for warrant includes nine grounds, the ninth and violence of the Government of the United States."

This application for warrant includes nine grounds, the ninth ground being "that he [Bridges] believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States." Yet, when the warrant of arrest was subsequently issued by the Department of Labor against Bridges, the ground for deportation which I have just quoted, was omitted. And, instead of there being nine grounds, as recommended by Bonham and Norene, the Department of Labor only issued a warrant against Bridges on four grounds.

against Bridges on four grounds.

Because of the kowledge which both Bonham and Norene have of this whole matter, because of the many conversations and numerous communications between themselves and the head office of ous communications between themselves and the head office of the Department of Labor here, and because of the large amount of factual information which these two employees of the Government have on the question which is before your committee, I think it imperative that you call them to testify.

I also believe that you should read the testimony in the hearings of the Dies Committee which I am listing in the attached 14 pages of references to immigration cases. I am confident that by calling the individuals whom I have suggested in this letter, and by looking into the immigration cases which I have referred to you, you will find that added to what you have already learned, a clear case is presented against Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, James L. Houghteling, Commissioner, Immigration and Naturalization Service, and Gerard D. Reilly, Solicitor, Department of Labor.

Furthermore, I think that no investigation by your committee

Furthermore, I think that no investigation by your committee would be complete until you have interviewed and interrogated Chairman Dies and Messrs. Bonham and Norene, nor would it be complete until you have thoroughly looked into the immigration cases which I am today referring to you.

Thanking you for this opportunity you have given me to make these additional suggestions, I am

Sincerely,

J. PARNELL THOMAS.

MARCH 6, 1939.

Hon. Hatton W. Sumners,

Committee on the Judiciary,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Sumners: Your letter of March 3 has been brought to the attention of Chairman Dies.

brought to the attention of Chairman Dies.

He has directed me to advise you that since he is recovering from a recent operation and will be confined to his home for several weeks that it will not be possible for him to appear before the Committee on the Judiciary in regard to House Resolution 67.

Mr. Dies and Mr. Thomas are the only two members of the committee so far as I am aware, who have made a thorough and detailed study of this matter and since Congressman Thomas has already appeared before your committee, it will not be possible for a representative of this committee to appear.

Very sinceptly yours

Very sincerely yours,

ROBERT E. STRIPLING. Secretary.

The letters and replies above quoted were read to the Committee on the Judiciary on March 7, 1939, and, after discussion, a special subcommittee was appointed to give full consideration to the quessubcommittee was appointed to give full consideration to the question whether to proceed further with the preliminary examination which had been prosecuted diligently since January 25, 1939. This special subcommittee met the same afternoon, and after consideration, decided to recommend to the entire committee that the request made by the author of the resolution that Representative Dies be invited to file a brief, and that Messrs. R. P. Bonham and R. J. Norene be heard before closing the preliminary examination should be granted. This report was made to the full committee at its regular meeting on Thursday, March 9, 1939, and was adopted. Accordingly, a letter was dispatched to Hon. Martin Dies, inviting that he submit a brief, and arrangements were made to have Messrs. R. P. Bonham and R. J. Norene come from the Pacific coast and appear before the committee on Tuesday the 14th day of March 1939. On that day and the next, the committee heard Messrs. Bonham and Norene, and propounded to them questions submitted for that purpose by the author of the resolution, and, in addition, members of the committee interrogated them at length. Mr. Dres. members of the committee interrogated them at length. Mr. Dies filed no brief.

The committee heard every witness indicated by any of the records or suggested by any person, carefully examined the record in the Strecker case, the files of the Bridges case, the report of the Dies committee, considered all of the evidence therein contained, as well as the testimony of the witnesses, and proceeded to consider the resolution and all the facts and circumstances adduced.

FINDINGS

After full consideration the committee certifies-

1. That there is no competent evidence to support the charge of conspiracy.

The committee appreciates fully that conspiracies are difficult to prove, may rarely be established by direct evidence, and that such cases often must rest on inferences. In this case, however, whatever inferences of conspiracy might be drawn fail of support by any competent evidence thereof.

2. That there is no competent evidence to support the charge that the accused "unlawfully conspired to defer and to defeat the deportation of Harry Bridges."

The accused reached the conclusion that the hearing of the Bridges case should be postponed awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Strecker case, but there is an absence of evidence from which improper motive may be an absence of evidence from which improper motive may be fairly inferred.

The decision of the Secretary of Labor and the Commissioner of Inmigration and Naturalization, on the advice of the Solicitor of the Department of Labor, to postpone the hearing on the deportation warrant against Harry Bridges until after final determination by the court of last resort of the case of Strecker versus Kessler involved a question of judgment, and there is no evidence that it was not exercised in good faith.

The decision in the Strecker case may or may not have a controlling effect on the Bridges case, but there is nothing upon which to base a conclusion that the action of the accused in postponing the hearing of the Bridges case was not in good faith.

hearing of the Bridges case was not in good faith.

The Strecker case was begun by warrant of arrest, November 25, 1933. It was begun and prosecuted to the order of deportation, August 14, 1934, as an ordinary and routine matter. After the order of deportation there was a delay of nearly 2 years before any other action was taken. This delay was caused by the refusal of the Government of Poland to grant a passport for Strecker's return to his native land. Poland's passport was issued in June 1936, and at once the first habeas corpus proceeding was begun by Strecker. This was litigated to conclusion.

This case attained no unusual significance until the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit on Strecker's appeal from the United States district court at New Orleans dismissing his second habeas corpus case. The decision of the circuit court of appeals was rendered on April 6, 1938. The hearing of the Bridges case was set for April 25, 1938. On April 19, 1938, the order was made postponing this hearing to await decision of the Strecker case.

There is no evidence to indicate that the taking of the Strecker case to the Supreme Court was for the purpose of delaying the Bridges case. In all, there are 12 deportation cases—including the Bridges case—being held to await the Supreme Court's decision in the Strecker case

Bridges case—being held to await the Supreme Court's decision in the Strecker case.

The point which the accused hope to have decided by the Supreme Court of the United States on the appeal in the Strecker case is whether or not proof of an alien's membership in the Communist Party of America, without more, is sufficient to warrant his deportation. In the Strecker case, the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit was to the effect that such proof is insufficient. The Circuit Court of Appeals of the Ninth Circuit on this point is substantially in accord with the fifth circuit. Ex parte Fierstein (41 F. (2d) 54). The first, second, third, seventh, and eighth circuits each hold a contrary opinion. First circuit: Murdoch v. Clark (53 F. (2d) 155); Sorquist v. Ward (83 F. (2d) 890). Second circuit: United States ex rel. Yokamin v. Commissioner of Immigration (57 F. (2d) 707); certiorari denied (287 U. S. 607); United States v. Perkins (79 F. (2d) 533). Third circuit: United States ex rel. Borie v. Marshall (67 F. (2d) 1020). Seventh circuit: Kjar v. Doak (61 F. (2d) 566). Eighth circuit: Ungar v. Seaman (4 F. (2d) 80); Jurgans v. Seaman (25 F. (2d) 35). While the ninth circuit has never gone as far as the fifth circuit went in its Strecker decision, and while its later case, Branch v. Cahill (88 F. (2d) 545), is practically in line with the weight of authority, it is more nearly in line with the fifth circuit than is any other circuit. It should be noted that Harry Bridges is a resident of San Francisco, which is in the ninth circuit, and that, therefore, the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Ninth Circuit would be the court to pass upon his case if it were appealed. For this reason, it is all the more desirable that the Supreme Court reverse the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit in the Strecker case so that, before the Bridges case reaches the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Ninth Circuit, that court would be bound by the decision of the Supreme Court.

3. That there is no evidence that the accused "conspired to-

3. That there is no evidence that the accused "conspired together to release Harry Bridges after his arrest on his own recognizance, and without requiring a bond of not less than $500."

Bridges was so released. It appears from the evidence in this investigation that the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization has never construed the law fixing minimum bail as requiring that there be no release on the defendant's own recognizance. For decades before, and ever since the enactment of the 1917 statute, it has been the uniform practice of the Bureau to release on personal recognizance without bond whenever the immigration authorities saw fit. The Bureau has always interpreted the statute as fixing the minimum amount of bond in every case wherein the authorities saw fit to require bond, not as mandatory that bond should be required in every case.

the authorities saw fit to require bond, not as mandatory that bond should be required in every case.

The accused are criticized for failure to deport Bridges on the ground that he committed perjury in his application for naturalization. To be deported on such a ground, it is expressly provided by section 19 of the act of Congress dated February 5, 1917, that the accused alien must have been convicted of such a felony within 5 years of his last entry into the United States. Bridges had been in the United States for a much longer period of time than 5 years when this alleged perjury was committed, and furthermere he has never been convicted of this or any other felony.

4. That there is no competent evidence to support the charge that the accused "have committed many overt acts to effect the object of said conspiracy."

object of said conspiracy."

The resolution quotes District Director of Immigration and Natu-The resolution quotes District Director of Immigration and Naturalization R. P. Bonham as reporting that in an interview with him in 1937 Harry Bridges boasted that he had seen the file relating to him in the Department of Labor at Washington. There is no evidence tending to support that boast. In the testimony of Messrs. Houghteling and Reilly before the committee, they each categorically and emphatically denied that Harry Bridges or any attorney of his, or anyone other than proper officials and employees of the Department of Labor had any access to the Bridges file or any other file of a deportation case. They testified positively that Mr. Lee Pressman, one of Bridges' attorneys, had never been an employee of the Department of Labor, nor of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and that he had never been extended any courtesy or privilege not accorded any citizen.

The criticism that certain papers were missing from the files of the accorded any citizen.

The criticism that certain papers were missing from the files of the Bridges case when they were sent to the Senate committee of which the late Senator Copeland was the chairman was answered by Mr. Reilly in his testimony before the committee by saying that he was working upon one phase of the Bridges case and had the letters and papers relating to that phase on his desk in his own office when the files were sent to Senator Copeland upon his (the Senator's) request. This request was made of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in which office the files were, of course, kept, and the officials of the Immigration Service did not know of the absence of the papers in question from the files, and when they received Senator Copeland's request they immediately sent the files as they were, assuming that they were complete.

they were complete.

The resolution quotes from a letter written by Hon. Martin Dies, quoting Edward W. Cahill, then district commissioner of immigration and naturalization at San Francisco, in a letter dated April 21, 1938, to James L. Houghteling, Commissioner, as follows: "Before we bury this case (Bridges case), may I just present this sequence of facts?" Mr. Dies immediately after this quotation says "On the same day, April 21, 1938, Mr. Houghteling, writing to Mr. Cahill, said * * " The implication is that Houghteling's letter was written in reply to Cahill's. There is no evidence whatsoever to support this implication. It is manifest that if Mr. Cahill wrote the letter from which the guotation is taken and malled it on April support this implication. It is manifest that if Mr. Cahill wrote the letter from which the quotation is taken and mailed it on April 21, 1938, in San Francisco, the letter of Mr. Houghteling to him written the same day and mailed at Washington could not have been in answer to Mr. Cahill's letter, for neecssarily the Cahill letter would have crossed this Houghteling letter somewhere between San Francisco and Washington. Mr. Cahill, having died before the resolution was introduced, the committee is deprived of Mr. Cahill's testimony as to what he meant by the phrase "before we bury this case." Neither the intentions nor the conduct of Mr. Cahill are here in issue, and, therefore, it would not be proper to impugn his motives. Whatever may have been Mr. Cahill's meaning, Secretary of Labor, and the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization. and the Solicitor of Labor—the accused under House Resolutary of Labor, and the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, and the Solicitor of Labor—the accused under House Resolution 67—are not chargeable with any fault that may have been imputable to Mr. Cahill, in the absence of evidence connecting them therewith. There is no such evidence. The testimony of the accused is clear that there has never been in their minds any intention to abandon the prosecution which they ordered. On the contrary, their testimony is emphatic to the effect that they fully intend, and always intended, to press the Bridges case to a conclusion as promptly as possible after the Supreme Court decides the Strecker case.

The criticism of the accused because of their failure to include in the warrant of arrest for Harry Bridges prepared in the central office at Washington, D. C., several of the nine grounds suggested by their field subordinates was answered by Messrs. Houghteling and Reilly as well as by Messrs. Bonham and Norene (the immigration officials who prepared the nine grounds they suggested). They each testified that such omissions were frequent in deportation cases; and that it was common practice to amend the charges made in the warrant of arrest at any time during the deportation hearings by adding any grounds which had been indicated by the evidence developed in the hearing. The warrant of arrest for Harry Bridges prepared and issued by the central office contains four grounds, the proving of any one of which would require the deportation of Harry Bridges. The testimony is undisputed that, should it appear advisable as the case develops to add additional should it appear advisable as the case develops to add additional grounds, they would be added.

The criticism to the effect that Messrs. Bonham and Norene—immigration officials of Seattle and Portland, respectively—were not being given support and cooperation by the accused was not only denied by the accused but also by Messrs. Bonham and Norene, who were brought to Washington and who testified before the committee at the request of the author of the resolution. In the course of their testimony Messrs. Bonham and Norene stated that they had been given every encouragement to build up the strongest possible case against Bridges.

5. That there is no evidence that the appeal of the Strecker case to the Supreme Court of the United States was venal or not in good faith.

faith.

The main point stressed in this regard in the resolution is stated thus:

"Although Frances Perkins, James L. Houghteling and Gerard D. Reilly had an opportunity to retry the Strecker case in the United States district court, and there to offer the usual stock exhibits and to present the strongest possible case to the United States Supreme Court in the event of another reversal by the circuit court of appeals, they chose rather to appeal an admittedly incomplete record to the Supreme Court of the United States."

White there may be a difference of explaining as to the strength of

While there may be a difference of opinion as to the strength of the case made against Strecker and while it may be considered that more evidence might have been introduced, the two other points made in the foregoing quotation are not well taken. The law is clear that the case could not have been retried in the United States district court. The following quotations from the case of Lindsey v. Dobra (62 F. (2d) 116), plus the reading of the case of Exedantelos v. Fluckey (54 F. (2d) 858), should be sufficient to clear up the

w. Fuckey (54 F. (2d) 858), should be sumdent to clear up the misapprehension on this point.

"The taking in the district court of additional evidence on the merits was excepted to. Though the evidence adduced does not appear to be of controlling importance, we must hold its reception to be improper. Aside from questions of citizenship or coercion or fraud in the hearing, a retrial of fact issues on new evidence is not in order.

not in order.

"On habeas corpus the court must accept the findings of fact of the immigration authorities, in the absence of deprivation of fair

"The credibility of witnesses and the weight of the testimony is not reviewable on habeas corpus.

The other point stressed in the above quotation from the resolution is that, upon the retrial in the district court, the accused could have offered "the usual stock exhibits." Aside from the fact that no such evidence could properly have been admitted in evidence by the district court, it is substantially true that there are no "usual stock exhibits." (See reported deportation cases: U. S. ex rel. Abern v. Wallis, 268 Fed. 413; Skeffington v. Katzell, 277 Fed. 129; U. S. ex rel. Lisafeld v. Smith, 2 F. (2d) 90; Ex parte Vilarino, 50 F. (2d) 582; Sormunen v. Nagle, 59 F. (2d) 393; Kjar v. Doak, 61 F. (2d) 566; in re Saderquist, 11 Fed. Supp. 525; Branch v. Cahill, 88 F. (2d) 545.) But over and above these considerations, it is manifest that the author of the resolution has overlooked the fact that after the first hearing of the Strecker case before the the fact that after the first hearing of the Strecker case before the immigration inspector, when the inspector who conducted the hearing had reached the conclusion that the charges contained in the warrant were sustained and had recommended deportation, upon a review of his report and recommendation by the board of upon a review of his report and recommendation by the board of review of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization in Washington, the board of review ordered the case reopened and sent it back to the field for the purpose of introducing into evidence exhibits describing the objectives of the Communist International and its affiliate, the Communist Party of the United States; and that at this second hearing the Government read into the record extracts from a magazine entitled "The Communist" dated April 1934, eighth convention issue, a magazine of the theory and practice of Marxism-Leninism, published monthly by the Communist Party of the United States of America. From this it would appear that the immigration authorities in Washington sincerely attempted to do exactly what the author of the resolution now condemns them for not doing.

Examination of the authorities in which the courts have described

Examination of the authorities in which the courts have described the exhibits used by the Government for this purpose was made by one of the members of this committee. His report shows that 14 different exhibits were introduced into evidence in these 8 cases; that 2 of the exhibits were used 4 times; that 1 exhibit was used 3 times; that 3 exhibits were used twice each; and that 8 of the exhibits were used only once each. His conclusion was that no "stock" exhibits are used.

In considering the weight or sufficiency of the evidence in the Strecker case it should always be borne in mind that the courts have no right to pass upon these questions. The law on this point is emphatic:

"In every case where any person is ordered deported from the United States under the provisions of this subchapter, or of any law or treaty, the decision of the Secretary of Labor shall be final" (8 U. S. C. A. 155).

Strecker was ordered deported. This decision of the Secretary of abor is final if there is any evidence to support it (Lindsey v.

Dobra, supra).
6. That there is no evidence from which a reasonable inference may be drawn that the accused have failed, neglected, or refused to enforce section 137, United States Code, against other aliens to enforce section 137, United States Code, against other aliens illegally within the United States.

The committee has investigated the cases called to our attention in support of this charge by the author of the resolution in his testimony before the committee. In some of these cases the committee found that deportation failed because of the fact that the Communists involved were citizens of the United States and, therefore, not deportable. In others it was found that the immigration authorities had ordered deportation only to have it fail because of the refusal of the foreign government of which the deportee was a national to grant a passport. In other cases there seemed to be a lack of evidence. But in none did the committee find any evidence of any disposition on the part of the accused to evade their responsibility to enforce the law, or of failing, neglecting, or refusing to enforce the law against any alien.

7. That, after a careful consideration of all the evidence in this case, this committee is unanimous in its opinion that sufficient facts have not been presented or adduced to warrant the interposition of the constitutional powers of impeachment by the House.

At the risk of extending this report beyond readable limits, the committee has undertaken to give the salient facts of each allegation forming the bases of the resolution.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS

We are in general agreement with the findings and recommendations contained in the report of the Committee, but disagree to the extent and in the particulars contained in these additional views.

We feel that from the testimony adduced before the Committee and from the records and files examined by the Committee, it is apparent that the Secretary of Labor, the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the Solicitor of the Labor Department have been lenient and indulgent to Harry Bridges in the conduct of his deportation case to an unprecedented extent.

The record before us lacks proof of any kind as to the motive actuating such leniency and indulgence. It cannot escape our severe condemnation and censure. Bridges' record as a sympathizer with radical and communistic movements, if not his active particiwith radical and communistic movements, if not his active participation therein, is an open book. He should have been dealt with firmly and his case should have been disposed of with all possible speed. The confidence of the people in the proper administration of the laws governing the deportation of allens, particularly those associated with the extreme radical and communistic elements, by the present Secretary of Labor and her subordinates, has been profoundly shaken by the failure promptly, vigorously, and impartially to proceed to a final determination in his case.

This course of conduct which we condenn does not justify im-

This course of conduct which we condemn does not justify impeachment, but it does call for the official and public disapproval of this Committee.

U. S. GUYER, C. E. HANCOCK, EARL C. MICHENER, JOHN M. ROBSION, CHAUNCEY W. REED, JOHN W. GWYNNE, LOUIS E. GRAHAM, WALLACE E. PIERCE, B. J. MONKIE-WICZ, RAYMOND S. SPRINGER.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter which I have received from a relief worker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn, and on that motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves that the House do now adjourn, and on that motion he asks for the yeas and nays. As many as are in favor of taking this vote by the yeas and nays will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Nobody standing, the yeas and nays are refused.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was rejected.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert therein certain excerpts from a statement made by Mr. O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. Hook and Mr. White of Ohio asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include an article from the Farmers' Guide of March 9.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from the Honorable George H. Heinke, a Member of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include excerpts from the remarks of Premier King, of Canada, and certain statistics from a publication.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. Sacks asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5269) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, and pending that, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who speak today on the agricultural appropriation bill may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 5269, the agricultural appropriation bill, 1940, with Mr. PATMAN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TARVER] may address the committee for 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TARVER rose.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. TARVER. I regret very much at this time that I do not feel that I can.

Mr. DITTER. The inquiry I suggest is that a point of order was raised yesterday and was pending at the time the Committee rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is still pending.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to address the membership of the House briefly with regard to the parliamentary situation relating to the parity payments provided in the bill. I am advised that a point of order will be raised against the provision contained in the bill on the ground that it contains legislation and that the point of order must be sustained by reason of the fact that a slightly different method of allocation of these benefits is provided in the bill than is provided by law. The matter of allocation provided in the bill is slightly different from that provided in section 303 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. Therefore, the point of order will be sustained and the paragraph will go out. It will then be necessary for the committee to offer an amendment strictly in accordance with the language of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. That amendment will provide for the payment of $250,000,000. The suggestion has been made upon the part of some who are undoubtedly in good faith in their views that they will offer an amendment to raise the amount to $500,000,000. I am advised that if that amendment to the committee amendment is suggested it will be supported by practically all of the membership of the House who are opposed to any form of parity payments at all, with the idea of raising the amount specified in the amendment to $500,-000,000 and then when the vote comes on the amendment as amended in the House after the Committee rises, of voting against the amendment, thereby eliminating entirely from the bill farm parity payments. There would be no chance in the House to get a vote on anything else than the Committee of the Whole amendment providing for $500,000,000, if the amount should be raised to that sum. It is not believed that the House would approve such an amendment if adopted in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield. Therefore, the situation is simply this, that those who favor farm parity payments ought to oppose the proposed increase which is going to be supported in part at least by men who are opposed to granting any relief of this character whatever. Those who vote in the Committee to raise the committee amendment from $250,000,000 to $500,000,000 will be in effect voting against any parity payments whatever being provided in the bill, and although such an amendment might be adopted in the Committee of the Whole through the support of those who are really opposed to any appropriation whatever, the effect of such action would be to destroy the very end at which we aim. I now yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to say to the gentleman and to the membership of the House that I am opposed to parity payments. I am not going to vote for any amendment to increase the amount of $250,000,000 that the committee has proposed. I am going to urge every Member of the House not to vote for any, but I am going to vote against the amendment at the end.

Mr. TARVER. That, of course, is a consistent position. Unfortunately a great many of the gentleman's colleagues do not occupy that position. Unfortunately, as I am advised, a great many of his colleagues will vote for the $500,000,000 amendment in the Committee, with the intention thereafter on the floor of voting against it, thereby eliminating from the bill any provision of this sort whatever. Therefore, it is a matter about which the membership who are in favor of parity payments should be alert. They should be sure they do not assist in placing a provision in the committee amendment which will nullify our efforts.

The committee has attracted to itself a great deal of virulent criticism because it has gone beyond the Budget in this item. All those on the committee who placed this provision in the bill take the same position with regard to this matter that I do, and I believe that the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture is of the same opinion. Therefore, if you are the friend of parity payments, I urge you to vote against any amendment which might be offered increasing the amount to $500.000.000.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute in order to answer the question of the gentleman from North Carolina.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. CCOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman if he is arguing that those of us who honestly, sincerely, and earnestly believe that $500,000,000 should now be appropriated to make section 303 effective should vote against our own beliefs because of the gentleman's apprehension that some of the Members of the House who are enemies of the provision would try to place us in that parliamentary situation where all parity payments might be voted down.

Mr. TARVER. If the gentleman wants parity payments made to the farmers in any amount he will oppose any amendment to increase the amount to $500,000,000. Half a loaf is better than no bread. If the gentleman would rather stand out for the full loaf in the amount of $500,000,000 and get nothing, that will be his privilege, of course.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TARVER] has again expired.

A point of order is pending on the paragraph relating to the sweetpotato-weevil control. Does the gentleman from Missouri desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, in order to save the time of the House, may I venture to impose on the membership for a minute to discuss the parliamentary situation.

It is a matter of common knowledge that all of the numerous items carried in the agricultural appropriation bill providing for control and eradication, are without legislative authorization. There are here and there one or two exceptions, but in general such items are unauthorized and have been carried in the bill for many years by general acquiescence. I remember, and the older Members of the House will recall the occasion on which the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Blanton, took advantage of this fact to make points of order on all such items, and left only the skeleton of these portions of the bill.

In handling these items in Committee of the Whole, we are in precisely the same situation as when we proceed in the House by unanimous consent. Any Member of the House, regardless of his rank or relation to the pending matter, may object, and the House is at a standstill so far as that item of business is concerned.

So on these items, Mr. Chairman, any Member of the Committee, by merely raising a point of order, may eliminate any or all of them.

My only purpose in imposing on your indulgence is to call attention to the fact that in the end nothing is gained by such points of order. The items have been in the bill for so many years that they have become routine, and if they go out of the bill on points of order here, they are always put back by the Senate, as they were on the historic occasion to which I have referred.

When they go to conference the conferees restored them, and we pass the bill as usual. The only result, to delay the House. The regular procedure always followed is temporarily interfered with, but in the end nothing is accomplished.

Of course, anyone desiring to raise points of order against these appropriations this afternoon may do so. They will thereupon be stricken from the bill. The bill will then go to the Senate, where they will be restored, and when the conferees meet they will put them back; the House will adopt the conference report, and another chapter in futile obstruction will have been written.

So, I trust, Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as this is the end of the week and many of the Members are anxious to get away to their homes over the week end, we may be allowed this afternoon to follow the general procedure observed for many years.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania insist upon the point of order?

Mr. DITTER. I insist presently on the point of order and I desire to be heard, Mr. Chairman.

I ask unanimous consent that I may reply to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not desire to hear the gentleman from Pennsylvania on the point of order because it has been conceded. If the gentleman insists on the point of order, the Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I am surprised at the attitude which the distinguished gentleman from Missouri pursues at this time. All of us know that there is no more able parliamentarian in the House. All of us know that as the result of long experience he is able, probably better than any other man, to bring to the House a bill which might not be threatened with points of order such as he presently fears. I rather feel that he anticipates the course on the part of those of us who are looking for orderly procedure. I believe the distinguished gentleman from Missouri, had he cared to do so, might have brought to the floor a bill which would not have been subject to points of order.

Our purpose on this side at the present time is to call the attention of the country to the program of increasing, continually increasing the delegation of authority to the Secretary of Agriculture. We feel that the chairman of the subcommittee might have resorted to some degree of care before the delegation of these continued and enlarged authorities to the Secretary of Agriculture. We reserve to ourselves raising these points of order which we believe will be in the interest of good government.

Whether the bill goes to the Senate as a skeleton is not a matter that those of us who raise points of order should be charged with. If it goes to the Senate as a skeleton then it will be due to those who created the bill. The progenitors of the bill are to be charged with the skeleton if it finally reaches the Senate in that form.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DITTER. I am sorry I cannot yield at this point.

I therefore say to my distinguished friend from Missouri that we reserve unto ourselves the right to raise points of order.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I yield. Mr. FULMER. The sweetpotato crop in the South is one of the most important food crops, especially in the case of the tenant farmer and that class of people who need cheap food. In the meantime, it brings quite a lot of revenue that has a very helpful purchasing power to many of the people, because the cotton crop has been cut so seriously. While the contention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is absolutely right in that we vote thousands of dollars to other sections of the country and for other crops, I hope the gentleman will withdraw his point of order and permit this small amount to go into this section to help those people who absolutely need this help and assist them in producing this wonderful food crop.

Mr. DITTER. Does not the gentleman feel that the discretion vested in the Secretary of Agriculture is a rather dangerous delegation of authority and that his people might suffer? Has the gentleman read the proviso in the paragraph in question?

Mr. FULMER. I have not.
Mr. DITTER. I think if the gentleman would read that particular proviso of the paragraph by which authority is delegated to the Secretary of Agriculture, he might feel that it would have been better had the committee brought in a bill providing an amount for sweetpotato-weevil control without the delegation of authority. If the committee sees fit to withdraw the delegation of authority I certainly shall have no objection.

Mr. FULMER. Would the Secretary have the right as in the instance of other appropriations to administer this fund for this purpose?

Mr. DITTER. I believe under his general discretionary authority as Secretary of Agriculture he would have that right.

Mr. FULMER. If that be true, I hope the committee will accept such a modification.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I do not object to the gentleman from Pennsylvania making points of order against any item in this bill that he sees fit as an individual; but he states that he is acting for Members on this side of the aisle. I want to know who is in charge of this bill on this side of the aisle. [Applause.]

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I do not yield. The gentleman from Illinois and I are supposed to be in charge of this bill for the minority. Each Member has individual rights, of course, to object to amendments, or to raise points of order against them. Had the gentleman from Pennsylvania been present in the committee the other day he could have saved this whole $265,000,000 increase above the Budget, but he was not there to exercise his constitutional duty in the full committee. We have, therefore, this increase over the

I do not want to be unkind or unfair about these things. Outside of the two big items, I think the bill will compare favorably with any bill any subcommittee has reported.

I may say that if we are going to follow this thing up there are some other things in the bill that should go out; but it does seem according to Hoyle, the gentleman from Illinois and myself being in charge of this bill for the minority, should speak for the whole group on this side on matters affecting the policy of handling the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection. Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, for my own part there is no question but what the gentleman from Kansas and the gentleman from Illinois are in charge of operations under this bill insofar as the minority side is concerned. Any Member on the minority side, of course, has the right to raise a point of order or to offer an amendment on his own responsibility.

For my own part, my objection to these provisions is not so much that they are not authorized by law as with the manner in which they are to be carried out. Entirely too much power, authority, and discretion are delegated to the Secretary of Agriculture. If these delegations requiring additional duties of the Secretary were withdrawn I would not object to the items, but I do object to the delegations of authority. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania insist on his point of order?

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is that the Chair rule on the point of order.

The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Tarver: Line 14, page 54, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Sweetpotato weevil. For the determination of such methods of control for sweetpotato weevils as may be necessary, $75,000: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the cost or value of farm animals, farm crops, or other property injured or destroyed."

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I am delighted that I have been able to provide language which meets with the approval of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER]. This clause has been so drafted as not to be subject to a point of order, but it carries the same appropriation as approved by the Budget and by the Committee on Appropriations.

This is a matter of very great importance to at least seven States of the Union. It is a matter involving the control of insect pests threatening the sweetpotato-growing industry which the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine believes it will be possible to eventually eliminate. It may be interesting to Members of the House who have not studied the question to know that there is now going on under the direction of the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering at Laurel, Miss., an experimentation in the production of potato starch and that last year there was produced at that station approximately 2,000,000 pounds of starch acceptable to the textile industry and used in lieu of imported foreign starch. Every year we import 400,000,000 pounds of starch for which this potato starch could be substituted. It is sincerely hoped and it is believed by officials of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine who are engaged in experimental work in the improvement of sweetpotatoes and particularly endeavoring to increase the starch content of sweetpotatoes, and by officials of the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering, that they will eventually be able to develop this process to the point where the potato industry will be able to supply the entire needs of the United States for starch in lieu of this 400,000,000 pounds of starch now imported from foreign countries.

In these days of agricultural distress, particularly in the cotton sections of our country where the farmers have to turn to the production of new crops in lieu of cotton to some extent, it is indeed a very important thing that we seek. It will be if successful an important means of supplying additional agricultural income.

Mr. COLMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi who has been deeply interested about this investigation at Laurel and also the work which has to be undertaken under this bill by the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN] has also been very effective in his support of this work.

Mr. COLMER. I am wondering if the gentleman is acquainted with the fact that if the industry is developed, it will not only take the place of the starch being brought in from other countries but will also give employment to many of our own citizens, thereby reducing the relief rolls.

Mr. TARVER. Undoubtedly that is one of the accompanying benefits.

Under permission granted in the House, I extend my remarks by adding the following information regarding the subject matter of sweetpotatoes as raw material:

SWEETPOTATOES AS RAW MATERIAL

THE MEANS THAT HAVE BEEN TAKEN TO PRESERVE THE POTATOES SO THAT PRODUCTION OF STARCH COULD BE MAINTAINED OVER A 12-MONTH PERIOD, AND TO LOWER THE COST TO THE MANUFACTURER, IS A STORY THAT HAS A REAL SIGNIFICANCE FOR NUMEROUS INDUSTRIES USING AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES AS THEIR STARTING MATERIAL

(By H. S. Paine, F. H. Thurber, R. T. Balch, Carbohydrate Research Division, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Washington, D. C., and W. R. Richee, Laurel Starch Factory, Laurel, Miss.)

Raw material cost is frequently greater than processing cost. Chemical and engineering ingenuity in process development may sometimes be defeated by inability to obtain suitable raw materials at feasible cost. Recent experience of the authors in an endeavor to develop a sweetpotato starch industry in the United States illustrates a situation in which reduction in raw-material cost was indispensable.

Development of a southern sweetpotato starch industry for supplying a portion of domestic root starch requirements would have several advantages, such as use of a crop excellently adapted to southern conditions, low transportation cost for raw material and products (consumption of starch in contiguous cotton mills), product and the product of the pr duction of a byproduct feed of high carbohydrate content needed in the South for supplementing cottonseed meal for cattle feed, substitution of sweetpotatoes for cotton in submarginal areas, benefit from greater use of a root crop in crop-rotation systems, assistance in solving the cut-over pineland problem (since "sweetpotatoes are particularly adopted to newly cleared lands" 2), adequate domestic supply of root starch in case of war, and accessibility for coastwise shipment.

The primary problems to be solved were: (1) Development of an economical process for obtaining satisfactory yield of starch of high quality; (2) selection and development of suitable mechanical equipment; (3) investigation of the properties of the starch and its suitability for various uses; (4) development of byproducts; (5) devising method of storing sweetpotatoes to permit year-round factory operation; (6) adapting the crop to this new type of use so as to obtain feasible raw-material cost. The purpose of this article is to outline the collateral research under (6) which was essential for supplementing chemical and chemical engineering investigations in connection with the design, erection, and operation of a sweetpotato starch factory at Laurel, Miss.

Although sweetpotatoes are the largest vegetable crop in the South, they are grown primarily on a small-plot basis. Low yields The primary problems to be solved were: (1) Development of an

South, they are grown primarily on a small-plot basis. Low yields per acre (United States average for 1936 was 78 bushels 3) are due per acre (United States average for 1936 was 16 business) are due to factors such as growing of low-yielding varieties of smaller to meet food market requirements and to the seeking of early maturity and harvesting in order to obtain better market prices. The grower has endeavored to obtain a high proportion of U. S.

1927).

³ U. S. Dept. Agr., Agricultural Statistics, 1937, p. 197.

No. 1 grade (a medium-size potato of rather uniform shape), which is not always consistent with high yields.

Yet, as later experience showed, it is possible to attain a production of approximately 2 tons of starch per acre in sweetpotatoes in the ground (300 bushels per acre at 23.8 percent average starch content *), as compared with 1.25 tons (in the United States) in white potatoes (262 bushels per acre at 15.9 percent average starch content *) and 1.4 tons in corn (80 bushels per acre at 62.5 percent average starch content *). This favorable comparison in production of starch per acre is the basis of potential nonfood utilization of sweetpotatoes, provided this advantage can be carried through agricultural and manufacturing processes and translated into a correspondingly favorable price for the finished starch.

FIELD EXPERIMENTS

Since this enterprise involves utilization different from that considered heretofore in agronomic and plant physiological research on this crop, systematic field experiments were conducted by Anderson with reference to factors such as influence of composition and amount of fertilizer on yield and starch content of sweetpotatoes. Comparative tests of different varieties were made with respect to starch yield per acre. Investigations of the rate of storage of starch in sweetpotatoes in relation to various factors showed the advantage of a long growing season for starch production. In the Laurel section the practice now is to plant potatoes during the first half of May. Later plantings have been adversely affected by dry weather in August and September during the last 3 years, whereas with early planting, a dry period at the end of the season is apparently favorable to high starch content. Even with earlier planting, growers in the Laurel section are able to plant potatoes in the same ground after harvesting truck crops such as spinach. The quantity of fertilizer has been increased profitably to 600–1,000 pounds per acre. Experiments to date indicate that, by a change in spacing and arrangement, the number of sweetpotato plants per acre can be materially decreased without reduction in yield, thus effecting an economy in cost of producing the crop when intended for starch manufacture. Experience in this area indicates that by following recently established practices, yields of at least 300 bushels per acre should be the rule. Since this enterprise involves utilization different from that conacre should be the rule

Experiments on development of sweetpotato strains of still higher Experiments on development of sweetpotato strains of still higher starch content or otherwise greater suitability were undertaken. Thousands of seedlings have been grown by the United States Bureau of Plant Industry. Miller has obtained seed from sweetpotatoes under Louisiana conditions and has produced a great number of seedlings in cross-breeding experiments. Solution of the problem of "barren hills" is important for increasing further the acre yield. Such hills, almost devoid of potatoes, may occur alongside hills of abundant yield. Investigation of this problem has been undertaken by Boswell, Steinbauer, Hoffman, and Edmund. Because of its small-plot basis and precessity of avoiding bruising

Because of its small-plot basis and necessity of avoiding bruising (sweetpotatoes heal cuts, but not bruises), this crop has been mechanized to only a minor extent. Industrial utilization would result in growing the crop in large plots, thus permitting use of more efficient planting and harvesting implements which is of great importance for reducing production cost. For starch manufacture bruising is not so objectionable and, hence, this obstacle to mechanization is eliminated. Research for improving mechanical sweetpotato diggers has been conducted by Jones ¹¹ and by Gray, Hurst, and Randolph. ¹² The latter has made important progress in adapting the combination white-potato digger and loader to harvesting of sweetpotatoes. Improvement in machines for setting potato plants is being undertaken. is being undertaken.

VALUE OF VINES

Removal of vines is necessary for operating the combination potato digger and loader and this development makes possible a systematic salvaging of the vines (not feasible heretofore), which have good feeding value and are palatable to cattle. The protein, fat, and fiber contents of sweetpotato vines (dry basis) compare favorably with those of red clover, crimson clover, cowpea, and soybean hays.¹³

Feeding tests on the residual pulp from sweetpotato starch manufacture showed that it is 95 percent as valuable for milk and fat ⁴With reference to selection of 23.8 percent starch content and 300 bu. yield per acre, cf. Ind. Eng. Chem., 30, 1331.

⁵ 262 bu. per acre=av. yield for 10-yr. period, 1927-36, in Maine and 15.9 percent=typical av. starch content of white potatoes in Maine for 1930-38 (communication from C. A. Brautlecht, University of Maine, Orono, Maine).

of Maine, Orono, Maine).

⁶ "In favorable growing seasons yields of 80 bu. of corn per acre are not uncommon in the Corn Belt" (communication from Merle T. Jenkins, principal agronomist in charge of corn investigations, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Dept. Agric.); relative to figure of 62.5 percent av. *starch content in corn, cf. A Comprehensive Survey of Starch Chemistry, R. P. Walton, p. 130, and Starch Making, Felix Rehwald, p. 169.

⁷ Anderson, W. S. (Miss. Agric. Expt. Station), Proc. Am. Soc. Hort. Sci., 33, 449 (1936); 34, 709, 713 (1937).

⁸ Seedlings grown from seeds obtained through cooperation with the Puerto Rican, Hawaiian, and one of the Cuban agricultural experiment stations.

the Puerto Rican, Hawahan, and Care Care experiment stations.

*Dept. Horticulture, Louisiana Agr. Expt. Sta., Baton Rouge, La.

Dept. Horticulture, Louisiana Agr. Expt. Sta., Baton Rouge, La.

Boswell, Steinbauer, and Hoffman, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. D. A., and Edmond of S. C. Agr. Expt. Sta.

Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, U. S. D. A.

Keitt, S. C. Agr. Expt. Sta., Bull. 165 (1912).

¹ Ind. Eng. Chem., 30, 1331. ² Miller, F. E., U. S. Dept. Agr., Farmers' Bull. 999, 2 (1919, revised production as crushed ear corn and sugar-beet pulp.14 In feeding tests with beef cattle, steers fed sweetpotato pulp in a mixed ration tests with beef cattle, steers fed sweetpotato pulp in a mixed ration "made considerably greater daily gains, cheaper gains, shrank less, and had a higher dressing percentage than the steers in the other three (comparison) lots. The selling price per 100 pounds (at the National Stockyards, St. Louis, Mo.) was also in favor of this lot." Black and McComas is indicate several factors (including almost complete elimination of cattle tick) which should cause an appreciable increase in the number and quality of cattle in the Coastal Plain States where the byproduct pulp from sweetpotato starch would be principally available.

Sweetpotato pulp supplements cottonseed meal through addition of carbohydrates and renders more effective the utilization of this of carbohydrates and renders more effective the utilization of this southern feedstuff which, because of local availability and lack of sufficient carbohydrate feed, is often fed as the principal concentrate in the cattle ration. The dried pulp of the Laurel factory has found a ready market and has been sold principally to dairymen in Missasian (at $27 per ton). The hyperdigit from processing systems (at $27 per ton). sippi (at $27 per ton). The byproduct from processing sweetpota-toes for starch is thus of reciprocal benefit to agriculture; under some conditions it might be returned to growers in partial payment toes for starch is thus of reciprocal benefit to agriculture; under some conditions it might be returned to growers in partial payment for potatoes.

The starch factory can operate only about 100 days per year, by using fresh sweetpotatoes. Year-round operation is desirable in order to reduce fixed charges per unit of production. Storage of sweetpotatoes under controlled atmospheric humidity and temperature conditions was not feasible. Furthermore, the sweetpotato is rich in amylase and considerable loss of starch by conversion occurs during storage even at optimum temperature and humidity. Dehydration of sweetpotatoes by ordinary heat-application methods is not practicable because of cost and necessity (to prevent gelatinization of starch) of using, during the initial stage, a relatively low temperature range which would permit conversion of starch by amylase. Hopkins and Phillips in found that when ground sweetpotatoes are treated with a small proportion of certain reagents (e. g., carbon tetrachloride, carbon disulphide, or sulfur dioxide), the cell walls become permeable to liquid so that a large proportion of juice can be eliminated mechanically. Removing juice in this manner at atmospheric temperature is cheaper than evaporating water and makes possible recovery of a large proportion of solubles without dilution. From 60 to 70 percent of the juice in sweetpotatoes is removed by chemical treatment and pressing, as compared with removal of only one-tenth as much juice at the same pressure from untreated potatoes. Use of factory flue gas to evaporate much of the remaining water which must be eliminated in order to reduce water content to about 12 percent (at which the potatoes are stable for storage) in conjunction with the byproduct value of the undiluted juice should make possible a low net dehydration cost. There are various possibilities of utilizing the juice (containing 9.5-11.5 percent solids and 6.5-8.5 percent sugars), including fermentations of different types or concentration to molasses density a corn. This is one of the most important of the factors intervening between the production of starch in potatoes in the ground and the marketing of extracted, purified starch.

Sweetpotatoes are excellent cattle feed and can be substituted for half of the corn in the ration, 3 pounds of (fresh) sweetpotatoes replacing 1 pound of corn. Farmers in the Laurel area have stated that, in view of the greater obtainable yield per acre of sweetpotatoes, they would reduce corn acreage and increase sweetpotato acreage for feed production if farm dehydration units become practicable.

Considerable research must vet be conducted in order to de-considerable research must yet be conducted in order to determine the feasibility of farm dehydration of sweetpotatoes. If this can be accomplished on a satisfactory basis, it may lead to increased production of sweetpotatoes for feeding purposes. Mass production of sweetpotatoes would tend to lower production costs and would be favorable to utilization for starch manufacture. With dehydration on the farm and use for feed, the situation of this crop in the South would be comparable to that of corn in the North. In both cases, utilization for manufacture of starch and derived products would be accessory to use as feed on the farm, and sweetpotatoes in the South would be, in many respects, a counterpart of corn in the Middle West.

